Diplomat pudding (cold). POUDING DIPLOMATE – Decorate an oiled mould with crystallised fruit, and fill it with alternate layers of sponge finger (lady finger) crumbs soaked in kirsch or other liqueur, and a Bavarian cream (q.v.) flavoured with vanilla.

Put on each layer of sponge biscuits currants and sultanas (seedless raisins) which have been swelled in warm syrup and well drained; and here and there, spoonfuls of apricot jam. Put on ice or in a deep-freeze to set. Serve with a fruit and liqueur sauce.

Diplomat pudding with fruit (cold). POUDING DIPLOMATE AUX FRUITS – Prepare as described in the preceding recipe with the addition of layers of various fruits, peeled, sliced and soaked in sugar and liquor.

Set the pudding on a serving dish; surround the base with fruit cooked in syrup and well drained.

Fruit pudding. POUDING DE FRUITS – Put a buttered mould in a bain-marie. Pour into it a few tablespoons custard mixture prepared as for Cabinet pudding but made with 6 whole eggs and 6 yolks to each litre (1  $\frac{1}{4}$  pints, generous quart) milk, and with the addition of  $\frac{1}{3}$  fruit purée.

Cook the custard until set, then put on top a layer of the same fruit used for the purée, previously cut up and soaked in sugar and liqueur. Pour over another layer of custard, and continue to fill the mould with alternate layers of fruit and custard, cooking the layer of custard each time. Finish cooking in the bain-marie over gentle heat. Let the pudding rest a few minutes before turning it out. Serve with a fruit sauce flavoured with kirsch or any other liqueur.

Fruit puddings can be prepared with apricots, nectarines, peaches, pears, apples, etc.

Lemon, tangerine or orange soufflé pudding. POUDING SOUFFLÉ AU CITRON, À LA MANDARINE, À L'ORANGE – Prepare the same mixture as for Saxon pudding (see below). Flavour with lemon, tangerine or orange. Cook in a bain-marie. Serve with Custard cream (see CREAMS) flavoured with lemon, tangerine or orange.

Macaroni pudding. POUDING AUX NOUILLES – Prepared in the same way as Semolina pudding (see below).

Marrow pudding. POUDING À LA MOELLE – Melt in a bain-marie 250 g. (9 oz.) marrow and 50 g. (2 oz., 6 tablespoons) beef suet. Let the mixture cool a little, and beat in a basin with 200 g. (7 oz., scant cup) sugar. Add 75 g. (3 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cups) bread, soaked in milk and squeezed out, 3 whole eggs and 8 yolks, 200 g. (7 oz., scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cups) chopped crystallised fruit, 50 g. (2 oz., 6 tablespoons) stoned raisins and 75 g. (3 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) sultanas or seedless raisins. Mix well together.

Fill a buttered and floured mould with this mixture. Cook gently in a bain-marie.

Serve with a zabaglione (q.v.), flavoured with rum.

Nesselrode pudding I (cold). POUDING NESSELRODE – Add to 1 litre (1  $\frac{1}{4}$  pints, generous quart) Custard cream (see CREAMS) 250 g. (9 oz., 1 cup) fine Chestnut purée (see CHESTNUTS), 100 g. (4 oz.,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) candied orange peel and 100 g. (4 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) crystallised cherries cut in dice and soaked in Malaga, 100 g. (4 oz., scant  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) each of currants and sultanas, or seedless raisins, picked over, set to swell in warm water and then soaked in Malaga.

Add an equal amount of whipped cream flavoured with maraschino.

Put the mixture in a large charlotte mould with a lid, having lined the base and sides with white paper. Close the mould and fill in the lid opening with butter to seal it hermetically. Put the mould in ice and salt to set, or place in a deep-freeze.

Turn out the pudding on to a serving dish. Take off the paper covering it and surround the base with marrons glacés.

Nesselrode pudding II. POUDING NESSELRODE – Put 40 peeled chestnuts cooked in a 16° light syrup with a vanilla pod or a few drops of vanilla essence through a fine sieve.

Mix custard sauce made from 8 egg yolks, 200 g. (7 oz., scant cup) sugar and 8 dl. (1½ pints, 1¼ pints) boiled fresh cream. Flavour with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) maraschino and strain through a cloth.

Freeze in an ice cream freezer. As soon as it sets add to it 3 dl. (1½ pint, 1½ cups) whipped cream and 100 g. (4 oz., scant ¾ cup) each of currants, carefully picked over and cleaned, and stoned raisins, both previously cooked in a 30° heavy syrup.

It is said these puddings were invented by Monsieur Mouy, chef to the Comte de Nesselrode.

Plum pudding – Sweet which is served in England and in the United States at Christmas time and called Christmas pudding.

Ingredients (for a pudding to serve 15 to 20 persons).

500 g. (18 oz., 3½ cups) suet (net weight, after skinning, etc.), 300 g. (11 oz., 5½ cups) fresh breadcrumbs, 300 g. (11 oz., 2½ cups) sifted flour, 150 g. (5 oz., 1 cup) stoned Malaga raisins, 150 g. (5 oz., 1 cup) best currants, 150 g. (5 oz., 1 cup) sultanas or seedless raisins, 100 g. (4 oz., ¾ cup) candied citron, 100 g. (4 oz., ¾ cup) candied orange peel, 150 g. (5 oz., scant cup) stoned prunes, 250 g. (9 oz., 3 cups) peeled and grated cooking apples, 150 g. (5 oz., 1¼ cups) blanched and chopped almonds, 250 g. (9 oz., scant 2½ cups) brown sugar, the grated rind and juice of 1 orange and 1 lemon, 4 whole eggs, 8 dl. (1½ pints, 1½ pints) rum, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) mixed spices (cinnamon, nutmeg, ginger), 1½ teaspoons salt.

Method. Remove all skin and fibre from the suet and chop it finely. The chopping is rendered easier if the suet is sprinkled with a third of the flour indicated.

Stone the raisins carefully and pick over the currants and sultanas. Rub them in a cloth with 1 or 2 tablespoons flour – in addition to the flour allowed above – and wash them.

Stone the prunes, and chop them with a knife or put them through a mincer. (This addition of prunes to the plum pudding is optional, but they give the pudding mixture a richer dark colour.) Peel and grate or chop the apples.

Cut the candied citron and orange peel in minute dice. Blanch and chop the almonds. Grate the orange and lemon peel and press the juice out. Strain through a muslin bag.

Put all the ingredients, except the eggs, into a big basin. Stir until the mixture is smooth, then add a quarter of the rum. Cover the basin with a cloth and leave in a cool place for 2 or 3 weeks.

Stir the mixture every day, adding a few tablespoons of rum each time. In England this preparation is done at least 1 month before Christmas.

On the day the pudding is to be cooked, add the eggs. Stir the pudding to ensure perfect blending. If the mixture is too thick and difficult to stir, soften by adding a few tablespoons of milk, or – more strictly in conformity with the English tradition – stout. Put the mixture into small basins greased with butter and sprinkled with flour.

Cook the pudding in boiling water for at least 6 hours.

Remove from the pan and leave for a few minutes before turning out. Remove the cloth and turn out the pudding on to a dish. Sprinkle it with sugar. When ready to serve, heat the rum, pour over the pudding and set it alight. The pudding can also be set alight with kirsch, brandy or whisky and it can be served with rum-flavoured zabaglione (q.v.) or with hot custard. In England it is often served with brandy butter, which is prepared as follows:

Heat a bowl and put into it 200 g. (7 oz., scant cup) butter. Beat the butter to turn it into a paste, adding to it 1 tablespoon castor sugar and ½ dl. (3 tablespoons, scant ¼ cup) brandy. Whisk vigorously to make the mixture frothy. Serve cold.

The making of plum pudding is simple and easy. This sweet (dessert), which is one of the most nourishing dishes, has the advantage that it can be made well in advance and keeps for a long time. Thus one can have an excellent sweet course ready in reserve.

Pumpkin pudding. GÂTEAU DE POTIRON – Prepare as for Purée of pumpkin soup (see SOUP), pressing the purée vigorously to remove the water. For each 500 g. (18 oz., 2 generous cups) purée add ½ litre (scant pint, 2½ cups) milk, 100 g. (4 oz., ½ cup) sugar and 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter, and bring to the boil. Now add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) potato flour blended with a little water. Stir, and simmer for 30 minutes, stirring from time to time. Remove from the heat and cool a little, then add 3 egg yolks and flavouring (orange-flower water or ½ teaspoon orange or vanilla essence). Beat the 3 egg whites stiffly and fold them into the mixture. Turn it into a buttered mould. Cook for 45 minutes in a slow oven.

Rice pudding. POUDING AU RIZ – Wash 250 g. (9 oz., 1½ cup) rice, blanch and drain it and put it in a saucepan. Pour in 1 litre (1½ pints, generous quart) milk previously boiled with 150 g. (5 oz., ¾ cup) sugar, ½ pod of vanilla or a few drops vanilla essence (or other flavouring according to taste) and a pinch of salt. Add 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter.

Cook on the stove. As soon as boiling begins, cover the pot and continue cooking in the oven at low heat for 25 to 30 minutes. Do not stir.

Remove from the oven, add 8 egg yolks, mix with care so as not to break the grains of rice, and add 7 or 8 stiffly beaten egg whites. Fill buttered moulds with this mixture and sprinkle with fine breadcrumbs. Cook in the oven in a bain-marie.

Serve with Custard cream (see CREAMS), zabaglione (q.v.) or a liqueur-flavoured fruit sauce.

Chocolate rice pudding. POUDING AU RIZ AU CHOCOLAT – Prepare and cook in a mould or pudding dish as for Rice pudding, but with the addition of 50 g. (2 oz.) semi-sweet melted chocolate for every 500 g. (18 oz.) rice pudding.

English rice pudding I. POUDING AU RIZ À L'ANGLAISE – Prepare the mixture as described in the recipe for Rice pudding with 175 g. (6 oz., scant cup) rice, 1 litre (1½ pints, generous quart) milk flavoured to taste, 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) sugar, 75 g. (3 oz., 6 tablespoons) butter and a small pinch of salt. Keep the rice rather firm. Bind the mixture with 3 whole eggs.

Cook in the oven in a pudding dish in a bain-marie. Sprinkle the pudding with sugar and glaze.

English rice pudding II. POUDING DE RIZ AU PLAT, DIT À L'ANGLAISE – Prepare the mixture in the usual way. Add to it 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter and 3 whole eggs. Mix and pour into a buttered pudding dish.

Cook in the oven in a bain-marie for 25 minutes. Sprinkle with sugar and glaze.

Sago pudding. POUDING AU SAGOU – Prepare as described in the recipe for Semolina pudding (see below), using sago.

Saxon pudding. POUDING SAXON – Beat 100 g. (4 oz., ½ cup) butter to a cream with a wooden spoon in a saucepan. Add 100 g. (4 oz., ½ cup) sugar and 3 dl. (½ pint, 1¼ cups) boiled milk and mix.

Bring to the boil, stirring all the time with the wooden spoon, until it is firm and dry like chou pastry. Remove from the heat, add 5 egg yolks, and fold in 5 stiffly beaten egg whites.

PUFFER

Fill a buttered mould with the mixture, and cook in a slow oven in a bain-marie. Serve with a zabaglione (q.v.) or Custard cream (see CREAMS).

Scotch pudding. POUDING ÉCOSSAIS – Put in a basin 500 g. (18 oz., 4½ cups) freshly made breadcrumbs and moisten with a little boiled milk. Add 375 g. (13 oz.) finely chopped beef marrow, 100 g. (4 oz., ½ cup) sugar, 1 cup 100 g. (4 oz., ¾ cup) currants, 100 g. (4 oz., ¾ cup) sultanas, 100 g. (4 oz., ¾ cup) raisins, 175 g. (6 oz., 1 cup) chopped crystallised fruits. Add 4 eggs and 4 tablespoons (5 tablespoons) rum and beat well together.

Put this mixture in a large well-buttered mould, filling to not more than 1 cm. (½ inch) from the top. Cook in a bain-marie in the oven for 1 hour. Serve with zabaglione (q.v.) or Custard cream (see CREAMS) flavoured with Madeira.

Semolina pudding. POUDING À LA SEMOULE – Sprinkle 250 g. (9 oz., 1½ cups) semolina gradually into 1 litre (1¾ pints, generous quart) boiling milk with 100 g. (4 oz., ½ cup) sugar, a pinch of salt, 100 g. (4 oz., ½ cup) butter and flavouring. Mix well. Cook in a low oven for 25 minutes. Turn the mixture out of the basin, incorporate 6 egg yolks, 75 g. (3 oz., 6 tablespoons) butter and 4 stiffly beaten egg whites. Butter a mould, sprinkle it with semolina and fill it with the pudding mixture. Poach in a bain-marie in a moderate oven. It is cooked when the composition becomes a little elastic to the touch.

Let the pudding rest for a few minutes before turning out. Serve with Custard cream (see CREAMS), zabaglione (q.v.) or liqueur-flavoured fruit sauce.

English suet roll pudding. POUDING ROULÉ À L'ANGLAISE – Prepare 1 hour before it is needed, a suet pudding pastry made with 500 g. (18 oz., 4½ cups) sifted flour, 300 g. (11 oz.) very dry beef suet, 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) sugar, 2½ teaspoons salt and 2 dl. (⅔ pint, scant cup) water.

Roll out into a rectangle about ½ cm. (¼ inch) thick. Spread on this strip of pastry some jam or marmalade and roll up into a sausage. Wrap in a buttered, floured cloth and tie it. Cook in boiling water, or steam, for 1½ hours. Drain the pudding, unwrap it, cut it into slices about 1 cm. (½ inch) thick, and arrange them in a circle. Serve with fruit sauce.

Sweet potato pudding. POUDING DE PATATES AU PLAT – Peel 750 g. (1½ to 1¾ lb.) Sweet potatoes, cut into thick slices, and boil in water with a pinch of salt. As soon as they are cooked, drain, put in the oven to dry off excess moisture, and rub through a small mesh sieve.

Put this purée into a bowl. Add 100 g. (4 oz., ½ cup) sugar and 3 whole eggs and blend, stirring with a wooden spoon. When the mixture is quite smooth, moisten with ½ litre (scant pint, 2¼ cups) milk with a few drops of vanilla essence added. Mix, and pour into a buttered pudding dish, or other ovenproof receptacle. Put the dish into a pan half filled with hot water. Bring to the boil on the stove, then cook in a slow oven for 35 minutes (if the oven is too hot cover the pudding to prevent it browning too quickly).

Five minutes before taking out of the oven, sprinkle with sugar and glaze the top, placing the dish in the hottest part of the oven. Serve in the same dish.

This pudding can be served hot or cold. It can be flavoured with kirsch, rum, orange, lemon, etc.

Tapioca pudding. POUDING AU TAPIOCA – The same method of preparation as for Semolina pudding, see above, but using tapioca.

Vermicelli pudding. POUDING AU VERMICELLE – The same method of preparation as for Semolina pudding, using vermicelli.

PUFFER (German cookery) – Fritter made with a batter made of flaked oats, worked with warm water, adding sugar, a little salt, and eggs, flavoured with cinnamon. Puffers are cooked in butter.

PUITS D'AMOUR (Pâtisserie) – Using Flaky pastry (see DOUGH) that has been rolled and turned six times, cut out rounds of about 7½ cm. (3 inches) in diameter with a fluted cutter.

Put half of these on a lightly moistened baking sheet, keeping them a little apart from each other. Cut out the centres of the other pastry rounds with a smaller cutter, so as to leave rings or 'crowns'.

Moisten the pastry circles on the baking tin and carefully set one of the crowns on each. Press them gently so that the two stick together. Brush the top of the crowns with egg and cook for about 15 minutes in a medium oven. Draw the baking tin to the front of the oven without taking it right out, and powder the pastry cases lightly with icing sugar. Put them for a moment in the hottest part of the oven to melt this sugar, which will form a glaze. Take them out and put on a rack to cool. They will look rather like bouchées.

When they are quite cool, fill with French pastry cream (see CREAMS) with the aid of a spoon, or forcing-bag; or alternatively fill with very thick gooseberry jelly.

PULP. PULPE – The soft and fleshy parts of fruit or vegetables reduced to a moist paste by rubbing through a sieve.

PULQUE – A drink which has some relation to cider. The agave from which it is made was cultivated on a large scale by the ancient Aztecs.

PULTÖST – See CHEESE.

Pumpkin (Sougez)

PUMPKIN. POTIRON, COURGE – Gourd with orange-coloured flesh which has a distinctive and sweet flavour. In France it is used to make soup, jam and a dessert (sweet). In U.S.A. almost its only use in cooking is as a filling for pies. In England the name is sometimes used to describe a variety of gourds known as squash in U.S.A.

Pumpkin au gratin. COURGE AU GRATIN – Pare the pumpkin and divide into quarters. Blanch for a short time in boiling salted water; drain and dry.

Arrange the pieces on a gratin dish, buttered and sprinkled with grated cheese. Sprinkle the pieces with more cheese, pour on some melted butter, and brown in a warm oven.

This dish can be prepared by alternating the slices of pumpkin in the dish with slices of onion which have been softened in butter. It could also be prepared with North American winter squash.

Pumpkins at the Paris market
(French Government Tourist Office)

Gratin of pumpkin with rice. GRATIN DE COURGE AU RIZ – Simmer slices of pumpkin in butter and put in a gratin dish which is well buttered and sprinkled with grated cheese. Fill with alternate layers of pumpkin and rice, which has been cooked in unskimmed stock. Sprinkle with grated cheese and pour melted butter over the dish. Brown in a warm oven. This could be made with North American winter squash.

Pumpkin jam. CONFITURE DE COURGE – Prepare with very ripe pumpkin in the same way as Apricot jam (see JAMS).

Pumpkin au jus. COURGE AU JUS – Divide the pumpkin into quarters or into lozenge-shaped pieces. Blanch for a few minutes in boiling salted water. Drain, dry and put in a sauté pan with a few spoonfuls boiled down veal stock. Simmer for 25 minutes with the lid on.

Pumpkin pudding. – See PUDDING.

Pumpkin purée. PURÉE DE COURGE – Divide the pumpkin into quarters, season with salt and a pinch of sugar and cook slowly in butter with the lid on the pan.

When the pumpkin is very soft, put it through a sieve. Heat the purée and add, off the heat, a little butter. Add one-third of its weight in potato purée, and fresh cream or concentrated meat stock. This dish can be made with any of the North American winter squashes.

Pumpkin salad. SALADE DE COURGE – Pare the pumpkin; divide it into quarters. Blanch in salt water, put under the cold tap, drain and dry. Season with oil, vinegar or lemon juice, and salt and pepper.

Pumpkin soufflé. SOUFFLÉ DE COURGE – Bind 250 g. (9 oz., generous cup) pumpkin purée flavoured with sugar and vanilla, with 3 egg yolks. Add 3 stiffly beaten egg whites.

Turn out into a buttered soufflé dish and cook in the usual way (see SOUFFLÉ).

Pumpkin soup. – See SOUPS AND BROTHS, Purée of pumpkin soup.

Sweet-sour pumpkin à l'allemande (cold hors-d'œuvre). COURGE À L'AIGRE-DOUX, À L'ALLEMANDE – Pare the pumpkin, cut it into square pieces or trim into lozenge shapes, and put the pieces in a jar, strewing each layer with grated cinnamon, cloves, thyme, bay and grated nutmeg. Cover with vinegar which has been boiled with 150 g. (5 oz.,  $1\frac{1}{4}$  cups) cinnamon per litre ( $1\frac{3}{4}$  pints, generous quart) and allowed to cool.

Cover the jar and leave to soak for 10 to 12 days.

PUNCH – A drink said to have originated among English sailors, and which, about 1552, consisted of a simple mixture of cane spirit and sugar, heated.

Iced punch. PUNCH GLACÉ – Prepare a mixture similar to that for Punch marquise (see below). While the wine is hot, add to it 5 tablespoons (6 tablespoons) tea and infuse.

Strain through a silk strainer. Add 1 orange and 1 lemon, peeled and cut in slices, and 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  pint, scant cup) hot rum. Set alight, allow to cool, strain, add water if too syrupy and freeze like a water ice.

Kirsch punch. PUNCH AU KIRSCH – Infuse 6 tablespoons ( $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) tea for 8 minutes in 1 litre ( $1\frac{3}{4}$  pints, generous quart) boiling water. Strain this infusion into a punch-bowl with 500 g. (18 oz.,  $2\frac{1}{4}$  cups) sugar. Stir with a silver spoon to dissolve the sugar.

Add  $\frac{3}{4}$  litre ( $1\frac{1}{4}$  pints,  $1\frac{3}{4}$  pints) kirsch. Set alight and serve in punch glasses.

Punch cake. – See CAKE.

Punch marquise. – Put in a copper pan 1 litre ( $1\frac{3}{4}$  pints, generous quart) Sauternes (or any other rather sweet white wine), 250 g. (9 oz., generous cup) sugar and the rind of a lemon tied in muslin with a clove. Dissolve the sugar. Heat the wine to the point where a fine white froth rises to the surface. Pour the mixture into a punch-bowl. Add  $2\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, generous cup) Cognac. Set alight. Serve in punch glasses with a thin slice of lemon in each glass.

Rum punch. PUNCH AU RHUM – Prepare an infusion of tea in the same way as for Kirsch punch. Pour into a punch bowl with sugar and some thin slices of lemon. Add  $\frac{3}{4}$  litre ( $1\frac{1}{4}$  pints,  $1\frac{3}{4}$  pints) rum. Set alight.

PURÉE – Preparation obtained by mashing and sieving certain foodstuffs. Any kind of food, whether from the animal or the vegetable kingdom, can be reduced to a purée after having been cooked.

According to the uses for which they are intended purées are made of varying consistency. Those to be served as a vegetable or a garnish are kept to a thickish consistency; those meant to make soup are made rather thinner.

Some vegetables, being too watery to make a sufficiently thick purée, have a complementary thickening ingredient added to them, most frequently another more floury vegetable, a cereal or a thick sauce.

Meat purées of all kinds and fish purées have the addition of sauce, brown or white according to the nature of the purée, and well boiled down.

The use of a kitchen blender greatly facilitates the making of purées.

PURÉES OF FISH, CRUSTACEANS AND MOLLUSCS.
PURÉES DE POISSONS, CRUSTACÉS ET MOLLUSQUES –

Anchovy purée (cold). PURÉE D'ANCHOIS – Pound in a mortar 50 g. (2 oz.) anchovy fillets desalted and well cleaned, with the yolks of 4 hard-boiled eggs and 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) butter. Rub through a fine sieve.

According to the individual recipe the purée can be completed with chopped herbs or other savoury additions.

Use as garnish for various hors-d'œuvre, to stuff hard-boiled eggs, artichoke bottoms, olives, etc.

Anchovy purée (hot). PURÉE D'ANCHOIS – Add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) anchovy purée to  $1\frac{1}{2}$  dl. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  pint,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) thick Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE). Strain through a cloth. Heat and add butter.

According to the individual recipe this purée can also include hard-boiled eggs and chopped parsley. Use as filling for pastry cases, fritters, rissoles, etc.

Herring purée. PURÉE DE HARENGS – Prepared like Anchovy purée, replacing anchovies with desalted herring fillets. The same uses.

PURÉE

Mussel purée. PURÉE DE MOULES – Prepared in the same way as Oyster purée and used in the same way as Shrimp purée (see below).

Oyster purée. PURÉE D'HUÎTRES – Hot. Pound in a mortar 24 oysters which have been poached in their liquor and well drained. Rub through a sieve. Add to it 3 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint,  $1\frac{1}{4}$  cups) Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE), which has had the oyster liquid added to it and has then been boiled down, mixed with cream and strained through a cloth.

Use like Shrimp purée (see below).

Cold. Crush in the mortar 24 oysters, poached and well drained, with 4 yolks of hard-boiled eggs and 40 g. ( $1\frac{1}{2}$  oz., 3 tablespoons) butter. Put through a fine strainer.

Salmon purée. PURÉE DE SAUMON – With fresh salmon. Put through a sieve 250 g. (9 oz.) salmon flesh cooked in butter. Heat this purée and bind it with 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) thick Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE). Season. Add butter.

Used for garnishing eggs, pastry cases and shells, bread etc.

With smoked salmon. Put through a sieve 250 g. (9 oz.) smoked salmon. Add to this purée 4 yolks of hard-boiled eggs rubbed through a fine sieve, 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) butter and mix well.

Use for canapés, pastry shapes and various hors-d'œuvre.

Sea-urchin purée. PURÉE D'OURSINS – Clean the sea-urchins, and remove the yellow substance which adheres to the inside of the shell. Add this substance to thick Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE) which has been mixed with cream, allowing 1 litre ( $1\frac{3}{4}$  pints, generous quart) sauce to 36 sea-urchins. Mix well. Put through a fine strainer.

The same uses as for Shrimp purée (see below).

Shrimp purée. PURÉE DE CREVETTES – Pound finely in a mortar the shells of the shrimps (or prawns or other shellfish), whose flesh is being otherwise used.

Add this to an equal quantity of thick Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE) which has been mixed with cream. Put through a fine sieve, pressing with a wooden spoon.

Use as a complementary ingredient of sauces, forcemeats, etc. for fish and shellfish and for hot hors-d'œuvre.

Tunny (tuna fish) purée. PURÉE DE THON – Like Anchovy purée. The same uses.

GAME PURÉES. PURÉES DE GIBIER –

Game purée I. PURÉE DE GIBIER – Pound in a mortar the cooked flesh of any game bird or animal, together with half its weight of rice cooked in stock.

Put through a fine sieve. Add this purée to Derni-glaze sauce (see SAUCE) made with the cooking juices of game. Mix well over heat, season, and add butter.

Game purée II. PURÉE DE GIBIER – Pound cooked game in a mortar and add to it some thick lentil purée (see below). Finish as above.

Use as a garnish for poached or soft-boiled eggs, or as a filling for omelettes, stuffing for vegetables and garnish for pastry shells.

MEAT AND POULTRY PUREES. PURÉES DE VIANDES –

Beef purée. PURÉE DE BOEUF – Pound in a mortar 500 g. (generous lb.) braised beef, carefully trimmed and with all gristle removed. Add this purée to 4 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant 2 cups) Derni-glaze sauce (see SAUCE). Mix over heat, stirring with a wooden spoon. Strain through a fine sieve. Bind with egg if desired.

Use as a filling for various pastries and pasta dishes, or as a stuffing for vegetables (onions, tomatoes, artichoke bottoms, etc.), veal or beef olives, etc.

Brain purée. PURÉE DE CERVELLE D'AGNEAU, DE VEAU – Rub cooked lambs' or calves' brains through a fine sieve. Add this purée to Béchamel or Velouté sauce (see SAUCE), which has been mixed with cream, allowing 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) sauce to each set of brains. Mix over heat, season, and put through a fine sieve.

Use as garnish for poached eggs or soft-boiled eggs, as a forcemeat for fowl, as filling for pastry cases, tartlets, artichoke bottoms, mushrooms, etc.

Brain purée, and in general all white meat purées, may have diced truffles, mushrooms or ham added to them, or may be enriched by duxelles (q.v.) or mixed vegetables cooked in butter.

Calf's liver purée. PURÉE DE FOIE DE VEAU – Pound in a mortar calf's liver cut in pieces, sautéed in butter, seasoned and cooled. Rub through a fine sieve.

Use for borders and moulds.

Chicken purée (cold). PURÉE DE VOLAILLE – Pound in a mortar the flesh of a chicken poached in chicken stock. Turn this purée into a bowl, add to it a few tablespoons very thick fresh cream, season, and put through a fine strainer. Mix till very smooth.

Use for cold hors-d'œuvre, canapés and pastry cases.

Chicken purée (hot). PURÉE DE VOLAILLE – Pound in a mortar the bones and trimmed flesh of a chicken poached in chicken stock. Rub through a fine sieve. Heat in a sauté pan. Bind it with one-third of its weight of thick chicken Velouté sauce (see SAUCE). Season, and add butter and fresh cream.

Use as garnish with poached and soft-boiled eggs, in pastry shells, in small cases made of other crusts, and to stuff vegetables such as artichoke bottoms, cucumbers, tomatoes, mushrooms, etc.

Chicken liver purée. PURÉE DE FOIES DE VOLAILLE – See FORCEMEATS, À gratin poultry liver forcemeat.

Foie gras purée. PURÉE DE FOIE GRAS – Hot. Mix thick chicken Velouté sauce (see SAUCE) with twice its volume of cooked foie gras (truffled or not, as desired) which has been rubbed through a fine sieve. Mix well over heat and bind with egg yolks.

Use to garnish pastry shells and tartlets, as stuffing for various vegetables such as artichoke bottoms, mushrooms, etc., in which case white breadcrumbs are added.

Cold. Rub cooked foie gras through a fine sieve. Work till very smooth.

Use for cold hors-d'œuvre and for cold eggs, poached or soft-boiled.

Sweetbread purée. PURÉE DE RIS DE VEAU – Prepare with braised sweetbreads as described in the recipe for Brain purée. The same uses.

Veal purée. PURÉE DE VEAU – Prepare with braised veal in the same way as Beef purée. Bind with chicken Velouté sauce or Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE). The same uses.

VEGETABLE PURÉES. PURÉES DE LÉGUMES –

Artichoke purée I. PURÉE D'ARTICHAUTS – Half cook 6 large artichoke bottoms in a flour-and-water court-bouillon (q.v.), slice, and simmer in butter. Add 2½ dl. (scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, generous cup) Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE). Pass through a fine strainer, heat, and add 15 g. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  oz., 1 tablespoon) butter. Use as a vegetable or garnish for meat or poultry.

Artichoke purée II. PURÉE D'ARTICHAUTS – Add to the artichoke bottoms cooked in butter 1 large potato cut in thick slices. Moisten with 1½ dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint,  $\frac{2}{3}$  cup) stock. Cook together. Finish the purée as above.

The same uses as the preceding purée.

Green asparagus purée. PURÉE D'ASPERGES VERTES – Prepare, with green asparagus, as the next recipe.

White asparagus purée. PURÉE D'ASPERGES BLANCHES – Cook the asparagus tips in salt water, drain and rub through fine sieve. Heat the purée, remove from the heat and add a little fresh butter.

This purée is rather thin so a quarter of its weight of Potato purée (see POTATOES) may be added to it. Or, depending on its final use, one-third of its volume in thick Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE) may be added.

The uses are the same as for Artichoke purée.

Aubergine purée. PURÉE D'AUBERGINES – Simmer 4 peeled, sliced, aubergines in butter. Add 2 sliced potatoes. Moisten with 1½ dl. (¾ pint, ¾ cup) stock. Season and cook gently. Rub through a fine sieve and finish the purée as described in the recipe for Artichoke purée. The same uses.

Broad bean purée. PURÉE DE FÈVES FRAÎCHES – Cook broad beans in salted water, season with a sprig of savory and rub through a fine sieve. Heat this purée and bind with butter or cream.

Alternatively, cook the beans like Peas à la française (see PEA) rub through a fine sieve and bind the purée with butter or cream. To make a thicker consistency the beans may be augmented by a quarter of their volume of potatoes, added during cooking.

Use as garnish to eggs, small cuts of meat and poultry.

Fresh flageolet bean purée. PURÉE DE FLAGEOLETS FRAIS – Prepare with fresh flageolet beans cooked in water in the same way as for Broad bean purée, and used in the same way.

French (string) bean purée. PURÉE DE HARICOTS VERTS – Hot. Rub through a sieve French beans, cooked in salted water and drained. Heat this purée and bind with butter or cream.

Use as garnish for eggs, small cuts of meat, poultry, or as a vegetable.

Cold. Rub through a fine sieve French beans, cooked in salted water and drained. Bind this purée with thick mayonnaise.

Use as filling for artichoke bottoms, tomatoes and pastry cases, and, by itself, as garnish for cold dishes.

Haricot bean purée. PURÉE DE HARICOTS – Rub through a fine sieve dried haricot beans which have been soaked and then cooked in stock or water. Heat this purée and bind with fresh butter.

Use as garnish for large or small cuts of meat, particularly mutton.

Breton white bean purée. PURÉE DE HARICOTS BLANCS À LA BRETONNE, DITE PURÉE BRETONNE – Haricot beans cooked in a meat stock, drained, bound with Bretonne sauce (see SAUCE) and rubbed through a sieve.

Use as garnish for roast, baked or braised meat, especially mutton. It is also served as a vegetable.

White bean purée or purée soissonnaise. PURÉE DE HARICOTS, DITE À LA SOISSONNAISE, PURÉE SOISSONNAISE – Haricot beans cooked in water or in a meat stock and rubbed through a sieve when still hot. Stir the purée over the heat, adding 100 g. (4 oz., ½ cup) butter for each 500 g. (18 oz., 2½ cups) purée. Dilute if necessary with a few tablespoons of boiling milk or the water in which the beans were cooked.

Use in the same way as Breton white bean purée.

Beetroot purée. PURÉE DE BETTERAVES – Hot. Rub through a fine sieve 2 large beetroots cooked in the oven (as for salad beetroots) and peeled. Heat this purée in a sauté pan. Add to it 2½ dl. (scant ½ pint, generous cup) concentrated Demi-glace sauce (see SAUCE). Season, and bring to the boil, stirring with a wooden spoon. Add 25 g. (1 oz., 2 tablespoons) butter.

The purée may also be thickened with concentrated Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE). Use as garnish to small pieces of game meat.

Cold. Add to the cold beetroot pulp, 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) very thick mayonnaise.

Use as filling for canapés, boat-shaped pastry cases and hors-d'œuvre tartlets.

Carrot purée. PURÉE DE CAROTTES – Simmer carrots in butter in a covered pan until they are very tender (new carrots should be used if possible). Bind with Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE). Finish like Artichoke purée.

Use as garnish for small or large cuts of meat. It is also served by itself as a vegetable.

Cauliflower purée. PURÉE DE CHOU-FLEUR – Cook the cauliflower in water and rub through a fine sieve. Heat the purée. Bind it with a third of its volume of Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE). Add butter.

To make a thicker consistency a small quantity of potatoes may be added.

Use as a garnish for eggs, small pieces of meat, and sweetbreads. This purée can also be served as a vegetable.

Celery purée. PURÉE DE CÉLÉRI – Simmer in butter in a covered pan celery stalks or celeriac, previously blanched in salted water. Finish as described in the recipe for Artichoke purée.

This purée can be thickened with concentrated Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE), or with potato cooked with the celery.

Use as a garnish with eggs and with large or small cuts of meat. It is also served as a vegetable.

Chestnut purée. PURÉE DE MARRONS – This purée is mainly used as accompaniment to game meats and venison. (See CHESTNUTS.)

Cucumber purée. PURÉE DE CONCOMBRES – As Artichoke purée, using peeled sliced cucumbers, cooked in butter in a covered pan.

Used as garnish with salmon steaks cooked in butter or court-bouillon (q.v.), and with small cuts of meat.

Garlic purée. PURÉE D'AIL – Blanch lightly in salted water 50 g. (2 oz.) garlic. Drain, and cook them for 15 minutes in butter without letting them colour. Add 2½ dl. (scant ½ pint, generous cup) thick Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE). Rub through a fine sieve. Heat and add 15 g. (½ oz., 1 tablespoon) butter.

Used as garnish for small cuts of sautéed meat (most of all noisettes or mutton or lamb cutlets), poached eggs and hot hors-d'œuvre.

Jerusalem artichoke purée. PURÉE DE TOPINAMBOURS – Cook the Jerusalem artichokes in butter in a covered pan. Put them through a fine sieve. Heat the purée and bind with butter or cream.

For a thicker consistency, potato purée to the amount of one-half or one-third the volume of the artichoke purée may be added. Japanese artichoke, root chervil and salsify purées are made in the same way.

Use as garnish for eggs, small cuts of meat and game meat.

Lentil purée. PURÉE DE LENTILLES – As Haricot bean purée, using lentils cooked in stock or water.

Use as garnish with large and small cuts of meat and game.

Lettuce purée. PURÉE DE LAITUES – Rub lettuces braised in stock or water through a fine sieve. Heat the purée, and bind with butter or cream.

Use as garnish with eggs or small cuts of meat, sweetbreads, poultry, etc.

Chicory, endives, the leaves of red or white beet or other similar vegetables may be made into purée in the same way.

Marrow or gourd (U.S. squash) purée. PURÉE DE COURGE – Prepared in the same way as Pumpkin purée (see PUMPKIN).

Baby marrow (zucchini) purée. PURÉE DE COURGETTES – Prepare in the same way as Aubergine purée. The same uses.

Mushroom purée. PURÉE DE CHAMPIGNONS – Trim, wash and dry 500 g. (18 oz.) firm, white cultivated mushrooms and rub them through a sieve as rapidly as possible (peel them if they are not white enough).

Add this purée to 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE) which has been thickened in a pan with a few tablespoons of cream. Boil down for a few moments over a good heat, season and strain through a fine sieve. Heat the purée once more, remove from the heat and blend in 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) butter.

PURÉE-PRESSER

Use as garnish for meat, chicken and fish, and to stuff artichoke bottoms, eggs, fillets of fish, etc. It is also used as filling for pastry shells and canapés served as a hot hors-d'œuvre or small entrée.

Onion soubise I. PURÉE D'OIGNONS, DITE SOUBISE – This purée, which is used as a garnish for meat, can be prepared in two ways:

Blanch 1 kg. ( $2\frac{1}{4}$  lb.) chopped onions thoroughly in salted water. Five minutes before draining them add 250 g. (9 oz., generous cup) rice. Drain these ingredients, then hold under a cold water tap to cool. Dry, and season with salt, white pepper, grated nutmeg and a pinch of sugar.

Line a deep casserole with thin rashers of fat bacon. Add the onions and rice. Moisten with white stock in sufficient quantity to cover the mixture. Bring to the boil on the stove, then cook covered in the oven.

Take the onions and rice out of the casserole without touching the bacon rashers. Rub through a sieve, pressing with a wooden spoon.

Reheat the purée. Add 150 g. (5 oz., 10 tablespoons) butter and 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) fresh double cream. Blend.

Or: Blanch 1 kg. ( $2\frac{1}{4}$  lb.) chopped onions thoroughly and cook gently in butter. Add 1 litre ( $1\frac{3}{4}$  pints, generous quart) thick Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE). Season with salt, white pepper and grated nutmeg. Simmer gently, stirring frequently. Rub through a sieve, pressing with a wooden spoon. Finish cooking the purée as above.

Onion soubise II. PURÉE SOUBISE – Blanch 500 g. (18 oz.) chopped onions, drain, and cook in the oven with 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) butter, a pinch of salt, a pinch of white pepper and a pinch of fine sugar.

When the onions are cooked, without getting brown, add 4 dl. ( $\frac{3}{4}$  pint, scant 2 cups) thick Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE). Blend and finish cooking in the oven, with a lid on the pan, for 30 minutes.

Rub through a sieve, and add 75 g. (3 oz., 6 tablespoons) butter, whitening it, if necessary, with several tablespoons of cream.

Prepared in this way, the soubise is thinner in consistency and is mainly served as a sauce for grilled meat.

Chick-pea purée. PURÉE DE POIS CHICHES – Prepared like Split pea purée (see below).

Fresh pea purée. PURÉE DE POIS FRAÎS – Rub through a fine sieve some fresh garden peas cooked in water or à la française (see PEA). Heat this purée and add butter.

Use as garnish for eggs, small cuts of meat, sweetbreads and poultry. It is also served as a vegetable and as a soup.

Split pea purée. PURÉE DE POIS CASSÉS – Like Haricot bean purée, using split peas cooked in stock or water.

Use as garnish for large and small cuts of meat, braised or roast goose, ham and venison.

Sweet pepper purée. PURÉE DE PIMENTS DOUX – Peel the peppers, remove seeds, cook in butter, and pound them finely in a mortar with half their weight of thick Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE). Rub through a sieve, reheat and add butter.

Use as a garnish for grills, and for poached or soft-boiled eggs.

Potato purée. PURÉE DE POMMES DE TERRE – See POTATOES.

Pumpkin purée. PURÉE DE COURGE – See PUMPKIN.

Spinach purée. PURÉE D'ÉPINARDS – Cook the spinach in salted water. Drain, cool it in cold water, drain it again, and squeeze as dry as possible. Rub through a fine sieve. Heat, and bind it with butter and cream.

Use as garnish with meat, and poached or soft-boiled eggs. May also be used as a vegetable.

Tarragon purée. PURÉE D'ESTRAGON – Hot. Blanch rapidly in salted water 250 g. (9 oz.) fresh tarragon leaves. Drain, cool in cold water, drain again, squeeze as dry as possible and rub through a fine sieve.

Add to 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) thick Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE). Heat well, add butter, season, and mix well.

Use as filling for mushrooms, artichoke bottoms and pastry shells, or as garnish for large or small cuts of meat, chicken, eggs or fish.

Cold. Bind the tarragon purée, prepared as above, with very thick mayonnaise instead of sauce. (See also TARRAGON.)

Use as an ingredient of cold hors-d'œuvre.

Watercress, chervil, parsley or other herb purées, hot or cold, are prepared in the same way.

Truffle purée. PURÉE DE TRUFFES – Rub through a fine sieve 250 g. (9 oz.) fresh truffles, raw or cooked. Mix with 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE) which has been cooked with fresh cream. Boil for a few moments. Strain through a fine sieve.

Use as filling for pastry cases, little shells of bread, potato crust, etc., which accompany elaborate dishes; and as stuffing for artichoke bottoms, mushrooms, etc., as well as a liaison for various sauces.

PURÉE-PRESSER. PASSE-PURÉE – Kitchen utensil, of which there are many types, used for pressing through purées of meat, fish, vegetables or fruit.

PURSLANE OR PUSSLEY. POURPIER – A weed of both hemispheres. There are two principal varieties of purslane: the Common or Winter Purslane, cultivated for its large leaves, and the Garden Purslane or Rosemoss.

Ordinarily the leaves of common purslane are eaten in salad, but they may also be cooked and served with butter or cream or in their own juices, like French beans.

Finally, purslane leaves may be preserved in vinegar and used as a condiment.

QUAIL, CAILLE – This word comes from the old Flemish word quakele. Quail is a bird of passage, a native of hot countries. It comes to Europe in the spring and returns to hot climates at the beginning of winter.

The common quail (Coturnix vulgaris) is the only species which comes to Europe but there are many exotic varieties of quail in Asia and the Indian Archipelago.

The American quail belongs to the American partridge family. It is a little bigger than the common quail and its flesh has a delicate flavour. It can be found in the markets in France in winter, and can be prepared in any manner suitable for ordinary quail.

In September and October the quails begin to migrate to Africa and India. In the spring they cross the Mediterranean, covering the whole distance without stopping, and go to France. There they are trapped alive and put into cages for systematic fattening.

Charles Jobey says that the quail 'belongs to the highest aristocracy of the bird world' and this is true in so far as wild quail is concerned, but applies much less in the case of quail bred for food.

There are many recipes for the preparation of this bird. It should never be allowed to get high. In addition to the recipes given below, quail can also be prepared by following any of the recipes given for partridge (q.v.).

Quails in cases (stuffed). CAILLES EN CAISSES (FARCIES) – Bone the quails. Stuff each with a little À gratin game forcemeat (see FORCEMEATS) adding to it the quails' livers and mixing in some chopped truffles. Reshape the birds to give them their proper form and wrap each in a piece of buttered greaseproof paper. Put them into a buttered pan, placing them tightly against each other. Sprinkle with a little melted butter, cover with a lid and cook in the oven for 15 to 18 minutes. Remove the birds from the pan and, after taking off the papers, put each into a paper case which has been brushed with oil and dried in the oven. Dilute the pan juices with Madeira, moisten with a little concentrated game stock and pour over the quail. Put the cases back in the oven for 5 minutes before serving.

Quails in cases à l'italienne. CAILLES EN CAISSES À L'ITALIENNE – Prepare the quails as described in the recipe for Quails in cases (stuffed). Put 1 tablespoon Italian sauce (see SAUCE) into each case before putting in the birds. Finish cooking as described in the recipe for Quails in cases.

Quails in cases à la Lamballe. CAILLES EN CAISSES À LA LAMBALLE – Prepare the quails as described above. Before putting in the birds, line the cases with a julienne (q.v.) of mushrooms and truffles blended with cream. Dilute the pan juices with port, add fresh cream and pour this sauce over the quails.

Quails in cases à la mirepoix. CAILLES EN CAISSES À LA MIREPOIX – Prepare the quails as described above. Add some Vegetable mirepoix (see MIREPOIX) to the pan juices and pour over the birds.

Quails in cases Mont-Bry. CAILLES EN CAISSES MONT-BRY – Prepare the quails as described above, replacing à gratin forcemeat by Chicken forcemeat (see FORCEMEATS) mixed with chopped truffles. Dilute the pan juices with champagne and brown veal stock. Place the quails into cases and garnish with a ragoût (q.v.) of cocks' combs and kidneys.

Quails in cases à la Périgueux. CAILLES EN CAISSES À LA PÉRIGUEUX – Prepare the quails as described above. Arrange them in cases, put a thick slice of truffle on each and pour over Périgueux sauce (see SAUCE), adding the pan juices diluted with Madeira.

Quails in cases à la strasbourgeoise. CAILLES EN CAISSES À LA STRASBOURGEOISE – Bone the quails and stuff them with a salpicon (q.v.) of foie gras and truffles, seasoned with salt and a pinch of spices and sprinkled with a few drops of brandy.

Common quail

American quail:
a. Male
b. Female

Wrap the birds in buttered papers and cook as described in the recipe for Quails in cases. Arrange in paper cases, put a thick slice of truffle on each and cover with Périgueux sauce (see SAUCE).

Quails in cases à la vigneronne. CAILLES EN CAISSES À LA VIGNERONNE – Bone the quails, leaving the legs and wings intact. Stuff with foie gras and diced truffles sprinkled with brandy and well seasoned. Reshape the quails, wrap each in a piece of muslin and tie with string.

Cook in jelly stock made out of a veal knuckle and the quails' bones and trimmings and add some white Bordeaux wine. Drain the quails and cool thoroughly under a light press. Unwrap, coat with Brown chaud-froid sauce (see SAUCE) prepared with a part of the liquor in which the quails were cooked. Glaze with jelly made from the rest of the liquor and flavoured with Madeira.

Arrange the quails, each in a frilly paper case, or in little individual dishes. Put 1 large round slice of truffle on each quail and 3 large grapes on top.

Quails in cases à la vigneronne

Casserole of quails (or quails en cocotte). CAILLES EN CASSEROLE, EN COCOTTE – Put into each quail a piece of butter, the size of a cobnut, kneaded with a little salt and pepper. Truss the birds. Put them into an earthenware casserole or cocotte in which butter has been heated. Season and cook in the oven for 15 minutes. Add a dash of brandy and baste with a few tablespoons of game stock.

The quails may be wrapped in vine leaves or in thin rashers of bacon, served with croûtons fried in butter, spread with à gratin game forcemeat (see FORCEMEATS), if desired.

Casserole of quails à la bonne femme. CAILLES EN CASSEROLE À LA BONNE FEMME – Cook the quails in a casserole with a garnish of diced potatoes tossed in butter and blanched diced bacon. Finish cooking as described in the recipe for Casserole of quails.

Casserole of quails with grapes. CAILLES EN CASSEROLE AUX RAISINS – Clean out and singe 6 quails. Pluck them, truss, and wrap each in a vine leaf and thin rasher of fat bacon. Put them into a sauté pan in which 1 good tablespoon of butter has been heated, and cook in a hot oven for 8 minutes. Take the quails out of the pan, remove trussing strings and arrange them in an ovenproof dish. Add 60 large fresh peeled and seeded grapes. Sprinkle with the fat given out by the birds. Put the dish in the oven, uncovered, for 5 minutes.

At the moment of serving, sprinkle the birds with their pan juices diluted with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) brandy and 4 tablespoons (5 tablespoons) brown veal stock. Serve at once.

Chaud-froid of quails. CAILLES EN CHAUD-FROID, CHAUD-FROID DE CAILLES – Bone 10 quails and stuff with à gratin game forcemeat (see FORCEMEATS). In the middle of the forcemeat put a piece of uncooked foie gras studded with a piece of truffle, seasoned with salt and spices and sprinkled with brandy. Reshape the quails, wrap each in a piece of muslin and tie both ends with string, in such a manner as to make little ballottines.

Put these into a sauté pan on a foundation of fresh bacon rinds (pork rind), carrots and onions – all chopped and fried in butter. Cover the birds with their bones and trimmings, previously tossed in butter. Moisten with 2½ dl. (scant ½ pint, generous cup) Madeira. Boil down almost completely. Add veal stock simmered with a few tablespoons Game jelly stock (see JELLY). Bring to the boil, cover the sauté pan, and cook in a hot oven for 20 minutes.

Drain the quails and put them into a flat terrine. Strain the liquor in which they were cooked and pour over them. Leave to cool in this liquor. Drain the quails again, unwrap, and dry thoroughly. Coat each quail with a Brown chaud-froid sauce (see SAUCE) made from the liquor left over from cooking the quails and flavoured with Madeira or some other wine. Decorate the quails with pieces of truffles and hard-boiled egg white. Glaze the decorations with half-set jelly and chill. Arrange them in a crown in a deep dish and cover completely with half-set jelly. Keep on ice until ready to serve.

Quails en chaud-froid prepared as above can be arranged in different ways. Serve on the dish, surrounding them with chopped jelly; or put them into a glass dish and cover them with a clear jelly.

The quails can also be served individually, each in a frilly paper case on a foundation of chopped jelly, or in porcelain, glass or silver dishes.

Confit of quails. CAILLES CONFITES – Decapitate 4 plump quails, putting the heads aside for use later. Season the birds with salt and freshly ground pepper. Flame in a frying pan with Armagnac or Cognac.

Melt 200 g. (7 oz.) goose fat in a pan, adding a few drops of water. When the fat is almost melted, add the quails. Bring slowly to the boil, then simmer for 35 to 40 minutes.

Remove the pan from the heat and cool the quails. Place them in the refrigerator in order to set the film of fat that covers them.

Prepare 4 rectangular canapés (q.v.). Spread them with a thin layer of fresh foie gras, about 25 g. (1 oz.). Place 1 quail in the centre of each canapé and fix the heads in position. The eyes are made of hard-boiled egg white and a speck of truffle.

Decorate each quail with small pieces of truffle and surround with 6 large skinned, de-seeded grapes. Glaze the birds with savoury jelly.

The quails should be served on a large dish and decorated to taste (usually with a piping of chopped savoury jelly). (Recipe used in the restaurant Lasserre.)

Quails en chemise. CAILLES EN CHEMISE – Stuff the quails with à gratin game forcemeat (see FORCEMEATS). Truss them as for an entrée and enclose each one in a piece of small intestine. Tie up at both ends and wrap in muslin, which should also be tied at both ends. Poach from 15 to 18 minutes in boiling clear stock. Drain, remove the muslin and serve the quails in a timbale (q.v.), wrapped in their chemises, sprinkled with a few tablespoons of the liquor in which they were cooked. Serve with Rouennaise sauce (see SAUCE) to which concentrated game stock, boiled down to the consistency of a fumet (q.v.), has been added.

Quails with cherries. CAILLES AUX CERISES – Cook the quails, trussed as for an entrée, in butter in a casserole or earthenware cocotte. When three-quarters done add 12 stoned cherries for each quail.

Stoned cooked or fresh cherries can be used. Put them in an ovenproof dish and cook in a low oven, without any liquid except the juice rendered by the fruit.

Cold quails. CAILLES FROIDES – In addition to various recipes in this section, all the methods of preparation given for cold partridge are suitable for cold quail. (See PARTRIDGE.)

Deville quails. CAILLES GRILLÉES À LA DIABLE – Split the quails down the back and flatten them slightly. Brush with melted butter, season with salt and freshly ground pepper and dip in white breadcrumbs. Grill the quails on both sides under a low heat. Arrange on a dish and garnish with a border of sliced lemons and gherkins. Serve with Diable sauce (see SAUCE) flavoured with concentrated game stock boiled down to the consistency of a fumet (q.v.).

Quails à la financière (stuffed) I. CAILLES À LA FINANCIÈRE – Prepare and cook the quails as described in the recipe for Quails in cases (stuffed). When they are cooked, sprinkle with a few tablespoons Demi-glaze sauce (see SAUCE) and glaze in the oven, placing each bird on an oval croûton fried in butter. Surround with à la financière garnish (see GARNISHES). Put a thick slice of truffle on each quail. Dilute the pan juices with Madeira, add Demi-glaze sauce (see SAUCE) based on game fumet (q.v.) and pour over the birds.

Quails à la financière II. CAILLES À LA FINANCIÈRE – Proceed as described in the above recipe and arrange the quails with their garnish in a puff pastry shell or in a timbale made of Fine lining paste (see DOUGH), baked blind.

Quails à la financière with a rice border. CAILLES À LA FINANCIÈRE EN BORDURE DE RIZ – Prepare the quails and the garnish as described in the recipe for Quails à la financière and serve them in a rice border (see BORDER, Rice ring with garnishes).

Quails à la gourmande. CAILLES À LA GOURMANDE – Stuff the quails with a mixture of butter, lean ham and chopped truffles and cook them in butter. Dilute the pan juices with champagne and chicken stock. Add fresh truffles shredded into a julienne (q.v.). Arrange the quails on a dish, on a foundation of large mushrooms stewed in butter and filled with a salpicon (q.v.) of foie gras. Heat the sauce until piping hot and pour over the birds.

Quails à la grecque. CAILLES À LA GRECQUE – Truss the quails as for an entrée and cook in butter. Arrange in a pyramid on a foundation of Rice à la grecque (see RICE) and pour over the pan juices diluted with game stock concentrated to the consistency of a fumet (q.v.).

Grilled quails à la duchesse. CAILLES GRILLÉES À LA DUCHESSE – Grill the quails as described for Deville quails. Arrange them on small cakes of Duchess potato (see POTATOES), garnish with asparagus tips dressed with butter, and surround with a ring of Demi-glaze sauce (see SAUCE), based on a game fumet (q.v.), with butter added to it.

Grilled quails à l'indienne. CAILLES GRILLÉES À L'INDIENNE – For 12 quails prepare the following mixture in a bowl: 300 g. (11 oz., generous 1½ cup) butter, blended into a paste, 1 tablespoon curry powder, 1 tablespoon Mulligatawny paste, 2 teaspoons Worcester sauce, 2 teaspoons Harvey sauce, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) unsweetened chutney, 1 teaspoon paprika and salt. Blend into a paste.

Remove the breastbone and put a little of the paste into each bird. Sear them quickly in the oven, and cool them under a light press. Coat the outside of each quail with the same paste and grill. When they are brown, finish cooking in the oven. Prepare a border of Game forcemeat (see FORCEMEATS), put the rice in the middle, arrange the quails on top, pour over a little of the sauce and serve the rest separately. Serve straw potatoes at the same time.

Rice for the garnish. Brown chopped shallots lightly and moisten with the stock in which the rice is to be cooked. Season with curry powder, Mulligatawny paste and paprika. Cook for a moment, then strain through a fine strainer. Pour this stock over the rice, bring to the boil, add a good piece of butter, cover, and cook in the oven for 20 minutes.

Indian sauce. Fry 2 onions and 2 cloves of garlic lightly in butter. Add a little curry powder and 2 diced cooking apples. Moisten with brown veal stock, cook, and pass through a sieve. Pour into a saucepan and taste the sauce to make sure the flavour is good. Pour over the quails. (Recipe by M. A. Menager, chef to King Edward VII of England.)

Jellied quails à la périgourdine. CAILLES À LA PÉRIGOURDINE, À LA GELÉE – Bone and stuff the quails with À gratin game forcemeat (see FORCEMEATS), foie gras and truffles, allowing quite a lot of truffles. Reshape the quails, wrap each in a piece of muslin and tie at both ends. Poach from 20 to 25 minutes in liquid Game jelly stock (see JELLY), flavoured with Madeira or any other wine. Leave the quails to cool in their liquor. Drain, unwrap, and dry on a cloth. Put them into a terrine or glass bowl. Clarify the jelly and pour over the quails. Chill thoroughly before serving.

Quails à la limousine. CAILLES À LA LIMOUSINE – Arrange the quails, grilled as described for Deville quails, on a foundation of artichoke hearts cooked in a court-bouillon (q.v.), simmered in butter and filled with Chestnut purée (see CHESTNUTS). Pour round the border a ring of Demi-glaze sauce (see SAUCE) based on concentrated game fumet, with butter added to it.

Quails Lucullus. CAILLES LUCULLUS – Bone the quails, put into each bird about 25 g. (1 oz.) uncooked foie gras, seasoned with salt and spices and studded with a small peeled truffle. Put the quails into a sauté pan and cook as described in the recipe for Quails in cases. Arrange in a low pastry shell filled with a ragoût of Truffles à la crème (see TRUFFLE). Dilute the pan juices with Madeira, add brown veal stock, boil down by half and pour over the birds.

Minute quails. CAILLES À LA MINUTE – Open the quails down the back and remove the small bones from the inside. Beat lightly to flatten. Season with salt and pepper and sauté the birds briskly in butter, browning them slightly on both sides. When done, sprinkle with a little chopped onion fried in butter and chopped parsley. Put thinly sliced mushrooms (1 per quail) into the sauté pan to brown, add a dash of brandy, moisten with game fumet (q.v.) and brown veal stock, boil for a few moments, add a dash of lemon juice and pour this sauce over the birds.

Quails à la Monselet. CAILLES À LA MONSELET – Half bone the quails. Stuff them with a salpicon (q.v.) of truffles and foie gras. Wrap each bird in a piece of muslin and poach in Madeira-flavoured game stock made from the quails' bones and trimmings. Drain the birds, unwrap, put into an earthenware cocotte or casserole with a garnish of sliced artichoke hearts tossed in butter, cultivated mushrooms and thick slices of truffles. Strain the liquor in which the quails were cooked, add an equal quantity of thick fresh cream, boil down and pour over the birds. Cover the cocotte and put in a slow oven for 5 minutes.

Cold quail mousse. MOUSSE FROIDE DE CAILLES – Truss 12 quails as for an entrée and braise them in Madeira-flavoured stock, with the usual vegetables and truffle and mushroom trimmings added to it. Leave the quails to cool in the braising liquor.

Drain and bone them completely, taking care to preserve the wings intact, as they will be used for garnishing the mousse.

Using the trimmings, bones and skins of the quails, make a Brown chaud-froid sauce (see SAUCE).

Prepare Game jelly stock (see JELLY), flavoured with Madeira or some other wine.

The mousse mixture is made as follows:

Pound the rest of the quails' flesh finely in a mortar, adding to it 175 g. (6 oz., ¾ cup) cooked foie gras and 3 or 4 tablespoons of the chaud-froid sauce. When the mixture is quite smooth take it out of the mortar and rub it through a fine sieve, or use an electric blender. Transfer the mixture to a bowl on ice. Stir vigorously, add a dash of brandy, 2 or 3 tablespoons concentrated liquid game jelly and 2½ dl. (scant ½ pint, generous cup) fresh cream, very stiffly whipped. Blend carefully.

Line the bottom and sides of a mousse mould with a layer of game jelly. Arrange a border on the bottom of alternating rows of thick slices of truffles, cooled in Madeira, and half of the quails' wings, cooled under a press and coated with the chaud-froid sauce. Fill the mould with the mousse mixture to within 2 cm. (1 inch) of the edge. Lay the remaining wings on top, alternating with rows of truffle slices. Finish off with a layer of game jelly, filling the mould right up to the top.

Leave the mousse on ice or in a refrigerator until it sets completely. Turn out on a dish or on a buttered croûton. Surround with chopped game jelly and put a border of small pieces of jelly, cut in the shape of wolf's teeth, around the edge of the dish.

Instead of putting the quail mousse into a mould, it can be put into a dish on a layer of well-set jelly. Pile the mixture into a dome, garnish with quails' wings coated with the chaud-froid sauce and slivers of truffles, and pour half-set jelly over the top.

Quails in a nest

Quails in a nest. CAILLES AU NID – Bone the quails, stuff with À gratin game forcemeat (see FORCEMEATS) mixed with chopped truffles, wrap each bird in a small piece of muslin and make into a roll. Poach for 18 minutes in stock prepared from the bones and trimmings, with clear veal stock and Madeira. Drain the quails, unwrap, press in a cloth to give them their proper shape and glaze lightly in the oven. Arrange them in a nest of straw potatoes, prepared as described in the recipe for Potato nests (see POTATOES). Line with a salted batter pancake (see CRÊPES) and fill with a ragoût of cocks' kidneys, small button mushrooms and truffles, blended with a few tablespoons of Financière sauce (see SAUCE) to which the liquor left over from poaching the quails has been added. Put the rest of the ragoût on top.

Quail pâté. PÂTÉ DE CAILLES – Bone the quails. Stuff each with a piece of À gratin forcemeat (see FORCEMEATS) about the size of a hazelnut, and the same amount of foie gras, studded with a piece of truffle, the whole well seasoned with salt and spices and sprinkled with a dash of brandy. Wrap each quail in a very thin rasher of bacon.

Line a hinged oval or rectangular mould with fine pastry, then with thin rashers of bacon. Cover with a layer of finely pounded forcemeat made of veal and lean and fat pork in equal proportions, bound with an egg, well seasoned, sprinkled with a little brandy and mixed with diced truffles. Over this forcemeat put a layer of À gratin game forcemeat (see FORCEMEATS), then half the stuffed quails, pressing down well. Cover with another layer of forcemeat, put in the rest of the quails and follow with a layer of forcemeat. Cover this with a layer of truffled forcemeat, flatten it, and cover again with a layer of thin rashers of lean bacon. Seal with a pastry lid. Decorate with pieces of pastry cut in fancy shapes. Make a hole in the middle of the lid to allow steam to escape, and brush the top with beaten egg. Bake in a hot oven for about 1½ hours.

When cooked, leave the pâté to get cold, and pour liquid Game jelly stock (see JELLY) through the hole in the top.

Hinged mould for quail pâté

Quails with peas. CAILLES AUX PETITS POIS – Cook the quails in a casserole as described in the appropriate recipe. Have ready ½ litre (scant pint, 2¼ cups) fresh garden peas, cooked in butter, and some small young onions. Put the peas into the cocotte and leave the whole to simmer together without boiling.

Quails petit-duc. CAILLES PETIT-DUC – Split the quails on the back and season with salt and paprika. Sprinkle with melted butter and dip in white breadcrumbs. Grill them and arrange each one on a little cake of Anna potatoes (see POTATOES), baked in tartlet tins. Put 1 large grilled mushroom, filled with grated horseradish, on each quail. Heat a few tablespoons of Game fumet (see FUMET), add Madeira and butter, and pour over the birds.

Quails with rice. CAILLES AU RIZ – Truss the quails as for an entrée, season and cook in butter. Arrange them in a pyramid on a foundation of a Rice pilaf (see PILAF) to which the butter left in the pan has been added. Add a dash of brandy to the pan juices, moisten with concentrated brown veal stock or concentrated Game fumet (see FUMET). Pour over the quails.

Quails with rice (stuffed). CAILLES AU RIZ – Prepare and cook the quails as described in the recipe for Quails in cases. Arrange them on a foundation of Rice pilaf (see PILAF). Dilute the pan juices with brown veal stock, simmer for a few moments and pour over the quails.

Quails with risotto. CAILLES AU RISOTTO – Proceed as described in the recipe for Quails with rice, replacing the rice pilaf with Risotto with cheese.

Quails with risotto à la piémontaise. CAILLES AU RISOTTO À LA PIÉMONTAISE – Arrange quails cooked in butter on Risotto à la piémontaise (see RICE), mixed with finely sliced white truffles. Dilute the pan juices with concentrated brown veal stock and pour over the quails.

Roast quails. CAILLES RÔTIES – Wrap the quails first in vine leaves, then in thin rashers of bacon and secure with string. Roast on a spit before a lively fire for 15 to 20 mins (or in the oven, for 12–15 mins). Arrange each quail on a garnished canapé. Garnish with watercress and quarters of lemon. Dilute the pan juices and serve with the resulting sauce.

Quails à la romaine. CAILLES À LA ROMAINE – Heat some butter in a flameproof earthenware casserole and brown the quails all over. Add fresh peas which have been prepared in the following manner: fry finely chopped young onions with lean diced ham in butter. Add freshly shelled peas. Season with salt and a pinch of sugar. Cover and cook from 35 to 40 minutes.

Cover the casserole and finish cooking together in the oven. Serve in the same casserole.

Quails Saint-Mars. CAILLES EN COCOTTE SAINT-MARS – Put the quails, trussed as for an entrée, into a sauté pan. Cover them with a julienne of coarsely shredded carrot, onion and celery, lightly fried in butter and moistened with veal stock flavoured with sherry. Season and cook without a lid. Drain the quails, untruss them and arrange in an earthenware cocotte or casserole. Cover with a julienne of coarsely shredded truffles and mushrooms. Pour the pan juices over the julienne. Sprinkle with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) brandy and dot with small pieces of butter. Cover the cocotte and seal the lid with flour-and-water paste. Cook in the oven, in a bain-marie, from 15 to 18 minutes.

Quails à la Souvarof. CAILLES À LA SOUVAROF – Stuff the quails with a salpicon (q.v.) of foie gras and truffles, season and sprinkle with a dash of brandy. Truss as for an entrée. Fry briskly in butter for 6 minutes. Put into an earthenware cocotte with cooked truffles, allowing 2 truffles per quail. Season with salt and pepper. Dilute the pan juices with Madeira, moisten with Demi-glace sauce (see SAUCE) based on Game fumet (see FUMET). Simmer for a few moments and pour over the quails. Add a dash of brandy. Cover the cocotte, seal the lid on and cook in the oven for 12 minutes.

Quails à la Talleyrand. CAILLES À LA TALLEYRAND – Split the quails open, flatten them lightly and season. Coat on both sides with a thin layer of Vegetable mirepoix (see MIREPOIX), mixed with 1 tablespoon lean, chopped cooked ham and chopped truffles. Wrap each quail in a piece of pig's caul or salt pork. Sprinkle with melted butter and roll in fresh breadcrumbs. Grill the quails on a low flame and arrange on puff pastry tartlets, baked blind and filled with Mushroom purée (see PURÉE). Serve with Périgueux sauce (see SAUCE) based on a game fumet.

Tinned (canned) quails in jelly. CONSERVE DE CAILLES À LA GELÉE – Forcemeat ingredients. 200 g. (7 oz.) fine pork, minced, 100 g. (4 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) À gratin game forcemeat (see FORCEMEAT), 200 g. (7 oz., generous  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) cooked foie gras, 75 g. (3 oz.) truffles (net weight), brandy, salt, pepper and spices.

Liquor for stewing. Strong meat jelly stock made from beef, 1 veal knuckle, calves' feet, chicken, bacon rinds and the usual vegetables and aromatics, 4 dl. ( $\frac{3}{4}$  pint, scant 2 cups) Madeira.

Ingredients for quails in jelly: quails, foie gras, truffle, orange (Ledoyen. Phot. Nicolas)

Canapé of jellied quails garnished with foie gras (Ledoyen. Phot. Nicolas)

Method. Truss the quails as for an entrée. Remove the backbone and the breastbone and spread the quails flat on the table. Season and sprinkle with brandy. Inside each quail put a piece of the forcemeat the size of an egg, with a piece of foie gras, studded with a quarter of a truffle, in the middle. Reshape the quails and wrap each in a piece of buttered paper. Pack them tightly into a buttered sauté pan. Cover with the bones and trimmings, which should previously be tossed in butter.

Moisten with 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) Madeira and bring to the boil. Cover with a sheet of buttered paper. Cook in the oven, covered, for 25 minutes. Test the quails gently with the point of a trussing needle: if no blood comes out, they are cooked. Cool in the braising liquor.

Drain the birds, unwrap and dry them. Put them into tins, breast downwards. Cover with clarified liquid Game jelly stock (see JELLY), to which the diluted braising liquor has been added.

When the jelly is quite cold, solder the lids of the tins. Mark them and put the tins into a big pan. Cover with cold water. Put a weight on the tins so as to make sure they are well submerged. Give them 1 hour 10 minutes of uninterrupted boiling for tins containing 1 quail, and  $1\frac{1}{4}$  hours for tins containing 2 quails. Drain the tins, put them on the table separated from each other, placing them marked side up. Leave until quite cold.

QUARTANIER – French name for a four-year-old wild boar.

QUARTER. QUARTIER – The quarter of the forepart of beef includes the shoulder and the sides. The hindquarter is made up of the thigh and sirloin.

In French butchery a 'fifth' quarter is spoken of to describe all the inedible parts of the slaughtered animal: skin, horns, hoofs and tallow.

QUASI – Piece from the rump of veal.

QUATRE-QUARTS (Four quarters) – Household cake mixture, made up of equal quantities of eggs, flour, butter and sugar. (English pound cake.)

Beat together in a bowl 100 g. (4 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) sugar with either 2 large eggs or 3 small ones until the mixture becomes white and frothy. Add 100 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) sifted flour, and 100 g. (4 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) melted butter. Flavour with orange-blossom water, orange or lemon peel, or any liqueur, and pour into a buttered mould. Cook in the oven at a gentle heat for 25 or 30 minutes.

QUENELLE

QUENELLE – Dumpling made with fish or meat forcemeat bound with eggs. The word is said to come from the Anglo-Saxon knyll, meaning to pound, to grind, because the flesh of the meat or fish, before being turned into quenelles, must be pounded in a mortar.

Quenelles are made with all kinds of meat, poultry, game, fish and shellfish. They are made in different shapes, large and small. The most important is the quenelle prepared with the forcemeat called godiveau or Quenelle forcemeat (see FORCEMEATS).

Quenelles, particularly the small kind, are used as an element in such garnishes as financière, Godard, Toulouse, etc. Large quenelles, which are generally embellished with truffles, pickled tongue, etc., are used as a more elaborate garnish for large braised fish or entrées. They are also used to prepare tarts, timbales and other preparations of the same kind.

Quenelles of foie gras. QUENELLES DE FOIE GRAS – Pound a raw foie gras and rub it through a fine sieve. Pound half as much raw chicken flesh as there is foie gras, mixing in with it, little by little, half its weight of Bread panada (see PANADA). Rub this forcemeat through a sieve. Put it back in the mortar and pound again, adding to it, little by little, the purée of foie gras and 3 or 4 egg yolks. Season with salt, pepper and spices. Beat this forcemeat on ice.

Make the quenelles in the usual way (with a spoon or with a forcing bag) and poach them in salted water.

Quenelles of meat, veal, chicken, game. QUENELLES DE VIANDES, VEAU, VOLAILLE, GIBIER – Prepare in the same way as those for pike. (See FORCEMEATS, Quenelle forcemeat; PIKE, Pike quenelles.)

Quenelles of pike mousseline. QUENELLES DE BROCHET MOUSSELINE – Made with Mousseline forcemeat (see FORCEMEAT). Mould in a tablespoon, lay in a buttered sauté pan, and poach in boiling salted water from 8 to 10 minutes according to size.

Drain, dry, and place on a croûton of bread fried in butter or on puff pastry crusts. Garnish and sauce are according to the particular recipe. Mousseline quenelles may be prepared in the same way, using other fish: whiting, brill, sole, salmon, trout.

Quenelles of pike princesse

Quenelles of pike princesse. QUENELLES DE BROCHET PRINCESSE – Set the above quenelles on a border of Pike forcemeat (see FORCEMEATS) with truffles. Decorate the middle of the dish with asparagus tips. Coat with Normande sauce (see SAUCE).

QUICHE – The quiche or kiche, as the word is sometimes spelt, originates in Lorraine.

There are several kinds of quiche. Each region of Lorraine or Alsace has its own. The name is also used for some custard tarts served as a sweet, though the real quiche, that of Lorraine, is always served as hors-d'œuvre and never for the sweet course.

Line with ordinary short crust pastry (see DOUGH, Lining paste) a pie dish or plate with fluted edges, 20 cm (8 inches) in diameter and well buttered. The pastry should extend a little beyond the edges.

Put thin slices of streaky bacon, blanched and lightly fried in butter, in the bottom of this flan case. Fill the crust with a mixture composed of 4 eggs and 4 dl. ( $\frac{3}{4}$  pint, scant 2 cups) thick fresh cream, seasoned with salt and well beaten. When the flan is filled, add 2 teaspoons butter cut into tiny pieces. Cook in the oven at moderate heat for 30 to 35 minutes. Serve very hot.

Sometimes the flan pastry is enriched with thin slices of Gruyère cheese, set alternately with the bacon.

Quiche Lorraine

Quiche Lorraine (old recipe) – Roll out as thinly as possible some bread dough. Put this sheet of dough on a metal dish with raised and fluted edges, sprinkled with flour. Put small pieces of very fresh butter all over the dough.

'Fill the pie dish with a mixture of thick cream and eggs well beaten together and seasoned with salt. Cook in a very hot oven for a maximum of 10 minutes. Serve very hot.'

Little quiches with cheese. PETITES QUICHES AU FROMAGE – Line tartlet cases with short crust pastry (see DOUGH, Lining paste). Put Gruyère cheese, cut into very small pieces, in the bottom of these cases. Fill them with a mixture of cream and eggs. Cook in the oven for 14 or 15 minutes. Turn out and serve very hot.

Little quiches with ham. PETITES QUICHES AU JAMBON – Proceed as in the last recipe, replacing the cheese by lean cooked ham cut up into small pieces.

QUIGNON – Big wedge of bread cut from one of the larger French loaves.

QUILLET (Pâtisserie) – This sweetmeat was created in a Parisian pâtisserie which was managed for a long time by M. Charabot, one of the masters of French pastry-making. This is the recipe:

Put in a copper basin 500 g. (18 oz.,  $2\frac{1}{4}$  cups) sugar, and 15 whole eggs, powdered vanilla and a very small pinch of salt. Beat with a whisk over a gentle heat, without letting it get too hot.

When the mixture is half thickened remove it and continue to beat it away from the heat until it is almost cold. Then add 500 g. (18 oz.,  $4\frac{1}{2}$  cups) sieved flour, sprinkled in a shower, and 500 g. (18 oz.,  $2\frac{1}{4}$  cups) melted butter.

Fill round cake tins with the mixture. Bake in the oven at a moderate heat. Cool the cakes and fill them with the following butter cream:

Heat together in a saucepan 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) milk, 5 dl. (scant pint,  $2\frac{1}{4}$  cups) 28° syrup (see SUGAR), 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) Orgeat syrup (see ORGEAT) and a vanilla pod. Cook this mixture for a few moments, then pour it over 8 egg yolks in a basin. Blend well with a whisk. Reheat the mixture gently without allowing it to boil. Cool. Pour onto 250 g. (9 oz., generous cup) butter which has been put through a sieve. Mix well. Keep this butter cream in a cool place until it is needed.

Fill the cake with the cream, and pipe some through a forcing-bag over the top. Decorate with sugar.

QUINCE. COING – Fruit of the quince, a common tree which used to be as well known as the apple and the vine. It has a tart and astringent flavour, a very sweet smell, and cannot be eaten raw. It is full of pectin and is used for jellies, jams, marmalade, syrups, and home-made liqueurs. (See JAMS AND JELLIES.)

Quince compote. COMPOTE DE COINGS – Cut ripe quinces into quarters. Trim, and blanch them for a few minutes in boiling water. Drain, and cook them in a vanilla syrup. Arrange them in a dish or timbale, and pour over them the syrup in which they were cooked.

Quince jelly. GELÉE DE COINGS – Made with an equal weight of sugar and quince juice, like Apple jelly (see JAMS AND JELLIES).

Quince liqueur or ratafia (quince water) – See LIQUEUR.

Quince marmalade. MARMELADE DE COINGS – Made in the same way as Apple marmalade (see MARMALADES).

Quince paste. PÂTE DE COINGS – Make some quince marmalade in the same way as Apple marmalade (see MARMALADES). Boil down to a good thick consistency. Put it on a shallow baking dish and dry in a warm oven. Cut the paste into square or rectangular slices. Dust them with crystallised sugar. Keep in a dry place.

QUINTAL – Name of a variety of cabbage.

Quinces (Eveinoff, Copyright George Truffaut)

RABBIT, LAPIN – Small rodent of the hare family, of African origin. There are several breeds of rabbit. The fur is sometimes white, sometimes grey, or black and tan, or mottled.

The domestic rabbit should be eaten young, when it is from 3 to 3½ months old. A young rabbit can be recognised by the following: a short neck, plump knees, and very flexible front legs, which can be bent about at will.

The warren rabbit, the typical species of wild rabbit, is prodigiously fertile.

Fulbert-Dumonteil, the poet of good eating, praised it in these terms:

‘It provides a feast for countryman and labourer. It is the youngster’s game. It is present on all festive occasions, be it a suburban wedding or a village christening. Its appetising aroma pervades farmhouse and cottage alike.’

The flesh of rabbit is fairly white and somewhat less fatty than that of poultry. Its flavour depends a great deal on its feeding. It is more stringy and less delicate than white poultry, but quite as readily digestible.

However, sufferers from dyspepsia, hepatitis, colitis are advised to avoid fricassée of rabbit, and all similar sauce-based rabbit dishes.

Rabbit Coquibus. LAPIN COQUITUS – Joint a rabbit and put it for a time in a marinade. Sauté it very quickly. Add 24 small onions and the same number of strips of lean blanched bacon. Fry all these ingredients. Sprinkle with 1 heaped tablespoon flour, and brown for a few seconds. Moisten with 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) white wine, a few tablespoons clear soup and the marinade, strained. Add a large bouquet garni of parsley, thyme, bay leaves and savory. Boil for 15 minutes. Put 400 g. (14 oz.) small new potatoes in the saucepan. Cover and cook for 45 minutes.

Fricassée of rabbit. GIBELOTTE – This fricassée, which is called gibelotte in French, is made with white or red wine. (See below, Young wild rabbit en gibelotte.)

Sautéed rabbit with curry. LAPIN SAUTÉ AU CURRIE – Proceed as for Sautéed rabbit with paprika, substituting Indian curry powder for paprika. Serve with Rice à l’indienne (see RICE).

Sautéed rabbit with paprika. LAPIN SAUTÉ AU PAPRIKA –

To skin a rabbit, first make two cuts from the abdomen along each thigh to free the hindlegs; then holding the animal by the hindlegs in the right hand, peel off the skin with the left hand

How to clean and cut a rabbit (Larousse)

Place the rabbit on its back and slit open the stomach

Make an incision as far as the breast

Cut away the contents of the abdomen

Empty the intestines into a bowl

Lay the rabbit on its side and remove the front legs

Cut off the hindlegs

Cut away the front portion of the thorax to be thrown out

Divide the rabbit in two Pieces of cut rabbit

Joint the rabbit and steep it in a marinade. Cook very slowly in butter, until tender, 100 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) sliced onion. Brown the rabbit in the same pan. Season with 2 teaspoon paprika.

When the pieces of rabbit are well fried, sprinkle with 1 heaped tablespoon flour, which should take on a golden colour but should not brown. Moisten with  $\frac{1}{2}$  glass white wine. Boil down and add enough clear stock just to cover the rabbit. Strain the marinade and add it to the stock. Dice coarsely 150 g. (5 oz.,  $2\frac{1}{2}$  cups) mushrooms and put them in the pan. Cover and cook for 35 minutes. Add 5 tablespoons (6 tablespoons) thick fresh cream. Keeping the pan covered, simmer for about 35 minutes until the rabbit is cooked. Before serving, add a little more fresh cream.

YOUNG WILD RABBIT. LAPEREAU – The flesh of this rabbit is somewhat firmer than that of the domestic rabbit. It has also more flavour, though frequently it is spoiled by mustiness.

Blanquette of young wild rabbit. LAPEREAU EN BLANQUETTE – Cut the rabbit into sections and proceed as for Blanquette of lamb (see LAMB).

Boiled young wild rabbit à l'anglaise. LAPEREAU BOUILLI À L'ANGLAISE – Draw the rabbit by making a very small incision in the belly. Stuff it with a stuffing à l'anglaise made from one-third veal or ox kidneys, one-third best veal fat or udder, one-third sandwich bread soaked in milk and squeezed dry. Add 1 egg to every  $\frac{1}{2}$  kg. (18 oz.) stuffing. Season with salt, pepper and spices. Having stuffed the rabbit, sew up the opening and truss. Simmer it in salted water for about 1 hour. Serve with Caper sauce (see SAUCE).

Young wild rabbit chasseur, or sautéed with mushrooms. LAPEREAU SAUTÉ AUX CHAMPIGNONS, CHASSEUR – Joint the rabbit. Season with salt, pepper, thyme and powdered bay leaf and cook with mushrooms or chasseur, following the recipes given under VEAL, Sautéed veal chasseur, or with mushrooms.

Young wild rabbit en gibelotte. LAPEREAU EN GIBELOTTE – This is prepared in exactly the same way as Civet of hare (see HARE) except that white wine is often used instead of red wine. It is also quite usual to add quartered potatoes or small potato balls to this gibelotte.

Potted wild rabbit or pâté. PÂTÉ OU TERRINE DE LAPEREAU – These preparations are made with boned rabbit stuffed with pork in the same way as Potted hare or Pâté of hare (see HARE).

Roast young wild rabbit. LAPEREAU RÔTI – Proceed as for Roast hare (see HARE).

Young wild rabbit sautéed à la minute. LAPEREAU SAUTÉ À LA MINUTE – Skin, draw and joint the rabbit, taking care the bones do not splinter. Season with salt and pepper.

Brown it quickly in very hot butter in a heavy iron pan until all the pieces are a good colour. Shake the pan frequently and turn over the pieces so that they are cooked all through. As soon as it is ready, put the rabbit in a pie dish and keep it warm.

Dilute the pan juices with  $1\frac{1}{2}$  dl. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  pint,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) white wine. Add 1 chopped shallot. Boil down the sauce until it is very concentrated. Add thickened brown veal stock.

Boil for a few seconds. Add 1 tablespoon butter and a squeeze of lemon juice. Pour over the rabbit. Sprinkle with chopped parsley.

RABIOLE – Variety of kohlrabi or turnip.

RABOTTE or DOUILLON – Fruit dumpling of Norman origin. The fruit, mostly apple or pear, is enclosed in a shortcrust pastry to make a douillette (a priest's overcoat), from which word comes its name. It is then cooked in the oven.

RACAHOUT – Mixture of starches which, according to Dorvault, must be made in the following proportions: 50 g. (2 oz.) each of cocoa, acorn flour and rice flour; 45 g. ( $1\frac{1}{2}$  oz.) potato flour, 15 g. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  oz.) salep, 250 g. (9 oz.) white sugar, 5 g. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  oz.) vanilla sugar. Prepared like drinking chocolate.

RACHEL – See GARNISHES.

RACLETTE – Variety of Swiss cheese fondue, speciality of the canton of Valais, made by holding a big piece of the local cheese to the fire and scraping off the softened part as it melts. The cheese scrapings are eaten with jacket potatoes and accompanied by Fendant, the heady white wine of Valais.

RACCOON. RATON-LAVEUR – Small wild animal, with longish grey fur, living in the forests of America. It is edible and cooked like wild rabbit.

RADISH. RADIS – Plant of the Cruciferae family, of which the root is edible. Cultivated in China, Japan and the Indies in the most remote areas, the radish is found now in all the temperate regions of Europe.

There are a great many varieties of radish: round, long, pink, black, white and purple.

All the radishes are eaten raw as hors-d'œuvre with butter and salt.

The tender leaves of pink radishes can also be eaten. Raw, they are put in salad; cooked, they are used like spinach.

Pink radishes may also be served hot, cooked like new turnips.

Black radishes. RADIS NOIRS – After having been peeled, black radishes are cut into rounds and put to soak in salt for 30 minutes.

The rounds are then washed and served in a radish dish.

Pink radishes in cream. RADIS ROSES À LA CRÈME – Peel the radishes and blanch in salted water. Drain and stew in butter. When they are cooked add the cream, allowing  $3\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (generous  $\frac{1}{2}$  pint,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cups) cream for every 500 g. (18 oz.) radishes. Boil down the cream by one-third. Serve in a deep dish.

Glazed pink radishes. RADIS ROSES GLACÉS – Peel the radishes, blanch them for 5 minutes in salted water, drain and cool in cold water. Toss in butter over a good heat, sprinkling them with a little sugar. When they are lightly coloured moisten them with sufficient stock or water barely to cover them. Simmer covered, until they have absorbed all the liquid. At this point the radishes should be cooked and well glazed.

If they are still hard, add more liquid and boil down once more.

Pink radishes in stock. RADIS ROSES AU JUS – Cook the radishes in salt water. When they are cooked drain them and moisten with a few tablespoons of meat stock boiled down until it is thick and brown. Simmer gently.

Pink radishes poulette. RADIS ROSES À LA POULETTE – Cook the radishes as above, moistening them with Poulette sauce (see SAUCE). Simmer gently in the sauce.

RAGOÛT – Ragoûts are made from meat, fowl or fish cut in pieces of regular shape and size, browned or cooked without colouring and with or without an accompaniment of vegetables.

The 'brown' ragoûts, of which the best-known type is the Ragoût of mutton or Navarin of mutton (see MUTTON), are prepared by frying the meat lightly, sprinkling with flour and adding stock, meat juices or water.

The uncoloured ragoûts – à blanc, sometimes described as à l'anglaise, which must not be confused with blanquettes and fricassées – belong to the category of poached food. They have no thickening other than that created by the addition of potatoes to their preparation. Typical of these ragoûts is Irish stew.

Also included under the name of ragoûts are various garnishes, composed of one or more ingredients, bound with a white or brown liaison, with a meat or meatless stock, used in preparing entrées, or to embellish fish, fowl, eggs and other preparations. (See GARNISHES.)

It is as well to note that meat ragoûts, especially those incorporating a roux (q.v.), are particularly indigestible. According to the dieticians, only those with excellent constitutions should eat ragoûts.

Round pan for ragoûts (Larousse)

Method of cooking 'brown' ragoûts. Cut up the meat, whether boned or not, into pieces about 5 cm. (2 inches) long. Brown them over a good heat in a sauté pan, in smoking hot clarified fat. Season with salt, pepper and a pinch of sugar (the addition of sugar gives the preparation a good natural colour).

As soon as the pieces of meat are browned, pour off three-quarters of the fat. Sprinkle with flour and let it colour a little, shaking the pan over the heat. Stir in water, stock or meat juice; add a bouquet garni (q.v.) and, if the type of ragoût calls for it, crushed garlic and tomato sauce. Cook, covered, in the oven or on a very low heat for 45 minutes to 1 hour.

Drain the pieces of meat; trim them, put them in another pot or in the same pot – cleaned – in which they were cooked, cover them with the specified vegetables and pour over the sauce, strained and with the fat removed.

Cook covered, simmering very gently, for 45 minutes to 1 hour according to the kind of meat being used. Cooking in the oven is best.

Serve in a dish or deep plate, putting the pieces of meat below and the vegetables on top. Pour the boiling hot sauce over all.

The method recommended above (trimming the drained pieces and putting them in another pot with the strained and de-greased sauce) gives a better-looking dish. In home cooking, this complication can be avoided and the accompanying vegetables can be put directly into the ragoût without changing pots.

Method of cooking for ragoûts à blanc or à l'anglaise. Put the pieces of meat, cut in pieces as above, in a sauté pan, alternately with layers of potatoes cut in slices, and chopped onions. Season with salt and pepper and put a bouquet garni in the centre.

Pour over water or stock in sufficient quantity to cover meat and vegetables. Start cooking on a good heat, then cover and cook in the oven or over a very low heat for about 1½ hours.

Serve in the same way as for the brown ragoût.

Ragoût à la banquière – Ingredients given in the recipe for Banquière garnish (see GARNISHES) mixed and bound with a good thick sauce.

Used as filling for pastry cases, timbales, pies, vol-au-vent.

Ragoût à la cancalaise – Poached oysters, bearded; shrimps; Normande sauce to bind (see SAUCE).

Used as filling for pastry cases, timbales, pies, vol-au-vent, etc.

Ragoût of celeriac. RAGOÛT DE CÉLERI-RAVE – Celeriac cut to look like 'pigeon's eggs', stewed in butter and bound in a Cream sauce (see SAUCE).

Same uses as Ragoût à la banquière.

Ragoût à la cévenole – Composed of braised chestnuts, small glazed onions, and coarsely diced streaky (lean) bacon, blanched and lightly fried, the whole bound with the cooking liquor of the braised meat which this garnish should accompany – or with thick, rich Demi-glace sauce (see SAUCE) flavoured with Madeira.

Ragoût à la Chambord – See CARP, Carp Chambord.

Ragoût chipolata – Composed of braised chestnuts, small glazed onions, mushrooms and chipolata sausages. This ragoût, which is bound with Demi-glace sauce (see SAUCE) flavoured with Madeira, is used as garnish for large cuts of braised or oven-roasted red meat.

Ragoût of cocks' combs and kidneys. RAGOÛT DE CRÊTES ET DE ROGNONS DE COQ – This ragoût, used to garnish poultry, as filling for vol-au-vent or other pastry cases, for rice borders, etc., is made up of cocks' combs and kidneys cooked in a flour-and-water court-bouillon (q.v.) and bound with a white or brown sauce according to the type of preparation.

Ragoût à la financière – This ragoût is used to accompany meat and poultry, as well as for filling timbales, pies, vol-au-vent, rice borders and other mixed entrées. It is made up of quenelles, cocks' combs and kidneys, truffles and mushrooms, completed sometimes with peeled olives and bound with Financière sauce (see SAUCE).

Ragoût à la Godard – See GARNISHES.

Ragoût of lobster à la cardinal. RAGOÛT DE HOMARD À LA CARDINAL – Ragoût composed of a mixture of sliced, cooked lobster, and slices of cooked truffles and mushrooms bound with very thick Cardinal sauce (see SAUCE).

Used as filling for pastry cases, timbales, vol-au-vent, etc.

Ragoût à la marinère – Composed in principle of mussels cooked in white wine and taken out of their shells, and shelled shrimps, bound in a Marinière sauce (see SAUCE).

This ragoût is used to garnish braised fish or as filling for tarts, tartlets, timbales, vol-au-vent, etc. It can be finished off with all kinds of shellfish cooked in white wine, with their shells removed.

Ragoût of molluscs. RAGOÛT DE COQUILLAGES – Prepared by binding shellfish (mussels, oysters, cockles, clams, etc.) cooked in white wine and shelled, in a white sauce suitable to the nature of the dish.

Ragoût of mushrooms. RAGOÛT DE CHAMPIGNONS – Sliced, sautéed mushrooms bound with Velouté sauce (see SAUCE) mixed with cream, or with brown sauce boiled down with Madeira. The same uses as above.

Ragoût Nantua I – Shell 40 medium-sized crayfish tails, previously cooked in mirepoix (q.v.). Put them in a sauté pan with 1 tablespoon butter. Sauté for a moment over a good heat. Sprinkle with 1 tablespoon flour, moisten with 1 tablespoon of brandy and cover with fresh cream. Mix, cook over a gentle heat for 10 minutes, stirring often. At the last moment add 75 g. (3 oz., 6 tablespoons) Crayfish butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters) made with the scraps and shells of crayfish.

Ragoût Nantua II – Cook the crayfish tails for a moment in butter, moisten with brandy and cream and cook until it is reduced to half its quantity.

Add 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) crayfish purée prepared with the scraps and shells and Béchalme sauce (see SAUCE).

Crayfish tail ragoût à la Nantua (see CRAYFISH) is used to fill pastry cases, tarts, tartlets and vol-au-vent. It is also used to garnish egg and fish dishes of various kinds. Sometimes truffles cut in slices or little olive-shaped pieces are added to the ragoût.

Offal (variety meats) ragoût. RAGOÛT D'ABATS – Ragoût of this kind, used as a garnish for braised, poached or oven-roast poultry, and also to garnish entrées made with pastry, is made with white offal (variety meats), brains, and lambs' or calves' sweetbreads, sliced or cut in dice, with or without the addition of mushrooms and truffles, and bound with brown or white sauce.

Ragoût à la périgourdine – Mix foie gras cut in large dice and sautéed briskly in butter, with truffles cut in dice in the same way and cooked very lightly in butter. Bind them with concentrated cooking juices of the fowl or game to be garnished, flavoured with Madeira or some other wine.

Used as garnish for oven-roasted or braised poultry or game, and also as accompaniment to egg dishes of various kinds, pilaf, risotto, various borders of garnish and entrées made with pastry.

Seafood ragoût. RAGOÛT DE LANGOUSTE, CRUSTACÉS – Small slices of crawfish, lobster, prawns or shrimps, shelled, bound with a Cream sauce or White wine sauce (see SAUCE) and finished with Shrimp (or other crustacean) butter (see BUTTER, Shrimp butter).

Ragoût Talleyrand – Heat in a small sauté pan with a few tablespoons Madeira, 100 g. (4 oz.) cocks' kidneys cooked in flour-and-water court-bouillon, and 100 g. (4 oz.) mushrooms also cooked in flour-and-water court-bouillon. Bind with  $1\frac{1}{2}$  dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) chicken Velouté sauce (see SAUCE) mixed with cream, strained and with the addition of 2 tablespoons mirepoix (q.v.) of root vegetables and 1 tablespoon truffles cut in very small dice.

Ragoût à la tortue – This ragoût is the special accompaniment of calf's head cooked à la tortue. It is composed of quenelles, mushrooms, stuffed olives, sliced truffles, gherkins cut in small olive-shaped pieces, slices of tongue and calf's brain, all bound with Tortue sauce (rich brown sauce with Madeira added, flavoured with Turtle herbs, see HERBS) and completed with small fried eggs, heart-shaped pieces of bread fried in butter and crayfish cooked in court-bouillon (q.v.) these last ingredients added to the garnish when it is being set round the dish. (See OFFAL or VARIETY MEATS, Calf's head en Tortue.)

Ragoût à la toulousaine – Ragoût used to garnish poultry, vol-au-vent and other preparations served as entrées. Composed of chicken forcemeat quenelles, slices of lambs' or calves' sweetbreads, cocks' combs and kidneys, mushrooms and truffles, the whole bound with Allemande sauce (see SAUCE).

Ragoût of truffles. RAGOÛT DE TRUFFES – Under this name is described a garnish of truffles cut in thick slices or big dice and bound with either Rich brown sauce flavoured with Madeira or with a White sauce (see SAUCE).

Ragoût of vegetables or Ragoût à la printanière. RAGOÛT DE LÉGUMES DIT À LA PRINTANIÈRE – Put in a well-buttered sauté pan the following vegetables: 500 g. (18 oz.) new carrots, 12 little new onions, 3 medium-sized artichokes divided into quarters (blanched for 5 minutes in water with salt and lemon juice), and 2 lettuces, trimmed, blanched, divided in quarters and folded over as for braising. Pour over the vegetables either water or white stock just to cover them. Season, and start cooking over a good heat. Cook at boiling point for 8 minutes with the pot covered, then add  $\frac{1}{2}$  litre (scant pint,  $2\frac{1}{4}$  cups) freshly shelled peas and 12 peeled new potatoes. Cook in the oven, covered, for 40 to 45 minutes. Set in a deep dish. Pour the cooking liquor, boiled down and enriched with butter, over the vegetables.

This ragoût can be made with all kinds of new vegetables: fresh kidney beans, new broad beans, courgettes (zucchini) cut in quarters, asparagus tips, either white or green, cucumbers cut into small chunks, French beans, new turnips.

The ragoûts should be cooked in earthenware casseroles or in fireproof porcelain or bi-metal pots, and served in the pot.

RAGUENEAU – Parisian pastry-cook described by Cyrano de Bergerac in his Voyage aux états de la lune, and again by Edmond Rostand.

A pastry-cook of renown, keeping shop near the Palais, as fat as was suitable for a shopkeeper whose sign carried the words: Aux amateurs de haute graisse, his days were spent happily between the supervision of his oven and the service of his clientele, which was composed of attorneys and lawyers, among whom had slipped in some hungry-looking writers.

Why did he have to begin to write? History suspects one Béis – an author today completely forgotten – of having maliciously drawn him into it.

The pâtisserie of Ragueneau became a kind of academy, where the pastries and tarts served as attendance tallies. Ragueneau set himself to write a Pindaric ode, then a tragedy: Don Olibrius, l'Occiseur d'Innocents.

He neglected his oven, neglected his clients; the effect on his business was such that he felt constrained to shut up shop.

Packing up his belongings into a miserable little cart, he set off for the Midi with his wife. At Béziers he sought out Molière, to whom he offered Don Olibrius. One may guess the response of the great humorist; but out of pity he offered the ex-pastry-cook a modest part as a valet in his troupe. Ragueneau was as bad an actor as he was a writer and he had to resign himself to the function of a candle-snuffer.

These functions he carried out subsequently at Lyons until his death, leaving as his whole fortune a hat with holes in it and a washed-out cloak. Among his papers were found four hundred and fifty-six sonnets, eight tragedies, seven epithalamiums, four elegies, sixty-three odes and nineteen heroic plays.

RAIDIR – Culinary term meaning to sear a foodstuff quickly in butter or other smoking hot fat.

RAIL, RÂLE – Name of two species of migrant waders, the rail, or in French 'king of quails', and the water-rail, very inferior to the former. Prepared like quail (q.v.).

RAISINÉ – Jam made by reducing grape juice or must to a jellied consistency. Often another fruit is added, principally pears.

Simple raisiné. RAISINÉ SIMPLE – Choose very sweet grapes, either green or black, strip them from their bunches and keep only the perfectly sound fruit. Put them in a pot over a gentle heat, and crush with a wooden spoon. Rub through a sieve, gathering the juice in a basin. Pour half this juice into a rinsed-out pan and cook over a strong heat, skimming from time to time. When the liquid rises, add a little of the juice reserved in the basin, repeat this each time it rises. Do not stop stirring until the cooking is done, which will be when the raisiné is boiled down by two-thirds.

Raisiné de Bourgogne – Prepare the must as described above, add sugar if necessary, boil down to half, then put in fruit (pears, quinces, apples, peaches, melon, etc.) peeled, seeded and cut into thin slices. Cook like the simple raisiné until the preserve is so thick that if taken between thumb and forefinger, it forms a gluey thread.

RAISINS. RAISINS DE MALAGA – Made from dried muscat grapes and eaten as dessert. They are also used in confectionery as an ingredient of cakes and puddings, and in cookery to garnish various dishes.

RAITON – Small-sized skate, usually cooked by frying. (See SKATE.)

RAKI – Alcoholic drink with a basis of plum or grape eau-de-vie, flavoured with aniseed and mastic.

RAMBOUR or RAMBOURG – Variety of apples whose name comes from the Rambour (Somme) district, where they were first cultivated. This fruit ripens in August. There is a White and a Red Rambour.

RAMEKIN, RAMEQUIN – Formerly toasted cheese was served under this name. Nowadays ramekins are tarts or tartlets filled with creamed cheese, this designation having, however, different interpretations in different regions.

Small pastries made with cheese-flavoured chou pastry are called ramekins. Individual earthenware baking dishes are also called ramekins.

Cheese ramekin I. RAMEQUIN DE FROMAGE – Add to 500 g. (18 oz.) chou pastry made without sugar, called ramekin pastry (see DOUGH, Gougère batter), 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) Gruyère cut in small dice.

Pipe the paste on to a baking tin in the form of medium-sized choux, through a forcing-bag with a plain nozzle. Brush with egg. Put on top of each a pinch of Gruyère cut into very small dice. Cook in the oven at moderate heat for 12 to 15 minutes.

The ramekins may also be made in the form of elongated choux.

If a forcing-bag is not available they may be shaped with a spoon.

Cheese ramekin II (old recipe). RAMEQUIN DE FROMAGE – 'Take some cheese, melt it with butter, onion, whole or pounded, salt and pepper, spread over some bread, pass the shovel from the hot fire above it and serve hot.'

This recipe, an extract from an old instruction book, resembles Welsh rarebit, which is given in its alphabetical order.

Ramekin (Mont-Bry's recipe). RAMEQUIN – 'Put in a saucepan 1 glass of milk. Season with a good pinch of salt, a very small pinch of sugar and a very little white pepper. Add 25 g. (1 oz., 2 tablespoons) butter. Bring to the boil.

'As soon as the milk is boiling, put into the pot, which you will have taken off the heat, 100 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) sifted flour. Mix. Stir over the heat with a wooden spoon to dry out the dough, exactly as is done for chou pastry. When the dough is well dried, remove from heat and add 3 eggs, one by one, and 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) Gruyère cheese cut in small dice.

'Put the dough into a forcing-bag fitted with a plain nozzle and squeeze it into choux on a baking tin. Brush with egg and put on top of each a pinch of Gruyère cut in very little dice. Cook in a low oven.'

RAMEREAU – Young woodpigeon. For its culinary preparation see PIGEON.

RAMPION. RAIPONCE – Plant cultivated in gardens, but also growing wild in the fields.

The root of rampion may be eaten raw or cooked. It is prepared like salsify. The leaves can be eaten raw in salad or cooked like spinach.

RAMPONNEAU – See RESTAURANTS OF BYGONE DAYS.

RANCIO – Red rosé wine of the Midi with Madeira-like taste. This wine is very sweet, and its taste is reminiscent of Spanish wines.

RÂPÉ – Abbreviation for fromage râpé (grated cheese).

RASPBERRY. FRAMBOISE – Fruit of the raspberry bush which grows wild in woods or which can be cultivated in the garden. It is one of the most delicately flavoured fruits.

It can also be prepared in various ways – in jelly, jam, compote, sweet pastry and liqueurs. Distillation of raspberries results in delicious brandy.

The following are the best cultivated varieties in France: Belle de Fontenay; Perpétuelle de Billard; Merveille des quatre-saisons (red or white); Hornet or Pilate (non-climbing). The best are found on the Côte-d'Or, and in the neighbourhood of Paris. Raspberries are available from July to October.

Raspberry Bavarian cream. BAVAROIS AUX FRAMBOISES – This is prepared in the same way as other Bavarian creams with the addition of pulped raspberries. (See BAVARIAN CREAM.)

Raspberry charlotte. CHARLOTTE AUX FRAMBOISES – Line a mould with sponge fingers as for Charlotte russe (see CHARLOTTE). Fill the mould with a charlotte composition adding raspberry pulp. Put in the refrigerator. Turn out of the mould on to a dish covered with a folded napkin.

Raspberry compote. COMPOTE DE FRAMBOISES – Remove stems of very ripe large raspberries. Put in a fruit dish. Pour several tablespoons boiling syrup on the fruit.

Raspberry cream. CRÈME AUX FRAMBOISES – Add cooked raspberry pulp to custard made with a little arrowroot or cornstarch. (See CREAMS, Custard cream.)

Iced raspberry mousse or purée. MOUSSE, MOUSSELINE GLACÉE À LA FRAMBOISE – Made from raspberry juice or pulp (fresh or tinned) like other iced fruit mousses and purées. (See ICE CREAMS AND ICES.)

Raspberry juice or pulp. JUS, PULPE DE FRAMBOISES – Proceed with fresh raspberries as described for Strawberry pulp (see STRAWBERRY).

Raspberry desserts etc. – See also CRÊPES, FLAN, FRITTER, ICE CREAMS AND ICES, JAMS, LIQUEUR, SAUCE, SOUFFLÉS, SYRUP, TART.

RASTEGAÏS (Russian cookery) – See HORS-D'ŒUVRE, Hot hors-d'œuvre.

RAT – Rodent which was elevated to the rank of comestible during the siege of Paris in 1870, and which is eaten in certain regions. The flesh of well-nourished rats can be, it seems, of good quality, but sometimes with a musky taste. Rats nourished in the wine stores of the Gironde were at one time highly esteemed by the coopers, who grilled them, (after having cleaned out and skinned them) on a fire of broken barrels, and seasoned them with a little oil and plenty of shallot. This dish, which was then called cooper's entrecôte, would be the origin of the entrecôte à la bordelaise.

RAT-MORT, CAFÉ DU – See RESTAURANTS OF BYGONE DAYS.

RATAFIA – Liqueur obtained without distilling, by simple infusion (see LIQUEUR).

RATATOUILLE – Peel and slice 2 or 3 aubergines and 500 g. (1 lb.) Italian marrows (courgettes), sprinkle with salt and leave covered with a weighted plate for 1 hour. Slice 2 large onions, and 500 g. (1 lb.) skinned, deseeded tomatoes. Slice 2 peppers very thinly, removing core and seeds. Crush 3 garlic cloves.

Heat  $1\frac{1}{2}$  dl. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  pint,  $\frac{2}{3}$  cup) olive oil in a heavy pan, fry the onion until slightly coloured, add the garlic. Cook for 5 minutes, then add aubergines, courgettes, peppers and tomatoes. Season with salt and pepper, add a bouquet garni and cook, covered, for 1 hour. This dish may be served hot or cold.

RATON – Pastry with a cream cheese basis.

Raton with macaroni (old recipe). RATON AUX MACARONI – Mix together 4 tablespoons (5 tablespoons) flour, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) sugar, 10 lengths macaroni (broken into pieces) and 4 crushed almonds. Add 2 whole eggs. Mix well. Add 4 dl. ( $\frac{3}{4}$  pint, scant 2 cups) milk and mix again.

Heat 1 tablespoon butter in a casserole. Pour the mixture over it. Begin cooking on top of the stove, stirring all the time, then bake in the oven for 20 to 25 minutes. Serve hot.

RAVIER – Small dish varying in shape and material, in which hors-d'œuvre are served.

RAVIGOTE – White sauce, hot or cold, which must, as its name indicates, be highly seasoned. (See SAUCE.)

RAVIOLI – Light preparation of pasta enclosing forcemeat of one kind or another.

The name of this preparation probably comes from the fact that in times past food left over from preparing meals on board ship was put into it. Until the beginning of the nineteenth century it was called rabiole, a word meaning something of little value.

Ravioli is made with pasta (see ITALIAN PASTA). After being stuffed with various mixtures the pieces are poached in salted water, moistened with veal or beef stock, and sprinkled with cheese.

To make ravioli. Roll out the pasta very thinly and cut out with a fluted cutter into rounds or squares about 5 cm. (2 inches) across. Put in the middle of each a piece of forcemeat about the size of a walnut, moisten the edges, and fold the pasta over like an apple turnover.

Or: Roll out the pasta into a piece about 8 cm. (3 inches) wide and as long as space permits. Set on this length of pasta a row of little balls of forcemeat about 2 cm. ( $\frac{3}{4}$  inch) apart. Moisten the edges of the pasta and double them over, then cut into half-moons with a fluted pastry cutter.

Or: A square sheet of thin pasta may have little balls of forcemeat set out on it 2 cm. ( $\frac{3}{4}$  inch) apart, lengthways and crossways. Moisten the spaces between them. Cover with a second sheet of pasta the same size. Cut out the ravioli with a special wheel cutter.

To poach ravioli. Plunge the ravioli into boiling salted water. Boil steadily for 8 to 10 minutes, according to size.

Drain the ravioli and set in layers on a gratin dish which has been buttered and sprinkled with grated cheese. Pour a few tablespoons veal or beef stock over each layer and sprinkle with grated cheese. Reheat or brown according to recipe.

To make ravioli: Using a forcing-bag place little balls of forcemeat onto a square of thinly rolled pasta
(Larousse)

Cover each ball of forcemeat with a second layer of pasta and cut out the ravioli with a special wheel cutter
(Larousse)

Ravioli forcemeats. FARCES À RAVIOLI – The fillings for ravioli are numerous, and meat and poultry left-overs may be used for them.

For a classic ravioli the forcemeat should be made with Daube of beef (see BEEF) that has been very well cooked, allowed to get cold and minced. The cooked ravioli is sprinkled with the cooking liquor of the daube.

Mixture I. Chop finely 150 g. (5 oz., generous cup) cold braised beef. Add 150 g. (5 oz.,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) spinach which has been blanched, drained and chopped, 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) brain purée, 1 tablespoon chopped shallot, 1 egg, a pinch of salt, pepper and a little grated nutmeg.

Mixture II. Chop finely 150 g. (5 oz., generous cup) cold braised or boiled beef. Add 150 g. (5 oz.,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) spinach that has been blanched, drained and chopped, 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) brain purée, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) chopped onion lightly cooked in butter, 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) grated Parmesan, 1 egg, a pinch of salt, pepper and grated nutmeg. Mix well.

Mixture III. Chop finely 100 g. (4 oz., scant cup) cooked veal. Add 100 g. (4 oz., generous  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) spinach that has been blanched, drained and chopped, 100 g. (4 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) brain purée, 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) cream cheese pressed dry, 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) grated Parmesan, 1 egg, a pinch of salt, pepper and grated nutmeg. Mix well.

Mixture IV. Proceed with cold chicken meat as for the forcemeat with veal above, replacing the spinach with blanched, drained and chopped lettuce cooked lightly in butter.

Mixture V. Pound in a mortar 150 g. (5 oz.) chicken livers sautéed in butter with 1 chopped shallot; 1 chopped clove of garlic and a pinch of salt. Add 100 g. (4 oz., generous  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) spinach, blanched, drained and chopped, 1 fillet of desalted anchovy, 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) butter and 1 egg. Season with salt, pepper, grated nutmeg and a little basil. Mix well and rub through a sieve.

Mixture VI. Proceed with cold braised sweetbreads as for the chicken liver forcemeat, replacing the spinach by beetroot leaves blanched, drained, chopped and cooked lightly in butter.

Mixture VII. Chop finely 300 g. (11 oz.,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cups) blanched and well-drained spinach. Put into a sauté pan in which has been heated 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) butter. Cook, stirring with a wooden spoon. Season with salt, pepper and a little grated nutmeg.

Sprinkle the spinach with  $\frac{1}{2}$  tablespoon flour. Shake for a moment over good heat and add 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) milk.

Bring to the boil. Take the pot from the heat; add 1 egg yolk and 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) grated Parmesan. Mix well.

RAY – See SKATE.

REBLOCHON – See CHEESE.

RÉCHAUD – Small portable stove.

Also a utensil designed to keep dishes hot when they are on the table. It is heated by hot water, a flame or by electricity.

RÉCOLLET DE GÉRARDMER – See CHEESE.

RECUIRE (RECOOK) – This expression is used for different kinds of pastry preparations where the mixtures are cooked in two operations: the first time in a bowl at a low temperature, as is done in making certain biscuits (hence their name), and a second time in the oven, with the mixture (already cooked) put into a special mould.

The term is also used in sweet making to define the operation of bringing to the desired point a syrup or jelly which after the addition of some watery fruit would have become 'uncooked'.

RED MULLET – See MULLET.

RED NETTLE. ÉPIAISE DES MARAIS – The roots of this plant are edible and can be used in place of the Chinese artichoke.

REDSTART. ROUGE-QUEUE – Bird of passage, prized as game. Prepared like lark in France.

REDUCTION. RÉDUCTION – Action of reducing the volume of a liquid by evaporation, particularly a sauce, which is reduced to increase the savour and also to give it a thicker consistency. A brown sauce which has been reduced is also more brilliant in appearance. (See SAUCE.) In the U.S.A. the process of reducing is known as 'boiling down'.

REDWING. MAUVIS – Small type of thrush.

REFRIGERATION. FRIGORIFIQUE – Low temperatures can be produced by various means, the simplest being the use of freezing mixtures. These mixtures have a number of domestic uses including the preparation of ice creams and water ices.

For lower temperatures, it is necessary to use a refrigerator. Refrigerators generally work on the principle of the lowering of temperature, either through the expansion of a gas or the evaporation of a volatile liquid. There are a number of highly volatile liquids and gases which can be readily liquefied, for example, ammonia, carbonic acid gas, methyl chloride, etc. All these liquids give off a gas which is compressed to raise its temperature. It then passes through a condenser which absorbs the heat and liquefies the gas. Next, it passes through a pressure-reducing valve into an expansion chamber, thus producing the required lowering of temperature. The gas is then pumped back into the condenser, and the cycle begins again and is repeated indefinitely, as long as the motor-driven compressor is kept working.

Some refrigerators have no compressors. These work by absorption and are dependent upon the ratio of solubility to temperature in the interaction of ammonia and water. In an absorber cooled by water circulation, the greater part of the ammonia liquefies as though it had been sucked in by a pump. Next, the solution, thus enriched, passes into a distiller, heated by one of a number of methods (steam, gas or electricity). Here the ammonia is given off by the solution and collects in the enclosed chamber as though it had been compressed by piston-action. The expansion takes place at the outlet of the distiller, and causes a lowering of temperature, as with compressor refrigeration. This process is used

Réchaud with candles, and an electric réchaud (La Carpe. Phot. Nicolas)

REFRIGERATOR

especially in certain types of domestic refrigerator. In large industrial refrigerators, an intermediate cooler is generally used. This may be a system of ventilation or a non-freezing brine which circulates through the pipes laid in the cold-cupboard or refrigeration chamber.

Finally, mention must be made of a modern method of refrigeration in which the place of ice is taken by solidified carbonic acid gas. This is much less bulky than ice and has the further advantage of producing a lower temperature without any liquid condensation whatsoever.

Refrigerator (Philips. Phot. X)

REFRIGERATOR. RÉFRIGÉRATEUR – Apparatus, usually made in the form of a cupboard, working by gas or electricity, used to refrigerate and conserve foodstuffs.

RÉGALADE – To drink à la régálade is to drink from a bottle without letting it touch the lips, in such a way that the liquid is poured directly into the mouth.

RÉGENCE – See RESTAURANTS OF BYGONE DAYS.

RÉGENCE – See GARNISHES.

REGIONAL COOKING IN FRANCE. CUISINE RÉGIONALE – The various French provinces have each their particular cuisine. However, it should be observed that the dishes with a regional name are not always authentically and exclusively regional.

Real culinary specialties are numerous in some regions of France. For convenience these have been treated as a separate study, giving the principal local dishes and main food products. This information will be found under ALSACE, ANJOU, ARTOIS, AUVERGNE, BRESSE, BRITTANY, CHAMPAGNE, LANGUEDOC, NORMANDY, PROVENCE, etc.

REINDEER. RENNE – The flesh of this animal provides venison, inferior, however, to that of the roebuck or deer. Prepared in the same way as these last. (See ROEBUCK.)

REINE (À LA) – See FRENCH CULINARY NAMES.

REINE (Queen) – A category of chicken whose size is intermediate between poulet de grain and the fat hen or poularde.

The name is also given to a preparation of chicken purée, or of a mixture of cut-up chicken with mushrooms and truffles bound with an Allemande sauce or chicken velouté sauce. The name is also given to a thick soup made with chicken purée.

REINETTE – See APPLE.

RÉJANE – See GARNISHES.

RELÂCHER – Culinary term meaning to add liquid to a purée or sauce to thin it to the desired consistency.

RELIEFS – French term for the remains or left-overs of a meal; food which is not used at table.

RELIGIEUSE – This gâteau, which appears to have originated in Paris, is made with éclairs filled with coffee, chocolate or vanilla-flavoured cream, iced with fondant and superimposed one on top of the other; or with choux similarly filled and iced, rising in a pyramid one on top of the other.

The éclairs and choux are set on a base of sweet pastry and decorated with piped cream.

The name religieuse is also used for a pastry made by spreading a strip of puff pastry with a mixture of apple jam, apricot jam and currants, and covering it with strips of pastry in a criss-cross pattern.

Religieuse

REMONDOU – See CHEESE.

REMONTER – Term meaning to add a condiment to a sauce or ragoût to heighten its taste, or to add alcohol to a wine to give it greater strength.

RÉMOULADE – Mayonnaise to which gherkins, capers, parsley, spring onions, chervil, chopped tarragon and anchovy essence are added.

REMOVE. RELEVÉ – Dish which, in French, 'relieves' (in the sense that one sentry relieves another) the soup or the fish. This course precedes the entrée.

RENAISSANCE (À LA) – Garnish of various new vegetables, arranged in little heaps around pieces of meat served as entrées, generally roasts.

RENNET. PRÉSURE – Ferment having the property of coagulating the casein of milk.

Animal rennet. PRÉSURE ANIMALE – This substance, which comes from the abomasum or fourth stomach of calves, lambs and kids, is used to curdle milk in the cheese industry. An extract, marketed commercially in liquid or paste form (solid rennet), is most often used for this purpose.

Vegetable rennets. PRÉSURES VÉGÉTALES – Substances contained in certain plants (thistle, yellow bedstraw, common fig, etc.) having the property of coagulating milk.

REPÈRE – Mixture of flour and egg white, used to stick together the sections of a decoration or to fix them to a dish. For this latter use it is advisable to heat the dishes (if metal) before sticking on decorations with repère.

The flour-and-water paste, which is used to seal casseroles and marmites during cooking, is sometimes erroneously referred to as repère.

RESTAURANT – A public establishment where food is served. The origin of restaurants, as we know them, is not very old. In the eighteenth century one could eat only in the inns, which served at fixed times an equally fixed menu, or at the shops of the traiteurs (eating-house keepers) who could only sell whole pieces of food.

In 1765 a man named Boulanger, a vendor of soup in the Rue Poulies, gave to his soups the name of restaurants, i.e. restoratives, and inscribed on his sign: 'Boulanger sells magical restoratives', a notice which he embellished with a joke in culinary Latin: Venite ad me; vos qui stomacho laboratis et ego restaurabo vos. (Come to me, you whose stomach labours, and I will restore you.)

Wishing to augment his menus and unable to serve sauces or ragoûts because he was not a member of the corporation of traiteurs, he had the idea of offering his clients sheep's feet in white wine sauce. The traiteurs did not fail to bring a lawsuit against him, which was a tremendous advertisement for the innovator and his sheep's feet. In the end, Boulanger won the case, a solemn judgement of Parliament having decreed that sheep's feet in white sauce were not a ragoût. This was a great triumph; all Paris rushed to Boulanger's to taste this extraordinary dish on the recommendation of Moncrif, who raved about it. Louis XV himself had it served at Versailles, but the king, who was a real gourmand, did not share the general enthusiasm.

It is nevertheless true that Boulanger created, as Brillat-Savarin says, a profession which commands a fortune for all who pursue it with good faith, orderliness and skill.

After Boulanger, the first restaurant worthy of the name was that which Beauvilliers founded in 1783 – an establishment which, because of the revolutionary activities of 1793, its founder felt himself obliged to close. Then followed the restaurant which Barthélémy, Maneille and Simon opened in 1786 at the Palais-Royal under the sign 'Aux Trois Frères Provençaux', although they were neither brothers nor Provençal. This restaurant shut its doors in 1869, and it was in this house that Dugléré, Casimir Moisson and several other great cuisiniers of the nineteenth century carried out their first campaigns.

The progress in the culinary art which restaurants have brought about is immense. 'Connoisseurs', says Brillat-Savarin, 'have kept in mind the names of many artists who have shone in Paris since the introduction of the restaurants. One may cite Beauvilliers, Méot, Robert, Rose, Legacque, the brothers Véry, Henneveu and Baleine (of the Rocher de Cancale) . . . Some of these establishments owed their prosperity to special attractions, as: le Veau qui tette, to sheep's feet (doubtless cooked à la poulette); les Frères Provençaux, to salt cod and garlic; Véry, to entrées with truffles; Robert, to specially ordered dinners; Baleine to the care he took to have excellent fish; Henneveux to the mysterious boudoirs in the fourth floor . . .

Under the Revolution, following the abolition of corporations and privileges, the restaurants multiplied, spreading good cheer, permitting everyone, as Brillat-Savarin says, 'to make, according to his purse or according to his appetite, copious or delicate meals, which formerly were the perquisite of the very rich.'

Among the principal restaurateurs of this far-away epoch we may cite the two Marseillaise brothers, whose name culinary history has not preserved, who founded 'le Boeuf à la mode', and whose sign caricatured the fashions of the day. To the Terrasse des Feuillants came Legacque, whose establishment later got into difficulties and ended up as a fixed-price restaurant in the Palais-Royal. In the same period Véfour founded the Café de Chartres, and Baleine, at the Rocher de Cancale, was host to Grimod de Reynière's 'Jury of Tasters', Carême declared him a second-class traiteur, and his neighbour Philipe supplanted him.

In the new boulevards were established the Café Hardy, the Café de Foy which later became the Café Bignon, and the Café Anglais, opened in 1802. Bonnefoy opened in the rue de l'Échelle and then moved out to the boulevard Montmartre. Bonvalet competed on the Boulevard du Temple with the Cadran Bleu, directed by Henneveux and La Galiote; Père Lathuille Avenue de Clichy, where the allies established their headquarters in 1815; the Moulin Rouge, Avenue d'Antin, where Escoffier began: Paillard, Vachette-Brébant, Voisin; the old Café de Paris; the Café Riche, the Restaurant Marguery, and others, too numerous to mention.

Some very old restaurants are changing and becoming 'Americanised', which seems a great pity. Some become 'cold buffet counters', others become 'automatic', others again become 'cafeterias'.

Behind the scenes in a Paris restaurant
(French Government Tourist Office)

RESTAURANTS OF BYGONE DAYS

It is regrettable to see celebrated Parisian eating-houses thus disappear – or at least become transformed. French cooking has nothing to gain by these changes.

The wine shops, the trouquets, as they are familiarly known, where it is possible to eat, are also very numerous in Paris. In some of these houses, frequented by workmen and people in modest employment, the cooking is excellent, because it is simple and honest. It is still possible to find in Paris some establishments of this kind where one may regale oneself with succulent boiled beef, savoury pork with cabbage or a beef 'bourguignon' done in the old-fashioned way. (See RESTAURANTS (BRASSERIES AND CAFÉS) OF BYGONE DAYS.)

RESTAURANTS (BRASSERIES AND CAFÉS) OF FAME. RESTAURANTS, BRASSERIES ET CAFÉS D'AUTREFOIS –

Boeuf à la mode – So called at the time of the Directoire, not in honour of the recipe, but on account of its sign which depicted a fashionably dressed ox, its shoulders draped with a shawl. This restaurant, in rue de Valois, closed down in 1936.

Despite several ups and downs, it had an excellent culinary reputation. The banquet inaugurating rue Antonin-Carême was held there in 1894. That excellent chef, Marcel Dorin, was its last proprietor.

Bonfingier – This brasserie, founded in 1864, rue de la Bastille has remained in the same family and altered very little. Its sauerkraut, lobster mayonnaise and clear spirits have been the delight of a century of Parisians.

Brasserie des Martyrs – This brasserie was frequented by Baudelaire, Aurelién Scholl, Monselet, Gustave Courbet, Claude Monet, Jules Vallès and a host of untalented bohemians that hung around them. Décor included candelabra in the form of caryatids and artificial flowers.

Brébant-Vachette – The restaurant Vachette, on the corner of faubourg Montmartre, was taken over by Brébant in the days of the Second Empire. Situated on the corner of boulevard Poissonnière and faubourg Montmartre, it was famous for its night meals, excellent cellar, and the literary celebrities whom Brébant welcomed with open arms. He fed them so well during the siege of Paris that a group of them, including Renan, Edmond de Goncourt and Théophile Gautier, who called themselves the 'Spartans', had a medal engraved in his honour. It bore an inscription describing how, during their fortnightly rendez-vous at the restaurant 'they were totally oblivious that they were dining in a city of two million beleaguered souls'. A fine token of gratitude for Brébant, who died in 1892.

Cadran bleu – Opening in 1773 on the corner of rue Charlot and boulevard du Temple, the property suffered somewhat during the storming of the Bastille, but that only enhanced its glory. Banquets and wedding feasts followed one another in an unending stream.

However, if one revolution increased its renown, another was to quench it. In June, 1848, the restaurateur, Bonvalet, installed an artillery battery (which he commanded) near the restaurant. The violence of the cannon shots was such that the building had to be evacuated.

La Cibot, concierge of Cousin Pons, was the 'beautiful oyster opener' of the Cadran bleu (Balzac).

Café Anglais – Founded in 1802 by Chevreuil, on the corner of boulevard and rue Marivaux ('Anglais' because of the Peace of Amiens), it became one of the most fashionable eating places in Paris. Its luxury attracted princes, emperors, society favourites and demi-mondaines. Dugléré was one of its greatest chefs.

The café Anglais closed on 1 April, 1913 (the building was due to be demolished). Suffice to say that this restaurant was responsible for creating potage Germiny, Anna potatoes, soufflé à l'anglaise, sole Dugléré and chicken d'Albuféra.

It is interesting to note that the panelling of the 'Grand Seize' (the private salon of Offenbach's la Vie parisienne) is now in the Tour d'argent restaurant, the father of Claude Terrail having married the daughter of the last proprietor of the café Anglais.

Café des Aveugles – It used to be in the Palais-Royal and derived its name from an orchestra comprising a few inmates of the Quinze-Vingts (Hospital for the blind). This used to provide rather cacophonous background music to an (more or less) enraptured clientele. It was one of the earliest but by no means the only attraction offered by the arcade cafés of the Palais-Royal (then called Palais-Egalité).

Café de Flore – near the Deux-Magots (or rather it is the Deux-Magots that is near the café de Flore). L'Action française was created here during the Dreyfus affair. Maurras and Jacques Bainville and their disciples used to meet here.

Table of the 'Grand Seize' at the Café Anglais (Harlingue)

Appollinaire and a crowd of admirers and followers (among them André Billy and André Salmon) also frequented it. On 5 August, 1914, shortly after the declaration of war, Gide dined in this café with Copeau. More recently, Simone de Beauvoir worked in it alongside Jean-Paul Sartre. Existentialism was born here.

Café de Foy – This was at the Palais-Royal. It entered into history shortly after it opened when Camille Desmoulins emerged from it, with a leaf stuck in his hat, to harangue the crowd. The following day he stormed the Bastille.

Café Lemblin – Founded by Perron a few years before the Revolution. It was a very modest café situated at the Palais-Royal. Under the Empire, its standing increased, and it was here, during the Restoration, that several half-way officers plotted for a time to reinstate 'le Petit Caporal'.

Café de Paris – The first café of this name was opened on boulevard de Gand (boulevard des Italiens) in July, 1822. It ran successfully for 20 years, until the proximity of the Maison dorée enticed its clientele away. It disappeared in 1858. The proprietor of the building, Lord Seymour's mother, ruled that the café had to close every night at 10 o'clock.

Twenty years later, at the time of the inauguration of the avenue de l'Opéra (1878), another Café de Paris was born. It disappeared after the last war.

Boulevard de Gand was frequented by Balzac, Dumas the elder, Alfred de Musset and many others.

All the elite of the Third Republic frequented the avenue de l'Opéra, and several great dishes were created in this Café de Paris: shoulder of lamb Louis le Grand, snipe à la Diane, aubergines Opéra, and, most important of all, lobster Thermidor. This was created by Léopold Mourier on the occasion of the triumphal revival of the historical play, Victorien Sardou.

Café de Valois – Modest but comfortable, this was the most frequented of all the famous Palais-Royal cafés. The monarchists (with Rivarol and Ange Pitou) met there at the beginning of the Revolution. It closed down in 1841.

Café des Variétés – Its destiny was closely bound up with that of the theatre with which it was associated in 1807. The two were so closely linked that, during performances, the café was completely deserted.

Under the Second Empire, it only closed for 1½ hours in the morning. Villiers de L'Isle and Adam and Alphonse Daudet were among the many celebrities who frequented this establishment, famous for its onion soup. The bald Murger, dressed in black, scribbled 'billets doux' on the marble tables to one or other of his 'shrews'.

Frequented by personalities of both the literary and theatre worlds, including the young Catulle Mendès, the mature Baudelaire and the ever-old Banville, the café des Variétés quickly became a success.

Caveau – This restaurant, situated at the Palais-Royal, was, as its name indicates, underground. Drinking hot chocolate or coffee with cream there in the period before and during the Revolution was a very expensive pastime. Lit by argon lamps, it was a favourite evening haunt. In 1802, it became the café du Perron. Its proprietor turned it into a restaurant which was renamed Pavillon de la paix, then la Rotonde, but it disappeared in 1885.

It was under the Consulate and the Empire that the Caveau had its most illustrious clientele.

Champeaux – Classified in 1843 as a restaurant 'with a reputation for good cooking', it gained celebrity in 1862, but only because of its winter garden.

Restaurant Champeaux, place de la Bourse, was a kind of haven for itinerant provincials who cherished the memory of their visit. The chef Catelain, who created chicken Champeaux, ended his culinary career there in 1904.

Deux-Magots – This was originally the sign of a hosiery shop in Saint-Germain-des-Près: 'deux magots' or, in other words, two grotesque Chinese porcelain figures. They are still there.

A café was opened here which American writers used to frequent before the war. Later the clientele used to stare at the antics of Sartre and company in the adjoining café de Flore.

J. Rosny frequented it, as, later, did Jean Giraudoux. The surrealists were there for a short time but were chased away by the students of l'École des beaux-arts.

Dinocchau – At the corner of rue de Navarin and rue de Bréda. Dinocchau took over the running of the restaurant from his mother. There he received the most famous journalists of the Second Empire, as well as poets, and a number of celebrated literary figures. Goncourt often mentioned the place in his Journal. The food was good and cheap, but Dinocchau, nicknamed the 'literary restaurateur', allowed too much credit to his illustrious clients. He went bankrupt.

Divan Lepelletier – Situated on the corner of the street of the same name, this restaurant used to create quite a stir on account of the people who frequented it. Alfred de Musset went there to drink a curious concoction of beer, eau-de-vie and absinth. It seems that the Goncourts, too, found the beer there inferior.

Drouant – In 1880, an Alsatian called Charles Drouant opened a modest establishment that sold wine and food. Success came swiftly and the premises were periodically extended. The restaurant prospered and moved to place Gaillon. It acquired fame for its 'Goncourt lunches' which featured the fashionable blanc de blancs. Léon Daudet was an eminent gastronome who gave a great deal of thought and effort to the compilation of the luncheon menus. Unfortunately, these are not what they used to be.

Foyot – Formerly café Vachette: an establishment founded in rue de Tournon, 1802, by a certain Lacaille. It changed hands around 1817, Brébant becoming the new proprietor. (His son then took over the management of the café). Later it passed into the hands of Foyot and became café Foyot. Foyot had been Louis-Philippe's chef. His speciality was sheep's trotters à la poulette. He sold his restaurant to M. Lesserteur in 1854 and retired to his estate in the Bièvre valley.

A clientele of senators made this restaurant famous; the same establishment in which many years before, Cadoudal and Pichegru conspired against Napoleon.

It was while lunching at Foyot's in 1894 that Laurent Tailhade was seriously wounded by an anarchist bomb.

Veal chops Foyot is a classic gourmet dish.

Frascati – Founded in 1796 by the Italian Garchi, this establishment was a gambling den-cum-restaurant-cum-lodging house. Standing on the boulevard corner of the rue de Richelieu, close to rue Vivienne, its gardens were illuminated at night. Ice-creams, suppers, women of easy virtue, fireworks and, of course, gambling saloons – all could be found at Frascati's.

The restaurant lasted for about 50 years. It disappeared on 1 January 1837, with the suppression of gaming houses.

Frères provençaux – Simon, Barthélemy and Maneille, three brothers-in-law from the Durance, set themselves up in rue Helvétius facing rue de Louvois. Simon and Barthélemy were employed as chefs by the prince du Condé and remained with him until he emigrated. It was Maneille who ran the restaurant Frères provençaux.

Under the Directoire, it was transferred to the arcades of the Palais-Royal, 38 galerie de Beaujolais, near the Montansier theatre.

The Frères provençaux deserves to be remembered for two important reasons: for introducing the Parisians to brandade of salt cod; and for being the nursery of great chefs such as Hurel, Moisson, Dugléré, etc.

By 1869 the Frères provençaux had disappeared.

Frites révolutionnaires – Tavern-restaurant on the boulevard de Clichy, opened by Maxime Lisbonne, former communist, in 1888.

The clientele were waited upon by Napoleon III, Louis-Philippe, Boulanger, or Floquet, depending upon how they liked their chipped potatoes.

Grand Café – The underground salons of the hotel Scribe are its home today. It was here, on 28 December, 1895, that the first moving pictures were shown in Paris, an event that won it fleeting fame. Before then it had only been known for its billiards, and afterwards was forgotten once more.

Grossetête – Under the Second Empire, Grossetête (on the 'boulevard') did not enjoy a very good reputation. But people continued to frequent the restaurant because the cooking was good. It served black-footed chickens (the type sought after among the Bresse chickens today).

Hardy (Café) – In 1799, a modest restaurateur of les Halles district, called Hardy, opened a café at the corner of rue Laffitte. A striking innovation of this establishment was that it contained the first grill room in Paris. The client chose his 'victual', which was then cooked in front of him on a silver grill set in the white marble fireplace.

The best kidneys and cutlets of the capital were to be found there, it was said, as well as andouilles stuffed with truffles and poultry joints en papillotes. 'One had to be extremely rich to dine chez Hardy, and extremely hardy to dine chez Riche', was a remark attributed to Cambacérès.

It was on the site of café Hardy that the Maison dorée was built.

Helder (Café du) – This was situated at 29 boulevard des Italiens and was the 'rendez-vous of officers and saint-cyriens'.

One of the waiters, Felix, knew the army list by heart.

Lapérouse – Rival in its time of Magny, Lapérouse had soon to open a second floor to accommodate its clientele. Then the rooms were transformed into private rooms. Gratin of crayfish Georgette, navigator's woodcock, chicken Docteur and duck Colette succeeded Cancale oysters and entrecôtes à la manière de la Villette.

Larue – Restaurant founded in 1887 by Larue, place de la Madeleine, and taken over in 1904 by Edouard Nignon, one of the greatest masters of French cuisine. It vanished after the last war.

Laveur – This was a boarding house with an unpretentious but excellent cuisine. The establishment opened in the present rue du Sommerard in 1840, moved to rue Pierre-Sarrasin, then to rue de La Harpe. Finally, in 1855, it moved to rue des Poitevins where it passed through the hands of Tante Rose, sister-in-law of the founder, Laveur.

Gambetta, Poincaré, Millerand, Loubet, Clemenceau, Daudet, Paul Arène, Coppée and Courbet ate there before they became famous. They sometimes paid a return visit to revive memories.

Léda (Restaurant) – Established in 1797 on the corner of the rues Saint-Anne and des Petits-Champs. It closed in 1852. Fulton was a frequent visitor when he was experimenting with his steamship on the Seine in 1803.

Talma, Dumas, David and Gérard de Nerval also dined there regularly.

Le Doyen – Opened in its present position in 1792 by Le Doyen, this restaurant was frequented by Robespierre when it was still the small popular café Chez Doyen. It soon became a rendez-vous for lovers of good food.

It was for a long time the meeting-place of the duellists from the Champs-Élysées. Here they made up their differences over cold trout and green sauce, a speciality of the house.

Lucas – In 1732, an Englishman called Richard Lucas Restaurant Le Doyen at the beginning of the nineteenth century (J. Desmur) opened the first English tavern in Paris. He offered cold meats and plum pudding (self-service). In 1862, Augis moved the establishment to place de la Madeleine and called it Restaurant Lucas.

In 1925, the new proprietor, Francis Carton, president of the Société des cuisiniers de France, added his name to that of the establishment.

Magny – In 1842, Magny, chef of the Restaurant Philippe, rue Montorgueil, set up his own restaurant in the present rue Mazet.

Its small but excellent cellar; its sheep's trotters poulette; the invention, in 1867, of 'petites marmites' (individual portions presented on toasted bread croûtons); a remarkable châteaubriand; and a clientele consisting of Gavarni, Sainte-Beuve, George Sand, Renan, Goncourt, etc., made it the most famous restaurant on the Left Bank.

Maire – Opened in 1865 on the corner of boulevard de Strasbourg and boulevard Saint-Denis, it was famous for its Mercurey wine, its entrecôte bordelaise and its macaroni Périgueux. The Goncourts and their friends frequented it.

Maison dorée – This was opened in 1841 on the site of the defunct café Hardy, boulevard des Italiens. It was to have been called 'restaurant de la Cité' but the public christened it Maison dorée on account of its gilded balustrades and balconies.

It was a luxurious establishment on two floors. The brothers Verdier were proprietors and Casimir Moisson was the last of its great chefs. No one in Paris knew better than he did how to make a bouillabaisse and he created the timbale Nantua while he was employed there.

The Maison d'or (another name for it) closed down on the last day of the year 1902. Characters from Balzac and Zola are described having supper at the Maison dorée.

Marguery – In 1820, a café called the Maison Dauphin was opened by Joseph Dauphin on boulevard Bonne-Nouvelle. Closed, then reopened, it became a soft drinks-cum-catering establishment. Finally, on 1 August, 1877, a certain Marguery secured a lease of the premises.

Marguery became one of the shrines of bourgeois gastronomy with an 'up-to-the-minute' décor. The cellar was marvellous and the sole Marguery all but caused sole Dugléré to pale into insignificance.

But despite the fashionable décor, the organisation, the Mechanised washing of plates at restaurant Marguery in 1896 magnificent cuisine and cellar, together with the bourgeois wedding feasts which were such a feature of the restaurant, la Maison Marguery did not survive its founder.

(J. Desmur)

Méot – The restaurant Méot, which opened at the Palais-Royal on 26 May 1791, speedily acquired an extraordinary reputation. It was owned and run by Méot, formerly of the household of the duc d'Orléans. Word went around of baths filled with champagne; of 22 varieties of red wines and 27 varieties of white; and of a menu that offered a choice of at least 100 dishes.

It was here in 1795 that Grimod de la Reynière founded the 'Diner des mystificateurs'.

Mère Saguet – This suburban café opened in rue Moulin-de-Beurre near the gate of Maine in 1784. It began to become well known in 1808 and was quite famous under the Restoration. This was the period in which Thiers, Charlet, Béranger, Raffet, Gavarni, Désaugiers and the brothers Hugo frequented it.

Mother Saguet, an excellent cook, was particularly adept at rice à la Valenciennes and stewed cows' udders. In 1830, tired of working, she closed down the restaurant.

Mille Colonnes – The success of this café at the Palais-Royal was due most of all to the beauty of the proprietress, Mme. Romain, who was nicknamed 'la Belle Limonadière' ('the beautiful barmaid').

But when M. Romain (a very ugly man) died in 1826, his wife became a nun and the Mille Colonnes disappeared.

Mouton blanc – There was one in rue des Gobelins; another in rue de la Verrerie. Which of the two (or was there perhaps even a third?) was the legendary rendez-vous of Molière, Boileau, Racine and La Fontaine? Some say it was in Auteuil, where one of the poets lived. Others claim that it was in the Mouton blanc of rue de la Verrerie that Racine composed les Plaideurs. But how many Mouton blanc cafés were there in Paris in the seventeenth century?

Napolitain – It was while passing in a landau in front of the café Napolitain, boulevard des Capucines, that Lucien Guitry slapped one of his girl friends. She immediately began to shriek for help, whereupon Guitry, taking her tenderly in his arms, soothed, 'Don't be afraid. I am here.' The anecdote is all the more evocative since the incident took place during what was called the 'Belle Époque'. Fashionable Paris witnessed the scene from the terrace of the famous ice cream café which had only just relinquished the name of café de la Ville de Naples.

The high society of Paris at that time selected the terrace of the Napolitain as their rendez-vous and there are countless anecdotes about such 'regulars' as d'Aureville, Mendès and Courteline.

The 'Ebony salon' at restaurant Marguery

Noël Peter's – An American, Peters, founded this restaurant in 1854. It was situated in the passage des Princes and became Noël Peters because of his partnership with the Frenchman Noël.

At least, that is one explanation. Others maintain that it was the Frenchman, Pierre Fraysse of Sète, who, on his return to France (after working as a chef in the United States) in the second half of the nineteenth century, created this famous restaurant.

Monselet was received with honours. He gave excellent publicity to the restaurant in his chronicles.

According to Curnonsky, it was at this restaurant that Peters, alias Pierre Fraysse, created lobster à l'américaine.

Paillard – At the end of the nineteenth century, the élite of this period, from the future Edward VII to King Carlos of Portugal (whom the courtesans nicknamed 'His Lotion'), came here to enjoy stuffed duck and chicken archiduc.

Père Lathuile – Modest suburban café near the gate of Clichy, which Lathuile transformed into a restaurant in 1790.

General Moncey established his headquarters there in 1814 during the siege of Paris. Some cannon balls fired at him there made the name of Père Lathuile famous. A chicken dish with potatoes and artichoke hearts was dedicated to him.

A painting by Manet and another by Horace Vernet perpetuated the fame of this restaurant, which was frequented by artists, literary figures and carousing bourgeois.

Petit Maure – It was opened on the corner of rue de Seine and rue Visconti in the seventeenth century. They say that the poet Saint-Amant died there.

But there was also a Petit Maure at Vaugirard at about this time. There, one could enjoy the strawberries and petits pois that grew in the surrounding district, drink the local white wine, and eat the home-bred turkeys. It was still the countryside.

There were numerous Petits Mores: a sign of the times when anything exotic seemed to harbinger success.

Philippe – This began as a modest public house in rue Montorgueil. In 1820 it was serving grills.

Magny was head chef in 1842. From 1848 onwards, the ex-chef of the Jockey Club, Pascal, became proprietor, but he was struck by blindness and had to give up the restaurant.

Every Saturday at 6 p.m., the 12 members of the Club des grands estomacs used to meet chez Philippe. They spent 18 hours at the table.

Pomme de pin – This famous or at least evocative name was very popular in the eighteenth century. The well-known tavern in the rue de la Juiverie run by Robin Turgis was also called Pomme de pin.

François Villon frequented it (and usually received credit); Rabelais, another regular client, paid his bills on the spot.

This tavern was situated opposite the Palais de Justice. Théophile de Viau praised it in 1608 and recommended its 'class'.

Much later, Sainte-Beuve pronounced it a true 'classic tavern'. In the seventeenth century, writers were allowed to drink themselves into oblivion for nothing. This made for excellent publicity and helped the establishment to enjoy a long period of popularity.

Procope – This, they say, is the oldest café in Paris. At all events, it is the oldest of the cafés that still occupy their original sites; in this case, rue de l'Ancienne-Comédie.

It probably began as an establishment where coffee and ices were served, but it was original in that for the first time newspapers were provided for the clientele. The fashion caught on.

The Procope had so many famous patrons that it would be impossible to mention them all: J.-J. Rousseau, Beaumarchais, d'Alembert and Marmontel; then later, Gambetta and his friends. There were many other celebrities during the two centuries of its glory.

It closed down in 1914 and reopened after the Second World War. Medals on the walls recall its history.

Prunier – Opened in 1872 in rue Duphot by M. Alfred Prunier and his wife (an excellent cook) this restaurant swiftly won its 'stripes' because of its first-class oysters.

In 1897, Emile Prunier inherited the restaurant from his parents and introduced his own speciality, which was every variety of seafood.

Ramponneau – The Grande Pinte that formerly occupied the site of the Trinité church was taken over in 1760 by Jean Ramponneau, or Ramponeaux, who had previously owned the Tambour royal. The restaurant adopted the name of the quarter: Aux Porcherons. Its renown spread when it began offering white wine at half the usual price.

The restaurant expanded in 1778 when it was able to accommodate 600 people. The clientele was composed of market gardeners, waggoners, workers, and a few bourgeois and nobles who liked to frequent low company.

The tavern disappeared in 1851. Rumour has it that Jean Ramponneau abandoned the kitchen for the theatre, but no proof of this exists.

Rat-Mort – This tavern, situated in the place Pigalle, earned its name on the day a client found a dead rat under one of the benches. For a long time it was the rendez-vous of the Independents of politics, literature and the arts. Olivier Métra wrote his Valse des roses there.

Régence (La) – Founded in 1688 under the name of 'café du Palais-Royal' it was rechristened 'café de la Régence' in 1718. It stood on the corner of the former place du Palais-Royal and eventually fell under the pick of the 'improvers' of Paris.

It was this café Régence that was frequented by Diderot, Rousseau, Bonaparte (who used to play chess there) and later, Musset, advocate of the 'verte' absinth.

Riche (Café) – Opened about 1832 on the corner of rue Le Pelletier and boulevard des Italiens and closed in 1916, by which time it had long since passed out of vogue. It reached its zenith when Bignon senior took over. Situated near the old Opéra (which was done away with in 1875) it was frequented by personalities from the theatre, literary and art worlds, the world in general, and the demimonde. In some respects it was a victim of the 1870 war.

Among its specialities was sole with shrimps and sauce Riche, and Bouzy wine.

Café Procope. Old engraving
(J. Desmur)

Cabaret Ramponneau, from an old print
(J. Desmur)

Rocher de Cancale – Opened by Balaine at 61 rue Montorgueil, this restaurant was the centre for oyster connoisseurs at the beginning of the nineteenth century. Grimod de la Reynière chose it for the tasting sessions of his jury in 1808. The Société des mercredis (with its 17 exclusive members) met there.

Borel succeeded Balaine. He, too, was an excellent chef. But the vogue of Restaurant Philippe was damaging to the Rocher. It was obliged to close down in 1860.

The characters of the 'Comédie humaine' all met at the Rocher de Cancale, which Balzac himself frequented. The menu offered a selection of more than 200 dishes and 50 or so wines. The clientele was advised that 'half bottles were not served in the private rooms, and that heating was extra'.

It was here that the chef Langlais created sole normande in 1837.

Taverne Anglaise – Besides the English tavern Lucas, there was another opened in 1845 in route de la Révolte. It was moved to rue de Richelieu in 1870 and was the paradise of lovers of roast beef served with Yorkshire pudding and rhubarb tart. A butcher took over the establishment in 1876. People used to queue to eat there on feast days and Sundays.

Tortoni – Founded in 1798 by Velloni, then taken over by his head clerk, Tortoni, who called the establishment after himself. Tortoni was an ice cream maker as well as a restaurateur, and in 1830 was famous for his 'glazed meats, his papillotes of leveret and his salmon escalopes'.

Tortoni's was the restaurant on the boulevard: the celebrities of the day, led by Roger de Beauvoir, appraised the pretty passers-by through their lorgnettes from the famous terrace.

Restaurant Tour d'Argent, Paris
(French Government Tourist Office)

Tour d'argent – Restaurant opened in 1582 by a certain Rourtaud and certainly the oldest in Paris.

It is said that Henri IV ate a heron pie there; that the first forks were used there; that Mme. de Sévigné praised the chocolate; that George Sand used to meet Musset there . . . And all the élite of the nineteenth century went to eat the canard au sang of the great Frédéric, just as one may still do today.

Véfour – Véfour was the name of the proprietor of the café de Chartres which enjoyed an excellent culinary reputation. In 1872, the name of the establishment was changed to the Grand Véfour and, according to la Reynière, its chicken fricassée à la Marengo was superb.

One of the brothers Véfour bought the café de l'Europe (also at the Palais-Royal) and made it into a restaurant.

It survived until 1920. The public nicknamed it the 'Petit Véfour'. The great chef Raymond Olivier had made the Grand Véfour fashionable again.

Véry – Véry came to Paris from the Meuse valley and started his career as a kitchen boy. He turned out to be a remarkable chef and opened a restaurant at the Tuileries, the terrasse des Feuillants. Duroc, who was in love with Mme. Véry, lent him the support of his influence, which was enormous.

In 1808, Véry bought three arcades at the Palais-Royal and moved there. Success came rapidly. 'Impeccable décor, exquisite cuisine,' was the unanimous verdict of the clientele under the Empire. Fragonard died there. Balzac was reluctantly offered a Gargantuan lunch there by his publisher Werdet.

The restaurant Véry perished when a prix fixé was introduced.

A sketch of Labiche is entitled: 'Un garçon de chez Véry'.

Voisin – A cellar famous for its Burgundy and Bordeaux wines; its clientele of Daudet, Zola, the Goncourts; its saddle of lamb; its pâté de foie gras; and a famous chef (Choron), assured the restaurant Voisin, at the corner of rue Saint-Honoré and rue Cambon, a long and successful reputation.

Under the Commune, the English butcher, Roos, supplied Voisin with the finest beef and game from the Zoological Gardens. Goncourt used to dine with Arsène Houssaye on a famous elephant pudding.

Voltaire (Café) – This café, near the Odéon, had its hour of glory under the Restoration and the Empire. It was famous for its meat. Gambetta and Jules Vallès used to meet there when they came out of the Procope.

It disappeared after the Second World War.

RETICULUM or HONEYCOMB. BONNET – Second stomach of the ruminants.

RÉVEILLON – Supper eaten after midnight mass on Christmas Eve and, by extension, the supper eaten on Saint Sylvester's night (New Year's Eve) at the moment of the change of date. (See FESTIVE COOKERY.)

REVENIR (FAIRE) – French culinary term describing the action of browning various cookery ingredients in butter, fat or oil.

The object of browning meat or fish is to seal and render firm the exterior, but not to cook it. When complete cooking follows this operation, the words used are sauté for meat and étuver or fondre for vegetables.

REVERDIR – French cookery term meaning to replace green colour in vegetables which has been lost in blanching. The use of copper (which forms chlorophyll, an insoluble colouring matter) has been almost abandoned because of the metallic taste which it communicated to the food, and in the canning industry spinach green is used for this purpose.

RHINE WINES. RHIN, VINS DE – Excellent wines; most of them white. (See WINE.)

RHINOCEROS – Large, herbivorous, African and southern Asiatic pachyderm, very savage, whose flesh (mostly that of the young animals) is edible. It is preferred to that of the elephant by natives who consider hippopotamus meat to be even better, but the hippopotamus is now under protection.

RHUBARB. RHUBARBE – Plant originating in northern Asia, introduced into Europe in the fourteenth century. It was cultivated first by the monks as a medicinal plant, then as an ornamental plant.

The fleshy stems are eaten, either stewed in a compote or as jam. It can also be made into pies and tarts in the English style.

The leaves should not be eaten: they contain a large amount of oxalic acid. The root is a purgative.

Rhubarb is in season from May to July.

Rhubarb tart (Claire)

Compote of rhubarb. COMPOTE DE RHUBARBE – Divide the stems into pieces 6 to 8 cm. (2 to 3 inches) long. Peel them and remove strings. Arrange them in a copper pan and pour over very thick syrup to half cover them. Poach, covered, in the oven without stirring.

Serve in a compote dish. Pour the syrup over the rhubarb.

Rhubarb jam. CONFITURE DE RHUBARBE – Dissolve in a copper pan 800 g. ( $1\frac{3}{4}$  lb.) sugar moistened with a few tablespoons water. Boil over a high flame for 8 minutes. Put in a generous 1 kg. ( $2\frac{1}{4}$  lb.) rhubarb stems, carefully stripped and cut up. Poach on moderate heat with the cover on the pan.

When the rhubarb is nearly cooked remove cover, reduce heat and continue to cook, stirring all the time, until the rhubarb becomes quite tender and comes apart.

Put the jam in pots and cover them. Keep in a cool, dry place.

Preparing rhubarb stalks for a pie (Claire)

Rhubarb pie (English cookery). PÂTE DE RHUBARBE – Peel the tender stalks of rhubarb and cut them in pieces 3 to 4 cm. (about  $1\frac{1}{2}$  inches) long. Arrange them in an English-type pie dish. Cover with sugar, add 2 or 3 tablespoons water and cover with a piece of pastry laid over a strip of pastry on the rim of the dish. Sprinkle with sugar. Cook at moderate heat in the oven for about 45 minutes.

The pie may be brushed with egg before being put in the oven. When taken out it is sprinkled with sugar and glazed with a hot iron or salamander, or under the grill.

In England, where this pie is very popular, it is served with double cream, whipped cream or custard.

RHYTON – Antique drinking vessel in the form of a ram's horn, generally decorated with a goat's head, without any flat base, so that the drinker was obliged to empty it before putting it down.

RIBBON. RUBAN – Mixture of sugar and egg yolks which, having been well beaten, forms folds rather like a ribbon that has been dropped from a height.

RICE. RIZ – Gramineous grain, originating in India and China, introduced first of all into Egypt, then into Greece, where it was already highly prized at the time of Theophrastus. Its popularity spread to Portugal, then to Italy and America. In France Cardinal Fleury's first attempts to grow it in Auvergne were not a success. However, for the last sixty years or so, there have been rice plantations in the Camargue. Following early setbacks, these generally yield good crops (apart from years when weather conditions are particularly unfavourable). Rice requires a great deal of heat and humidity to grow well. French rice is of good quality although there is not enough of it to satisfy the demands of the home market.

Rice plant

Rice contains about half as much nitrogenous matter as wheat, but is richer in carbohydrates.

The four principal varieties of rice are: hard rice, mountain rice, glutinous rice and fluitons.

Rice is sold under various trade names that are not always accurately descriptive of its origin.

Carolina rice, long-grained, angular, white (or whitish with a blue tinge), bright and shiny.

Madagascar rice, large-grained, shiny.

Indo-Chinese rice, much smaller than Indian rice and an excellent variety. It cooks perfectly without disintegrating.

Java rice, more elongated grains, flat, transparent, shiny.

Japanese rice, uniform oval grains, hard, translucent, opaque at the centre, greyish white, shiny.

Patna rice, grains less hard, milky white.

Italian rice (Roman), greyish-white lustreless grains;
Piedmont, short, round-grain rice, very white and shiny, darker and opaque at the centre.

Cargo rice, unhusked, of Camargue. Rice cultivation in Camargue is less intensive than it was during the Second World War.

American rice, long-grained and usually pre-treated.

To cook rice – The peoples who depend upon rice as their staple food never stir while it is cooking and never cook it too long (average 20 minutes). In this way they ensure that the grains remain whole.

À la créole. Each separated grain is very slightly bite-resistant. This result is obtained by first rinsing the rice in cold water, then plunging it into ample boiling water.

À l'orientale or pilau-style. The rice is first browned in fat, then cooked in stock, which must be completely absorbed by the rice.

In milk. Instead of rinsing the rice in cold water, plunge it into boiling water for 2 minutes to get rid of the starch. Drain. Complete the cooking in milk (plain or spiced).

The French, it is said, do not know how to cook rice. In fact, it is frequently overcooked and instead of dry fluffy rice, there emerges a sort of pap, which is better suited to sweet than to savoury dishes. Nowadays, this dilemma can be avoided by using pre-treated, long-grain American rice, the grains of which remain separate even though overcooked.

Rice in dietetics – Rice is an excellent carbohydrate food, which contains about 79 per cent. starch. It is easily digested and nourishing: 100 g. (4 oz.) rice provides 340 calories. It is an important source of energy for those engaged in physical activities, but it is not a complete food. A diet based exclusively on rice can be damaging.

Various processes aimed at making rice whiter necessitate the removal of the outer layers of the grain (important source of minerals and vitamins) and detract considerably from its dietetic value.

Rice is given different names at the various stages of its development. Paddy rice is rice in its raw state complete with its glumes and glumelles, the fibrous ball to which it is attached. Once it is cleaned and husked, rice becomes cargo rice. This is treated in its turn to give white rice (the degree of whiteness depending upon how many times the rice is passed through the machines that rasp the grain). By the time the whitening process is completed, the rice has lost its pericardium and practically its entire proteic layer. White rice is transformed into polished rice by being passed through machines which remove any flour still adhering to the grain. Shiny rice is rice that has been specially processed to give it an attractive sheen. Unfortunately, it has been proved that husking, whitening and polishing (processes necessitating the removal of the grain casings) also take away precious nutritive elements. Proteins in the outer husk disappear when cargo rice becomes white rice; lipids become rarer the whiter rice becomes (mineral salts likewise); vitamins, especially those belonging to the B group, are present in paddy rice, but are considerably reduced during the whitening, polishing and shining processes.

The scarcity of vitamins in whitened or polished rice has serious effects in those regions where it constitutes the main source of nourishment. This vitamin deficiency is known as beri-beri. It is a deficiency disease unknown in Europe because of our varied diet.

The digestibility of rice is improved by the preparation it undergoes. Although the proportion of proteins in rice is only 7 to 8 per cent, they are a particularly well-balanced variety because of the amount of indispensable amino acids they contain. 75 to 100 per cent of the rice we eat is made up of glucides, which are easily assimilable. There are barely any fats. It is evident, therefore, that rice cannot satisfy our vitamin and mineral requirements.

To sum up, rice is a valuable food because of its energy-giving properties, but it must be subsidised by:

1. Animal protein (meat, fish, eggs, milk), or vegetable protein (pulses). Savoury and sweet rice containing milk, eggs and (in the case of the latter) sugar are extremely nourishing. Milk is the perfect complement to rice, adding, as it does, protein and calcium.

2. Fats. Uncooked butter (added at the last moment), uncooked oil, preferably olive oil, the type usually used for rice-based salads.

3. Mineral salts and vitamins in the form of green vegetables and fresh fruit, which ought always to be served in the course of a meal based on rice.

Boiled rice with butter. RIZ AU BLANC, AU BEURRE – Put into a saucepan with a flat, thick bottom 250 g. (9 oz., 1½ cups) washed rice. Cover completely with cold water and season with salt. Blanch the rice for 15 minutes.

Drain, put into a sauté dish with 75 g. (3 oz., 6 tablespoons) butter cut in little pieces. Mix carefully with a fork, cover with a lid and put in the oven for 15 minutes.

Rice prepared in this way may be eaten as it is. It is mostly used as an accompaniment for eggs, poultry, fish, etc.

Flaying rice

Cleaning rice through a ventilator

Sifting rice

Cooked rice (Nicolas)

Rice à la créole. RIZ À LA CRÉOLE – Take 1 kg. (2½ lb., 5 cups) Indian rice for 8 persons. Wash it in several waters. Put the rice in a thick pan with a little salt and cover with cold water. Cook on a good heat. When it is well cooked, lower the heat or set the pan, covered, at the side of the stove. It will continue to cook and will dry slowly. Allow 1 hour for cooking.

Rice croquettes – See CROQUETTES.

Rice au gras. RIZ AU GRAS – Blanch 250 g. (9 oz., 1½ cups) rice, drain it, toss in butter and add to twice its height in the pan some pot-au-feu broth or rather fatty white stock. Bring to the boil. Cook, covered, in the oven, without disturbing it, for 20 minutes.

Rice à la grecque. RIZ À LA GRECQUE – Prepare the rice as for pilaf (q.v.) adding, when it is cooked, for every 500 g. (18 oz., 2½ cups) rice measured uncooked, 1 chopped onion tossed in 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) butter, 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) sausage meat divided into small pieces, 50 g. (2 oz., scant ¼ cup) lettuce leaves cut in thin strips and cooked in butter, 4 tablespoons (5 tablespoons) peas cooked in butter, and 50 g. (2 oz.) red pimentos cut in dice and cooked in butter.

Mix this garnish with the pilaf rice, taking care not to break the grains.

Rice à l'indienne. RIZ À L'INDIENNE – Blanch 500 g. (18 oz., 2½ cups) rice for 15 minutes in salted water, allowing 9 g. (scant 1½ teaspoon) salt to 1 litre (1½ pints, generous quart) water, stirring from time to time with a wooden spoon.

Drain the rice, wash it several times in cold water, drain again and put it on a napkin laid on a baking tin or a strainer. Fold over the edges of the napkin so as to enclose the rice. Put to dry in a warm place for 15 minutes.

Rice prepared in this way is the essential accompaniment of all curry dishes. It may also be served as accompaniment to other strongly seasoned dishes.

Rice pilaf – See PILAF.

Risotto à la milanaise – Prepare the risotto as in the following recipe. When it is cooked add a milanaise garnish and a little rich brown sauce which has been strongly flavoured with tomato.

(Milanaise garnish is composed of pickled tongue, cooked lean ham, mushrooms and truffles, cut into fairly coarse julienne (q.v.) strips and bound with rich brown sauce flavoured with tomato.)

Risotto à la piémontaise – Cook lightly in butter, without allowing to colour, 100 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) chopped onion. When it is cooked add 500 g. (18 oz., 2½ cups) Piedmont rice.

Cook gently over a low heat, and stir and shake until all the grains are well impregnated with butter. Pour in, to twice the height of the rice in the pan, some pot-au-feu broth or white stock. Repeat this five or six times, adding a fresh quantity of liquid only when the last lot has been absorbed by the rice. Cook this risotto, covered, for 18 to 20 minutes. Add to it, when cooked, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) butter and 75 g. (3 oz.,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) grated Parmesan.

Risotto à la piémontaise

The risotto can be finished off with different ingredients, such as ham cut into dice and tossed in butter, mussels, fresh peas (which can be cooked with the rice) or black truffles, which are added to the risotto at the last moment.

DESSERT or SWEET RICE. ENTREMETS AU RIZ –

Dessert or sweet rice for croquettes and puddings. RIZ POUR BORDURES, CROQUETTES, POUDINGS – Wash 100 g. (4 oz., generous  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) rice, blanch it, drain and rinse in warm water.

Drain again and put it into a pan with 8 dl. ( $1\frac{1}{3}$  pints,  $1\frac{3}{4}$  pints) milk previously boiled with the chosen flavouring, 75 g. (3 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) sugar, 25 g. (1 oz., 2 tablespoons) butter and a small pinch of salt.

Begin cooking over a high flame, cover the pan and cook in the oven at a gentle heat until the rice is nearly cooked.

Take the rice from the oven and add to it 6 egg yolks, mixing them in carefully with a fork. Add more sugar, if needed. Use according to the recipe.

Dessert rice can be flavoured with vanilla, orange or lemon peel.

The proportions given in this recipe will provide the basis for a dessert for 6 to 8 people. If the rice is to be served without fruit or other accompaniment the ingredients may be augmented; and the rice should be completely cooked if it is not to be used in a dish which requires further cooking.

It is possible also to cook the rice as above, and on taking it out of the oven to bind it with 3 whole eggs. This method is less extravagant than the preceding one, but the rice is less delicate.

Creamed rice. RIZ À LA CRÈME – Cook with 6 dl. (1 pint,  $2\frac{1}{2}$  cups) milk (previously boiled with the chosen flavouring), 75 g. (3 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) sugar, a small pinch of salt, and 100 g. (4 oz., generous  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) rice, blanched and drained.

When it is cooked add to it 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) thick fresh cream and 25 g. (1 oz., 2 tablespoons) butter.

Add a little more sugar if required. This preparation is used for making hot or cold sweets.

Rice flan or tart. FLAN, TARTE AU RIZ – Fill a shortcrust flan case (pie shell) with Dessert rice to within  $\frac{1}{2}$  cm. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  inch) of the edge. Sprinkle with sugar. Cook in the oven at a moderate heat for 25 to 30 minutes.

This sweet can be served hot or cold. It may be made with rice that has been mixed with chopped-up crystallised fruit soaked in kirsch or other liqueur.

Rice flan or tart with apricots. FLAN, TARTE DE RIZ AUX ABRICOTS – Proceed as in the above recipe, but fill the flan case only three-quarters full. On the rice place halves of raw apricots, soaked in kirsch and sugar. Sprinkle with sugar. Cook in the oven at a gentle heat.

Spread the top of the flan with apricot jam diluted with a little syrup and strained.

In the same way rice flans may be made with various other fruits such as sliced bananas arranged on the flan in a rosette, cherries, pears (in quarters and half-cooked in syrup), peaches (in halves, soaked in liqueur and sugar), apples, plums, etc.

Rice gâteau with caramel. GÂTEAU DE RIZ AU CARAMEL – Fill a large Charlotte mould, lined with caramelised sugar, with Dessert rice. Cook in the oven in a bain-marie for 25 to 30 minutes.

Serve hot or cold.

Gâteau or flan of rice with meringue. GÂTEAU, FLAN DE

RIZ MERINGUÉ – Fill a buttered fireproof dish with Dessert rice mixed with crystallised fruit, cut in dice and soaked in kirsch or other liqueur. Build up the rice into a cake about 3 or 4 cm. ( $1\frac{1}{4}$  to  $1\frac{1}{2}$  inches) high. Cover with meringue, smoothing it all over.

Decorate the top of the flan with meringue piped through a forcing-bag. Sprinkle with sugar. Put into a very hot oven to colour the meringue lightly.

Garnish with strained apricot jam and gooseberry jelly.

Rice à l'impératrice with a border of pears à l'impératrice

Rice à l'impératrice. RIZ À L'IMPÉRATRICE – Prepare Dessert rice flavouring it with vanilla. When it is almost cold, add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) chopped up crystallised fruit soaked in kirsch.

Incorporate 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) thick custard (see CREAMS, Custard cream), mix and add at the last moment  $2\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, generous cup) whipped cream.

Pour this mixture into a Charlotte mould (or a Bavarois mould) the bottom of which has been spread with gooseberry jelly to a depth of a little less than 1 cm. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  inch). Set on ice or in the refrigerator. Turn out into a glass bowl.

Many fruit desserts are made with a basis of Rice à l'impératrice. (See PEACH, Peaches à l'impératrice.)

Rice in milk. RIZ AU LAIT – Wash 100 g. (4 oz., generous  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) rice and blanch it. Drain, rinse it in warm water and put it back, well drained, into a pan containing 8 dl. ( $1\frac{1}{3}$  pints,  $1\frac{3}{4}$  pints) milk and a small pinch of salt.

Cook very slowly, with a lid on, until rice is tender. Add sugar if the rice is intended for a sweet, and if necessary lighten it with a few tablespoons boiled milk.

This rice is served hot or cold, and if served as a dessert, is flavoured with vanilla, orange peel or lemon peel.

Rice Montmorency. RIZ MONTMORENCY – Prepare Dessert rice flavoured with vanilla. Put into a glass bowl and decorate with banana slices alternating with cherries in syrup.

Rice pudding mould. PUDDING DE RIZ MOULÉ – Prepare Dessert rice. Incorporate in it, after having thickened it with egg yolks, 3 egg whites, stiffly beaten. Fill with this mixture a large Charlotte mould, buttered and sprinkled with breadcrumbs.

Cook in the oven in a bain-marie for 20 to 25 minutes. Leave for a few minutes before turning out of the mould. Serve with fruit sauce, custard (see CREAMS, Custard cream) or zabaglione (q.v.).

Ring of rice with fruit. BORDURE DE RIZ AUX FRUITS – Fill a buttered ring mould with Dessert rice. Cook in the oven in a bain-marie for 10 to 12 minutes. Turn out of the mould onto a dish. Fill the middle with various fruits cooked in syrup, cut in big dice and warmed in Apricot sauce (see SAUCE) flavoured with kirsch.

Put half apricots cooked in syrup on the rice border. Decorate with lozenges of angelica and crystallised cherries.

RICEYS CENDRÉ

Pour over a few tablespoons apricot sauce flavoured with kirsch.

This sweet is also known as Apricots Condé.

Rispsap or saffron rice. RIZ AU SAFRAN – This pudding is very popular in the Flemish countryside.

Cook 300 g. (11 oz., generous 1½ cups) rice in 1 litre (1½ pints, generous quart) milk lightly sweetened with brown sugar. Continue cooking this mixture until the grains of rice can easily be crushed. To colour the rice, add a small pinch of saffron.

Turn out the rice into flat plates, spreading it out well. Allow to cool. Sprinkle with brown or white sugar.

Subrics of rice. SUBRICS DE RIZ – Prepare the rice as for Rice pudding mould. Add chopped-up crystallised fruit soaked in liqueur. Spread evenly, about 3 cm. (1 inch) thick, on a buttered baking dish. Dot the surface with butter to prevent the rice from getting dry. Allow to cool.

Cut into rounds about 5 cm. (2 inches) in diameter. Put them into a pan in which clarified butter has been heated; colour them on both sides.

Arrange the subrics in a crown on a round dish and put in the middle of each 1 teaspoon gooseberry jelly or any other firm jam.

Vanilla rice à la Bourbon (Créole cookery). RIZ VANILLÉ À LA BOURBON – Cook gently in 1 litre (1½ pints, generous quart) milk 3 tablespoons (scant ¼ cup) rice previously blanched and drained well, until it becomes a porridge. Add sugar and vanilla to taste.

When the rice has cooled, add 3 egg yolks. Beat the whites separately into a stiff foam and fold them into the rice before turning into a deep, lightly buttered dish. Bake in the oven for 20 minutes. Sprinkle with sugar and serve in the dish in which it was cooked in the oven.

Rice water. EAU DE RIZ – Boil 25 g. (1 oz., 2 tablespoons) rice in 1 litre (1½ pints, generous quart) water until it is soft. Flavour with 25 g. (1 oz.) liquorice or 50 g. (2 oz.) quince syrup, replacing these with saccharine when sugar is forbidden.

RICEYS CENDRÉ – See CHEESE.

RICHE (Café) – See RESTAURANTS OF BYGONE DAYS.

RICHE (À LA) – Method of preparing fish, particularly sole. It was at the Café Riche, a Parisian establishment which has now disappeared, that Riche sauce was created (see SAUCE).

RICHEBOURG (Wine). RICHEBOURG (VIN DE) – Great appellation contrôlée vineyard of the Côte de Nuits, situated in the commune of Vosne-Romanée. Produces renowned, elegant, aromatic red wines. (See BURGUNDY.)

RICHELIEU (À LA) – Name given to various preparations.

In the first place the word describes a garnish composed of stuffed tomatoes and mushrooms, braised lettuce and potatoes lightly roasted in butter.

The term à la Richelieu also applies to a method of preparing filets of sole or other fish. The filets are coated in egg and breadcrumbs, cooked in butter, served with maitre-d'hôtel butter and garnished with truffles. The name 'Richelieu' is also given to a large sweet pastry, made as described below.

Richelieu (Pâtisserie) – Ingredients. 500 g. (18 oz., 2½ cups) sugar, few drops vanilla essence, 375 g. (13 oz., 3 cups) almonds, 150 g. (5 oz., generous ½ cup) butter, 150 g. (5 oz., 1½ cup) flour, 16 eggs, 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) maraschino.

Method. Pound the almonds finely, adding to them 2 egg whites and a little sugar. Rub through a sieve into a basin, add the sugar, vanilla essence, egg yolks and maraschino, and stir with a wooden spoon until the mixture becomes white.

Add the melted butter, sprinkle in the sieved flour, and finally add 10 stiffly beaten egg whites. Mix. Pour the mixture into shallow buttered moulds. Bake in a moderate oven.

Sandwich the cake layers with apricot jam and Frangipane cream (see FRANGIPANE). Ice with white Fondant icing (see ICING) flavoured with maraschino. Decorate with angelica.

RICKETS. RACHITISME – Disease affecting children, caused by digestive troubles and vitamin deficiency. Remedied by giving fruit juices (lemon, orange, grape, tomato) and certain raw foods containing vitamins (especially Vitamin D).

RIDDLE. CRIBLE – Kitchen utensil similar to a sieve, but with larger holes.

RIDGE CUCUMBER. AGOURS – Agoursi is the French spelling of the Russian word ogurtsy. This is a species of the Cucurbitaceae family. In Russia, where cucumbers are highly appreciated, they apply to this type of cucumber all the treatments which we apply to white cucumbers: braising, à la crème, fried in batter, au gratin, à la Mornay, etc.

In France, cucumbers are most often eaten like gherkins. Formerly, it was chiefly in this guise that they were found in food shops, but they are now sold fresh in France, England and the United States.

RIGODON – Burgundian dish, very popular in some parts of Basse-Bourgogne, served as an enrêée when it has ham or bacon in it (giving it some resemblance to the quiche lorraine) or as a sweet with the addition of fruit purée, making it more like a pudding. The rigodon is served either warm or completely cold, so that it can be made in a large enough quantity to be dished up twice. It used to be made on the day the bread was baked (in the days when each household made its own bread) and was put in the oven as soon as the bread came out.

Boil ½ litre (1½ pints, 1½ pints) milk, add to it 150 g. (5 oz., ¾ cup) sugar, a pinch of salt and ½ vanilla pod (or few drops vanilla extract), or some lemon rind (the Burgundian housewives replace these flavours with a good pinch of cinnamon).

Cover the utensil, leave to infuse away from heat, and stir from time to time to make sure the sugar dissolves.

Cut in small dice 100 g. (4 oz., 2 cups) stale brioche; put it in a dish and sprinkle with 5 or 6 tablespoons of the sweet, flavoured milk. Chop finely 7 or 8 dried shelled walnuts. Add to these 3 crushed hazelnuts (in the season, the dried walnuts are replaced by fresh ones, doubling the quantity; but fresh or dry, walnuts must figure in rigodon).

Mix in a bowl 7 beaten eggs and 2 tablespoons rice flour. Add the sweet, flavoured milk little by little, beating well with a whisk to ensure that everything is perfectly blended. Finally, add to the mixture the diced brioche and chopped nuts and mix well together.

Pour into a deep, well-buttered dish, and dot the surface with about 25 g. (1 oz., 2 tablespoons) butter in small pieces. Cook in the oven at a good medium heat.

Its accompaniment is a purée of fruit in season: mirabelle plums, greengages, quinces, apples, etc. Whatever the fruit, it is cooked to a jam in which the quantity of sugar is in proportion to the sweetness of the fruit used.

After cooking, this jam is strained through a cloth or strainer, and boiled down over strong heat until it becomes very thick.

When the rigodon has been taken out of the oven, and has become no more than lukewarm, the jam is poured and spread over it very evenly.

When it is served cold, the jam can be replaced by a purée of strawberries. Purée of peaches also goes very well with rigodon.

Rigodon with meat. RIGODON AVEC VIANDE – 'Put into a basin 2 good tablespoons of flour (or rice flour). Add 7 eggs. Mix well. Pour in, stirring well, 1 litre (1½ pints, generous quart) boiled milk, lightly salted. Add 200 g. (7 oz., scant cup) cold boiled pork cut in very small dice (or an equivalent quantity of streaky bacon). Pour the mixture into a deep dish, well buttered. Put small pieces of butter here and there on the surface. Cook in a moderate oven. This flan is eaten lukewarm or cold.' (Philéas Gilbert's recipe.)

RIGOTTE DE CONDRIEU – See CHEESE.

RILLAUDS AND RILLETTES – Preparation of pork, both lean and fat, cut into very small pieces and gently cooked in lard with the usual seasoning. Rillettes are then pounded in a mortar. Rillauds or rillons are not.

Rillettes are made industrially almost everywhere in France. Tours and Le Mans rillettes are highly esteemed.

Goose and rabbit rillettes are made in the same way as pork rillettes.

Cut 2½ kg. (5½ lb.) fresh belly of pork into large dice. Heat 25 g. (1 oz., 2 tablespoons) lard in a pan, add diced pork, and cook lightly. Add ½ cup of water. Cook gently till tender, stirring frequently to make sure that the meat does not stick to the bottom. When the pieces of pork are cooked and browned, drain them.

Chop or pound the rillettes finely, put them in a basin, and add to them the fat from the cooking. Season with salt and pepper and mix.

Put the rillettes into small stone jars and allow to cool. When they are cold pour over a thin layer of lard. Cover with white paper.

Rillauds of Anjou. RILLAUDS D'ANJOU – Cut fresh belly of pork into pieces about 6 cm. (2½ inches) square. Season with coarse rock salt, allowing 25 g. salt per kg. (½ oz., per lb.). and leave for 12 hours.

The next day put the rillauds in a saucepan in which some lard (one third of the weight of the pork) has been heated. Cook gently for 2 hours. Put the pan over good heat, add a little caramel and cook for a few moments.

Drain the rillauds and serve piping hot.

Rillettes of Angers. RILLETES D'ANGERS – Melt gently 1 kg. (2¼ lb.) pork fat cut into very small pieces. When it is golden in colour add 4 kg. (8¾ lb.) fresh pork, both fat and lean, cut into dice, and 100 g. (4 oz.) coarse rock salt. Cook gently for 5 to 6 hours. Beat the pieces with a wooden spoon to crush them a little. Put into pots. Allow to become cold.

Rillettes of Le Mans. RILLETES DU MANS – Like the Rillettes of Angers, made of mixed pieces of goose and pork.

Rillettes of Tours. RILLETES DE TOURS – Prepared as described in the introductory recipe using fresh collar (U.S. shoulder butt) of pork, both fat and lean. Season with salt, pepper and spices. Pound finely. Put in pots. Cover with a layer of lard.

Rillons, rillauds, rillots – Cook pieces of breast of pork as indicated in the first part of the recipe for rillettes.

When the pieces are cooked and well browned, drain them in a strainer, season with salt and pepper, and serve hot or cold.

RIND. ÉCORCE – The outer skin of some stalks and fruit. The rinds of cinnamon, lemon and orange are used in a great many different ways in cooking.

RING – See BORDER.

RING-BISCUIT. GIMBLETTE – Name given to various types of small biscuit made in the form of a ring.

The word gimblette comes from the Italian cianbetta which means scalded. This etymology implies that gimblettes should be scalded before they are put in the oven.

The best known – and their reputation is centuries old – are those of Albi.

Orange ring-biscuits (Carême's recipe). GIMBLETES À L'ORANGE – 'Grate half an orange rind on a lump of sugar; crush the sugar to a fine powder and mix it with more fine sugar so that the whole amount measures 175 g. (6 oz., ¼ cup). Pound thoroughly 100 g. (4 oz., scant cup) fresh almonds. Place in a circle, round this mixture, 225 g. (8 oz., 2 cups) sifted cake flour. Put in the centre 1 teaspoon yeast dissolved in a quarter of a tumbler of milk. Add 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter, 2 egg yolks, a pinch of salt, the almonds and the orange-flavoured sugar. Knead all these ingredients in the usual way and leave the dough in a warm place for 5 to 6 hours to allow the yeast to ferment.

'Now break the dough and roll it into strips, each the width of a little finger. When there are 5 or 6 strips made, cut them diagonally into pieces each 13 cm. (5 inches) in length. Make these into little rings so that the joins are invisible.

'Having prepared the dough in this way, drop the rings into a large saucepan of boiling water. Stir it gently with a spatula to prevent the rings from sticking and to bring them to the surface. Drain them and drop them into cool water.

'When they are cold, drain them in a large sieve. Now toss them to dry them. Dip each one in a little beaten egg (2 eggs should be used in all) two or three times.

'Leave them to drain for a few minutes.

'Arrange them carefully on three lightly greased baking-sheets and bake them in a slow oven until they are a good colour.

'In the same way, it is possible to make little plaited biscuits or little rolls about as long as a thumb.

'These ring-biscuits may be also flavoured with the rind of lemon, citron or Seville orange, or with aniseed, vanilla or orange-flower water.'

RISOTTO – Dishes with a rice basis. (See RICE.)

RISOLE – Dish made with different kinds of pastry, though usually of puff pastry, filled with various sorts of forcemeat, often made in the shape of a turnover and fried in deep fat.

This dish, which may also be cooked in the oven like small patties, is served as a hot hors-d'œuvre or a small entrée. Rissoles of very small size can be used as garnish for large pieces of meat or poultry.

Rissoles, which used to be called roinsolles, were known in the thirteenth century. In those days they were simply a kind of pancake fried in butter or dripping. Later they came to be filled with chopped meat.

The author of the Cris de Paris (Cries of Paris) called rissoles 'denrées aux dés' (dice food) because in the evenings after supper the workmen, students and other people subject to very strict rules could hazard nothing more than these pastries in their games of chance.

Method. Roll out the pastry, made according to instructions, to a thickness of ½ cm. (¼ inch).

Cut out the number of pieces required with a pastry-cutter. Except for rissoles made in the form of a turnover, it is necessary to cut out two pieces of pastry for each rissole.

Fill these with a piece of forcemeat the size of a walnut, as indicated in the recipe.

Moisten the edges with water. Cover with a second piece of pastry or fold over in the form of a turnover. Press the edges together to seal them. Fry at the last moment, drain, and serve. Garnish with fried parsley.

For different recipes see HORS-D'ŒUVRE, Hot hors-d'œuvre.

RIVESALTES (MUSCAT DE) – Very strong liqueur wine harvested at Rivesaltes, a small town in the Pyrénées-Orientales. This wine is highly flavoured.

ROACH. GARDON – Common name of a freshwater fish of the carp family, something between the carp and the bream. In U.S.A. it is called golden shiner minnow. Its fins are red, its white flesh quite delicate, but it has so many forked bones that it is difficult to eat. Roach is most commonly eaten fried.

Roach

ROAST. RÔT, RÔTI – The French word rôt is the most general term and the most noble, according to M. de Courchamps (author of a cookery book) to describe not only roasted meat but also the course which follows the entrée. The roast can be a piece of meat (though this was always the entrée in the grande cuisine of past days), poultry or game, or, in France, even fried fish or a Lenten fish pâté. Roasts are always served on oval dishes.

The word rôti describes the actual piece of meat, poultry or game, cooked on the spit or in the oven and served hot.

ROASTING. RÔTISSAGE – Method of cooking foodstuffs which must be done according to certain principles. (See CULINARY METHODS.)

ROASTING PAN. PLAQUE À RÔTIR – Kitchen utensil which must not be confused with the dripping pan used for placing under joints roasting on the spit.

The roasting pan is a tinned-copper (or some other fairly tough metal) pan, provided with a grid on which cuts of meats to be roasted in the oven are placed. It is important that the roasting joints should not lie in the fat or the gravy.

In some restaurants, which take pride in their work, roasting pans have special devices which permit the joint intended for roasting to be put on a spit.

ROB – Fruit juice thickened by evaporation to the consistency of honey.

ROBERT (Sauce) – This sauce, an accompaniment to pork chops and seasoned with vinegar, onions and mustard, is said to have been invented by a certain Robert Vinot, who, according to the legend on a print which bears his portrait, was a celebrated sauce-maker at the beginning of the seventeenth century. For the recipe, see SAUCE.

ROBIN. ROUGE-GORGE – Small passerine, sometimes eaten en brochettes (on skewers). Prepared in the same way as larks. The European robin is half the size of the American robin.

ROBLLOT – French name given in certain regions to small mackerel.

ROCHER DE CANCALE – See RESTAURANTS OF BYGONE DAYS.

ROCK PARTRIDGE. BARTAVELLE – A variety of red-legged partridge, but bigger than the latter. It is known as the Greek partridge. The female is smaller than the male and has lighter coloured plumage. This partridge is very common in southern Europe and in the Alps, from which it comes down in the winter. Its flesh is very good.

Nostradamus, a great sixteenth-century gastronome and literary figure (1503–66) wrote that this bird originated in Greece and that it was King René of Anjou who brought it to Provence. The seventeenth-century poet, Cyrano de Bergerac, said that ‘Bartavelles are to partridges as cardinals are to grey friars...’

Grimod de la Reynière considered that ‘the bartavelles deserve such profound respect that people should go down on their knees to eat them!’

All the recipes given for partridge (q.v.) can be applied to rock partridge.

ROCKET (Cress). ROQUETTE – Strong-smelling plant with sharp and piquant flavour. Its leaves are smooth and glabrous, the flowers white or pale yellow and it grows wild in the fields. It is used as seasoning in salads.

ROE – See SOFT ROES.

ROEBUCK. CHEVREUIL – Wild European and Asiatic deer. The young of both sexes is called a fawn until 18 months old, pricket or yearling up to 2 years old, then brocket. One can establish the age of the animal in the male by the number of tines on the antlers, and in the female by the burrs. The meat of roebuck and other deer is also called venison.

The meat of the young roebuck or roedeer is delicate, especially if it has not been marinated; that of the old brockets, which is tougher, does need marinating, but not for long.

The flesh of the roebuck is, like practically all game, rather indigestible because of the poisons that accumulate, due to the excessive muscular activity of the animal when pursued.

Roebuck and hounds; painting by Oudry

Civet of roebuck (venison). CIVET DE CHEVREUIL – The parts of the roebuck used for this stew, which is made in the same way as Civet of hare (see HARE) are the shoulders, the neck, the breast and the upper part of the loin.

As one can seldom obtain the blood of the roebuck, it is replaced for the final liaison of the sauce with hare's blood, or that of rabbit.

Roebuck (venison) chops or cutlets. CÔTELETTES DE CHEVREUIL – These chops or cutlets are taken from the loin. Trim and beat them lightly. Season with salt and pepper and sauté in very hot oil as quickly as possible in order to keep the centre of each cutlet slightly pink.

Arrange them in the form of a crown, alternating with croûtons of bread cut into heart shapes and fried in butter.

Dress them with the sauce indicated by the particular recipe (see below) and garnish accordingly.

The meaty part of the cutlet can be larded with fine lardoons or strips of salt pork inserted in the form of a star. If the chops or cutlets are taken from an old animal they can be marinated beforehand.

Roebuck (venison) chops or cutlets with chestnuts. CÔTELETTES DE CHEVREUIL AUX MARRONS – Cook the chops or cutlets in the same way as for Roebuck (venison) chops or cutlets poivrade (see below). Arrange them in the form of a crown, alternating with croûtons fried in butter. Fill the centre of the dish with braised chestnuts. Pour over a Poivrade sauce (see SAUCE). Fix a paper frill on each cutlet.

Roebuck cutlets with chestnuts

Roebuck (venison) chops or cutlets Conti. CÔTELETTES DE CHEVREUIL CONTI – Prepare the chops or cutlets in the same way as for Roebuck (venison) chops or cutlets poivrade (see below). Arrange them in the form of a crown. Fill the centre of the dish with a  Lentil purée (see PURÉE). Cover the cutlets with Poivrade sauce (see SAUCE).

Roebuck (venison) chops or cutlets à la crème. CÔTELETTES DE CHEVREUIL À LA CRÈME – Season the chops or cutlets with salt and paprika. Sauté them quickly in butter. Drain them. Arrange them in the form of a crown with fried croûtons. Pour over them a cream sauce prepared in the following way: for 6 cutlets pour 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) Madeira into the pan in which the cutlets have been sautéed. Scrape the pan to blend the juices of the meat with the wine, and then boil down. Add 3 dl. ( $\frac{3}{2}$  pint,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cups) thick fresh cream. Boil for a few minutes. Add a little lemon juice, strain through a sieve. Serve with Chestnut purée (see CHESTNUTS).

Roebuck (venison) chops or cutlets with grapes. CÔTELETTES DE CHEVREUIL AUX RAISINS – Sauté the chops or cutlets in very hot oil. Arrange them in the form of a crown, alternating with fried croûtons. Put into the pan in which the cutlets have been cooked some skinned and seeded grapes which have been soaked in a little Cognac beforehand, allowing ten grapes per cutlet. Moisten with Poivrade sauce (see SAUCE), not too strong, or with rich brown stock. Pour this sauce over the cutlets.

Roebuck (venison) chops or cutlets with juniper berries. CÔTELETTES DE CHEVREUIL AU GENIÈVRE – Sauté the chops or cutlets in oil or butter. Arrange them in the form of a crown, alternating them with croûtons fried in butter. Pour over them the juices released in the pan, to which 2 tablespoons of gin have been added. Moisten with 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) fresh cream and 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) Poivrade sauce (see SAUCE), adding a few crushed juniper berries (1 or 2 per cutlet), and some drops of lemon juice. Boil for a few moments; sieve.

Serve with a purée of apples only very slightly sweetened.

Roebuck (venison) chops or cutlets à la minute. CÔTELETTES DE CHEVREUIL À LA MINUTE – Sauté the chops or cutlets quickly in oil or butter. Sprinkle them while they are cooking with, for 6 cutlets, 1 large tablespoon finely chopped onion. Drain the cutlets, arrange them in the form of a crown with fried croûtons. Pour over them the juices from the pan, to which 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) Cognac have been added, together with  $1\frac{1}{2}$  dl. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  pint,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) Poivrade sauce (see SAUCE). Alternatively, use a rich brown stock. Season with a little lemon juice and add, away from the heat, 75 g. (3 oz., 6 tablespoons) butter. Garnish the centre of the dish with sliced mushrooms sautéed in butter.

Roebuck (venison) chops or cutlets poivrade. CÔTELETTES DE CHEVREUIL POIVRADE – Sauté the chops or cutlets in oil or butter. Add a little wine vinegar to the juices in the pan and some Poivrade sauce (see SAUCE). Arrange the cutlets in the form of a crown alternating them with fried croûtons. Attach a paper frill to each cutlet bone.

Roebuck (venison) chops or cutlets à la romaine. CÔTELETTES DE CHEVREUIL À LA ROMAINE – Sauté the chops or cutlets in oil. Arrange them in the form of a crown, alternating with croûtons fried in butter. Cover them with Romaine sauce (see SAUCE) combined with the juices in the pan, which have been de-glazed with a little white wine.

Serve with Chestnut purée (see CHESTNUTS).

Roebuck (venison) chops or cutlets d'Uzès. CÔTELETTES DE CHEVREUIL D'UZÈS – Sauté the chops or cutlets quickly in oil. Arrange them in the form of a crown, alternating with heart-shaped croûtons fried in butter. Fill the centre of the dish with Dauphine potatoes (see POTATOES). Cover the cutlets with a sauce made in the following way: scrape the bottom of the pan in which the cutlets have been cooked and to which 4 tablespoons (5 tablespoons) wine vinegar have been added. Moisten with  $2\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, generous cup) rich brown veal stock and 3 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint,  $1\frac{1}{4}$  cups) cream. Boil down; add butter, away from the heat, and pass through a sieve.

To this sauce add 1 tablespoon orange rind which has been cut into tiny strips, blanched and drained, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) almonds which have been peeled by dipping in hot water and dried in the oven, and 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) gherkins, cut into strips. Add a little orange juice, and season with freshly ground pepper.

Roebuck or venison filets mignons. FILETS MIGNONS DE CHEVREUIL – In principle the term 'filets mignons' denotes the thin tongue of meat which is found under the bone on the animal's saddle. These can also be cut from the big fillets of the saddle.

After being trimmed and lightly beaten, the fillets are larded with thin lardoons or strips of salt pork and sautéed in butter or oil, or grilled, and served with Poivrade sauce (see SAUCE) and a purée of chestnuts.

The little fillets can also be prepared as for Roebuck (venison) chops or cutlets.

Roebuck (venison) hash. HACHIS DE CHEVREUIL – Prepared with cold roebuck or venison (see HASH, Hash of ground game). The hash is moistened with a thick brown game stock.

Haunch of roebuck (venison). CUISSOT, GIGUE DE CHEVREUIL – Trim the haunch, removing the thin skin which covers it. Lard it with narrow strips of larding bacon or thin strips of salt pork. Roast it in the oven or on the spit. (See CULINARY METHODS, Average cooking times for roasts.)

Serve separately a Poivrade sauce or any other sauce appropriate to furred game (see SAUCE), chestnut purée and gooseberry jelly.

Roebuck (venison) noisettes. NOISSETTES DE CHEVREUIL – These little cuts are taken from the loin, but can also be taken from the upper end of the haunch or from the saddle fillets. They should be cut rather thick, in a round or oval shape.

They are cooked in the same way as for Roebuck (venison) chops or cutlets, and are accompanied by all the sauces and garnishes indicated for these.

Roebuck (venison) pie. PÂTE DE CHEVREUIL – Prepared with strips of roebuck or venison and game forcemeat in the same way as Rabbit pie (see PIE).

Saddle of roebuck (venison). SELLE DE CHEVREUIL – The word 'saddle' applies only to that part of the animal which is found between the loin and the haunch. However, one can leave the two loins adhering to the joint, cutting the ribs very short.

Remove the sinewy parts of the meat and lard it with strips of larding bacon or salt pork. Roast it in the oven or on the spit (see CULINARY METHODS, Average cooking times for roasts).

Serve with Poivrade sauce (see SAUCE) or any other appropriate sauce for furred game, with Chestnut purée (see CHESTNUTS) and gooseberry jelly.

Roebuck (venison) saddle à l'allemande. SELLE DE CHEVREUIL À L'ALLEMANDE – Trim and lard the saddle. Marinate for 12 hours in an uncooked marinade (q.v.). Dry the meat and roast it in a rather narrow roasting tin on a foundation of the vegetables from the marinade. (See CULINARY METHODS, Average cooking times for roasts).

When it is cooked set it on a dish and keep warm. Add a little of the liquor from the marinade to the juices and vegetables in the baking tin. Boil down almost completely. Add  $3\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (generous  $\frac{1}{2}$  pint,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cups) cream. Boil down by one-third. Add 1 tablespoon dissolved meat glaze or double consommé. Pass the sauce through a strainer and serve with the joint.

Roebuck (venison) saddle grand veneur. SELLE DE CHEVREUIL GRAND VENEUR – Lard the saddle with strips of larding bacon or salt pork. Roast it in the manner described above and arrange on a serving dish. Garnish with braised chestnuts and Dauphine potatoes (see POTATOES) arranged in clumps at each end of the dish.

Serve with Grand veneur sauce (see SAUCE).

Sliced roebuck (venison) with various sauces. ENTRECÔTES DE CHEVREUIL – Prepare with cold roebuck or venison in the same way as for sliced lamb or beef with various sauces.

Cover the slices of meat with Poivrade sauce, Grand veneur sauce, or Chasseur sauce (see SAUCE). Serve with Chestnut purée (see CHESTNUTS) and gooseberry jelly.

ROGNONNADE – Cut of veal to which the kidney has been left adhering. This piece is roasted or baked.

ROI DES CAILLES (King of quails) – Popular name for the land rail. This bird was so called because it appeared at the same time as the quails and disappeared at the same time as they did. Formerly it was believed that it directed the quails in their flight. For cooking instructions see QUAIL.

ROLL OUT. ABAISSER – To spread out pastry or any other mixture (puff pastry, short pastry, sweet pastry, almond paste, etc.) with the aid of a rolling-pin in one uniform strip of varying thinness. In the case of a biscuit or sponge, we say that it is divided in slices of the same thickness, or *abaisse*s. For the method see DOUGH.

ROLLMOPS – Fillets of herrings prepared in a highly seasoned marinade, generally based on white wine, then rolled around gherkins and pinned with a wooden skewer to hold them. Rollmops are served as hors-d'œuvre.

ROLLOT – See CHEESE.

ROLY-POLY PUDDING – Pudding made of suet pastry spread with jam, rolled in the shape of a sausage, and cooked in water. (See PUDDING, English suet roll pudding.)

ROMAINE or COS LETTUCE – Variety of lettuce with firm leaves, mostly eaten in salad. Legend says that it was Rabelais who imported this variety into France. It is called Cos in England.

ROMALOUR – See CHEESE.

ROMANÉE – A great wine from the commune of Vosne-Romanée. There are three distinct types, the Romanée, the Romanée-Conti and the Romanée-Saint-Vivant. (See BURGUNDY.)

ROMANOV – See GARNISHES.

ROOK. FREUX – A kind of crow, which is sometimes eaten after it has been skinned.

Rook pie. PÂTE DE CORBEAU – Rook pie, in spite of what the sceptics and the incredulous may think, is a dish which, if properly prepared, is not to be despised. It is only prepared with fledglings straight from the nest. 'There are certain rules which it is absolutely necessary to follow to achieve a good result. First of all, the rooks are not plucked, the birds are drawn and only the breast is retained. The legs are tough and the carcase bitter.

'Having washed the breasts, they are left to soak in milk for 6 hours; they are then cut up and the pieces are arranged in a pie dish, and seasoned, sparing neither pepper nor spices. The bottom of the dish should be lined with some slices of beef. Strips of bacon are placed on top of the pieces of rook, and halved hard-boiled eggs are distributed here and there. This pie is then covered with a sheet of pastry and put in the oven for  $1\frac{1}{2}$  hours.

'When the pie is taken out of the oven a little good stock to which a small quantity of half-glaze is added, is poured into the pie.' (Alfred Suzanne, la Cuisine et la pâtisserie anglaise.)

ROOT. RAVE – Name used for a category of vegetable plants, whose subterranean parts are swollen (see TURNIP). In cookery those mostly used are turnip, kohlrabi, beetroot, carrot, celeriac and radish.

ROPINESS. GRAISSE DES VINS – A defection peculiar to white wines. It is encountered especially in the white wines of the Cher, Poitou, Orléans and Champagne districts.

This generally occurs as a result of pressing the grapes as soon as they are gathered. The must enclosed in the vats ferments independently of the skin, pips and stalks, which provide the tannin need to clarify the must.

At the clarification stage, the gelatinous and albuminous elements remain in suspension, which leaves the wines cloudy. At this stage, the remedy is to put tannin in the cask. This not only causes the sediment in the wine to settle, but also separates out the fish glue which has been added as a clarifying agent, and which will not be found in the next clarification.

The proportion of tannin to be used with rosy wine is 15 to 30 g. per hectolitre (100 litres).

ROQUEFORT CHEESE – See CHEESE.

ROQUILLE – French culinary term for orange peel. These skins are candied and used in confectionery.

ROSEMARY. ROMARIN – Perennial evergreen, reaching 5 ft. in height, with narrow hard leaves, green above and greyish below, with a strongly aromatic smell. The leaves, fresh and dried, are used in seasoning.

ROSETTE – Name given to a special sausage of the first quality made in the Lyons district, which is eaten uncooked. (See SAUSAGE.)

ROSSINI – See GARNISHES.

ROSSOLL or ROSOLIO – Liqueur formerly made from the sundew plant.

ROTA – Wine from the north of Spain, much used in blending.

ROTENGLE – Freshwater fish, better known in France as gardon rouge. Its body is a little deeper and less elongated than the common roach. It has a bright red eye and its fins are red and pink. It is cooked like roach (q.v.).

RÔTIE (Toast) – Slice of bread baked or toasted.

Rôties (pieces of toast) are buttered and served with breakfast, tea, etc. The same name is given to canapés spread with forcemeat which are served with game birds, roasts in general and woodcock and snipe in particular, and to small snacks made by putting an egg or some kind of spread on a slice of toasted or fried bread.

RÔTISSERIE – Part of the kitchen specially equipped for preparing roasts. It is also the word given to modern portable appliances designed to roast meat on a spit.

By extension, the word also describes the work done by the chef in this special section in the big catering establishments, a specialist in all the work of the rôtisserie.

The rôtisseur, as he is called, is employed not only in roasting but also in grilling and frying. In the most important establishments the rôtisserie is divided into three parts, each having a specialist in charge: the rôtisseur proper, the grillardin and the friturier.

Certain specialised places, where all kinds of spit-roasted poultry are cooked and sold, are also called rôtisseries.

ROUELLE – Cut of veal. This is a fairly thick slice across the leg.

ROUENNAIS – See CHEESE.

ROUGAIL – A form of seasoning very popular in hot countries, used in various dishes cooked in the Créole style. Being very spicy it stimulates the appetite.

All the rougail recipes which are given below belong to the repertoire of Créole cookery.

Rougail of green apples. ROUGAIL DE POMMES VERTES – Cut 4 peeled green apples in tiny dice putting them into a bowl of salted water.

Drain the apple dice and put them in a napkin, squeezing to extract all the water. Put them in a dish where you will have set a layer of pimentos and ginger, pounded smoothly with a little olive oil.

If the apples are not sharp enough add a squeeze of lemon juice.

Rougail of aubergines (egg plants). ROUGAIL D'AUBERGINES – Boil 2 aubergines in salted water. Pound in a mortar 1 slice of onion, a small piece of ginger and a little pimento seasoned with salt. Put this mixture on a plate and dilute it with lemon juice and good olive oil. Take out the cooked aubergines, split them, scoop out the flesh, having removed the seeds, and add them, little by little, to the prepared sauce, mashing with a fork so that the aubergines are completely reduced to a paste. Turn into an hors-d'œuvre dish.

Rougail of salt cod and tomatoes. ROUGAIL DE MORUE ET DE TOMATES – De-salt a small salt cod by soaking in cool water the evening before it is wanted. Remove all skin and bones. Dry with a cloth and cut in small pieces. Flour and brown lightly in a pan with oil and fat. Push to one side of the pan. Cook 3 or 4 chopped onions over low heat so that they do not colour. Add 4 fresh peeled and deseeded tomatoes, and stew them together gently. Pound some ginger, 1 clove garlic, some thyme, some parsley and 1 small pimento. Incorporate this mixture with the gently simmering cod. Cook for about 40 minutes, then put the pan (still covered) in the oven, and leave it for 20 minutes.

Serve with rice.

Rougail of shrimps or prawns. ROUGAIL DE CREVETTES – Remove the heads and tails from some shrimps or prawns and fry them in fat. Shell them.

Crush in a mortar  $\frac{1}{2}$  onion with a small piece of ginger and pimento. Season with salt.

Add the shrimps, little by little, pounding all the time. When all is reduced to a paste, add 2 small tomatoes that have been cooked in the oven, and the juice of a lemon. Mix well. Turn the mixture into an hors-d'œuvre dish.

This rougail is served alone or with fish curry. Often, when the rougail is made, it is reheated with olive oil in a frying pan.

Rougail of raw tomatoes. ROUGAIL DE TOMATES CRUES – Pound a little onion with a piece of ginger the size of a walnut. Add peeled and seeded tomatoes and mash all together. Incorporate some pimento and a squeeze of lemon juice. Serve in an hors-d'œuvre dish.

This seasoning accompanies Créole dishes served with rice.

ROUGE DE RIVIÈRE – The French common name for the Shoveller duck. This bird, whose flesh is succulent, is nearly always roasted. (See DUCK, Wild duck.)

ROUGERET – See CHEESE.

ROULADE, ROLL – Rolled piece of veal or pork.

A thin slice of meat spread with some kind of forcemeat and rolled into a sausage is also known as roulade.

This term is also applied to various preparations, mostly of pork or veal, made like galantines (q.v.). Thus roulade de tête de porc describes a pig's head, boned, stuffed with a forcemeat of chopped-up pig's tongue, streaky bacon and other ingredients, rolled like 'boar's head' and cooked in a jelly stock; roulade de veau describes a slice of noix de veau well fattened, spread with a forcemeat of some kind, mixed with meat cut in small dice, rolled into a galantine and braised or poached in white court-bouillon (q.v.).

ROULÉ – Rolled-out sheet of biscuit (cake) mixture, spread with thick jam, then rolled. The top is sprinkled with praline and toasted almonds.

ROULETTE (Pastry wheel) – A small toothed wheel, in wood or metal, mounted free on a handle, and used to cut pastry.

Roulette

ROUND (U.S.) or SILVERSIDE (G.B.). GÎTE À LA NOIX – Part of the leg of beef. This cut includes in particular the tendons (part tendon, part membrane) and part of the femoral biceps, the gemellus muscle, the pyramidal and the crural square.

This cut is used chiefly in hot-pots, and it may also be braised.

In Paris and other large French cities, it is sold larded, rolled and tied.

ROUSSELET. (Russet pear) – Summer pear, so named because its skin is russet colour. The flesh is sweet and well flavoured.

This pear is mostly preserved by drying.

ROUSSETTE – Name given to a kind of fritter in certain regions of France, which in other places is known as merveille or oreillette. It is made in this way:

Make a rather thick dough of 500 g. (18 oz.,  $4\frac{1}{2}$  cups) sifted flour, 3 eggs, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) milk, 1 tablespoon orange-blossom water, 1 small glass brandy and a pinch of salt.

Gather up the dough into a ball, wrap it in a cloth and leave it to rest in a cool place for 3 hours.

Roll out into a thin sheet, and cut out with a plain round pastry cutter. Drop into hot deep fat. Drain the rousettes when they are well browned and crisp. Sprinkle with sugar and arrange in a mound on a napkin.

ROUSSILLON – See LANGUEDOC AND ROUSSILLON.

ROUSSIR – To turn in smoking hot butter, or other fat, a piece of meat or poultry, in order to colour it.

The word roussir cannot be translated in its proper sense, because the meats so fried must be golden rather than russet.

ROUX – Mixture of butter or other fatty substance and flour, cooked together for varying periods of time depending on its final use.

The roux is the thickening element in sauces.

There are three kinds of roux: white roux, blond roux and brown roux.

Brown roux is used to thicken rich brown sauces like Espagnole and Demi-glace (see SAUCE). It is made by cooking flour in clarified butter in the oven, gently and for a long time, stirring frequently. The clarified fat from a marmite (q.v.) may also be used, but in each case the proportions are equal amounts by tablespoons of flour and butter or fat.

This roux should be of a good light brown colour. It can be kept for quite a long time.

Blond roux is made only with butter. The proportions of butter and flour are the same as for brown roux. It is cooked more rapidly and it is only made at the moment it is needed. Its colour should be a pale gold.

White roux is used for Béchamel and Velouté sauce (see SAUCE) and special thick soups. It is made by cooking flour and clarified butter for 5 minutes over the heat and stirring constantly with a wooden spoon.

ROYALE – Moulded custard, variously flavoured, which is used as garnish in clear soup. (See GARNISHES.)

ROYALE (À LA) – Name given to different preparations, for example, to consommé garnished with custard shapes, and to various dishes, particularly of poultry, poached in very little liquid, coated with Velouté sauce (see SAUCE) boiled down with cream and finished with truffle purée and various garnishes.

The same name is applied to sweets, hot and cold.

ROYAN – A kind of large sardine.

RUM. RHUM – The name rum or tafia is reserved for the spirit obtained from the alcoholic fermentation and distillation of either the juice of sugar cane, or the syrup (molasses) obtained from the processing of cane sugar.

Rum, like all spirits, is colourless when it emerges from the distilling apparatus. After a lengthy period in oak casks, it acquires a pale amber hue. The care (or lack of it) that goes into this ageing process makes or mars the fineness of rum. Some 'old rums' are valued just as highly as the finest spirits. The colour of ordinary rum, on the other hand, is achieved by the addition of artificial caramel colouring.

White rum is used in the preparation of tropical drinks: punch, Daiquiri, Planter's rum, etc. Full-bodied, amber-coloured rums are best suited for grogs and desserts (on account of their powerful aroma). This is why, until recently, rum was used mostly for desserts and pâtisserie. A few years ago, the Comité national de gastronomie, (which organises an annual culinary competition called the 'Poêle d'or') dedicated the event to recipes based on rum. This encouraged the more frequent use of rum in the flavouring of fish and meat dishes, etc. Some of the recipes are given below.

Fillets of burbot à la créole. FILETS DE LOTTE CRÉOLE – Brown some chopped onion and carrots, and sprinkle with flour. Place in a pan with a little lukewarm water and bring to the boil. Add quartered tomatoes, thyme, bay leaf and garlic. Season with salt. Simmer the sauce, then sieve it. Add rum and an equal amount of fresh cream. Place the fillets in a buttered serving dish and pour the sauce over. Bake for 15 minutes.

Rabbit with prunes and rum. LAPIN AUX PRUNEAUX AU RHUM – Steep 250 g. (9 oz.,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cups) prunes for 2 hours in rum blended with a little lukewarm water. Cut up the rabbit. Brown the pieces in oil with diced bacon and onions. Add the liquid in which the prunes have been steeped, a bouquet garni, salt and pepper, and simmer gently for 45 minutes. Add the drained prunes and simmer for 20 minutes.

Young guinea fowl à l'antillaise. PINTADEAUX À L'ANTILLAISE – Clean, singe and cut-up 2 guinea fowl into 8 pieces. Brown these quickly in a little butter, stirring all the time. When they are golden, add chopped onions, a clove of garlic, and a little flour. Moisten with 2 glasses of dry wine. Add 2 tomatoes cut in quarters. Cover and simmer gently for 20 minutes. Meanwhile, steep 4 slices of pineapple and 6 sliced bananas in white rum. Fry 6 diced, sweet potatoes in butter. Lightly brown the sliced pineapple and the bananas in a frying pan. Serve the pieces of guinea fowl on the pineapple slices. Garnish with the bananas and potatoes. Skim the fat from the cooking liquid and boil down. Coat the guinea fowl with it. (Recipe of 'Maman' Olivier, rue Médéric, Paris.)

Stuffed chicken. POULET FARCI – Make a mixture of the chicken's liver, sausage meat, breadcrumbs soaked in milk, chopped onion, salt, pepper, spices, chopped parsley and fresh cream. Stuff the chicken with this mixture. Roast in the oven. When cooked, sprinkle with rum and flamber. Serve with sweetcorn croquettes.

RUMP. CULOTTE – The fleshy part of the haunch of beef, used in hot-pots. This cut can also be braised and made into ragoûts. (See BEEF.)

Top of rump. POINTE DE CULOTTE – Piece of beef taken from the rump. (See BEEF.)

RUSCUS. PRAGON – Plant similar to asparagus. The best known variety is butcher's broom or knee-holly. The young shoots are eatable and are used like hop shoots.

RUSH. JONC – Most types of reed belong to the rush family. The scented Indian rush, rattan, is used as a spice in the East. The root of the scented Indian rush is used in infusion as a carminative and appetite-stimulant. The chopped root blended with alcohol produces a tincture that may also be used for stomach upsets.

RUSKS. BISCOTTES – Slices of special bread, cut from the loaf and re-baked in the oven.

Diet rusks. BISCOTTES DE RÉGIME – There are various types of rusks in the shops, of different degrees of hardness and friability, sweet rusks and salty rusks, etc. There are also special types of rusks with salt content completely or partially extracted, as well as rusks enriched with gluten, containing additional casein (legumen), but with reduced starch content. Others are very rich in starch but their content in gluten and nitrogenous elements is reduced to a minimum.

Paris rusks. BISCOTTES PARISIENNES – Pound 500 g. (18 oz., generous  $3\frac{1}{2}$  cups) bitter almonds in a mortar, moistening with 2 egg whites and 3 tablespoons (scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) kirsch or other liqueur.

When the almonds have been reduced to a smooth paste, put it into a bowl and add to it 10 egg yolks, one at a time, stirring with a wooden spoon. Add 500 g. (18 oz.,  $2\frac{1}{4}$  cups) castor sugar, a pinch of salt, and 8 egg whites whisked to a stiff froth. Sprinkle with 200 g. (7 oz., generous cup) potato flour. Pipe this mixture through a forcing-bag onto buttered baking sheets and bake in the oven.

RUSSIA – See INTERNATIONAL COOKERY.

RUSSULA. RUSSULE – Fungus with white flesh and a pleasant flavour known in various regions of France as ruscule, bordet vert, vert bonnet, palomet, berdanel, blavet and verdette.

They are found in summer and autumn on the edges of woods, in fallow land and near birch trees. They are prepared like mushrooms (see MUSHROOM).

RUTABAGA, SWEET TURNIP – Turnip with yellowish flesh, edible but seldom used in France as foodstuff.

RYE. SEIGLE – The most important European cereal after wheat, originating in the region between the Austrian Alps and the Caspian Sea. Very hardy, very resistant to cold and earlier than wheat, rye grows in the worst soils.

Rye flour, rather greyish in colour, consists mainly of gluten-casein. It has little agglutinative quality and darkens quickly. It can nevertheless be made into bread, which is brown in colour, has an agreeable taste and keeps fresh for a long time, but is more difficult to digest than white bread. Rye flour is used to make spiced bread and cakes.

SABLAGE – In times past this word, which means 'sanding', was used to describe a table decoration made with sands of different colours. The sand was spread on the tablecloth so as to form different designs – flowers, landscapes, coats of arms, monograms, etc.

This type of decoration has today been completely abandoned.

SABLÉ – Biscuit or cake, originating in Normandy. Make a circle of 500 g. (18 oz.,  $4\frac{1}{2}$  cups) sifted flour on a large board. Place in the middle 400 g. (14 oz.,  $1\frac{3}{4}$  cups) butter, 6 egg yolks, 150 g. (5 oz.,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) sugar, 1 vanilla pod (or a few drops of vanilla essence) and a pinch of salt.

Mix the butter, sugar, egg yolks, vanilla and salt, and mix with the flour. Finish the operation as quickly as possible.

Blend the ingredients by breaking up the paste with the palm of the hand. Form it once more into a ball and leave it for 1 hour. Roll out the mixture 1 cm. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  inch) thick. Cut into rounds about 12 cm. (5 inches) in diameter. Divide these into 4 wedges. Put on a buttered baking sheet and cook in a low oven for about 18 to 20 minutes.

SACCHARINE – Commercial name for a crystalline chemical substance, soluble in water, with a very sweet taste, having also a faint taste of bitter almonds and leaving a dryness in the throat. The sensation of sweetness that it provides is 250 to 300 times stronger than that of sugar, 5 centigrams being equivalent to a normal-sized sugar cube. But it has no chemical analogy with sugar and has none of its nutritional value.

It is chiefly used to give an illusion of sweetness for diabetics, to whom sugar is forbidden.

SACCHAROMETER. PÈSE-SIROP – Hydrometer calibrated to give the specific gravity or density of sugar solutions.

SACRISTAIN – Small puff pastry made in the shape of a paper twist.

SADDLE. SELLE, RABLE – In terms of butchery the French word selle describes the part of the hindquarters extending from the last ribs to the leg on both sides (mutton, lamb, roebuck).

The word rable describes the fleshy part extending from the base of the shoulder to the tail of small domestic or wild animals (rabbits, hares) formed by the sacro-lumbar, long dorsal and transverse spinal muscles. In English cookery, the hare is the only small animal to which the word 'saddle' is applied.

SAFFRON. SAFRAN – The dried stamens of the saffron or cultivated crocus, originating in the East and introduced into Spain by the Arabs, and cultivated in France, particularly in the Gâtinais, since the sixteenth century. Saffron contains a volatile oil and a colouring substance. It is the indispensable condiment for bouillabaisse.

A good saffron should be a dark orange colour all over without white streaks; it is sometime falsified with safflower (bastard saffron) which is redder in colour.

It is said that a dish is safrané (saffroned) when it contains saffron or when it is saffron coloured.

Saffron of the Indies – See CURCUMA.

SAGE. SAUGE – Name of various Labiatae of which there are some 500 species with a distinct perfume and with an aromatic, slightly bitter taste, among which are three French varieties, great sage (grande sauge), of ramose inflorescence, with thick, oblong, hairy leaves, ashy green in colour; the small Provençal sage (petite sauge de Provence), with smaller, whiter leaves and a more pronounced scent, which is the most highly esteemed species; and the Catalogne sage, which is even smaller. All these species are used in making flavoured vinegar.

Sage is used in cookery to flavour marinades and force-meats, and is threaded into meat that is to be roasted. Small birds are wrapped in it, particularly thrushes. It is also added during the cooking of green beans, peas and broad beans to flavour them. Some sweet fritters are made with it. In certain parts of Northern Europe the young shoots are eaten as a salad.

In England there are two indigenous sages, Salvia verbenaca which is very common and Salvia pratensis, which is rare. Our culinary sage, Salvia officinalis, is not a native plant. The culinary sage, the common garden sage and the white sage, Salvia officinalis alba, are grown in the U.S.A., but not in sufficient quantity, and tons of sage are imported every year.

SAGO. SAGOU – Floury extract of the marrow of various kinds of palm tree.

This yellowish flour, tending to red or brown, is used for cooking and baking as a liaison element, and often also to prepare soups and dishes that are recommended for special diets.

Sago consommé – See SOUPS AND BROTHS, Consommé with sago.

Sago pudding – See PUDDING.

Sago with red wine (Russian cookery). SAGOU AU VIN ROUGE – Blanch 250 g. (9 oz., 1½ cups) sago for 2 minutes, drain and cool.

Cook in a saucepan with 1 litre (1¾ pints, generous quart) red Bordeaux wine, 100 g. (4 oz., ½ cup) sugar, a small pinch of salt, the peel of ½ lemon and a good pinch of powdered cinnamon. Simmer over low heat for 25 minutes, discard the lemon rind and serve. The dish can also be made with white wine, and served cold.

SAGUET (LA MÈRE) – See RESTAURANTS OF BYGONE DAYS.

SAIGNEUX – French butchery term for the neck of veal or mutton.

SAINT-AGATHON – See CHEESE.

SAINTE-MAURE – See CHEESE.

SAINTE-MENEHOULD – District of the Marne, renowned for its excellent charcuterie, and particularly for its Pigs' feet.

SAINT-ÉMILION – Small commune of the Gironde in the Libourne district, celebrated for its wines, which, after the Bordelais, most nearly approach the wines of Burgundy. (See BORDEAUX, Wines of Bordeaux.)

SAINT-ESTÈPHE – Commune in the Gironde (the Médoc region) that has given its name to highly reputed appellation contrôlée red wines. (See MÉDOC, BORDEAUX.)

SAINT-FLORENTIN – See CHEESE.

ST GEORGE'S AGARIC. MOUSSERON – Small mushroom which grows in the fields in the autumn and spring. It is cooked in the same way as the cultivated mushroom, and mainly used to flavour stews.

In south-western France, this mushroom is dried, and has to be steeped in water before use. (See MUSHROOMS.)

SAINT-GERMAIN – Thick soup made with fresh peas. (See SOUPS AND BROTHS, Purée of fresh pea soup.)

The term also applies to a garnish whose principal ingredient is fresh peas, prepared in a variety of ways (see GARNISHES). The word is used for a preparation of grilled fillets of fish served with béarnaise sauce. (See SOLE, Fillets of sole Saint-Germain.)

A purée of dried peas is erroneously called Saint-Germain.

Saint-Honoré

SAINT-HONORÉ – Cake, a speciality of Parisian pastry-cooks, so called in memory of Saint Honoré, the patron saint of pastry-cooks and bakers.

The Saint-Honoré is made with two different kinds of pastry: Fine lining paste for the base and Chou paste for the little iced choux, which are arranged in a crown on the base. (See DOUGH.)

To make the Saint-Honoré. With the rolled-out lining paste make a circle 18 to 20 cm. (7 to 8 inches) in diameter. Moisten the edges with a brush, and pipe a thick ring of chou paste round the damp edge. Bake in the oven. On a separate baking sheet make two dozen little round choux the size of walnuts. Brush with egg and bake in a moderately hot oven for about 15 minutes.

To cook the sugar and icing for the choux. Put into a copper pan 250 g. (9 oz., generous cup) sugar, some glucose as big as a walnut and 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) water. Cook rapidly over a good heat to small crack degree (see SUGAR). Take the pan from the heat and dip the choux into the sugar, icing the tops only. Dip the bottoms into the sugar very lightly, and set them on to the ring of chou paste.

Cream filling for the Saint-Honoré. Heat ¾ litre (1½ pints, 1¼ pints) French pastry cream (see CREAMS). Add to it while warm 6 leaves gelatine or 25 g. (1 oz.; 4 tablespoons) powdered gelatine previously soaked in cold water and softened.

Beat 6 egg whites stiffly, sprinkling them lightly with sugar when firm. Add them rapidly to the pastry cream, and fill the inside of the Saint-Honoré with the resulting cream, using a forcing bag and a large, fluted nozzle.

SAINT-JACQUES – See SCALLOPS.

ST JOHN'S WORT (Hypericum). MILLEPERTUIS – Plant with an aromatic and resinous fragrance, bitter in taste, whose flowering tops are used in infusions. In former times, liqueurs were made from this plant.

SAINT-JULIEN – This area in the Gironde (the Médoc region) has given its name to highly reputed appellation contrôlée red wines.

SAINT-MARCELLIN – See CHEESE.

SAINT-MICHEL (Pâtisserie) – Cook a fine Genoese pastry mixture (see GENOESE) in a cake tin. When cool, cut it into 3 equal-sized layers. Spread each with a layer of butter which has been beaten with coffee essence. Put the cake layers one on top of the other. Cover the top and sides with vanilla-flavoured Butter cream (see CREAMS) and smooth it over. Sprinkle the cake with chopped roasted almonds, and decorate with coffee-flavoured butter cream, using a forcing bag.

SAKÉ – Alcoholic drink used in Japan, obtained by fermenting rice. It is usually served warm before a meal.

SALAD. SALADE – Dishes made up of herbs, plants, vegetables, eggs, meat and fish, seasoned with oil, vinegar, salt and pepper, with or without other ingredients.

Certain salads, blanched by being cultivated in cellars or by being earthed up to keep out light and air (like Belgian endives, the chicory known as barbe du capucin, white dandelion leaves, etc.) are almost entirely without mineral salts, chlorophyll or vitamins. Their contents are restricted to cellulose and water, which act only as bulk.

Salads are of two kinds, plain or mixed.

PLAIN SALADS. SALADES SIMPLES – These can be subdivided into green salads, served raw, and salads of cooked vegetables, consisting of a single kind of vegetable.

These salads, whether raw or cooked, are served with the roast, hot or cold.

Dressings for plain salads. ASSAISONNEMENTS – Dressings for Green salad (Robert Carrier)

plain salads are made with oil, mustard, wine vinegar, salt and pepper. These are generally known as vinaigrette. They may also be seasoned in the ways shown below:

Anchovy – For celery, endives or cooked vegetables.

Take 2 de-salted anchovy fillets and rub through a sieve. Put them in the salad dish and add oil, vinegar and pepper.

Cream – For cabbage and romaine (cos) lettuces.

Mix 4 tablespoons (5 tablespoons) fresh cream, not too thick, with 1 teaspoon wine vinegar (or lemon juice). Add salt and pepper.

Indian – For cooked vegetables.

Cook 1 tablespoon finely chopped onion in 1 tablespoon oil. Sprinkle with 1 teaspoon curry powder. Add oil, lemon juice, salt, pepper and a little crushed garlic.

Gasconne – For curly and other endives.

As for Marseillaise with the addition of crusts rubbed with garlic.

Bacon fat – For 'wild' chicory, red cabbage, corn salad, dandelion.

Render down 100 g. (4 oz., 6 slices) diced bacon. Pour the fat on the salad, which has been set in a hot salad dish and seasoned with salt and pepper. Add 1 tablespoon vinegar heated in the frying pan.

Marseillaise – For early endive, 'wild' chicory and other endives.

Crush a clove of garlic in the salad bowl; add oil, vinegar, salt and pepper.

Mustard cream – For raw and cooked celeriac cut in julienne, and endives.

Mix 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) mustard with 4 tablespoons (5 tablespoons) fresh cream; add a few drops lemon juice, and salt and pepper.

Rémoulade – For all salads, raw or cooked.

Rub through a sieve, or crush, 3 hard-boiled egg yolks. Put in the salad bowl and blend, as for mayonnaise, with oil, vinegar, salt and pepper.

Paprika – For celery or for cooked vegetables.

Bake an onion in the oven and chop it. Put it in the salad bowl and add oil, vinegar, salt and paprika.

Tomato juice – For cooked baby marrows (zucchini), potatoes, Jerusalem artichokes, etc.

Rub 2 raw tomatoes through a fine sieve. Boil down the juice by half and add oil, vinegar, salt and pepper.

Note on the seasoning of salads. Olive oil is the best for all salads. It can nevertheless be replaced, according to taste, by a good nut or vegetable oil.

Wine vinegar may also be replaced by lemon juice, verjuice, or cider vinegar.

Lettuce salad with hard-boiled eggs

Complementary garnishes for plain salads – For green salads or salads in season, the most usual garnishes are aromatic herbs, such as chervil, chives, tarragon, parsley and savory. These herbs are used coarsely chopped, or the leaves are picked from the stems and used whole.

The following herbs and vegetables are also used to garnish plain salads, raw or cooked:

Beetroot, baked in the oven, peeled, cut into rounds, in dice or in a julienne; capers, whole or chopped; crusts of bread rubbed with garlic and seasoned with vinaigrette; gherkins, whole, in dice, rounds, julienne or chopped; borage flowers, nasturtiums or violets; hard-boiled eggs cut in halves or quarters, or chopped; peeled tomatoes cut in thin slices or quarters; truffles, raw or cooked, cut in thin slices in julienne or large dice.

Raw salads. SALADES SIMPLES (À SERVIR CRUES) –

	Dressing:
'Wild' chicory ( Barbe du capucin )	Mustard cream
Chopped celery	Vinaigrette
Celery in sticks	Rémoulade
Celeriac	Mustard cream
Curly or other endive	Vinaigrette (with garlic-rubbed crust), Rémoulade , Bacon fat.
Kohl-rabi, coarsely grated	Vinaigrette or Mayonnaise
Red cabbage, cut in julienne	Rémoulade , Bacon fat, or Vinaigrette
Green cabbage (the tender parts, cut in julienne )	Mustard cream
Cucumber cut in rounds and left to stand in salt	Vinaigrette or Cream
Cress	Vinaigrette
Watercress	Vinaigrette
Chicory	Rémoulade
Fennel	Anchovy
Lettuces of all kinds	Vinaigrette
Romaine or cos lettuce	Cream
Corn salad	Bacon fat
Turnip tops (greens)	Vinaigrette
Samphire (rare in U.S.A.)	Vinaigrette
Salad burnet	Vinaigrette
Dandelion	Bacon fat
Leeks (the green parts)	Vinaigrette
Purslane	Vinaigrette
Radish (the tender leaves and the radishes chopped)	Vinaigrette
Rampion	Vinaigrette
Rocket cress	Bacon fat
Salsify (the stems or tender leaves)	Cream
Soya bean shoots	Mustard cream

Plain salads from cooked vegetables. SALADES SIMPLES (À SERVIR CUITES) –

	Dressing:
Artichokes (bottoms)	Vinaigrette
Aubergines (rounds blanched in salt water)	Mustard cream
Artichokes (white and green)	Vinaigrette or Mayonnaise
Beetroot (in rounds), served always as hors-d'œuvre	Mustard cream
Celeriac (cut in julienne )	Mustard cream
Sprouting broccoli	Vinaigrette
Brussels sprouts	Vinaigrette
Sea-kale	Vinaigrette
Rutabaga or Swede turnip	Mustard cream
Kohl-rabi	Mustard cream

SALAD

Red cabbage (cut in julienne )	...	Vinaigrette
Green cabbage (as hors d'œuvre)	...	Vinaigrette
Courgette (zucchini)	.....	Vinaigrette
Chinese artichoke	.....	Rémoulade
Spinach leaves (very lightly blanched)	.....	Vinaigrette
Broad beans	.....	Vinaigrette (with savory)
Haricot beans (shell beans)	.....	Vinaigrette (with chopped onion)
French beans	.....	Vinaigrette
Kidney and other beans	.....	Vinaigrette
Lettuce hearts (blanched and drained)	.....	Vinaigrette
Lentils	.....	Vinaigrette
Sweet potatoes	.....	Vinaigrette
Leeks (white parts cooked in water)	.....	Mayonnaise
'Mange-tout' peas	.....	Vinaigrette
Potatoes (cooked in water, cut up when hot and soaked in white wine)	.....	Vinaigrette or Mayonnaise
Salsify	.....	Vinaigrette or Mayonnaise
Parsnips	.....	Vinaigrette or Mayonnaise

Dried vegetables as well as fresh farinaceous vegetables gain by being seasoned while still hot, even if the salad is to be served cold. Such salads are usually garnished with parsley, onion or chopped chives.

MIXED (COMBINATION) SALADS. SALADES COMPOSÉES – Mixed salads are sub-divided into several categories. The first, based on mixed cooked vegetables, is prepared in the same way as for a plain salad. Others contain a variety of ingredients, not only mixed vegetables, but also truffles, mushrooms, sliced fish, shellfish, poultry, tongue, ham, etc.

Some of these salads, by reason of their elaborate preparation, come into the realm of grande cuisine, and constitute cold entrées rather than salads in the ordinary sense. In this category are various mayonnaises, chicken salads en bellevue, etc.

Mixed salads with only a base of vegetables are served like plain salads with the roast, hot or cold. Salads with multiple ingredients, particularly those demanding a rather elaborate arrangement, are served by themselves or as an accompaniment to a special cold dish, such as chaud-froids, ham mousse, chicken mousse, etc.

Dressings for mixed salads. ASSAISONNEMENT – All salads with a vegetable basis are dressed in the same way as plain salads. They are garnished with the additional ingredients given previously, with the exception of those with too strongly marked a character, such as grated garlic or garlic-rubbed crusts.

These salads are served in glass bowls. The various vegetables of which they are composed are arranged in separate groups, the colours arranged to contrast.

If the salads are dressed in advance in the kitchen and then mixed together, macédoine fashion, they are garnished, after having been arranged in a dome in the salad dish, with little heaps and bunches of vegetables, decoratively arranged.

When the dressing used is vinaigrette, the vegetables composing the salad can be seasoned separately and arranged in 'bouquets'.

Mixed salads with a multiple basis are often dressed with mayonnaise. According to the type of salad, and according to the way in which it is to be arranged and served, the Salad vegetables

Potato salad mayonnaise is used in its normal creamy form, or very thick and stiff.

Some of these salads are moulded in aspic, and become cold entrées rather than salads.

Albignac salad. SALADE D'ALBIGNAC – The white meat of chicken finely sliced, raw white truffles in thin slices, black truffles cut in julienne, shelled crayfish, celeriac cut in a fine julienne, lettuce hearts, hard-boiled eggs, chervil and tarragon.

Put the celeriac dressed with mayonnaise in the middle of the salad bowl, arranging it in a dome. Surround alternately with the chicken meat, seasoned with oil, lemon juice, salt and pepper, the crayfish seasoned with tomato ketchup, and the white truffles sprinkled with olive oil and seasoned with salt and paprika. Insert lettuce hearts and hard-boiled eggs between the groups of garnish.

Sprinkle the julienne of black truffles over the celeriac. Sprinkle with oil and lemon juice just before serving.

Ali-Baba salad. SALADE ALI-BAB – Sweet potatoes, cooked, peeled and cut in slices; baby marrows (zucchini) cut in slices, cooked in salted water and drained; tomatoes, peeled, drained, seeded and chopped; quarters of hard-boiled eggs, nasturtium flowers, shrimps in mayonnaise with chopped parsley, chervil and tarragon.

Arrange the shrimps in a dome in mayonnaise. Surround with garnish as above. Just before serving sprinkle the garnish with a few tablespoons Vinaigrette sauce (see SAUCE).

Allemande salad. SALADE À L'ALLEMANDE – Dice 300 g. (11 oz., 2 cups) boiled potatoes and 100 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) rather tart eating apples. Season with 3 tablespoons (scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) mayonnaise. Arrange in a dome in a salad dish, and garnish with slices of cooked beetroot and onions.

Put trimmed salt herring fillets and gherkins, cut in strips, on top of the potatoes. Sprinkle with chopped parsley. Just before serving pour a little oil and vinegar over the garnish.

American salad I. SALADE AMÉRICAINNE – Celeriac cut in julienne, seasoned with Vinaigrette sauce (see SAUCE) arranged in a dome. Surround with sliced potatoes and tomatoes. Garnish with quartered hard-boiled eggs. Put thin slices of onions on top of the celeriac and sprinkle with chopped chervil and tarragon.

American salad II. SALADE AMÉRICAINNE – Thin cucumber slices, soaked in salt, rinsed, and seasoned with Vinaigrette sauce (see SAUCE). Surround with lettuce hearts, slices of tomato and quarters of hard-boiled eggs. Sprinkle with a few tablespoons vinaigrette sauce.

This salad must be served very cold, even iced.

Andalusian salad. SALADE ANDALOUSE – Cook rice in salted water, drain and season with oil, vinegar, salt and paprika. Add chopped onion, parsley, and a little grated garlic. Surround with alternate heaps of sweet pimentos, peeled, seasoned and cut in julienne, and quarters of tomatoes. Sprinkle with chopped chervil.

Argenteuil salad. SALADE ARGENTEUIL – Season diced potatoes with mayonnaise and chopped chervil. Put white asparagus tips, seasoned with oil and lemon, on top. Garnish with a border of shredded lettuce and quarters of hard-boiled eggs.

Arlésienne salad. SALADE ARLÉSIENNE – Sliced potatoes; sliced artichoke bottoms seasoned with oil, vinegar, salt and pepper, chopped chervil and tarragon, arranged in a salad bowl. Garnish with endives cooked in a flour-and-water court-bouillon, cut in small quarters, tomatoes cut in quarters and large stoned olives. Place fillets of anchovies arranged in a criss-cross pattern on top.

Bagration salad. SALADE BAGRATION – Artichoke bottoms cut in thick strips, celeriac in short strips, and chunks of macaroni. Season with mayonnaise flavoured with tomato, and surrounded with chopped hard-boiled egg, truffle and scarlet tongue. Sprinkle with chopped parsley.

Beef salad à la Parisienne. SALADE DE BOEUF À LA PARISIENNE – See BEEF, Cold boiled beef à la parisienne.

Beetroot salad. SALADE DE BETTERAVES – Cut cooked beetroot into julienne or thin round slices. Dress with Vinaigrette sauce (see SAUCE). Arrange in an hors-d'œuvre dish, and sprinkle with chopped parsley. Garnish with small raw onion rings, if liked.

Beetroot salad à la crème. SALADE DE BETTERAVES À LA CRÈME – Cut the beetroot as above. Dress with Mustard cream sauce (see SAUCE).

Beetroot salad à la polonaise. SALADE DE BETTERAVES À LA POLONAISE – Cut the beetroot in julienne and season with mustard to which has been added a few tablespoons of cream and lemon juice, salt and pepper. Sprinkle with grated horseradish and chopped hard-boiled eggs.

Bressane salad. SALADE BRESSANE – This preparation constitutes a cold entrée rather than a salad in the true sense.

Garnish the bottom of a salad bowl with shredded lettuce seasoned with Vinaigrette sauce (see SAUCE) and pressed down to line the bowl. Add thin slices of chicken, season with oil, lemon juice, salt, pepper and chopped chervil. Cover with mayonnaise mixed with tomato juice and seasoned with American salad (Claire)

SALAD

paprika. Garnish with sliced truffles and surround with peeled green and red peppers, sliced in julienne and seasoned with vinaigrette sauce, with asparagus tips and quartered hard-boiled eggs.

Brimont salad. SALADE BRIMONT – Mix diced potatoes and artichoke bottoms with mayonnaise seasoned with curry powder.

Surround with crayfish tails and stoned olives seasoned with oil and vinegar, separating them by quartered hard-boiled eggs. Garnish with sliced truffles.

Calves' brain salad. (Carème's recipe). SALADE DE CERVILLE DE VEAU – After the brains have been blanched in salted water to which vinegar and tarragon have been added, Carème says 'They should be braised, masked with thin slices of lemon and covered with pieces of bacon fat, some stock and seasoning.

'When cold, the brains are cut in half and arranged in the following way (these look more like the texture of a mayonnaise rather than a salad).

'Arrange them in a crown on an entrée dish, the bottom of which will have been lined with shredded lettuce seasoned as a salad. Garnish the brains with more lettuce, then make an elegant border of hard-boiled eggs and garnish with lettuce hearts and fillets of anchovies.

'Before serving mask the brains with a Ravigote sauce (see SAUCE).'

Cancaise salad. SALADE CANCAISE – Fill lettuce leaves with 1 tablespoon each diced potatoes mixed with mayonnaise.

Put on each lettuce leaf 3 oysters poached in their own liquor, drained, de-bearded and seasoned with oil, lemon juice and pepper, and topped with a slice of truffle. Arrange the lettuce leaves in the form of a flower on a dish.

This dish can be served as a cold hors-d'œuvre.

Celeriac salad with cress. SALADE DE CÉLERI-RAVE À LA CRESSONNIÈRE – Cut the celeriac in julienne, blanch in salted water, drain and season with Vinaigrette or Mayonnaise sauce (see SAUCE). Arrange in a salad bowl alternately with bunches of cress.

Demi-deuil salad. SALADE DEMI-DEUIL – Made up of equal parts of potatoes and truffles cut in julienne and seasoned with mustard and cream. Garnish with slices of truffles and slices of potato set alternately in a border.

Doria salad. SALADE DORIA – Celeriac cut in julienne and seasoned with mayonnaise, arranged in a dome. Cover with thin slices of white truffle. Garnish with separate heaps of asparagus tips and beetroot cut in a julienne. Sprinkle with hard-boiled egg yolk and chopped parsley.

Dubarry salad. SALADE DUBARRY – Arrange in a shallow salad dish flowerets of cauliflower cooked in salted water and well drained. Garnish with radishes and shredded watercress. Season with a sauce made with oil, lemon juice, salt, pepper and chopped chives.

Favourite salad. SALADE FAVORITE – Arrange in a salad dish, in separate heaps, asparagus tips, shelled crayfish and sliced white truffles. Season with oil, lemon juice, salt and pepper. Sprinkle with chopped celery and herbs.

Flemish salad. SALADE FLAMANDE – Season together chicory and potatoes, cut in thick strips, with oil, vinegar, salt and pepper. Add a few sliced, cooked onions. Arrange in a dome and garnish with fillets of salt herring. Sprinkle with chopped parsley and chervil.

Francillon or Japanese salad. SALADE FRANCILLON, DITE JAPONAISE – Mix an equal part of potatoes marinated in Chablis and mussels cooked as for Mussels à la marinière (see MUSSEL), with celery. Arrange in the shape of a calotte de savant ('wise man's skull cap'). Garnish with sliced truffles.

This salad is usually served under the name of Japanese salad.

Salad Dubarry (Claire)

Fruit salad. SALADE DE FRUITS – Fruit salads come into the category of sweet dishes rather than that of salads. They are seasoned with sugar and a liqueur. (See ORANGE, Orange salad.)

Certain fruits made into a salad, but without liqueur, are served as an accompaniment to game, goose and duck.

Imperia salad. SALADE IMPÉRIA – Choose white lettuce leaves, regular in shape. Fill each with a mixture of asparagus tips and truffles. Arrange flower fashion in shallow glass bowls.

Italian salad. SALADE ITALIENNE – Made of equal parts of the following ingredients: carrots, turnips and potatoes, cut in dice or shaped with a small vegetable cutter, diced asparagus tips, peas. Mix with mayonnaise. Garnish with fillets of anchovies, tomatoes, stoned olives and capers. Surround with quartered hard-boiled eggs. Sprinkle with chopped chervil.

This salad can be set in aspic.

Japanese salad. SALADE JAPONAISE – Francillon salad is often known under this name. In Japan this salad is made with chrysanthemum flowers.

There is also a salad known as 'Japanese' which consists of pineapple, oranges and tomatoes cut in pieces, seasoned with lemon juice, arranged in a salad bowl and sprinkled with soured cream. Garnish with lettuce hearts.

Lobster salad. SALADE DE HOMARD – Line the bottom of a salad bowl with a layer of shredded lettuce, seasoned with oil and vinegar and arranged in a dome. On top of this set the flesh of the lobster claws, shelled and cut into large dice, seasoned with oil and vinegar. Add the rest of the lobster meat, sliced and seasoned with vinaigrette. Sprinkle with chopped chervil and tarragon. Garnish with quartered hard-boiled eggs and lettuce hearts.

Spiny lobster salad. SALADE DE LANGOUSTE – Like Lobster salad, but made with the flesh of spiny lobster.

Maharajah salad. SALADE MAHARADJAH – Season rice cooked in salted water with oil, vinegar, curry and salt. Mix with crab flesh cut in dice. Surround with diced celeriac, blanched and seasoned, diced courgettes, blanched and seasoned, and quartered tomatoes. Sprinkle with chopped egg yolk and chives.

Mikado salad. SALADE MIKADO – Mix diced potatoes with shrimps. Bind together with mayonnaise flavoured with soya sauce.

Garnish the top of the salad with small chrysanthemum petals, blanched, drained and seasoned with oil, lemon juice, salt and pepper. Surround with a border of sweet pimentos, peeled and cut in julienne, and diced tomatoes. Sprinkle with chopped chervil.

Nicoise salad. SALADE NIÇOISE – Mix equal parts diced potatoes and French beans. Season with oil, vinegar, salt and pepper. Mix with anchovy fillets, olives and capers. Garnish with quartered tomatoes. Sprinkle with chopped chervil and tarragon.

Oriental salad. SALADE ORIENTALE – Season rice cooked in salted water and well drained, with oil, vinegar, salt, paprika and chopped onion. Surround with peeled, diced and seasoned sweet peppers, quartered tomatoes and black olives. Sprinkle with chopped chervil.

Parisian salad. SALADE PARISIENNE – Vegetable salad with the addition of sliced spiny lobster or crayfish and truffles, seasoned with very thick mayonnaise, arranged in a domed mould (like Russian salad, see below) coated with jelly and lined with thin slices of spiny lobster or crayfish and truffles.

This salad can also be served in a dish, all the ingredients mixed, seasoned with mayonnaise and truffles, and garnished with quartered hard-boiled eggs and lettuce hearts.

Pernollet salad. SALADE PERNOLLET – Mix shelled crayfish and diced truffles with mayonnaise.

Fill large shell-shaped lettuce leaves with this salad. Put on each leaf a few green asparagus tips seasoned with oil and lemon juice. Arrange the leaves flower fashion on a round dish.

This dish is mostly served as an hors-d'œuvre.

Sweet pimento salad à la créole. SALADE DE PIMENTS DOUX À LA CRÉOLE – Arrange in separate small mounds in a salad dish, seeded and peeled sweet pimentos, well balanced in salted water and drained, and rice cooked in salted water and drained. Put on each mound of rice slices of raw tomato and on the pimentos 1 teaspoon chopped chives. Season with oil, vinegar, salt and paprika.

Port-Royal salad (Claire)

Port-Royal salad. SALADE PORT-ROYAL – Arrange on a shallow glass salad dish a mixture of potatoes, sliced eating apples and diced French beans, all seasoned with mayonnaise. Coat the whole salad with more mayonnaise. Surround with quarters of lettuce and quartered hard-boiled eggs. Garnish with French beans.

Raphael salad

Rachel salad. SALADE RACHEL – Equal parts of celery, artichoke bottoms, diced or julienne potatoes, mixed with mayonnaise. Garnish with green asparagus tips.

Raphael salad. SALADE RAPHAEL – Garnish the bottom of a salad dish that has rather high sides with shredded lettuce mixed with paprika-seasoned mayonnaise. Add thinly sliced cucumber, previously sprinkled with salt and left to stand, white asparagus tips cooked in water and well drained, peeled and seeded tomatoes divided into quarters, small lettuce hearts and unpeeled radishes cut in rounds. Season with olive oil, lemon juice, salt, pepper and chopped chervil.

Reine Pédauque salad. SALADE REINE PÉDAUQUE – Arrange quarters of lettuce hearts in a crown. Coat these with a sauce made with thick fresh cream, oil, mustard, lemon juice, salt and paprika. Fill the middle of the dish with shredded lettuce seasoned with oil and vinegar. Put stoned cherries on top. On each lettuce heart put a piece of peeled orange.

Rossini salad. SALADE ROSSINI – From a letter of Rossini: 'What is going to interest you much more than my opera is the discovery I have just made of a new salad, for which I hasten to send you the recipe.'

'Take Provence oil, French vinegar, a little lemon juice, pepper and salt. Whisk and mix all together. Then throw in a few truffles, which you have taken care to cut in tiny pieces. The truffles give to this seasoning a kind of nimbus to plunge the gourmand into an ecstasy.'

Russian salad. SALADE RUSSE – Add to a mixed vegetable salad (seasoned with mayonnaise) pickled tongue, sausage, cooked mushrooms, lobster or crawfish meat and truffles, cut in dice or julienne.

Garnish with fillets of anchovies, truffles, scarlet tongue, capers, gherkins, etc.

In classical cookery, Russian salad, seasoned with very thick mayonnaise, is put into a domed mould lined with jelly and decorated. After having been well chilled on ice the salad is turned out on to a plate.

German sauerkraut salad. SALADE DE CHOUROUTE À L'ALLEMANDE – Sauerkraut cooked in consommé or water, piled in a dome in a salad dish. Garnish with hard-boiled eggs and rounds of beetroot. Season with Vinaigrette sauce (see SAUCE).

Shellfish salad. SALADE DE CRUSTACÉS – Made with the flesh of lobster or crawfish, crab, shrimps, etc.

Slice the tail of the shellfish as well as the claws if it be lobster. Cut the rest of the flesh in big dice. Season the whole with oil, vinegar, salt, pepper, chopped parsley and chervil.

On a base of seasoned and shredded lettuce set first the diced fish, then the sliced. Garnish with fillets of anchovies, capers, olives, quartered hard-boiled egg and lettuce hearts. Sprinkle with chopped chervil and parsley.

SALAD BURNET

Shrimp salad. SALADE DE CREVETTES – See SHRIMP.

Shrimp salad à la dieppoise. SALADE DE CREVETTES À LA DIEPPOISE – Made like Cancalaise salad, replacing the oysters by shrimps and mussels seasoned with oil, vinegar and pepper.

This dish can be served as a cold hors-d'œuvre.

Truffle salad. SALADE DE TRUFFES – See Rossini salad.

Vegetable salad. SALADE DE LÉGUMES – In general principle this is made up of all kinds of fresh vegetables.

Season with oil, vinegar, salt and pepper. Arrange in a salad dish, garnish with a floweret of cauliflower set on the summit, and sprinkle with chopped chervil and parsley.

In a restaurant the different ingredients of this salad are set in the salad dish in separate mounds. The seasoning, and thus the mixing, is done before the customer.

Watercress salad. SALADE CRESSONNIÈRE – Half watercress and half potato salad, sprinkled with chopped hard-boiled egg and chopped parsley.

SALAD BURNET. PIMPRENELLE – Hardy perennial herb with slightly villous leaves which smell like cucumbers when crushed.

Salad burnet is available from June to November and in the following spring, and is mainly used as a seasoning. The tender fresh leaves of this plant can also be used in salads like watercress.

SALAMANDER. SALAMANDRE – Oven, generally gas-heated, into which dishes are put to glaze or brown the surface very rapidly.

The word also means breadcrumbs fried in butter, which are sprinkled over certain preparations.

Salambô cakes (Maison Desmeuzes. Phot. Larousse)

SALAMBÔ – Small cake made with Chou paste (see DOUGH), filled with French pastry cream (see CREAMS) flavoured with kirsch. The top is iced.

SALAMI – Product of Italian charcuterie eaten like mortadella (q.v.).

Salamis are commercial products sold in food shops. The most renowned is that of Bologna.

In Germany and various northern countries of Europe the name is given to a variety of similar preparations.

SALANGANE – Sea swallow of the Far East whose nests, constructed of seaweed fixed with the birds' saliva, are highly esteemed by the gourmets of China. They are sold in Europe as Swallows' nests (see NESTS; SOUPS AND BROTHS, Consommé with birds' nests).

SALÉ – Salted or pickled foodstuffs, synonymous with salaïson.

Petit salé – Name for a piece of charcuterie made with the first bone of the flank end of belly of pork on which a little meat has been allowed to remain. It is left to salt for 12 hours in a light brine and cooked with other pieces of boiled charcuterie.

The petit salé is served hot or cold as an hors-d'œuvre.

The term is also used for pieces of collar or neck, lightly pickled in brine and used in potées or served by themselves, after having been poached in an aromatic stock.

SALEP – Edible substance, which comes from Persia and Asia Minor, in the form of small tubers 1 to 2 cm ( $\frac{1}{2}$  to  $\frac{3}{4}$  inch) in diameter, strung together in bunches. Translucent, yellowish grey in colour, horny in texture, and gelatinous in flavour, the salep comes from the tubers of various species of orchis, taken up after the stalks of the plant have faded and dried in the sun. They contain a floury substance and gelatine, and constitute an easily digested foodstuff highly esteemed in the East.

Indigenous orchis, treated in the same way, provide a salep comparable in every way with that of the East. Prepared as a jelly or soup.

Salep jelly. GELÉE AU SALEP – Mix, without allowing to curdle, 1 teaspoon salep in 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{3}$  pint 1 scant cup) water. Cook over low heat, keeping at boiling point for 4 or 5 minutes. Add a little cinnamon and 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) tamarind or pineapple syrup and allow to get cold.

Salep soup. POTAGE AU SALEP – Mix, without allowing to curdle, 1 teaspoon salep in 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{3}$  pint., 1 scant cup) unsalted vegetable stock. Add 1 sprig of tarragon and 1 teaspoon soya sauce.

SALMIGONDIS – Ragoût of several kinds of meat reheated. Reheated poultry ragoût is called capilotade.

SALMIS – The origin of salmis goes back as far as the fourteenth century. The canard à la sauce dodine of which Taillevent speaks in his Viandier was a kind of salmis. Some writers, however, say that this dish was invented at the beginning of the eighteenth century.

Duck à la rouennaise, one of the finest dishes of Normandy cooking, is a kind of salmis made with red wine. In the same way it is also possible to class as salmis, caneton en chemise, canard sauvage (wild duck) or bécasse (woodcock) au Chambertin, and a number of other preparations of birds which, before being finished in a special sauce, are two-thirds roasted.

Cook the bird in the oven or on the spit, for two-thirds of the necessary time. Divide into joints, remove the skin and trim the pieces. Arrange them in a buttered sauté dish with mushrooms and sliced truffles (salmis being a dish that is often finished off at the table before the guests, it is important to choose a decorative pan made of silver plate or some other good-looking metal). Sprinkle with a few tablespoons Demiglace sauce (see SAUCE) and cook over hot water for 30 minutes.

Heat the broken-up carcasses and trimmings of the bird in butter in a casserole. Add the cooking juices diluted with white wine, and a few tablespoons game-flavoured Espagnole sauce (see SAUCE, Salmis sauce). Boil for a few moments and strain, pressing all the time, first through a strainer and then through a cloth. Boil it down, add butter, and pour it over the pieces of bird and the garnish. Heat, still without boiling, 5 minutes more, and serve, either on a big croûton of bread spread with à gratin forcemeat (see FORCEMEATS) and put for a short time in the oven, or in a dish. In the latter case surround with heart-shaped croûtons fried in butter and spread with à gratin forcemeat.

This method of preparation is applicable not only to game birds (woodcock, wild duck, pheasant, partridge, etc.) but also to some poultry (duck, pigeon, guinea-fowl, etc.).

SALMON. SAUMON – Migratory fish living in the sea but spawning in fresh water. At the time of spawning it makes its way up certain rivers.

Salmon take no nourishment so long as they are in fresh water, so their flesh is at its driest and least good when they go down the rivers again to the sea.

Born in the rivers, the young salmon begins to develop there, not going far from its birthplace during the first few weeks. Then, following the flow of the river, it goes down to the depths of the sea, where its nourishment consists mainly of the post-larvae of herrings and other fish.

The salmon can live without going to the sea, as has been observed in Norway and Sweden, where it inhabits certain freshwater lakes; during the winter and in spring it goes up the river to spawn. It returns to the lakes later to build itself up again, just as the salmon of other rivers return to the sea.

The same thing happens in certain Canadian lakes where salmon hibernate. But these develop much less rapidly than the salmon which travel to the sea, and the quality of their flesh is inferior to that of their fellows who have followed the natural law of their existence.

Salmon which have attained their maximum development measure from 1¼ to 1½ m (4 to 5 ft.) in length and their weight ranges from 5 to 7 kg. (11 to 15 lb.). They achieve this size at the age of about 6 years. In Scotland, salmon have been fished weighing up to 35 kg. (75 lb.). In the U.S.A. the Pacific coast salmon varies in weight from 2¾ to 27 kg. (6 to 60 lb.).

The flesh of salmon is preserved by drying, smoking, canning or freezing. The fish is cooked whole or cut in chunks or cutlets (steaks).

In France, salmon is often poached, whole or in pieces, in a flavoured court-bouillon (see below), and served hot or cold, with, in the case of the hot fish, one or other of the sauces normally served with fish cooked in court-bouillon, such as: Anchovy, Butter, Caper, Shrimp, Lobster, Mousseline, Nantua, Ravigote, Vénitienne, etc.

Cold salmon is accompanied by cold sauces such as: Mayonnaise, Tartare, Verte, Rémoulade, Vincent, etc. (see SAUCE).

Salmon may also be braised whole (stuffed or otherwise), and cooked very slowly in fish fumet (q.v.) made with red or white wine. Prepared in this way various garnishes, plain or mixed, accompany the salmon.

Whole or cut into smaller pieces, it may also be cooked on the spit.

Côtelettes of salmon are cooked in many ways: in court- bouillon and served with the same sauces as those prescribed for salmon cooked whole or in sections; grilled, or sautéed in butter, or braised. These have the same garnishes as for large pieces or whole salmon.

Salmon may also be prepared in fillets, which are cooked whole, braised or otherwise, or cut in slices which are sautéed in butter and accompanied by a variety of sauces and garnishes.

The flesh of the salmon, which is pinkish and becomes bright pink when cooked, is extremely delicate. It is fatty and often a little indigestible.

Court-bouillon for salmon. COURT-BOUILLON POUR CUIRE LE SAUMON – Put into a saucepan 2½ litres (4½ pints, 5½ pints) water, 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) vinegar or lemon juice, 300 g. (11 oz., 2¾ cups) carrots and 250 g. (9 oz., 2¼ cups) onions, both finely chopped, 50 g. (2 oz., 1½ cups) parsley stalks, a bayleaf, a sprig of thyme and 25 g. (1 oz., 1 tablespoon) rock salt. Boil very slowly for 1 hour. Ten minutes before taking it off the heat add 10g. (1½ teaspoons) peppercorns. Strain through a fine sieve and cool before using.

To cook a whole salmon in a court-bouillon. Place the salmon on the grid of the fish-kettle. Cover with cold court-bouillon. Bring the liquid up to boiling point. Skim, turn the heat very low, and let it poach without boiling.

To cook salmon côtelettes in court-bouillon. The côtelettes are cooked in court-bouillon prepared as above, but they are put into the liquid when it is already boiling. Cook over low heat without boiling.

To cook large cuts of salmon in court-bouillon. Proceed as for whole salmon.

Salmon, whether whole, in large cuts or cutlets, may equally well be cooked in a court-bouillon prepared with half white wine and half water. This is flavoured with the same vegetables as are indicated for ordinary court-bouillon, but they should first be cooked in butter before putting them in the liquor. This latter court-bouillon is used chiefly when the salmon is to be served cold and will be cooled in its cooking liquor.

HOT SALMON. SAUMON CHAUD –

Salmon attereaux. ATTEREAUX DE SAUMON – Marinate pieces of salmon in oil, lemon juice, chopped parsley, salt and pepper. Thread them on skewers with sliced mushrooms. Coat in Villeroi sauce (see SAUCE), and when this is cold, dip in egg and breadcrumbs. Fry in deep fat and garnish with fried parsley and quarters of lemon.

Boiled salmon with various sauces. DARNE DE SAUMON BOUILLIE – Cook a chunk of salmon in court-bouillon. Drain it and garnish with fresh parsley and boiled potatoes. Serve with one or other of the sauces that accompany fish: Anchovy,

Salmon

SALMON

Butter, Caper, Cardinal, Shrimp, Curry, Diplomat, Hollandaise, Lobster, Laguipière, Mousseline, Mustard, Nantua, Noisette, Ravigote, Riche, Vénitienne, White wine (see SAUCE).

Boiled salmon à l'anglaise. SAUMON BOUILLI À L'ANGLAISE – Cook the salmon in salted water without herbs or condiments. Drain, and serve with Lobster sauce or Parsley sauce (see SAUCE) and cucumber salad.

Braised salmon. SAUMON BRAISÉ – Whole braised salmon may be prepared with or without stuffing. It is usually garnished with Pike forcemeat (see FORCEMEATS) to which truffles or a shellfish butter may be added.

The salmon is set on the well-buttered grid of the fish-kettle. The bottom of the pan is lined with chopped carrots and onions, lightly tossed in butter. Fish fumet made with white or red wine is poured in to come half-way up the salmon. A bouquet garni and seasoning are added and the salmon is poached in the usual way (see CULINARY METHODS, Poaching).

Once cooked, the salmon is drained, skinned, and glazed in the oven. It is set on a low dish, surrounded with the prescribed garnish, and coated with a sauce prepared with its cooking liquor.

All the ways of preparing slices and chunks of salmon given elsewhere are applicable to whole, braised salmon.

Salmon Chambord. DARNE DE SAUMON CHAMBORD – Cut a thick slice from the salmon. Braise it very slowly in fumet made with red or white wine.

Drain the salmon and glaze it in a slow oven for a few minutes. Set on a serving dish and surround it with Chambord garnish (see GARNISHES).

Coat with Genevoise sauce (see SAUCE) made with the braising juices.

Cutlets of salmon. CÔTELETTES DE SAUMON – Cutlets of salmon describe the following:

1. Salmon cutlets or slices which have been halved down the middle and trimmed into the shape of cutlets. These are cooked in butter, and sprinkled with a little of their cooking butter or accompanied by any of a variety of sauces and garnishes.

2. Croquette made with a croquette mixture (see HORS-D'ŒUVRE, Hot hors-d'œuvre cutlets) fashioned into the shape of cutlets, coated in egg and breadcrumbs and cooked in butter.

3. Light dish served as hot hors-d'œuvre or small entrée, in which a salmon quenelle mixture is put into cutlet-shaped moulds and poached.

Cutlets of salmon à l'américaine. CÔTELETTES DE SAUMON À L'AMÉRICAIN – Half slices of salmon trimmed into cutlet shape, seasoned with salt and pepper and floured. Cook in half butter and half oil.

Drain the pieces, set them on a dish, and put on top of each a slice of lobster prepared à l'américaine (see LOBSTER). Garnish the middle of the dish with a salpicon of diced lobster (made with the rest of the lobster flesh). Coat with American sauce (see SAUCE).

Cutlets of salmon braised with red wine. CÔTELETTES DE SAUMON BRAISÉES AU VIN ROUGE, DITE À LA BOURGUIGNONNE – Cook the côtelettes in a fish fumet made with red wine. Drain them and set on a serving dish or on heart-shaped croûtons of bread fried in butter. Garnish with little cooked mushrooms and little glazed onions.

Boil down the cooking liquor and thicken it with Kneaded butter (see BUTTER). Add more butter and strain. Pour over the fish.

Instead of mixing butter and flour into this sauce it may be thickened by adding 2 or 3 tablespoons Espagnole Sauce II (see SAUCE).

Cut raw salmon into slices across the width of the body; the tail piece is cut lengthwise

Cutting cooked salmon (Larousse)

First make a full length incision

Fold back the skin on both sides of the incision

Divide the flesh into portions and remove with a fork

Cutlets of salmon braised with white wine. CÔTELETTES DE SAUMON BRAISÉES AU VIN BLANC – Cook the côtelettes very slowly in fish fumet made with white wine.

Drain and arrange them on a dish in the shape of a crown. Decorate with the required garnish. Coat with White wine sauce (see SAUCE) to which has been added (before straining) some of the cooking liquid, well boiled down.

Thus prepared, the côtelettes may be accompanied by one or other of the garnishes usually served with braised fish and coated with a sauce which will blend with the garnish.

Cutlets of salmon à la florentine. CÔTELETTES DE SAUMON À LA FLORENTINE – The côtelettes are cooked very slowly in concentrated fish fumet. Drain and arrange them in a fireproof dish on a layer of spinach which has been cooked, drained, dried, roughly chopped, simmered in butter, and seasoned with salt and pepper. Coat with Mornay sauce (see SAUCE).

Sprinkle with grated cheese and a little melted butter, and brown well.

Cutlets of salmon Mornay. CÔTELETTES DE SAUMON MORNAY – Prepare in the same way as Cutlets of salmon à la florentine, but leave out the layer of spinach.

Cutlets of salmon with mushrooms à la crème. CÔTELETTES DE SAUMON AUX CHAMPIGNONS À LA CRÈME – Season the côtelettes, flour them and cook in butter. When they are half-cooked put 2 or 3 mushrooms for each côtelette into the pan. Finish cooking together.

Drain the pieces and arrange them on a dish or on heart-shaped croûtons of bread fried in butter. Set the mushrooms on top of the côtelettes. Coat with the cooking juices diluted with Madeira, with fresh cream and butter added, and 1 or 2 tablespoons fish Velouté sauce (see SAUCE) for thickening, the whole boiled down and strained.

Cutlets of salmon with mushrooms and Madeira. CÔTELETTES DE SAUMON AUX CHAMPIGNONS AU MADÈRE – Cook the fish and mushrooms as above. Coat with a sauce made by diluting the cooking juices with Madeira and adding a few tablespoons Espagnole sauce II (see SAUCE), boiled down, extra butter added, and the sauce strained.

Cutlets of salmon Pojarski. CÔTELETTES DE SAUMON POJARSKI – Mash 300 g. (11 oz.) salmon flesh, adding 75 g. (3 oz., 1½ cups) breadcrumbs which have been soaked in milk and pressed as dry as possible, and 75 g. (3 oz., 6 tablespoons) fresh butter.

Season with salt, pepper and a pinch of grated nutmeg. Divide this mixture into the shape of cutlets.

Cook in clarified butter, until they are browned on both sides. To serve, sprinkle with the cooking butter.

Salmon cutlets Pojarski are usually accompanied by sautéed potatoes or a green vegetable tossed in butter, and any of the sauces designed for fish.

Cutlets of salmon with truffles. CÔTELETTES DE SAUMON AUX TRUFFES – Sauté the cutlets in butter. When they are almost cooked put into the pan thick slices of truffles seasoned with salt and pepper. Finish cooking, with the pan covered, over slow heat.

Arrange the cutlets on a dish and set the truffle slices on top. Sprinkle with the cooking juices diluted with Madeira to which have been added 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) Demi-glace sauce (see SAUCE) based on concentrated fish stock.

Cutlets of salmon with truffles and cream. CÔTELETTES DE SAUMON AUX TRUFFES À LA CRÈME – As above, but diluting the cooking juices with Madeira and fresh cream.

Cutlets of salmon variously garnished. CÔTELETTES DE SAUMON HACHÉES, PANÉES – Prepare the cutlets as for Cutlets of salmon Pojarski, but coat them with egg and breadcrumbs.

Cook in clarified butter. Set in the form of a crown on a serving dish, fill the middle with the prescribed accompaniments, and pour round the sauce. Sprinkle the cutlets with Noisette butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters) and put paper frills on the ends.

Coulubiach of salmon. COULIBIACH DE SAUMON – 1 kg. (2¼ lb.) Brioche dough II (see DOUGH) made without sugar and kept rather firm so that it can be easily rolled out.

Sauté 750 g. (1½ lb.) salmon, cut in small slices, quickly in butter. Season with salt and pepper. Allow to cool.

Cook in light consommé or salted water, for 3½ hours, 75 g. (3 oz.) sturgeon notochord (the spinal cord of the sturgeon) which has been previously soaked in cold water for 5 hours. Drain and chop it roughly.

Prepare a kasha or pudding of semolina in the following way: mix 200 g. (7 oz., generous cup) large grain wheat semolina with 1 beaten egg. Spread in a baking tin and dry out in a slow oven. Put the semolina through a coarse sieve. Cook it in consommé, drain, and allow it to cool. Chop 3 hard-boiled eggs.

Cook 75 g. (3 oz., ¾ cup) chopped onion, 100 g. (4 oz., 2 cups) cultivated chopped and pressed mushrooms. Remove onion and mushrooms, and toss the chopped eggs in the cooking butter.

To make and cook coulubiach. Roll out the brioche dough into a rectangle 30 to 35 cm. (12 to 14 inches) long and 20 cm (8 inches) wide. In the middle set the various ingredients of the filling, arranging them in layers one on top of the other – cooked semolina, slices of salmon, sturgeon notochord, hard-boiled eggs and mushrooms mixture, all these ingredients being quite cold. Finish with a layer of cooked semolina.

Close up the paste by folding over the edges from each side. The edges should be lightly damped with water before pressing together. Put the coulubiach on a baking tin, turning it over so that the sealed side is on the bottom. Put it in a warm place for 30 minutes for the dough to rise.

Brush the surface with melted butter, sprinkle with breadcrumbs. Make an opening in the top to let the steam escape.

Cook in a moderately hot oven for 45 minutes to 1 hour, according to the size of the coulubiach.

When taking it from the oven pour into it, through the hole in the top, a few tablespoons melted butter.

Coulubiach is served without the accompaniment of a sauce.

Small coulubiachs of salmon. PETITS COULIBIACHS DE SAUMON – Small coulubiachs, which are served as hors-d'œuvre or light entrées, are made by filling with the same ingredients as above pieces of Ordinary brioche dough (see DOUGH) cut out with a fluted-edged pastry-cutter about 12 cm. (4½ inches) in diameter.

Creamed salmon au gratin. BORDURE DE SAUMON CRÈME GRATIN – Made with left-over salmon like Creamed cod au gratin (see COD).

Croquettes and croustis of salmon. CROQUETTES, CROMESQUIS DE SAUMON – These are both made with a salpicon of cooked salmon mixed with diced truffles and mushrooms bound with Allemand or Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE, CROQUETTES, CROMESQUI).

Salmon Daumont. DARNE DE SAUMON DAUMONT – Braise a chunk of salmon in a fish fumet (q.v.) made with white wine.

Drain and set it on a serving dish. Surround with Daumont garnish (see GARNISHES). Coat with its strained cooking juices and serve with Nantua sauce (see SAUCE).

Escalopes of salmon. ESCALOPES DE SAUMON – These are cut from fillets of salmon, and should weigh about 100 g. (4 oz.) each.

They are lightly flattened and trimmed if necessary so that they are oval in shape. Cook in butter, or poach in concentrated fish fumet.

All the ways described for preparing côtelettes and slices of salmon are applicable to escalopes.

Salmon filets. FILETS DE SAUMON – Thin slices of salmon cut from raw filets. They are prepared like salmon cutlets, steaks and escalopes, and are fried, either coated in egg and breadcrumbs or dipped in batter.

Orly of filets of salmon with tomato sauce (Plumerey's recipe). ORLY DE FILETS DE SAUMON, SAUCE TOMATE – 'Trim 14 filets (see above) of salmon; put them in a bowl with salt, mignonette, a little grated nutmeg, 2 chopped shallots, parsley on its stalks, the juice of 2 lemons,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup olive oil and a little thyme and bay leaf. Take care to move the filets about in this seasoning and drain off the water they will exude. An hour before serving, drain them and remove all the ingredients that have served to give them taste, including the mignonette. Put a handful of flour on top and shake them about to dry them well. Reshape them with the blade of a knife and dip them into beaten egg to coat them and ensure that they fry a good colour. At the moment of serving arrange them in the form of a crown and serve with a light Tomato sauce (see SAUCE).'

Salmon fritters. FRITOT DE SAUMON – Soak sliced or diced salmon for 30 minutes in oil, lemon juice, chopped parsley, salt and pepper. Dip in light batter and fry in deep fat.

Drain and dry the pieces on a cloth. Season with dry fine salt. Garnish with fried parsley and lemon. Serve with Tomato sauce (see SAUCE).

Kedgerie of salmon. CADGERY DE SAUMON – Made with cooked, flaked salmon, Rice pilaf (see PILAF), Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE) flavoured with curry, and diced hard-boiled eggs, in the same way as Turbot kedgerie (see TURBOT).

Mousse of salmon. MOUSSE ET MOUSSELINE DE SAUMON – See MOUSSES, MOUSSELINES.

Hot salmon pie à la française. PÂTE CHAUD DE SAUMON À LA FRANÇAISE – 'Cut a thick slice of salmon, remove the bone and skin, and stud it with truffles and de-salted anchovies. Wash the flesh of a medium-sized pike and use it to make a Fish forcemeat (see FORCEMEATS). Wash the scraps remaining from the 2 fish and cook them in butter with chopped carrots and onions, parsley on its stems, thyme, bay leaf, 1 clove garlic, 2 cloves and a small pinch of salt. Pour over  $\frac{1}{2}$  bottle Chablis.

'Surround the salmon with light bards of bacon fat and tie it; put it like this into the saucepan. Strain the fish stock at the end of 45 minutes, during which it will have simmered gently. Pour it over the salmon and give it 20 to 30 minutes longer. Drain it and allow to cool. Strain the fish stock, remove all grease from it and boil it down, so that it can be used to make a Financière sauce (see SAUCE).

'Line a mould with pastry suitable for a hot entrée. Spread the bottom and sides with the prepared pike forcemeat, to which add 2 chopped raw truffles. Slightly trim the salmon, put it into the pie and cover with pastry. Bake in the oven for 1 hour. Take off the pastry lid and the forcemeat which are masking the top of the salmon, and carefully remove all grease. Garnish the top with a ragoût of soft roes, truffles and mushrooms, and coat with the prepared financière sauce.

'If it is desired to serve the pie cold, prepare in the same way, but do not take off pastry lid. The fish stock should be more concentrated, with  $\frac{1}{2}$  glass Madeira added to it, poured into the pie through the opening left in the pastry lid. Do not serve this pâte until 24 hours after it has been cooked.' (Plumerey's recipe, slightly modified.)

Salmon pilaf. PILAF DE SAUMON – Prepare with pieces of salmon sautéed in butter in the same way as Pilaf of mutton (see PILAF).

Garnish with mushrooms or truffles sautéed in butter, and surround with a border of Tomato sauce (see SAUCE), tomatoes cooked till soft in butter, or any sauce for fish.

It may also be garnished with shelled shrimps or crayfish. In this case the pilaf is surrounded with a border of White wine sauce or Butter sauce (see SAUCE) finished off with a prepared butter of the shellfish used.

Salmon à la princesse. DARNE DE SAUMON PRINCESSE – Cook a chunk of salmon very slowly in fish fumet. Drain and garnish with green asparagus tips in butter. Coat with a sauce prepared with the cooking liquor with fish Velouté sauce (see SAUCE) which has been enriched with cream and butter and strained. Put slices of truffles heated in butter on top of the salmon. Make a border of light fish glaze round the fish.

Salmon quenelles. QUENELLES DE SAUMON – Salmon quenelles are prepared either with ordinary Quenelle forcemeat or Mousseline forcemeat (see FORCEMEATS). They may be large or small. The latter are shaped with a tablespoon or poached in special moulds.

Small salmon quenelles are used as an element in garnishes. Large salmon quenelles are served as a small entrée and are themselves accompanied by various garnishes and coated with a sauce to blend with the particular garnish. They may have some kind of salpicon added to them.

Salmon quenelles, various sauces and garnishes. QUENELLES DE SAUMON – Poach the quenelles. Set them on a dish or place each one on an oval croûton of bread fried in butter.

Garnish the prescribed garnish: mushrooms, shrimps, crayfish tails, lobster, spiny lobster in a salpicon or vegetables in butter. Coat the quenelles with a sauce that will blend with the garnish.

Salmon risotto. RISOTTO DE SAUMON – Prepare like Salmon pilaf, replacing the pilaf rice by risotto.

Roast salmon. SAUMON RÔTI – Roasted whole or in large cuts. Whole salmon are most often stuffed. Season and cover with thin bards of bacon fat, holding these in place with a few pieces of string. Fix on the spit with the aid of skewers.

Cook the salmon under a hot heat. Baste often during the cooking, allowing 30 to 35 minutes per kg. (15 to 18 minutes per lb).

Before taking the salmon off the spit, remove the bards and allow it to colour. Remove from the spit. Serve with the cooking juices diluted with white wine and lemon juice.

Alternatively the salmon may be roasted in a moderately hot oven.

Salmon in scallop shells. COQUILLES DE SAUMON – Pipe a thin border of thickened potato purée round the edge of scallop shells with the aid of a forcing bag. Put into the bottom of each shell 1 tablespoon of Mornay sauce (see SAUCE), and the fish divided into small pieces, with the skin and bones carefully removed, on top.

Garnish, and coat with more sauce. Sprinkle with Parmesan and a little melted butter. Brush the potato border with egg.

Place the scallops in a baking tin containing a little warm water and brown in a very hot oven. Garnish with fresh parsley.

Instead of potato purée, chopped boiled potatoes may be used for the border.

Salmon in scallop shells à la florentine. COQUILLES DE SAUMON À LA FLORENTINE – Put into the bottom of scallop shells 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) spinach leaves simmered in butter, and pieces of salmon on top. Coat with Mornay sauce (see SAUCE) and cover with grated Parmesan. Sprinkle with melted butter. Brown in the oven or under the grill.

Salmon in scallop shells à la Mornay. COQUILLES DE SAUMON À LA MORNAY – Arrange pieces of salmon in scallop shells. Coat with Mornay sauce (see SAUCE) and cover with grated Parmesan. Sprinkle with melted butter. Brown in the oven or under the grill.

Salmon in scallop shells à la provençale. COQUILLES DE SAUMON À LA PROVENÇALE – Arrange pieces of salmon, truffles, stoned olives and mushrooms in scallop shells. Cover with Provençale sauce (see SAUCE). Sprinkle with pale golden breadcrumbs and a little olive oil. Brown in the oven or under the grill, then place on each scallop an anchovy fillet curved into a ring, and sprinkle with chopped parsley.

Salmon in scallop shells with shrimps. COQUILLES DE SAUMON AUX CREVETTES – Arrange pieces of salmon and shelled shrimps in scallop shells. Coat with Mornay sauce (see SAUCE) finished off with Shrimp butter (see BUTTER). Sprinkle with Parmesan and a little melted butter. Brown in the oven or under the grill.

Salmon in scallop shells à la Victoria. COQUILLES DE SAUMON À LA VICTORIA – Arrange pieces of salmon, truffles and mushrooms in scallop shells. Coat with Nantua sauce (see SAUCE). Sprinkle with Parmesan and melted butter. Brown in the oven, and place a slice of truffle heated in butter on each scallop.

Skewered salmon. BROCHETTES DE SAUMON – Thread pieces of salmon cut in squares on metal skewers, alternating them with mushrooms cut in thick slices and tossed in butter. Season with salt and pepper, pour over melted butter, coat with freshly made breadcrumbs and grill gently.

Set on a serving dish. Sprinkle with half-melted Maitre d'hotel butter (see BUTTER) or serve this butter separately. Garnish with fresh parsley and surround with half slices of lemon cut with fluted edges.

One of the sauces recommended for grilled fish may be served separately with grilled skewered salmon.

Fried skewered salmon. BROCHETTES DE SAUMON FRITES – Sauté the pieces of salmon lightly in butter before threading them on the skewers. Coat the skewered pieces in egg and breadcrumbs.

Fry in deep fat and garnish with fried parsley and quarters of lemon. Serve with Tomato sauce, or any other sauce appropriate to fish (see SAUCE).

Salmon soufflé. SOUFFLÉ DE SAUMON – Rub cooked salmon through a sieve, mix with Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE), bind with egg yolks and stiffly beaten egg whites folded in at the last moment. (See SOUFFLÉ.)

Salmon steak à l'américaine. DARNE DE SAUMON À L'AMÉRICAIN – Cut a slice about 6 to 8 cm. (2½ to 3 inches) thick from the middle of the salmon. Season with salt and pepper. Cook in a buttered sauté pan on a layer of 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) matignon (q.v.) of raw root vegetables. Sprinkle with 4 tablespoons (½ cup) melted butter. Begin cooking over a good heat. Cover the pan and continue cooking in the oven, basting frequently with the butter, but without adding any liquid.

Prepare a spiny lobster as for Lobster à l'américaine (see LOBSTER). Remove the shell from the tail and slice the latter into 6 equal slices.

Split the body in half, longways, and take out all the flesh without breaking the half shells. Dice this flesh, add to it an equal quantity of cooked, diced mushrooms and bind with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) concentrated Allemande sauce (see SAUCE) to which chopped tarragon and chervil have been added.

Fill the half shells with the mixture. Smooth over the surfaces and sprinkle them with grated Parmesan and a little melted butter. Put the half shells on a baking tin and brown them in a very hot oven 10 minutes before serving.

The sauce. Add the matignon with which the salmon was cooked to the American sauce from the lobster. Add 3 dl. (½ pint, 1½ cups) fish fumet and 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) Velouté sauce (see SAUCE). Boil down by one-third over good heat, stirring with a wooden spoon.

Thicken the sauce away from the heat with the coral rubbed through a sieve and blended with 100 g. (4 oz., ½ cup) fresh butter. Add chopped parsley, chervil and tarragon, the juice of ½ lemon, salt and pepper if necessary, and mix well with a whisk.

Place the salmon, very hot, on a croûton of bread fried in butter, on a large dish. Put at each end the half shells of spiny lobster and the slices of spiny lobster set into tartlets of fine pastry, lightly coated with American sauce at the sides. Coat the salmon with the rest of the sauce and serve.

Salmon steak à l'anglaise. DARNE DE SAUMON À L'ANGLAISE – Slice of salmon coated in egg and breadcrumbs and cooked in butter. Served with Maitre d'hotel butter (see BUTTER).

Fried salmon steaks. DARNE DE SAUMON FRITE – Cut the salmon in thin slices, soak them in cold boiled milk, flour lightly, and fry in smoking hot oil.

Drain the slices and garnish with fried parsley and quarters of lemon.

Grilled salmon steak. DARNE DE SAUMON GRILLÉE – Season the salmon steak with salt and pepper. Brush with oil or melted butter. Cook under the grill at moderate heat.

Serve with Maitre d'hotel butter (see BUTTER), or any sauce recommended for grilled fish.

Grilled salmon steaks

Salmon steak à la meunière. DARNE DE SAUMON A LA MEUNIÈRE – Cut the salmon into slices. Season, sprinkle lightly with flour, and fry in smoking hot butter.

Arrange the slices on a dish, sprinkle with chopped parsley, and squeeze over a little lemon juice. When ready to serve, pour over the cooking butter, very hot. Surround with half slices of lemon.

Salmon steak à la Nantua. DARNE DE SAUMON À LA NANTUA – Cook a chunk of salmon in fish fumet. Drain, set it on a serving dish, and surround with shelled crayfish tails.

Coat with Nantua sauce (see SAUCE) to which the concentrated cooking juices of the fish have been added.

Salmon steak poached in white wine, various garnishes. DARNE DE SAUMON POCHÉE AU VIN BLANC – Poach the salmon steaks, cut rather thick, in fish fumet made with white wine. Drain and set them on a serving dish. Surround with the prescribed garnish. Coat with White wine sauce (see SAUCE) to which the concentrated cooking liquor of the fish has been added.

Tronçon of salmon Philéas Gilbert. TRONÇON DE SAUMON PHILÉAS GILBERT – Remove the bone of a large chunk of salmon, weighing 2½ kg. (5½ lb.). Cook 3 carrots and half a celery heart, cut in a short julienne (q.v.), in butter. Add 3 tablespoons (scant ½ cup) truffles and an equal quantity of mushrooms, also cut in julienne. Pour in 1½ dl. (¼ pint, ¾ cup) sherry and boil down. Bind with a few tablespoons very thick Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE) and season.

Stuff the fish with this mixture. Cover each end with a thin bard of bacon fat, and tie securely so that the stuffing cannot escape. Put the salmon in a fish kettle on a layer of chopped carrot and onion cooked in butter, mushroom and truffle skins, and a bouquet garni.

SALMON

Season the salmon. Pour over some melted butter, and fill the pan with sherry to half-way up the fish. Start cooking over heat, then cook in the oven for 40 to 45 minutes, with the fish kettle covered.

When the salmon is cooked, skin the middle part, leaving only a thin strip of skin at either end. Keep the salmon warm in the oven, covering it with buttered paper, while preparing the sauce.

Strain the cooking liquor through a fine strainer and boil down; add 4 dl. (scant  $\frac{3}{4}$  pint,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cups) thin Espagnole sauce (see SAUCE), well skimmed. Reduced again, adding gradually 4 dl. (scant  $\frac{3}{4}$  pint,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cups) thick, fresh cream. When the sauce is ready, add 100 g. (4 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) butter and strain through muslin.

Garnish with 12 barquettes filled with a ragoût of crayfish tails à la Nantua (see CRAYFISH); 24 oysters fried à la Villeroi; 24 big mushrooms, cooked in a white court-bouillon; 12 truffles, cooked in sherry (the parings of these and the mushrooms are used to colour the stock), and 4 fillets of sole encrusted with half slices of truffles, lightly poached in fish fumet. When cooked, these fillets are placed over the skinned portion of the salmon.

Arrange the salmon with the garnishes on a long dish. Pour over it some spoonfuls of the sauce, and serve the rest separately.

COLD SALMON. SAUMON FROID –

Cold whole salmon or cuts of salmon with various sauces and garnishes. SAUMON ENTIER, EN TRONÇONS (FROID) – Poach the salmon, whole or in large cuts, in court-bouillon. Leave to cool in the cooking liquor.

Drain the fish and wipe it dry. Set on a large dish. Garnish with fresh parsley or with quartered hard-boiled eggs and lettuce hearts.

Accompanying sauces. Cold salmon is usually served with cold sauces made with an oil and egg yolk base, such as:

Andalouse, Chantilly, Gribiche, Mayonnaise, Ravigote, Rémoulade, Russian, Tartare, Vincent, Vinaigrette, etc. (see SAUCE, Cold sauces).

Garnishes for cold salmon. These are varied. Apart from lettuce hearts and hard-boiled eggs, they consist chiefly of vegetable salads mixed with mayonnaise (with the addition of gelatine) or vinaigrette sauce.

When cold salmon is served à l'anglaise it should be accompanied by cucumber salad.

The garnishes most often used with cold salmon are:

Small aspics of crayfish tails or shrimps, of lobster or crayfish, various salpicons or macédoines of vegetables, etc.

Tartlets or barquettes made of fine pastry, filled with caviar, macédoine of vegetables, etc., various mousses or purées, various salpicons, etc.

Barquettes or cassolettes made of beetroot or cucumber, filled as above.

Scallop shells with any of the fillings described above.

Artichoke bottoms (cooked in a flour-and-water court-bouillon) garnished with the same preparations used to fill barquettes, etc.

Stuffed hard-boiled eggs, using mousses and purées of various kinds for filling.

Small tomatoes, scooped out, marinated and filled with salad, or some kind of mousse or purée.

The garnishes enumerated above apply chiefly to salmon poached in a court-bouillon. Instructions will be found below for cold salmon cooked in a white wine fish stock.

Salmon poached in court-bouillon may also be prepared with Montpellier butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters), and salmon steaks or chunks may be served in the same way.

Cold boiled salmon, with various sauces and garnishes. SAUMON BOUILLI FROID – Cook in court-bouillon (whole, in large cuts or slices); cool in the cooking liquor.

Drain the fish, dry it, and garnish with fresh parsley, hard-boiled eggs or lettuce hearts. Serve with one or other of the sauces recommended for cold fish.

In England it is usual to serve cold salmon with cucumber seasoned with Vinaigrette sauce (see SAUCE) or plain, cut in thin slices.

Cutlets of salmon in aspic. CÔTELETTES DE SAUMON À LA GELÉE – Coat half slices of salmon that have been cooked in a court-bouillon, cooled and drained, with fish aspic jelly, or braise in a fish aspic jelly (see JELLY, Fish jelly stock) made with wine.

These cutlets, when cool, are decorated with truffles and glazed with jelly. Arrange in the form of a crown on a dish and garnish with chopped jelly.

Salmon cutlets may also be put into barquettes made of Fine lining paste (see DOUGH) cooked empty, on a layer of chopped jelly. Or they may be set on a croûton of bread cut into the same shape as the cutlet and covered with one of the compound butters (see BUTTER).

Cutlets of salmon à la moscovite. CÔTELETTES DE SAUMON À LA MOSCOVITE – Braise the cutlets in an aspic jelly stock (see JELLY, Fish jelly stock) made with dry champagne. Coat them, once they are cold, with white Chaud-froid sauce (see SAUCE) with the addition of blanched and drained chopped chives.

Set them in barquettes of Fine lining paste (see DOUGH), garnished with 1 good tablespoon of fresh caviare. Arrange the barquettes on a dish and garnish with fresh parsley. Serve with Tartare sauce (see SAUCE).

Cutlets of salmon à la Nantua. CÔTELETTES DE SAUMON À LA NANTUA – Cook the cutlets in an aspic jelly stock (see JELLY, Fish jelly stock) made with white wine. Allow them to cool.

Coat with Chaud-froid sauce (see SAUCE) that has been finished off with Crayfish butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters). Decorate them with broad thin slices of truffle topped with crayfish or shrimp tails. Glaze the cutlets with jelly.

Set in a bowl on a layer of well-set jelly. Garnish the middle with Crayfish mousse (see CRAYFISH) formed into a dome. Decorate with crayfish tails and slices of truffle arranged in alternate layers. Glaze with jelly and set on ice.

Cutlets of salmon à l'orientale. CÔTELETTES DE SAUMON À L'ORIENTALE – Proceed, with half-slices of salmon, as for Red mullet à l'orientale (see HORS-D'ŒUVRE, Cold hors-d'œuvre).

Cold salmon à l'anglaise

Cutlets of salmon à la parisienne. CÔTELETTES DE SAUMON À LA PARISIENNE – Line scallop shells with vegetable salad mixed with mayonnaise. Arrange slices of salmon on top. Coat with gelatine-strengthened mayonnaise.

Arrange round the edge of each scallop a little border of asparagus tips, pieces of carrot scooped out with a vegetable baller, and diced French beans, all previously cooked in salted water and well drained. Set a slice of truffle on top of each shell.

Cutlets of salmon à la russe. CÔTELETTES DE SAUMON À LA Russe – Line scallop shells with shredded lettuce seasoned with oil and vinegar. Set slices of salmon on top. Coat with gelatine-strengthened Mayonnaise sauce (see SAUCE).

Decorate with very small lettuce hearts, quartered hard-boiled eggs, olives, capers and anchovy filets.

Galantine of salmon. GALANTINE DE SAUMON – This dish, known in old cookery under the name of sous-presse de saumon, is prepared in the same way as Galantine or Ballottine of eel (see EEL), with truffles, filets of salmon and Pike forcemeat (see FORCEMEATS).

It is cooked, rolled up in a linen cloth, in a strengthened fish stock or fumet. When cooked, it is untied and rolled up again in a linen cloth, secured with twine, and cooled under light pressure.

Decorate with truffles or some other garnish of the same kind and glaze with jelly (see JELLY, Fish jelly stock). Serve on a long dish and surround with chopped jelly, the edges of the dish being decorated with jelly croûtons. It is served with mayonnaise or some other cold sauce.

Glazed salmon Bellevue in aspic. SAUMON GLACÉ BELLEVUE, EN ASPIC – Cook the salmon, whole or in large cuts, in an enriched Fish jelly stock (see JELLY). Cool in its cooking liquor.

Drain the fish, skin without breaking the flesh, and wipe with a cloth. Coat with half-set jelly (prepared with the liquor in which the fish was cooked, clarified in the usual way). Apply several layers of jelly until it is covered with a uniform coating.

Put the salmon on a dish covered with a layer of firmly set jelly. Decorate with cut-out jelly shapes. Keep in a cold place until ready to serve.

Glazed salmon au chambertin (Larousse)

Glazed salmon au chambertin. SAUMON GLACÉ AU CHAMBERTIN – Proceed as for Glazed salmon Bellevue in aspic, using a Fish jelly stock (see JELLY) prepared with Chamber-tin.

Glazed salmon cutlets au Chambertin. CÔTELETTES DE SAUMON GLACÉES AU CHAMBERTIN – Braise the salmon cutlets in Chambertin. Let them cool in the cooking liquor.

Finish off as for Cutlets of salmon in aspic.

The cutlets may be prepared in the same way with champagne, Bordeaux, Alsace or Rhine wine, etc.

Glazed salmon à la champenoise. SAUMON GLACÉ À LA CHAMPENOISE – Like Glazed salmon Bellevue in aspic, using a Fish jelly stock (see JELLY) made with dry champagne.

Glazed cutlets of salmon with macédoine of vegetables. CÔTELETTES DE SAUMON GLACÉES À LA MACÉDOINE DE LÉGUMES – Cut the salmon in slices 2 cm. ( $\frac{3}{4}$  inch) thick and divide each one in half. Shape these halves in the form of cutlets (U.S. chops.)

Arrange them in a buttered dish; season with salt and pepper. Pour over fish fumet made with white wine and add a squeeze of lemon juice. Poach gently, keeping the dish covered. Cool under pressure. Drain and dry the cutlets, and decorate them with truffles or tarragon leaves. Glaze them with jelly.

Arrange in the form of a circle on a dish or on a shaped base of rice. Garnish the middle of the dish with a vegetable salad mixed with very thick mayonnaise and shaped into a dome. Decorate the top with truffles, lobster coral, anchovy filets, etc. Surround the cutlets with jelly croûtons. Serve with mayonnaise.

Glazed salmon à l'impériale. SAUMON GLACÉ À L'IMPÉRIALE – Cook the salmon as for Glazed salmon Bellevue in aspic. Skin the fish and decorate it with truffles and hard-boiled egg whites cut in the form of scales. Coat with the jelly.

Set on a long dish or on a bed of rice. Surround with a garnish of little mousselines of crayfish, barquettes of fine pastry filled with soft carp roes poached in white wine and coated with White chaud-froid sauce (see SAUCE) based on fish fumet and halved hard-boiled eggs.

Serve with mayonnaise mixed with truffle purée.

Glazed salmon Monselet. SAUMON GLACÉ MONSELET – Cook the salmon in the same way as for Glazed salmon Bellevue in aspic. Skin the fish and decorate it with truffles and lobster coral. Glaze with jelly.

Set on a dish or on a bed of rice. Surround with a garnish of very small artichoke bottoms filled with a salad of green asparagus tips and truffles, and small Tomato mousses (see TOMATO) decorated with tarragon leaves. Serve with mayonnaise mixed with tomato juice.

Glazed salmon à la parisienne (Larousse)

Glazed salmon à la parisienne. SAUMON GLACÉ À LA PARISIENNE – Cook and cool the salmon as for Glazed salmon Bellevue in aspic.

Decorate it with truffles and glaze with jelly.

Surround with a garnish à la parisienne for cold fish (see GARNISH) arranged in clusters, separated from each other by lettuce hearts and halved hard-boiled eggs. Decorate with chopped jelly. Serve with mayonnaise.

Glazed salmon à la russe. SAUMON GLACÉ À LA Russe – Cook the salmon as for Glazed salmon à la parisienne and allow it to cool. Drain, skin it, decorate with truffles and tarragon leaves and glaze with Fish jelly stock (see JELLY).

Set on a long dish on a bed of rice. Surround with small Russian salads moulded in darioles lined with jelly, small barquettes made out of cucumber which has been blanched, drained and marinated with oil, lemon juice, salt and pepper, and filled with caviare and quartered hard-boiled eggs. Garnish the edges of the plate with chopped jelly.

Salmon mayonnaise. SAUMON FROID EN MAYONNAISE – Put in the bottom of a salad dish a layer of shredded lettuce seasoned with salt and pepper, oil and vinegar, piled up a little in the form of a dome. Place on this a mound of sliced or flaked cooked salmon.

Cover with mayonnaise. Smooth over so as to obtain a regular shape. Decorate with anchovies, capers, chervil or tarragon leaves, and stoned olives. Surround with quartered hard-boiled eggs and lettuce hearts.

SALMON TROUT

All the garnishes suggested elsewhere for cold fish may be used as garnish for salmon mayonnaise.

Médallions of cold salmon. MÉDAILLONS DE SAUMON FROID – Cut the salmon in slices, divide each in two and trim into rounds or médallions.

Cook and finish off according to any of the recipes given for salmon cutlets.

Cold salmon with Montpellier butter. SAUMON FROID AU BEURRE DE MONTPELLIER – Cook the salmon, whole or in large cuts, in a Fish jelly stock (see JELLY) made with white wine, as for Glazed salmon Bellevue en aspic. Allow to cool in its cooking liquor.

Drain the fish; remove the skin from the central part, keeping only a narrow strip at each side. Wipe dry.

Cover the skinned part with Montpellier butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters), and smooth over. Decorate it with small pieces of truffles dipped in half-set jelly. Glaze with half-set jelly made with the liquor in which the fish was cooked.

Set the fish on a dish on a bed of rice, or a buttered croûton of bread. Surround with a garnish of hard-boiled eggs, lettuce hearts, croûtons spread with Montpellier butter, and jelly.

Cold salmon steak with various sauces and garnishes. DARNES DE SAUMON FROIDES – All the recipes given for cold cutlets of salmon can be applied to salmon steaks.

The steaks, cooked in court-bouillon and left to cool in the liquor, are garnished with quartered hard-boiled eggs and lettuce hearts, and served with a cold sauce (Mayonnaise, Rémoulade, Tartare, Verte, etc.; see SAUCE, Cold sauces).

SALMON TROUT. TRUITE SAUMONÉE – Trout with pink flesh (see TROUT).

SALPICON – Preparation of one or more ingredients cut in small dice and bound with a sauce.

Salpicons, with other hors-d'œuvre mixtures, are used to fill pastry barquettes and other tartlets, canapés, pastry cases, croustades or hollowed bread cases, rissoles and timbales. They may be made into cromesquis, cutlets and croquettes, and are used to stuff eggs, poultry, game, fish and some cuts of meat.

Cold salpicons are seasoned with Vinaigrette or Mayonnaise sauce (see SAUCE).

In pastry making and confectionery salpicons of fresh or candied fruit are used.

Salpicon à l'américaine (hot) – Lobster or spiny lobster flesh à l'américaine, bound with American sauce (see SAUCE).

Salpicon of anchovies (hot or cold). SALPICON D'ANCHOIS – De-salted anchovy fillets cut into dice. Use hot or cold according to the particular recipe.

Salpicon of artichokes (cold). SALPICON D'ARTICHAUTS – Artichoke bottoms cooked in flour and water court-bouillon drained, dried, cut in dice, and bound with mayonnaise thickened with jelly.

Used to garnish eggs, fish, cold chicken, pastry boats and tartlets.

Salpicon of artichokes with cream. SALPICON D'ARTICHAUTS À LA CRÈME – Dice artichoke bottoms half cooked in flour and water court-bouillon. Finish cooking in butter. Season and bind with a few tablespoons thick Cream sauce (see SAUCE).

This salpicon, like all the vegetables in the recipes which follow, may be bound with thick Velouté sauce (see SAUCE) instead of cream sauce.

Used as garnish with eggs, barquettes and tartlets, with small cuts of meat, poultry, and with fish.

Salpicon of green asparagus (cold). SALPICON D'ASPERGES

VERTES – Dice green asparagus and cook in salted water. Drain, dry, and bind with thick mayonnaise.

Same uses as the Salpicon of artichokes.

Salpicon of aubergines in cream. SALPICON D'AUBERGINES À LA CRÈME – Cook diced aubergines in butter. Season, bind with Cream sauce (see SAUCE).

Same uses as the Salpicon of artichokes.

Salpicon of beetroot (cold). SALPICON DE BETTERAVES – Dice a cooked beetroot. Season with oil, vinegar, salt and pepper or with thick mayonnaise.

Salpicon à la bohémienne (cold) – The same mixture as in the recipe which follows (see below), bound with meat jelly.

Salpicon à la bohémienne (hot) – Mixture of foie gras and diced cooked truffles, bound with Madeira sauce (see SAUCE) made with truffle essence.

This salpicon sometimes has the addition of a small quantity of diced onion stewed in butter and seasoned with paprika. Used for canapés, tartlets, poached eggs, etc.

Salpicon of brains (hot). SALPICON DE CERVELLE – Bound with Allemande, Béchamel or Velouté sauce (see SAUCE).

Salpicon cancalaïse (hot) – Mixture of poached oysters and cooked mushrooms, bound with Normande sauce or Velouté sauce (see SAUCE), based on concentrated fish stock.

Salpicon cardinal (hot) – Mixture of diced lobster, truffles and mushrooms bound with Cardinal sauce (see SAUCE).

Salpicon of carrots à la crème. SALPICON DE CAROTTES À LA CRÈME – Dice the orange part of some carrots, cover with water, add 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) butter to each  $\frac{1}{2}$  litre (scant pint,  $2\frac{1}{4}$  cups) water, season with salt and a very little sugar and cook till all the liquid is absorbed. Bind with Cream sauce (see SAUCE).

Same uses as the Salpicon of artichokes.

Salpicon of celeriac (cold). SALPICON DE CÉLÉRI-RAVE – Cook diced celeriac in salted water. Drain, dry, bind with thick mayonnaise.

Same uses as the Salpicon of artichokes.

Salpicon of celeriac (hot). SALPICON DE CÉLÉRI-RAVE À LA CRÈME – Dice a celeriac root. Cook in butter in a covered pan. Season, and bind with Cream sauce (see SAUCE).

Same uses as the Salpicon of artichokes.

Salpicon of cèpes à la crème. SALPICON DE CÈPES À LA CRÈME – Dice cooked cèpes. Stew in butter. Bind with Cream sauce (see SAUCE).

Same uses as the Salpicon of artichokes.

Salpicon à la chalonnaise (hot) – Mixture of cocks' combs and truffles, bound with Allemande sauce (see SAUCE).

Salpicon chasseur (hot) – Dice chicken livers, sauté in butter and mix with mushrooms, bound with concentrated Chasseur sauce (see SAUCE).

Salpicon of chicken. SALPICON DE VOLAILLE – This is made with left-over chicken. Dice the chicken and bind with Allemande, Béchamel, Cream or Velouté sauce (see SAUCE). A brown veal stock may also be used.

This salpicon is used as a filling for vol-au-vent, barquettes and croustades, as a garnish for poached or soft-boiled eggs, or for croquettes.

Salpicon of chicken livers. SALPICON DE FOIES DE VOLAILLES – Like Salpicon of foie gras.

Salpicon of cocks' combs. SALPICON DE CRÊTES – Bound with Allemande, Béchamel or Demi-glace sauce (see SAUCE), or brown veal stock, concentrated and thickened. (See COCK'S COMB for other salpicons.)

Salpicon of crayfish. SALPICON D'ÉCREVISSES – Bound with Béchamel, Nantua or Crayfish sauce (hot); with Vinaigrette or Mayonnaise sauce (cold) (see SAUCE).

Salpicon of cucumbers (cold). SALPICON DE CONCOMBRES – Split cucumbers lengthwise, remove their seeds, and dice. Spread on a cloth, sprinkle with salt and leave till they are translucent. Dry them, season with oil and vinegar or bind them with thick mayonnaise.

Same uses as Salpicon of artichokes.

Salpicon Cussy (hot) – Mixture of sweetbreads, truffles and mushrooms, bound with concentrated Madeira sauce (see SAUCE).

Salpicon cutlets. CÔTELETTES DE SALPICON – These are made with a salpicon of various ingredients, to which diced mushrooms and truffles are added and combined with an Allemande or a Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE).

Make into cutlet shapes, dip in egg and breadcrumbs, and cook in clarified butter.

Salpicon à la dieppoise (hot) – Mixture of crayfish, mussels and mushrooms, bound with Normande sauce or White wine sauce I (see SAUCE).

Salpicon à l'écarlate (hot) – Pickled tongue bound with Demi-glace sauce (see SAUCE).

Salpicon of hard-boiled eggs. SALPICON D'ŒUFS DURS – Bound with Allemande, Béchamel, Cream or Velouté sauce (hot); with Vinaigrette or Mayonnaise sauce (cold) (see SAUCE).

Salpicon à la financière (hot) – Mixture of quenelles, cocks' combs, cocks' kidneys, mushrooms and truffles, bound with concentrated Financière sauce (see SAUCE).

Salpicon of fish. SALPICON DE POISSON – Cooked fish bound with Béchamel, Normande or White wine sauce I (hot); with Vinaigrette or Mayonnaise sauce (cold) (see SAUCE).

Salpicon of foie gras – Bound with Madeira, Port or Sherry sauce (see SAUCE) or game stock (hot), in jelly (cold).

Salpicon of French beans (cold). SALPICON DE HARICOTS VERTS – Like Salpicon of green asparagus.

Salpicon of French beans à la crème (hot). SALPICON DE HARICOTS VERTS À LA CRÈME – Dice French beans and cook briskly in salted water, but keep fairly firm. Simmer in butter in covered pan. Bind with Cream sauce (see SAUCE).

Same uses as the Salpicon of artichokes.

Salpicons of fruit. SALPICON DE FRUITS – These salpicons, made with fresh fruit cooked in syrup (apricots, cherries, peaches, pears, apples, plums, etc.) are used as filling or garnish for a great many pastries and sweet dishes. Salpicons may also be made from candied fruits, used in the same way.

Fruit salpicons should be soaked in liqueur.

Salpicon of game. SALPICON DE GIBIER – Bound with white or brown sauce, based on the game used (hot); bound with jelly (cold).

Salpicon of ham (hot). SALPICON DE JAMBON – Made with cooked ham.

Cut the ham into small dice and bind with Demi-glace sauce (see SAUCE). Various garnishes and forcemeats can be added. When cold use for canapés and other cold hors-d'œuvre.

Salpicon of Jerusalem artichokes. SALPICON DE TOPINAMBOURS – Like Salpicon of artichokes, made with Jerusalem artichokes cooked in salted water.

Salpicon à la Joinville (hot) – Mixture of crayfish, truffles and mushrooms bound with Joinville sauce (see SAUCE).

Salpicon of lobster. SALPICON DE HOMARD – Bound with Béchamel, Lobster or Nantua sauce (hot); with Vinaigrette or Mayonnaise sauce (cold) (see SAUCE).

Salpicon of meat. SALPICON DE VIANDES DE DESSERT – Made with left-over meats (beef, veal, lamb, mutton, pork) cut in dice and bound with brown or white sauce.

These salpicons are used to make croquettes and kromes-kies or to fill pastry cases, hollowed crusts, etc.

Salpicon à la Montglas (hot) – Mixture of foie gras, pickled tongue, truffles and mushrooms, bound with concentrated Madeira sauce (see SAUCE).

Salpicon of mushrooms (cold). SALPICON DE CHAMPIGNONS –

Diced mushrooms cooked and bound with thick mayonnaise.

Same uses as Salpicon of artichokes.

Salpicon of mushrooms and other fungi (hot). SALPICON DE CHAMPIGNONS DE COUCHE – Dice peeled and washed mushrooms. Cook gently in butter, bind with Cream sauce (see SAUCE).

Same uses as Salpicon of artichokes.

Salpicon of mushrooms with Madeira (hot). SALPICON DE CHAMPIGNONS AU MADÈRE – Cook diced mushrooms in butter. Dilute the cooking juices with a little Madeira or other liqueur wine. Bind with concentrated Demi-glace sauce (see SAUCE) based on mushroom stock. Same uses as Salpicon of artichokes.

Salpicon of mussels (hot). SALPICON DE MOULES – Bound with Allemande, Poulette, or White wine sauce (hot); with Vinaigrette or Mayonnaise sauce (cold) (see SAUCE).

Salpicon of onion. SALPICON D'IGNON – White. Cook the onions in butter, bind with Cream sauce (see SAUCE).

Brown. Bind the cooked onions with concentrated Demi-glace sauce (see SAUCE).

Salpicon à la périgourdine (hot) – Mixture of foie gras and truffles bound with concentrated Madeira sauce (see SAUCE).

Salpicon of potatoes (cold). SALPICON DE POMMES DE TERRE – Potatoes cooked in their jackets, peeled, cut into dice, and mixed with Vinaigrette or Mayonnaise sauce (see SAUCE).

Same use as Salpicon of artichokes.

Salpicon à la reine (hot) – Mixture of white chicken meat, mushrooms and truffles, bound with Allemande sauce (see SAUCE).

Salpicon à la royale (hot) – Mixture of truffles and mushrooms bound with chicken purée.

Salpicon à la Saint-Hubert (hot) – Game meat, bound with Demi-glace sauce (see SAUCE) boiled down with the pan juices left from cooking the game.

Salpicon of shrimps (hot). SALPICON DE CREVETTES – Bound with Béchamel or Shrimp sauce (hot); with Vinaigrette or Mayonnaise sauce (cold) (see SAUCE).

Salpicon of spiny lobster or crawfish. SALPICON DE LANGOUSTE – Like Salpicon of lobster.

Salpicon of sweetbreads (hot). SALPICON DE RIS D'AGNEAU, DE VEAU – Bound with Allemande, Béchamel, Demi-glace, Madeira or Suprême sauce (see SAUCE).

Salpicon of tomatoes I. SALPICON DE TOMATES – Peel the tomatoes and remove the seeds. Cut them in dice. Season with salt and lay them on a cloth to yield some of their moisture. Use as they are, or season with oil and vinegar.

Same uses as Salpicon of artichokes.

Salpicon of tomatoes II. SALPICON DE TOMATES – Dice the tomatoes. Put them in a wire basket, plunge them for a minute into boiling salted water.

Use as an auxiliary ingredient in soups, sauces and mixed salpicons.

Salpicon of truffles. SALPICON DE TRUFFES – Made with fresh truffles, raw or cooked in Madeira, or with tinned truffles.

Cut them in dice, season with salt and pepper, oil and lemon juice, or leave them as they are for cold preparations.

For hot dishes, simmer them in butter or bind them in a few tablespoons of Demi-glace sauce flavoured with Madeira, or with Velouté or Cream sauce (see SAUCE). Used cold as a garnish in hors-d'œuvre, with eggs, fish, made-up salads; hot in barquettes, tartlets, etc., and as a supplementary ingredient in sauces, forcemeats, and various mixtures.

Salpicon of veal. SALPICON DE VEAU – Bound with Allemande, Béchamel or Demi-glace sauce (see SAUCE) or brown veal stock (hot); bound with jelly (cold).

SALSIFY or OYSTER PLANT. SALSIFIS – The name of salsify, or oyster plant, is used not only for the root of the plant of the Compositae family, but also for that of another plant of the same family which botanically is called Scorzonera.

While one of these roots, that of the true salsify, is white outside, that of the scorzonera is blackish. The flesh of these two roots is very similar in taste, and they are prepared in the same way.

The word scorzonera comes from the Catalan escorso, which means viper. The plant was so called, it is said, because formerly, in Spain, it was used as a remedy for the bite of this dangerous snake.

The wild salsify, commonly known as goat's beard, grows in the fields and in damp and rich pastureland. The young shoots of this plant can be eaten in salad and can also be prepared like spinach. The roots are eaten like those of scorzonera.

The stalks or tender shoots of salsify and scorzonera may also be prepared in various ways. They are mostly eaten raw in salad.

To cook salsify. Scrape the salsify roots and divide them into chunks 7 to 8 cm (about 3 inches) long. Plunge them as they are prepared into water with a little lemon or vinegar in it, to prevent them from turning black. Cook, covered, in a boiling flour-and-water court-bouillon over a gentle heat, for about 2 hours. Put into a basin and keep in a cool place.

Drain and dry the salsify before preparing it in any way. It is served by itself as a vegetable or used as a garnish.

When it is not to be used immediately, it can be kept in its cooking liquor and left for several days without deteriorating.

To cook leaves or shoots of salsify or oyster plant. Pick the tender shoots, wash them in plenty of water and cook in a flour-and-water court-bouillon for 40 minutes. Drain, dry, and prepare according to the recipe.

Salsify in béchamel. SALSIFIS À LA BÉCHAMEL – Cook in flour-and-water court-bouillon and cut into chunks 4 to 5 cm (1½ to 2 inches) long. Put them in a sauté pan, cover with thin Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE) and simmer. Before serving add a few tablespoons fresh cream.

Salsify prepared in this way is often described as à la crème.

Salsify au beurre noisette. SALSIFIS AU BEURRE NOISETTE – Cook the salsify in a flour-and-water court-bouillon. Serve piping hot in a dish sprinkled with a few tablespoons of Noisette butter (see BUTTER).

Salsify à la crème. SALSIFIS À LA CRÈME – Prepared like Salsify in béchamel.

Alternatively, the salsify, after being lightly cooked in butter, may be covered with fresh cream and simmered gently.

Salsify fritters. SALSIFIS FRITS, FRITOT DE SALSIFIS – Cook salsify roots in a flour-and-water court-bouillon, drain, and cut in pieces. Put them in a deep dish, season with salt and pepper, sprinkle with chopped parsley, oil and lemon juice and leave them to soak for 30 minutes.

Take them out of the marinade with a perforated spoon, dip them in a light batter (see BATTERS FOR FRYING) and fry in smoking hot deep fat. Drain, garnish with fried parsley and serve.

Salsify Mornay. SALSIFIS MORNAY – Stew the salsify in butter and put them in a gratin dish lined with a layer of Mornay sauce (see SAUCE). Coat with more sauce and sprinkle with grated Parmesan. Pour over a little melted butter and brown in the oven.

Salsify à la polonaise. SALSIFIS À LA POLONAISE – Arrange in a shallow dish the salsify roots cooked in a white court-bouillon, as above, and stewed in butter. Sprinkle with chopped yolks of hard-boiled eggs, and parsley. Before serving pour over a little Noisette butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters) in which some freshly made breadcrumbs have been fried, allowing 25 g. (1 oz., ½ cup) breadcrumbs to 100 g. (4 oz., ½ cup) butter.

Salsify salad. SALSIFIS EN SALADE – Cook the salsify in a flour-and-water court-bouillon. Drain them, dry and cut into pieces. Season with oil, vinegar (or lemon juice), salt and pepper. Sprinkle with chopped parsley, chervil and tarragon.

Salsify shoots. TIGES DE SALSIFIS – These may be cooked and prepared as for salsify, or served raw in salads.

Salsify sautéed au beurre. SALSIFIS SAUTÉS AU BEURRE – Cook salsify roots in a flour-and-water court-bouillon, drain, dry, cut in pieces and sauté in hot butter. Season.

Salsify sautéed aux fines herbes. SALSIFIS SAUTÉS AUX FINES HERBES – As above, adding chopped parsley to the salsify.

Salsify sautéed à la provençale. SALSIFIS SAUTÉS À LA PROVENÇALE – Sauté the salsify in a mixture of butter and oil (half-and-half). Add 1 tablespoon of chopped garlic and parsley.

Salsify in veal stock. SALSIFIS AU BLOND DE VEAU, SALSIFIS AU JUS – Partly cook salsify roots in a flour-and-water court-bouillon, drain, dry and cut in pieces. Stew for a few moments in butter until lightly browned. Moisten with a few tablespoons veal stock.

Finish cooking the salsify in this stock.

SALT. SEL – Sodium chloride, the first salt to be discovered by man, which has given its name to all analogous chemical products.

There are two sorts of salt: sea salt, distilled from seawater, and rock salt, found in the earth in crystalline form.

Sea salt is the only mineral condiment that we add to our food, and it may be noted that the higher the vegetable content of the diet, the greater is the need of salt. This is true among animals as well; herbivorous creatures are greedy for salt but carnivorous animals have no desire for it.

The average consumption of salt, among people who do not abuse the use of this condiment, is about 8 to 10 g. a day. Foodstuffs (before salt is added) contain 1 to 1½ g. in an ordinary diet and the rest is added during cooking or at the table. Complete abstinence from salt has not been found possible even in the most austere monastic orders.

Some culinary practices influence the consumption of – or need for – salt. Boiling vegetables in a large quantity of water deprives them of a large part of their mineral salts, a deficiency which one instinctively corrects by adding salt at the table; potatoes cooked in hot ashes or in the oven have sufficient taste to be eaten without salt, while those cooked in a great deal of water are almost uneatable without this seasoning. Vegetables stewed in their own juices also need much less salt.

Different kinds of salt. Grey (rock) salt is less pure, but among its 'impurities' there are traces of valuable minerals such as arsenic; it is thus rational to use this for cooking and keep the white salt for the table.

Various brands of table salt are marketed; some, generally as the result of adding phosphate of lime, have the advantage that the salt keeps its powder form, whereas pure salt tends to return to its crystalline state under the action of humidity. Other products, chemically produced, contain a much weaker proportion of sodium chloride or are even made up entirely of different types of salt which have a taste more or less comparable with sea salt. These products are designed to give an illusion of salt to invalids on a salt-free diet.

Generally speaking these various products must be added to foodstuffs at the table, their taste being much weakened – or even disappearing altogether – if they are dissolved.

When making up a salt-free diet it is important to recognise that fruit, most vegetables and, with certain exceptions, cereals are the least rich in salt; meat and eggs have less than milk. A salt-free diet demands a special bread with a genuinely low salt content or the replacement of bread in the diet by potatoes.

Celery salt. SEL DE CÉLERI – Fine salt flavoured with dried and powdered celery. This condiment, which is commercially prepared and marketed, is excellent.

Spiced salt (for forcemeats). SEL ÉPICÉ – Mix 1 kg. (2½ lb.) fine dry salt with 200 g. (7 oz., 1¾ cups) white pepper and 200 g. (7 oz., 1¾ cups) mixed spices.

SALT GRINDER. ÉGRUGEOIR – Small mortar or mill made of wood and used for grinding rock salt to powder.

SALTING. SALAIISON – Operation which consists of treating meat, fish and various other substances with salt, or of immersing them in brine, to preserve them for a long time. (See BRINE.)

Meats and other foodstuffs which have been treated in this way are called salaisons in French.

SALTING TUB. SALOIR – Large bucket in which pieces of meat are put to be pickled in brine.

There are different kinds of salting tubs. One kind, a simple receptacle, is used in domestic kitchens to salt pieces of meat, mostly pork; others are great vats of wood, stone or cement, of various shapes, which in different regions of France are called baignaires, bagnons or barbantelles.

Salting tubs in stone or cement are the best. Each is provided with a lattice-work frame, which fits inside the receptacle. On this are placed stones or other heavy objects, so that the substances put in the brine are completely immersed.

SALT MEADOW. PRÉ-SALÉ – Young sheep fattened in meadows bordering the sea. These are rich in aromatic pasture which greatly increases the delicacy of the flesh.

SALTPETRE – Potassium nitrate, nitre, a white crystalline salty substance, odourless, fresh tasting, piquant and a little bitter, easily soluble in hot water, less so in cold water. Used in the salting industries because it gives an agreeable red colour to meat, but only in small doses because it toughens. (It is also used as a constituent of gunpowder.)

SAMOS – Sweet wine harvested on the island of the same name in the Greek Archipelago.

SAMPHIRE. BACILE – Hardy plant which grows on cliffs, by the sea. It is also known under the names of Peter's cress and sea-fennel. It is grown in gardens, in dry and rocky soil, and is eaten principally as a salad.

It can also be cooked in butter or cream, like purslane, or pickled in vinegar like gherkins.

SAND EEL. ÉQUILLE – Common name for a small fish found on sandy beaches. It buries itself in the sand at low tide. It is cooked in the same way as the smelt (q.v.).

Sand eel is also called lançon in French.

SANDPIPER. MAUBÈCHE – Small edible water sparrow, cooked in the same way as snipe (q.v.).

SANDWICH – Foodstuff composed of two slices of buttered bread with some edible substance between.

It has long been the custom in the French countryside to give workers in the fields meat for their meal enclosed between two pieces of wholemeal or black bread. In all the south-west districts it was customary to provide people setting out on a journey with slices of meat, mostly pork or veal, sprinkled with their succulent juices, between two pieces of bread. Sandwiches made with sardines, tunny fish, anchovies, sliced chicken and even with flat omelettes were known in France well before the word, coming from England, had entered into French culinary terminology.

Samphire

To make sandwiches. Sandwiches are made with English-type bread or French bread, with ordinary or enriched bread, black bread, or with special boat-shaped rolls made with Brioche dough (see DOUGH). The latter are mostly served at parties and in France are often called petits pains fourrés.

Sandwiches in brioche bread. SANDWICHES EN PAIN BRIOCHE – Made like ordinary sandwiches, using boat-shaped rolls made of brioche mixture (like English bridge rolls).

Sandwiches of French bread. SANDWICHES EN PAIN FLÛTE OU EN PAIN DE MÉNAGE – Sandwiches in France are usually made from petits pains, i.e. crusty rolls, either round or sausage-shaped, split open, buttered and filled with the same fillings as for English-type bread.

Long French loaves are split and made into sandwiches in the same way.

Sandwiches with loaf bread. SANDWICHES AU PAIN DE MIE – Spread slices of bread with butter mixed with a little mustard. Press meat between two slices. Trim the sandwiches at the sides and cut into rectangles or triangles.

Sandwiches made with English-type bread are filled with various kinds of meat, cut into thin slices: ham, tongue, mortadella, roast pork, pressed beef, chicken or other poultry, roast beef, roast veal, etc.

They may also be filled with the following: cucumbers pickled in the Russian style between two buttered slices of bread sprinkled with grated horseradish, anchovies and other filleted salt fish such as herrings, kilks, sprats, etc., artichokes (artichoke bottoms cut in small dice, mixed with hard-boiled eggs, also cut in dice), cress or watercress, shrimps or prawns, crayfish, lobsters, spiny lobster (the butter mixed with a purée made from their shells), lettuce (the leaves left whole or Sandwiches with loaf bread and cheese

Presentation of sandwiches with loaf bread (Claire) shredded), corn salad (lamb's lettuce), hard-boiled eggs (the eggs cut in slices or small dice), sweet peppers, poutargue (mullet roes), sardines or other fish preserved in oil or salt, salmon, tomatoes (sliced with the seeds removed and soaked in salt to remove their moisture), truffles (raw truffles cut in thin slices and seasoned).

Sweet sandwiches. SANDWICHES D'ENTREMETS – Prepared with thin slices of stale brioche or Genoa cake. They are buttered or not, according to what is used for the filling.

These sandwiches may be made with chopped up fruit, jam, thick custards, etc.

Toasted sandwiches. SANDWICHES AU PAIN GRILLÉ – Prepared with lightly toasted, sliced tin loaf, French bread or split rolls.

The filling for these sandwiches is the same as for untoasted bread.

Alsatian sandwiches. SANDWICHES ALSACIENS – Fill bread spread with butter mixed with grated horseradish with Strasbourg sausage, peeled and cut in slices.

Antibois sandwiches. SANDWICHES ANTIBOIS – Fill slices of toasted bread spread with butter mixed with chopped tarragon, with hard-boiled eggs, capers and chopped gherkins.

Basil sandwiches. SANDWICHES AU BASILIC – Fill thin slices of toasted bread spread with butter to which chopped fresh basil has been added, with chopped hard-boiled eggs.

Bookmaker's sandwiches. SANDWICHES DU BOOKMAKER – Butter slices of bread. Fill with a 1-cm. ( $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch) thick grilled steak, seasoned with salt and pepper, and spread, when cold, with English mustard.

Dijon sandwiches. SANDWICHES DIJONAIS – Fill slices of French bread spread with butter mixed with Dijon mustard, with diced hard-boiled egg and parsley ham (a regional speciality of Dijon).

Foie gras sandwiches. SANDWICHES DE FOIE GRAS – Spread a slice of bread with a layer of foie gras. Cover with another slice.

These sandwiches can also be made by filling lightly buttered slices of loaf bread, crusty rolls or brioche mixture rolls (bridge rolls) with slices of truffled foie gras.

Périgourdine sandwiches. SANDWICHES À LA PÉRIGOURDINE – Fill slices of toasted bread spread with truffle purée with small slices of foie gras.

Tartare sandwiches. SANDWICHES À LA TARTARE – Spread slices of bread with a thick layer of minced raw beef mixed with half its weight of butter, chopped chives, salt and paprika.

SANTLER – To pack ice, or ice and salt, around a mould placed in a wooden receptacle, in order to freeze water ice or ice cream mixtures.

SANGRI – Stimulating beverage obtained by mixing Madeira with water, sugar and a little grated nutmeg.

SANGRIA – Spanish drink consisting of a blend of wine, lemonade and sometimes alcohol, garnished with orange and lemon slices.

SANGUINE – A dish known under this name in some districts of France, notably Berry, is called sanquette in the south-west.

Cook 100 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) chopped white onions lightly in butter. When they are cooked and golden in colour, pour into the pan the blood of 2 chickens. Season, shake to mix well and cook like a pancake.

SANGUINE (Blood orange) – Variety of sweet orange with red flesh.

SANSONNET – Colloquial name for the starling, properly called étourneau in French, considered edible and cooked like the lark (q.v.).

The same word is used in French for a small mackerel.

SAPID. SAPIDE – That which is savoury and agreeably excites the sense of taste.

SAPODILLA or NASEBERRY PLUM. SAPOTILLE – Name of Malay origin given in Java and the East Indies to a fruit which in French is called sapotille. Scientifically it is the Sapota achras. It is about as large as a lemon. Its exterior colour is greyish; the flesh is reddish-yellow, like that of an apricot. The taste is delicious but this fruit can only be eaten where it grows.

SARACEN CORN (Buckwheat). SARRASIN – Herbaceous plant, sometimes known in France as blé noir, classed as a cereal. It prefers a granitic terrain and is grown more in Brittany than in any other part of France.

Unsuitable for making bread, its grain is used for porridges, galettes and pancakes. (See BUCKWHEAT.)

SARDINE – Migratory fish of the family Clupeidae, which in some provinces of the north-west of France is called cardeau and harenguet, and, at Bordeaux, royan.

It is fished abundantly in Sardinia, from which it takes its name.

It is also fished along the coasts of Brittany, where the preservation of sardines in oil is done on a large scale.

In the Mediterranean region, particularly between Menton and Marseilles, the sardines fished are extremely delicate and are eaten fresh; they cannot be sent long distances without deterioration.

Sardine

Thus the fish is known slightly salted, or completely preserved in brine or, its most frequent form, tinned in oil. Conserved in oil or salt, the sardine is served as hors-d'œuvre.

The recipes which follow are for fresh sardines unless otherwise stated. In U.S.A. young fresh herring can be substituted for the European sardine.

Sardines à l'anglaise – Open fresh sardines and take out the bones. Coat the sardines with egg and breadcrumbs and fry them in clarified butter. Cover with half-melted Maitre d'hôtel butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters).

Sardines à l'antiboise – Take off the heads of fresh sardines. Open the fish and take out the backbones. Coat with egg and breadcrumbs and fry in olive oil.

Arrange on a dish in the form of a crown. Garnish the middle of the dish with Tomato fondue (see FONDUE) seasoned with a little garlic.

Bouillabaisse of sardines (Provençal cookery). BOUILLABAISSE DE SARDINES – Scale, clean, wash and wipe 500 g. (18 oz.) large fresh sardines.

Cook lightly in 3 tablespoons (scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) oil, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) chopped onion and 1 tablespoon chopped leek.

Add 2 peeled, seeded and chopped tomatoes, 2 crushed cloves of garlic, a pinch of salt, pepper, thyme, half a bay leaf, a little fennel and a small piece of bitter orange rind.

Pour in 7 dl. ( $1\frac{1}{4}$  pints,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  pints) water, add 300 g. (11 oz., 2 scant cups) potatoes cut in thick slices, and begin cooking on good heat.

Add a pinch of saffron, and when the potatoes are three-quarters cooked, put the sardines on top. Cover the pan and cook briskly for 8 to 10 minutes.

Drain the sardines and potatoes and set them on a dish. Sprinkle with chopped parsley.

Pour the broth into another dish lined with 1 dozen thick slices of French bread. Sprinkle this, too, with chopped parsley.

Serve both dishes together.

Sardine butter. BEURRE DE SARDINES – Pound 75 g. (3 oz.) fillets of sardines in oil. Add 100 g. (4 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) butter. Rub through a fine sieve.

Use cold for hors-d'œuvre, hot for canapés, fried hollow crusts and pastry cases.

Dartois of sardines. DARTOIS AUX SARDINES – Like Dartois of anchovies (see HORS-D'ŒUVRE, Hot hors-d'œuvre).

Fried sardines. SARDINES FRITES – Cooked like Fried smelts (see SMELT).

Grilled sardines. SARDINES GRILLÉES – Brush fresh sardines with oil. Season them. Cook under the grill at moderate heat. Serve with Maitre d'hôtel butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters).

Sardines in oil. SARDINES À L'HUILE – Sardines are found marketed commercially in this form. They are served as hors-d'œuvre.

Sardines in paper cases au gratin. SARDINES EN CAISSES AU GRATIN – Arrange fresh sardines, stuffed and cooked in white wine (see below, Sardines with white wine) in paper cases (oiled and dried in the oven). Garnish with 1 good tablespoon of thick duxelles (q.v.).

Add 1 or 2 tablespoons (1 to 3 tablespoons) duxelles and 1 tablespoon tomato sauce to the liquor in which the sardines were cooked and spoon some of this sauce over them.

Sprinkle with breadcrumbs and melted butter and brown lightly in the oven. Put chopped parsley on top and arrange the paper cases on a dish.

Sardines in paper cases à l'italienne. SARDINES EN CAISSES À L'ITALIENNE – Prepare and cook fresh sardines like Sardines with white wine (see below).

When they are cooked set each one in a little rectangular paper case (previously rubbed with oil and dried in the oven) garnished on the bottom with 1 good tablespoon chopped mushrooms.

Sardines in paper cases à la portugaise. SARDINES EN CAISSES À LA PORTUGAISE – Like Sardines in paper cases au gratin, replacing the duxelles with Tomato fondue (see FONDUE).

This preparation can be made with oil in place of butter.

Sardines en papillotes – Take off the heads and remove the bones of large fresh sardines. Brush with oil, season and grill lightly.

Wrap each in a sheet of paper prepared in the same way as for Red mullet en papillote (see MULLET, RED), covering the fish with very thick duxelles.

Put the papillotes for a short time in a very hot oven and serve at once.

Sardines en paupiettes – Scale, clean, wipe and fillet large fresh sardines.

Lay the fillets flat on the table, skin downwards, and using a forcing bag, pipe on to each a thin line of quenelle Fish forcemeat (see FORCEMEATS) or very thick duxelles.

Roll up the fillets en paupiettes, and put them in rows in a buttered sauté dish. Pour over a little white wine, mushroom juice or fish stock, and cook very gently, covered, for 8 minutes.

Serve with White wine or other sauce (see SAUCE).

Sardines au plat – Put the sardines, seasoned with salt, on a buttered fireproof dish which has been sprinkled with chopped shallot. Pour over, for 12 sardines, 4 tablespoons (5 tablespoons) dry white wine and a little lemon juice. Dot with little pieces of butter. Cook in the oven at a good heat for 8 to 10 minutes. Sprinkle with parsley.

Tinned sardines in oil (Nicolas)

A brown sauce (Robert Carrier)

Salted sardines (preserved). SARDINES SALÉES – Proceed, using fresh sardines, as described in the recipe for Preserved anchovies (see ANCHOVY).

Sardines with spinach à la provençale. SARDINES AUX ÉPINARDS À LA PROVENÇALE – Clean and bone fresh sardines, coat with egg and breadcrumbs, and fry in butter. Arrange on leaf spinach tossed in Noisette butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters) and seasoned with grated garlic.

Sardines with white wine (stuffed). SARDINES AU VIN BLANC – Scale, clean and bone 12 large fresh sardines.

Stuff them with a small quantity of quenelle Fish forcemeat (see FORCEMEATS). Press lightly to stick them together and set in a buttered baking dish. Season with salt and pepper. Pour over 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) white wine. Start cooking on top of the stove, then put in the oven for 8 to 10 minutes.

Drain the sardines and arrange them on a dish. Add the strained cooking liquor to White wine sauce (see SAUCE) and just before serving pour a few tablespoons of the sauce over the sardines.

SARGASSO, SARGASSE – Seaweed eaten in Spain in the form of a salad.

SASSENAGE – Principal town of the canton of Isère, famous for its grottoes in which its celebrated cheese is made. (See CHEESE, Sassenage.)

SATYRION – Orchid with a goat-like smell whose tubers contain an edible, floury substance analogous to salep.

SAUCE – Liquid seasoning for food.

Classed as sauces in the French cuisine are many preparations quite different from each other, not only in their taste and appearance but in the way they are made; the juices of roasted meats; vinaigrette and its derivatives, hollandaise, mayonnaise, béarnaise; stock thickened with flour, with fécule (like potato or cornflour), with blood, etc.

At the beginning of the nineteenth century, Carême included among his sauces espagnole, allemande, suprême, tarragon, ravigote, vert-pré, béchamel, financière, Périgueux, tortue, matelote, Champagne, sauce à la régence, bourguignonne, sturgeon, poivrade, chevreuil (roebeek), aigre-doux (sweet-sour), piquante, salmis, tomato, leveret thickened with blood, parisienne, Robert, raifort (horseradish), magnonnaise (Carême thus designated mayonnaise), provençale, crayfish butter, lobster, shrimp, oyster, anchovy butter, cream, sauce à la pluche, butter or bâtarde, and caper.

Today the French culinary repertory includes almost 200 recipes for sauces, brown and white, hot and cold (not including variations). It is in this order that they will be described, beginning with the basic, or great sauces, brown and white, followed by compound sauces, brown and white. Cold sauces and dessert sauces will be found at the end of this section.

BASIC or GREAT SAUCES. SAUCES MÈRES, GRANDES SAUCES – These are so called because they are used in the preparation of many other sauces.

BROWN BASIC SAUCES. SAUCES BRUNES –

Demi-glaze or rich brown sauce. DEMI-GLACE – Boil down by two-thirds 5 dl. (scant pint, 2½ cups) Espagnole sauce (see below) to which 8 dl. (generous 1½ pints, 1¾ pints) clear brown stock have been added. Remove from heat, add ½ dl. (3 tablespoons, scant ¼ cup) Madeira. Strain.

A handful of mushroom skins may be added during cooking.

Espagnole sauce I (based on meat stock). SAUCE ESPAGNOLE

(GRASSE) – To make 2½ litres (4½ pints, 5½ pints) sauce make a roux using 150 g. (5½ oz., scant ¾ cup) butter and 150 g. (5½ oz., scant 1½ cups) flour and add 4 litres (3½ quarts, 4½ quarts) warm, light brown stock. Mix and boil over a brisk heat.

Reduce the heat. Make a mirepoix of 100 g. (4 oz., ¾ cup) carrot and 100 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) onion cut in dice and lightly fried, with 75 g. (3 oz., generous ¼ cup) diced lean bacon.

Pour off the bacon fat, dilute the pan juices with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) white wine and add to the sauce, together with a sprig of thyme and half a bay leaf.

Cook the espagnole very gently for 2½ hours, skimming frequently. Strain, pressing the vegetables well to extract their juice. Put back in a pan and add 6 to 8 dl. (1 pint, 2½ cups to generous 1½ pints, 1¾ pints) stock.

Cook for 2½ hours, skimming frequently. Strain into a basin. Stir with a wooden spoon until it is cold.

Next day put the espagnole back to cook again, adding 1 litre (1¾ pints, generous quart) stock and ½ litre (scant pint, 2½ cups) tomato purée.

Mix well, cook very slowly for 1 hour, skim often, so as to obtain a brilliant textured sauce. Remove all grease, strain through muslin. Use according to the instructions in the particular recipe.

Espagnole sauce II (based on fish stock). SAUCE ESPAGNOLE (MAIGRE) – For 2½ litres (4½ pints, 5½ pints) sauce:

Proceed as for the ordinary espagnole, replacing the meat stock with fish stock, and fry the mirepoix in butter instead of lard. Add 150 g. (5 oz., 5 cups) mushroom skins.

Finish off as for the ordinary espagnole.

Tomato sauce I (based on meat stock). SAUCE TOMATE (AU GRAS) – Apart from its use as accompaniment to a great number of dishes, tomato sauce is used as an auxiliary ingredient in numerous preparations. It adds the final touch to most brown sauces and ragoûts.

For 2½ litres (4½ pints, 5½ pints) sauce:

Ingredients. 2 litres (3½ pints, 4½ pints) purée of tomatoes, or 3 kg. (6½ lb.) pressed fresh tomatoes; 100 g. (4 oz., ½ cup) lean blanched diced bacon, 150 g. (5 oz.) blanched knuckle of ham, 100 g. (4 oz., ¾ cup) diced carrot, 100 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) diced onion, a bouquet garni, 1 unpeeled clove of garlic, 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter, 75 g. (3 oz., ¾ cup) flour; 10 g. (1½ teaspoons) salt, 20 g. ¾ oz., 1½ tablespoons sugar, a pinch of pepper; 1 litre (1¾ pints, generous quart) white stock.

Method. Cook the bacon lightly in butter in a heavy-bottomed pan. Add the vegetables and cook them until they are quite soft. Sprinkle with flour. Cook together till the flour colours, but not too much. Add the tomato purée (or the fresh tomatoes, pressed and cut in quarters). Add the clove of Spoon, spatula and ladle used in making sauces

Bain-maries in which to keep sauces

SAUCE

garlic, the bouquet garni, the ham knuckle and liquid. Season. Bring to the boil, stirring. Cover the pan and cook in the oven at low heat for 2 hours.

Take out the bouquet garni, the garlic and the knuckle of ham.

Strain the purée through a cloth, pressing it with a spatula, or put it through a fine strainer. Pour into a basin and whisk to make the sauce as smooth as possible. Butter the surface to prevent a skin forming.

Keep in a very cool place. Use as instructed.

Tomato sauce II (meatless). SAUCE TOMATE (AU MAIGRE) – Proceed as in the preceding recipe, leaving out the bacon and ham knuckle and using water instead of stock.

Tomato sauce III (coulis de tomate). SAUCE TOMATE AU NATUREL, COULIS DE TOMATE – Cook gently in butter a mirepoix composed of 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) shredded carrots and 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) shredded onion. Add 1½ kg. (3¼ lb.) fresh tomatoes, pressed and cut in quarters. Season with salt, a little sugar and a pinch of pepper. Add a small bouquet garni (q.v.). Stir over good heat to blend the ingredients. When the mixture comes to the boil, cover the pot and cook in a slow oven. Put through a fine strainer. Boil down over strong heat until the sauce thickens to the right consistency. Use according to instructions.

Tomato sauce, and coulis of tomatoes, can be made with tinned tomato purée.

WHITE BASIC SAUCES. SAUCES BLANCHES –

Allemande sauce – This sauce is often wrongly included among ‘basic’ sauces. Allemande, which in spite of its name is entirely French in origin, is a compound sauce. (See below, compound sauces.)

Béchamel sauce. SAUCE BÉCHAMEL – In modern practice this sauce is prepared quite differently from the way it used to be made. Formerly béchamel was a velouté sauce with cream blended into it, whereas nowadays it is made by stirring boiling milk into a roux of butter and flour.

Béchamel sauce I (based on meat stock). SAUCE BÉCHAMEL GRASSE – For 2½ litres (4½ pints, 5½ pints) stir 2¼ litres (scant 5 pints, 6 pints) boiling milk into a white roux made of 150 g. (5 oz., generous  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) butter and 150 g. (5 oz., 1¼ cups) flour. Mix well. Add 150 g. (5 oz.) lean veal cut into dice, cooked in butter without colouring with 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) chopped onion. Season, add a sprig of thyme, a fragment of bay leaf and a little grated nutmeg. Simmer very gently for 45 minutes to 1 hour. Strain through a cloth.

Béchamel sauce II (meatless). SAUCE BÉCHAMEL MAIGRE – As above, leaving out the veal.

Suprême sauce. SAUCE SUPRÊME – The same applies here as to Allemande sauce. Suprême sauce is a combined sauce, the recipe for which will be found below, under Compound sauces.

Velouté sauce. VELOUTÉ, SAUCE BLANCHE GRASSE – For 2½ litres (4½ pints, 5½ pints) stir 2¼ litres (scant 5 pints, 6 pints) white stock made with veal or chicken (see STOCK) into pale blond roux made with 150 g. (5 oz., generous  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) butter and 150 g. (5 oz., 1¼ cups) flour.

Blend well together. Bring to the boil, stirring with a wooden spoon until the first bubbles appear. Cook the velouté very slowly for 1½ hours, skimming frequently. Strain through a cloth. Stir until it is completely cold.

Velouté is a great basic sauce, and it may be prepared in advance. It may also be made just before it is required.

As the white stock used for making it is seasoned and flavoured, it is not necessary to add other flavourings. An exception is made for skins and trimmings of mushrooms, which may be added when available, this addition making the sauce yet more delicate.

Velouté sauce II (based on chicken stock). VELOUTÉ DE VOLAILLE – Made like ordinary Velouté sauce, using white chicken stock to stir into the blond roux.

Velouté sauce III (based on fish stock). VELOUTÉ DE POISSON, DIT VELOUTÉ MAIGRE – Made like ordinary Velouté sauce, replacing the veal or chicken stock with fish stock.

COMPOUND BROWN SAUCES. SAUCES COMPOSÉES, BRUNES –

African sauce (for small cuts of meat, pot-roasted chicken). SAUCE AFRICAINE – Cook in oil till soft 100 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) diced onions, then add 2 tomatoes peeled, drained and cut in dice, and 2 green peppers, peeled and also cut in dice. Season with salt, paprika, a small clove of grated garlic, and a bouquet garni, composed of parsley, thyme, bay leaf and a sprig of basil. Cook for 10 minutes. Pour in 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) white wine. Boil down. Add 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) concentrated and thickened brown veal stock. Cook for 15 minutes.

Aigre-douce sauce (for small cuts of meat, white giblets). SAUCE AIGRE-DOUCE – Caramelize lightly in a small saucepan 3 lumps of sugar moistened with 3 tablespoons (scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) wine vinegar. Pour in 1½ dl. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  pint,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) white wine. Add 1 tablespoon chopped shallots. Boil down. Pour in 2½ dl. (scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, generous cup) Demi-glace sauce. Boil for a few moments and strain through a fine sieve. Boil; add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) stoned raisins which have been soaked in cold water, and 1 tablespoon capers.

Alboni sauce, for venison (English cookery). SAUCE ALBONI – Boil down by two-thirds 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) white wine to which 1 tablespoon chopped shallot, a sprig of thyme, a piece of bay leaf, a sprig of parsley and a pinch of paprika have been added.

Pour in 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) Demi-glace sauce (see above) and 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) concentrated game stock. Add 10 crushed juniper berries. Boil for a few moments, strain, and add 1 tablespoon redcurrant jelly and 1 tablespoon pine kernels browned in the oven.

Aniseed sauce (for roast venison). SAUCE À L’ANIS – Cook 2 large lumps of sugar and 3 tablespoons (scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) wine vinegar to a caramel. Add 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) white wine and 1 teaspoon green anise. Boil, strain, boil again, and boil down by two-thirds. Add 3 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, 1¼ cups) thickened brown veal stock. Boil for a few moments and strain.

Bigarade sauce I (old recipe). SAUCE À LA BIGARADE – ‘Take off in strips from top to bottom the peel of a bitter orange; take care to cut it very thin so that there will be no white pith.

How to reduce a sauce (Larousse)

Cut evenly in fine shreds, and throw into boiling water. After boiling for a few minutes drain and put in a saucepan with enough very smooth Espagnole sauce to sauce an entrée, a little game glaze, a pinch of mignonette and the juice of half a bitter orange. After having brought it to the boil several times, add a piece of fine butter'. (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Bigarade sauce II (for duck or duckling, roasted or pot-roasted). SAUCE BIGARADE – Dilute the thick juices in the roasting pan with a stock prepared in the following way: cook to a pale caramel 25 g. (1 oz., 2 tablespoons) sugar soaked in 1 tablespoon wine vinegar. When the sugar begins to change colour, pour in 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) brown veal stock. Pour this mixture into the roasting pan and blend with the juices.

Cook for 5 minutes over strong heat. Add the juice of an orange and a squeeze of lemon juice and strain. Add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) orange peel which has been blanched, cooled in cold water, drained and cut in a fine julienne.

Ducks and ducklings à la bigarade are garnished with quarters of peeled and seeded oranges. They are surrounded with a border of half slices of oranges, cut with fluted-edged cutters.

Bigarade sauce can be flavoured with a very small quantity of curaçao, added at the last moment.

One-third lemon peel cut in a fine julienne is sometimes added to the julienne of orange peel.

Bigarade sauce III. SAUCE BIGARADE – When the duck is cooked, dilute the thick juices in the roasting pan with 1 glass white wine. Boil down. Pour in  $1\frac{1}{2}$  dl. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  pint,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) white stock or consommé. Boil for 5 minutes. Thicken with 1 teaspoon potato flour or arrowroot blended with cold water. Add the juice of an orange and a squeeze of lemon juice. Strain and finish with a julienne of orange peel.

Bigarade sauce IV. SAUCE BIGARADE – Dilute the thick pan juices with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) Madeira or port. Pour in 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) brown veal stock. Boil down by one-third, thicken with 1 teaspoon arrowroot or corn starch mixed with a few drops of wine vinegar, and bring to the boil. Add the juice of an orange and a squeeze of lemon juice, strain, add orange peel cut in a fine julienne.

Bonnefoy sauce (for meat and grilled fish). SAUCE BONNEFOY – Proceed as for Bordelaise sauce I but use white wine.

This sauce can also be made with finely chopped shallot and used unstrained.

Bordelaise sauce I (for grilled meat). SAUCE BORDELAISE – Boil down by two-thirds 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) red wine with 1 tablespoon chopped shallot, a sprig of thyme, a piece of bay leaf and a pinch of salt.

Pour in 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) Demi-glaze sauce (see above). Boil down by one-third, remove from heat, add 25 g. (1 oz., 2 tablespoons) butter and strain.

Add 25 g. (1 oz.) beef marrow cut in dice, poached and drained, and 1 teaspoon chopped parsley.

Grilled meats served with bordelaise sauce are usually garnished with slices of poached and drained beef marrow.

Bordelaise sauce II. SAUCE BORDELAISE – Prepare some concentrated red wine as in the preceding recipe, but boil it down only by half. Thicken with 40 g. ( $1\frac{1}{2}$  oz., 3 tablespoons) Kneaded butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters). Boil for a few moments. Add meat glaze or meat extract equal in bulk to a walnut. Finish as in the preceding recipe.

Bordelaise sauce III (old recipe). SAUCE À LA BORDELAISE – 'Put in a saucepan 2 cloves garlic, a pinch of tarragon leaves, the seeded flesh of a lemon, a little bay leaf and 2 cloves, 1 glass Sauternes and 2 teaspoons Provence olive oil. Simmer all together over low heat. Skim off all fat, add enough smooth Espagnole sauce to sauce an entrée, and 3 to 4 tablespoons light veal stock. Boil down, add  $\frac{1}{2}$  glass Sauternes, still simmering. When the sauce reaches the right consistency, strain. Just before serving, add a little butter and the juice of  $\frac{1}{4}$  lemon'. (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Bourguignonne sauce – See Burgundy sauce, below.

Bread sauce (old recipe). SAUCE À LA MIE DE PAIN À L'ANCIENNE – 'Chop 1 clove garlic, 1 shallot and some parsley, put them in a saucepan with  $\frac{1}{2}$  glass white wine, boil down, then mix in 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) very fine bread-crumbs, a little butter, a pinch of mignonette and grated nutmeg, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) good consommé and 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) light veal stock. Boil down by half and add the juice of a lemon.' (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Fried bread sauce (English cookery) (for small roasted birds). SAUCE AU PAIN FRIT – Bring to the boil  $2\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, generous cup) consommé, 25 g. (1 oz., 2 tablespoons) lean diced ham and 1 tablespoon finely chopped shallot. Simmer for 10 minutes.

Add 50 g. (2 oz., 1 cup) breadcrumbs fried in butter, a pinch of chopped parsley and a few drops lemon juice.

Breton or bretonne sauce I. SAUCE À LA BRETONNE – 'Cut 6 large onions in rings, colour them in clarified butter. Drain them on a horsehair sieve, mix with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) consommé and 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) well-beaten Espagnole sauce. Add a little sugar, a little butter and a little chicken glaze, then strain, pressing the sauce through a fine cloth'. (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Breton sauce II (to bind flageolet and haricot beans). SAUCE BRETONNE – See FONDUE, Onion fondue.

Brown gravy, for roast veal (English cookery). SAUCE AU JUS COLORÉ – Add 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) Butter sauce II, to 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) juices from the roast. Finish off with a few drops of Harvey sauce or Worcestershire sauce and ketchup.

Burgundy or bourguignonne sauce I or Red wine sauce I (for eggs, meat, poultry). SAUCE BOURGUIGNONNE, SAUCE AU VIN ROUGE – Cook 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) chopped onion in butter. Stir in 5 dl. (scant pint,  $2\frac{1}{4}$  cups) red wine, season, add a bouquet garni (q.v.) and boil down by two-thirds. Add 3 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint,  $1\frac{1}{4}$  cups) Espagnole sauce, boil down by half and strain. Before serving, add 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) butter.

Bourguignonne sauce intended to accompany a piece of sautéed meat or poultry must be made in the sauté pan in which this was cooked. The onion, previously cooked in butter till soft, is put into the pan at the same time as the wine.

A handful of mushroom skins may be added.

Burgundy or bourguignonne sauce II (for poached eggs). SAUCE BOURGUIGNONNE – Boil down by a half 1 litre ( $1\frac{3}{4}$  pints, generous quart) red wine to which has been added 1 tablespoon chopped shallots, a small bouquet garni (q.v.), a pinch of salt and a little freshly ground pepper.

Thicken with 40 g. ( $1\frac{1}{2}$  oz., 3 tablespoons) Kneaded butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters). Simmer for a few moments, and add 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) butter.

Burgundy or bourguignonne sauce III (for fish). SAUCE BOURGUIGNONNE – Prepare a fish fumet with 1 litre ( $1\frac{3}{4}$  pints, generous quart) red wine, the bones and trimmings from the fish that is being prepared, a medium-sized chopped onion, a small bouquet garni and a handful of mushroom skins. Season.

Strain, boil down by half, and finish with Kneaded butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters) as in the preceding recipe.

If the fish is braised, keep 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) red wine fumet to cook it in, and add this to the sauce.

Burgundy or bourguignotte sauce for freshwater fish (old recipe). SAUCE À LA BOURGUIGNOTTE – Clean a medium-sized eel, cut it in chunks and put it in a saucepan with 2 onions, 225 g. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  lb., 4 cups) chopped mushrooms, 2 cloves garlic, 2 shallots, a bouquet garni, a pinch of powdered pepper, a pinch of four spices, 4 washed anchovies and  $\frac{1}{2}$  bottle Volnay. Boil down a little on low heat, then strain this essence, using pressure. Add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) well mixed Espagnole sauce, and 225 g. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  lb., 4 cups) peeled mushrooms with their stalks. Cook over strong heat in the usual way, and pour in another glass of Volnay. When the sauce is the right consistency, put it into a bain-marie. Before serving add crayfish butter, 30 crayfish tails, and the same number of small white mushrooms.' (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Chambertin sauce. SAUCE AU CHAMBERTIN – See Burgundy sauce. Use Chambertin to make the sauce.

Chambord sauce. SAUCE CHAMBORD – Genevoise sauce prepared with the cooking liquor of the fish used, blended with red wine. (See CARP, Carp Chambord.)

Chapelure or bread sauce (old recipe). SAUCE À LA CHAPELURE – Chop 2 shallots, cut up finely a little lean ham, put in a saucepan with 2 to 3 tablespoons light veal stock and a pinch of mignonette, simmer over low heat. When the sauce is boiled down, remove the ham and add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) very fine breadcrumbs, a little fresh butter, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) good consommé and the juice of a lemon. Boil for a few minutes and serve.' (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Charcutière sauce I (for cuts of grilled or sautéed pork). SAUCE CHARCUTIÈRE – Cook 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) finely chopped onion until soft in 1 tablespoon of lard or butter. Stir in 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) Demi-glace sauce. Boil for a few moments. Strain, and add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) gherkins cut in julienne or dice.

Charcutière sauce II. SAUCE CHARCUTIÈRE – Proceed as above, but dilute the thick pan juices with 1 tablespoon wine vinegar before adding the Demi-glace sauce. Finish with the gherkins.

Charcutière sauce III. SAUCE CHARCUTIÈRE – Mix the cooked onion with 1 tablespoon white wine, stir in Demi-glace sauce and add the gherkins and 1 teaspoon of made mustard.

Charcutière sauce IV. SAUCE CHARCUTIÈRE – Sprinkle the cooked onion with 1 tablespoon flour. Cook till golden. Dilute with a little wine or wine vinegar and stir in white stock (or water with the addition of meat glaze or meat extract). Boil for a few moments. Finish as above.

Chasseur or hunter sauce I (for small cuts of meat and sautéed fowl). SAUCE CHASSEUR – Sauté 100 g. (4 oz., 2 cups) chopped mushrooms in butter, season with salt. When they are three-quarters cooked add 1 tablespoon finely chopped shallot.

Mix with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) white wine, boil down by half, stir in  $1\frac{1}{2}$  dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) Demi-glace sauce and 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) Tomato sauce (see above). Boil for a few moments. Add 25 g. (1 oz., 2 tablespoons) butter and 1 tablespoon chopped parsley, chervil and tarragon.

The mushrooms may also be sautéed in a mixture of butter and oil.

Chasseur or hunter sauce II. SAUCE CHASSEUR – Chop the mushrooms, toss in butter with the chopped shallots and remove from the pan.

Put into the cooking butter 1 tablespoon flour, cook gently till golden, mix with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) white wine, then stir in 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) consommé or white stock and 1 tablespoon tomato purée.

Boil down, put back the mushrooms in the sauce, and finish off as above.

Chateaubriand sauce I (for grilled meat). SAUCE CHATEAUBRIAND – Boil down by two-thirds 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) white wine with 1 tablespoon chopped shallot. Add  $1\frac{1}{2}$  dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) Demi-glace sauce. Boil down by half. Remove from the heat.

Add 100 g. (4 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) fresh butter and 1 tablespoon chopped tarragon. Season with a little cayenne and a few drops of lemon juice. Mix well. Do not strain.

Chateaubriand sauce II. SAUCE CHATEAUBRIAND – Heat 1 tablespoon meat glaze or extract mixed with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) white stock or water. Add 100 g. (4 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) fresh butter cut into fragments, 1 tablespoon chopped parsley and a few drops lemon juice. Season with a little cayenne. Mix well.

Chaud-froid sauce, brown (for various meats). SAUCE CHAUD-FROID BRUNE – To make 5 dl. (scant pint,  $2\frac{1}{4}$  cups) sauce: put in a thick-bottomed saucepan  $3\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (generous  $\frac{1}{2}$  pint,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cups) Demi-glace sauce (see above) and 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) clear brown stock. Boil down over strong heat, stirring with a wooden spoon. Add, a little at a time, 4 dl. ( $\frac{3}{4}$  pint, scant 2 cups) Meat jelly stock (see JELLY).

Boil down until the sauce has the right consistency. Chill a small quantity of the sauce on ice; if it is not firm enough add a few tablespoons jelly and boil down.

Remove from heat, add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) Madeira or other wine indicated in the recipe, and strain. Stir the sauce until it is quite cold.

To obtain a perfect coating, the sauce must be poured over the meat when cold but not set.

Chaud-froid sauce, chicken. SAUCE CHAUD-FROID POUR VOLAILLES – Proceed as for the ordinary Chaud-froid sauce, replacing brown stock by chicken stock. Flavour with wine, or, according to its final use, with a few tablespoons Truffle essence (see ESSENCE).

Chaud-froid sauce, fish. SAUCE CHAUD-FROID POUR POISSON – Proceed as for ordinary Chaud-froid sauce, using Espagnole sauce based on fish stock, well skimmed.

Chaud-froid sauce, game flavoured. SAUCE CHAUD-FROID À L'ESSENCE DE GIBIER – Proceed as for ordinary Chaud-froid sauce, replacing the brown stock by 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) game essence or fumet prepared with the carcasses and trimmings of the game being used.

Flavour the sauce with Madeira or similar wine.

For certain game, notably for thrushes, add to this sauce a few drops of Cognac or gin.

Chaud-froid sauce with orange (for duck and duckling). SAUCE CHAUD-FROID À L'ORANGE – Proceed as for Chaud-froid sauce I, replacing the brown stock by  $1\frac{1}{2}$  dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) duck fumet prepared by using the carcasses and trimmings of the duck.

Concentrate this sauce more than usual so that it will not be made too thin by the addition of the orange juice.

Strain, add to it the strained juice of an orange, and 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) orange peel blanched, cooled in cold water, drained, and cut in a fine julienne.

This sauce can also be used to coat various kinds of game, the duck fumet being replaced by that of the game being used.

Chaud-froid sauce with tomatoes. SAUCE CHAUD-FROID À LA TOMATE – Boil down by one-third 5 dl. (scant pint,  $2\frac{1}{4}$  cups) tomato pulp to which  $3\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (generous  $\frac{1}{2}$  pint,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cups) Meat jelly stock (see JELLY) have been added.

Strain, and stir until completely cold.

Chaud-froid sauce with truffle essence. SAUCE CHAUD-FROID À L'ESSENCE DE TRUFFES – Prepare game-flavoured Chaud-froid sauce with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) Truffle essence (see ESSENCE).

Chaud-froid sauce à la niçoise. SAUCE CHAUD-FROID À LA NIÇOISE – Proceed as for Chaud-froid sauce, fish. Add to the finished sauce a few drops anchovy essence and 1 tablespoon chopped tarragon.

Dried cherry sauce for venison (old recipe). SAUCE AUX CERISES SÈCHES – ‘Peel and wash 500 g. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  lb.) dried cherries, pound them in a mortar and boil them in a saucepan with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) sugar, 2 glasses good Burgundy,  $\frac{1}{4}$  glass wine vinegar, a pinch of coriander and a little lemon peel. Simmer for 20 to 25 minutes and mix with it 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) Espagnole sauce and the juice of a lemon. Boil down, stirring all the time over strong heat. Strain through a cloth, using pressure.’ (Carême, L’Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Colbert sauce (for grilled fish and meat and for vegetables). SAUCE COLBERT – Bring to the boil 3 to 4 tablespoons (scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  to  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) meat glaze diluted with 1 tablespoon white stock or water. Remove from heat and incorporate 100 g. (4 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) softened butter.

Season, and add a little grated nutmeg and a pinch of cayenne. Add, stirring all the time, the juice of  $\frac{1}{2}$  lemon, 1 tablespoon chopped parsley and 1 tablespoon Madeira.

Cranberry sauce for roast fowl, particularly turkey (Anglo-American cookery). SAUCE AUX AIRELLES – Cook 250 g. (9 oz.) cranberries with 5 dl. (scant pint,  $2\frac{1}{4}$  cups) water in a covered pan for a few minutes, until the berries split. Drain and rub through a fine sieve.

Dilute with a few tablespoons of the cooking juice to make a thick sauce. Sweeten and heat through. Chill before serving.

Diable or devilled sauce I (for grilled chicken etc.). SAUCE À LA DIABLE – Boil down by two-thirds 1  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  pint,  $\frac{2}{3}$  cup) white wine and 1 tablespoon vinegar with 1 tablespoon chopped shallot, a sprig of thyme,  $\frac{1}{4}$  bay leaf and a good pinch of freshly ground pepper. Stir in 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) Demi-glace sauce. Boil for a few moments and strain. Add 1 teaspoon chopped parsley and season with cayenne pepper.

The wine can be boiled down with vinegar alone. A small quantity of fresh butter may be added, but first remove the saucepan from heat.

Diable or devilled sauce II. SAUCE À LA DIABLE – Prepare the wine and herbs as above. Pour in stock or water to which meat glaze or extract has been added. Thicken with Kneaded butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters). Finish off as above.

Diable or devilled sauce III for grilled chicken, etc. (English cookery). SAUCE À LA DIABLE – Boil down by half 1  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  pint,  $\frac{2}{3}$  cup) wine vinegar to which 1 tablespoon chopped shallot has been added.

Stir in 2  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, generous cup) Espagnole sauce and 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) tomato purée. Cook for 5 minutes. Add 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce, 1 tablespoon of Harvey sauce, and a little cayenne. Strain.

Duxelles sauce (for eggs, small cuts of meat, fish, chicken). SAUCE DUXELLES – Stir in 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) white wine to 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) chopped mushrooms prepared as duxelles. Boil down, stir in 1  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  pint,  $\frac{2}{3}$  cup) Demi-glace sauce (see above) and 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) tomato purée. Boil for a few moments. Add 1 tablespoon chopped parsley.

In times past this was known as sauce aux fines herbes.

Espagnole demi-glace – This is a rich sauce, used as a basis for many lesser sauces. After adding a specified quantity of white or brown clear stock to the basic stock and boiling it down, the brown sauce becomes very thick, almost jellied. This can be used in the preparation of different brown sauces.

Espagnole demi-glace is often replaced by stock or brown veal stock, brought to the right consistency by boiling it down or by thickening it with potato flour or arrowroot. This latter method gives a very good result.

Financière sauce I (for sweetbreads, fowl, timbales, vol-au-vent, etc.). SAUCE FINANCIÈRE – Add to 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) Madeira sauce as it cooks, 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) truffle essence, and strain.

This sauce is rarely used by itself. Its most important function is to bind the Financière garnish (see GARNISHES).

Financière sauce II (old recipe). SAUCE FINANCIÈRE – ‘Put into a saucepan some shredded lean ham, a pinch of mignonette, a little thyme and bay leaf, some mushroom and truffle trimmings and 2 glasses dry Madeira. Boil down over low heat and add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) consommé and 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) well-beaten Espagnole sauce (see above). Boil down by half, strain, then put it back on the heat and mix in  $\frac{1}{2}$  glass Madeira. Boil down in a bain-marie.

When this sauce is intended for a game entrée, the chicken consommé is replaced by an appropriate game fumet. Add a little butter just before serving.’ (Carême, L’Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Fines herbes sauce I (for small cuts of meat). SAUCE AUX FINES HERBES – Add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) chopped parsley, chervil and tarragon to 1  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  pint,  $\frac{2}{3}$  cup) strained Demi-glace sauce or concentrated brown stock. Add a few drops lemon juice.

Fines herbes sauce II. SAUCE AUX FINES HERBES – Boil down 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) white wine with a handful of parsley, chervil and tarragon leaves. Add 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) Demi-glace sauce. Finish off as for Tarragon sauce.

Fines herbes sauce III. SAUCE AUX FINES HERBES – Toss in butter 1 tablespoon chopped shallot. Add 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) white wine, boil down and add 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) stock. Thicken with 40 g. (1  $\frac{1}{2}$  oz., 3 tablespoons) Kneaded butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters). Boil for a few moments, strain, and add 1 tablespoon chopped parsley, chervil and tarragon and a few drops of lemon juice.

This Fines herbes sauce was formerly made like the Duxelles sauce for which the recipe is given previously.

Genevoise sauce (for fish, chiefly trout and salmon). SAUCE GENEVOISE – Cook gently in butter a mirepoix of 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) diced carrot, 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) diced onion, a stick of celery, a sprig of thyme, a piece of bay leaf and 10 parsley sprigs.

Add 500 g. (18 oz.) salmon head cut in small pieces or an equal quantity of bones and trimmings of other fish.

Cook slowly with a lid on for 15 minutes. Strain the liquid and discard the seasonings. Add 6 dl. (1 pint,  $2\frac{1}{2}$  cups) good red wine and boil down by half.

Add 3 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, 1  $\frac{1}{4}$  cups) Espagnole sauce II based on fish stock. Bring to the boil, skim, and simmer over low heat for 1 hour, skimming frequently and adding extra fish fumet, if necessary.

Strain the sauce through a fine strainer, pressing the ingredients. Remove all grease, put the sauce into a saucepan, dilute with a few tablespoons fish fumet made with red wine, and boil down by one-third to one-half.

Strain the sauce, remove from the heat and incorporate 75 g. (3 oz., 6 tablespoons) fresh butter and 1 teaspoon anchovy essence.

The delicate flavour of this sauce will be improved by adding, in the course of the cooking, a handful of mushroom skins. When the fish it accompanies has been braised add the braising liquor to the sauce.

To obtain a brown and brilliant genevoise sauce mix with a wooden spoon when the butter is incorporated. This applies to all brown sauces with butter.

Genevoise sauce with Bordeaux wine (old recipe). SAUCE GENEVOISE AU VIN DE BORDEAUX – ‘Pour into a saucepan 2 glasses

(cups) red Bordeaux wine, add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) mushrooms, truffles, parsley and 2 shallots, all blanched and chopped, a pinch of four-spices and a pinch of finely ground pepper. Boil down almost completely, add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) of consommé, 3 to 4 tablespoons Espagnole sauce and 1 glass Bordeaux wine. Boil down to the desired consistency and transfer the sauce to a bain-marie. Blend in a little Isigny butter.' (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Gooseberry sauce (English cookery). SAUCE AUX GROSEILLES – Cook  $\frac{1}{2}$  litre (scant pint,  $2\frac{1}{4}$  cups) green gooseberries, topped and tailed, with  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (3 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) water and 75 g. (3 oz., 6 tablespoons) sugar.

Rub through a fine strainer.

Grand Veneur sauce I (for venison). SAUCE GRAND VENEUR – Add 1 tablespoon gooseberry jelly to 2 dl. ( $1\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) concentrated and strained Pepper or poivrade sauce II.

Grand Veneur sauce II. SAUCE GRAND VENEUR – Finish off Pepper or poivrade sauce II with gooseberry jelly and 2 to 3 tablespoons (3 tablespoons to scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) cream. Mix.

Grand Veneur sauce III. SAUCE GRAND VENEUR – Add to Pepper or poivrade sauce II a few tablespoons hare's blood diluted with a little of the marinade of the game being used.

Hachée sauce I (for minced meat and other dishes made with left-overs). SAUCE HACHÉE – Cook 1 large tablespoon chopped onion in 1 tablespoon butter. When it is three-quarters cooked, add  $\frac{1}{2}$  tablespoon chopped shallot.

Stir in 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) wine vinegar, boil down, and add  $1\frac{1}{2}$  dl. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  pint,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) Demi-glaze sauce (see above) and 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) tomato purée. Simmer for a few moments. Add 1 tablespoon chopped lean ham, 1 tablespoon dry duxelles, 1 tablespoon chopped capers and gherkins, and 1 tablespoon chopped parsley.

Hachée sauce II (old recipe). SAUCE HACHÉE – 'Pour into a saucepan 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) vinegar, add 1 tablespoon chopped mushrooms, half this quantity parsley, 2 chopped shallots, a little garlic, a fragment of thyme and bay leaf, 2 cloves, a good pinch of white pepper and a little grated nutmeg. Cook this seasoning over low heat. Take out the bay leaf, thyme and cloves and add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) consommé and 2 big tablespoons (3 tablespoons) Espagnole sauce. Boil down and transfer it to a bain-marie. Before serving mix in a little anchovy butter, 2 small gherkins chopped very finely and some capers.' (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Herb sauce for boiled fish and joints (English cookery). SAUCE AUX AROMATES – Put in a saucepan 1 chopped shallot, a sprig of thyme, a pinch of chives, a pinch of savory, a pinch of marjoram, a good pinch of sage, a good pinch of basil, 4 peppercorns and a little grated nutmeg. Pour in  $2\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, generous cup) boiling consommé. Cover the pan and allow to infuse for 10 minutes. Strain. Stir into a blond roux prepared with 25 g. (1 oz., 2 tablespoons) butter and 25 g. (1 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) flour. Mix, simmer for a few moments, strain, and add 1 tablespoon chopped, blanched chervil and tarragon, and a squeeze of lemon juice.

Hunter sauce – See Chasseur sauce.

Italian sauce I (for small cuts of meat, fowl). SAUCE ITALIENNE – Prepare 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{3}$  pint, scant cup) Duxelles sauce and add 1 tablespoon chopped lean cooked ham and 1 tablespoon chopped parsley, chervil and tarragon.

Italian sauce II (for grilled fish). SAUCE ITALIENNE – Proceed as in the foregoing recipe, but use Espagnole sauce based on fish stock to add to the duxelles, and leave out the ham.

Lyonnaise sauce I (for small cuts of meat, chiefly for leftovers). SAUCE LYONNAISE – Cook 3 tablespoons (scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) finely chopped onion in 1 tablespoon butter. Moisten with  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (3 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) wine vinegar and an equal quantity white wine. Boil down, and add 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{3}$  pint, scant cup) Demi-glaze sauce. Cook at boiling point for a few moments.

A small quantity of tomato purée may be added.

Lyonnaise sauce II. SAUCE LYONNAISE – Cook the onion in butter. Sprinkle with 1 tablespoon flour and colour lightly. Stir in wine vinegar, white wine, and stock. Finish off as above.

Madeira sauce I (for small cuts of meat). SAUCE AU MADÈRE – Add to 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{3}$  pint, scant cup) concentrated Demi-glaze sauce, 3 tablespoons (scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) Madeira.

Madeira sauce II. SAUCE AU MADÈRE – Sauté in butter the piece of meat being used. Take it out of the pot, dilute the cooking juices with 1 tablespoon Madeira, and add 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{3}$  pint, scant cup) stock, or water to which a little meat glaze or extract has been added. Bring to the boil. Thicken with 40 g. ( $1\frac{1}{2}$  oz., 3 tablespoons) Kneaded butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters). Finish with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) Madeira and strain.

Marrow sauce (for grilled meat, vegetables, poached eggs). SAUCE À LA MOELLE – Like Bordelaise sauce but replace the red wine with white wine.

Marrow sauce II (for grilled fish). SAUCE À LA MOELLE – Boil down 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) white wine with 1 good tablespoon chopped shallot. Season with salt and a little freshly ground pepper. Add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) concentrated and thickened brown stock or 1 tablespoon meat glaze or meat extract. Mix.

Add, away from the heat, 100 g. (4 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) butter cut in tiny pieces and 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) marrow, blanched, drained, and cut into small dice.

Add a few drops lemon juice and 1 tablespoon chopped parsley.

This sauce, a variant of Bercy sauce, is poured directly on the grilled fish.

Matelote sauce (for eel and freshwater fish). SAUCE MATELOTE – See Red wine sauce.

Mushroom sauce I (for small cuts of meat; sautéed poultry). SAUCE AUX CHAMPIGNONS – Sauté in butter 100 g. (4 oz.,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cups) peeled mushroom caps or large sliced mushrooms. Season, pour in 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{3}$  pint, scant cup) Demi-glaze sauce and 1 tablespoon Madeira, and simmer over gentle heat without allowing to boil. Canned mushrooms can be used.

Mushroom sauce II. SAUCE AUX CHAMPIGNONS – Sauté the mushrooms in butter and remove from the pan. Put 1 scant tablespoon flour in the butter and cook till pale golden colour.

Stir in 3 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint,  $1\frac{1}{4}$  cups) white stock or consommé and boil down by one-third. Put the mushrooms back in the sauce, heat without boiling, and add 1 tablespoon Madeira.

Mustard sauce (for grilled meat, particularly for pig's trotters St. Menehould). SAUCE MOUTARDE – Cook gently in butter 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) finely chopped onion, season with salt, pepper, a pinch of thyme and powdered bay leaf.

Stir in  $1\frac{1}{2}$  dl. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  pint,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) white wine, boil down, add  $1\frac{1}{2}$  dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) Demi-glaze sauce. Boil down by one-third. Add 1 good tablespoon Dijon mustard, 1 tablespoon butter and a squeeze of lemon juice.

Napolitaine sauce for game and venison (old recipe). SAUCE À LA NAPOLITAINE – 'Put in a saucepan 1 tablespoon grated horseradish, a little chopped lean ham, a seasoned bouquet garni, a little mignonette and grated nutmeg, and 1 glass dry Madeira. Boil down over very low heat, take out the bouquet, add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) consommé and 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) Espagnole sauce. Strain the sauce through a cloth and boil down again, mixing in, little by little, 1 glass Malaga and  $\frac{1}{4}$  pot redcurrant jelly. Add a little butter and game glaze.

How to strain a sauce through muslin, using two wooden spatulas (Larousse)

'For entrées of braised fillets of beef and roasts served à la napolitaine, add sultanas, picked over and washed, to the sauce. A little candied citron cut in small dice and blanched may also be added.' (Carême, L'art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Noisette sauce. SAUCE NOISETTE – Hollandaise sauce with Noisette butter added (see BUTTER, Compound butters).

Orange sauce (for duck and teal, spit or oven roasted). SAUCE À L'ORANGE – After cooking the duck, remove the grease and dilute the cooking juices in the pan with 1 glass white wine. Boil down, add 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) concentrated and thickened brown stock. Simmer for a few moments and add the juice of an orange.

Strain through muslin and add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) orange peel cut in fine julienne, blanched and drained.

Oyster sauce or brown oyster sauce for grilled meat, meat pudding, grilled cod (English cookery). SAUCE AUX HUITRES – Stir 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) of the liquor in which oysters were cooked and 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) light brown stock into a brown roux composed of 25 g. (1 oz., 2 tablespoons) butter and 15 g. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  oz., 2 tablespoons) flour.

Season very lightly, bring to the boil, and cook for 10 minutes. Strain, add 12 poached, de-bearded and sliced oysters, and a pinch of cayenne.

Pepper or poivrade sauce I (for meat). SAUCE POIVRADE – Cook 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) vegetable mirepoix gently in butter. When the vegetables are soft, moisten them with  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (3 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) wine vinegar and the same amount of white wine. Boil down by half.

Stir in 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) Espagnole sauce and 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) white stock. Cook very slowly for 1 hour. Skim the sauce from time to time and add a few tablespoons white stock if the boiling down is too rapid.

A few minutes before straining the sauce add 5 crushed peppercorns.

Strain, pressing well. Add 3 or 4 tablespoons (scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  or  $\frac{1}{3}$  cup) stock and put back the sauce to boil for a few minutes.

If the poivrade sauce is to accompany marinated meat, add to it, in the course of cooking, a few tablespoons of the marinade. If the recipe demands butter, add it just before serving.

The characteristic of this sauce is its peppery taste, blending with that of the various vegetables and aromatics and sharpened by the vinegar.

Pepper must only be added to the preparation at the last moment. Allowed to cook for a long time it develops an acrid taste. A small amount, added at the end of the preparation of a dish, produces a better result than a large quantity put in at the beginning.

Pepper or poivrade sauce II (for game). SAUCE POIVRADE AU GIBIER – Cook the mirepoix of vegetables in butter until they are soft, as in the preceding recipe, adding to them the trimmings of the game being used, cut in small pieces.

When everything is cooked, moisten with wine vinegar and white wine and finish off as for the ordinary Poivrade sauce.

The mirepoix may be cooked in oil instead of butter. To heighten the fine flavour of poivrade sauces, add to them, in the course of cooking, a handful of mushroom skins.

Pepper or poivrade sauce III (old recipe). SAUCE POIVRADE – 'Put in a saucepan 2 chopped onions and 2 chopped carrots, add a little lean ham, a few sprigs of parsley, a little thyme and bay leaf, a good pinch of mignonette, a little mace, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) good vinegar, and 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) consommé. Simmer on very low heat.

'When the boiling down is complete, add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) consommé and 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) well-stirred Espagnole sauce. Simmer for a few moments, strain the sauce, using pressure, and boil it down to the desired consistency. Add a little butter.' (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Périgourdine sauce (for small cuts of meat, fowl, etc.). SAUCE PÉRIGOURDINE – A variant of Périgueux sauce. The only difference is that in this version the truffles are cut in thick round slices.

Périgueux sauce I (for small cuts of meat, fowl, game, timbales, vol-au-vent, etc.). SAUCE PÉRIGUEUX – Boil down by one-third 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) Demi-glaze sauce (see above) with 2 or 3 tablespoons (3 tablespoons or scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) Truffle essence (see ESSENCE).

Strain. Add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) diced cooked truffles away from the heat.

After the truffles have been added the sauce must not be boiled again.

Périgueux sauce II. SAUCE PÉRIGUEUX – Cook gently in butter 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) diced truffles. Season with salt and pepper and drain.

Dilute the juices in the pan with 1 tablespoon Madeira. Stir in 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) thickened brown stock. Simmer for a few moments. Strain. Put the truffles back in the sauce, add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) Madeira and keep hot without allowing to boil.

SAUCE

Pine kernel sauce à l'italienne (old recipe). SAUCE AUX PIGNOLES À L'ITALIENNE – 'Put into a saucepan 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) brown or white sugar, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) good vinegar, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) light veal stock, a seasoned bouquet garni, a pinch of grated nutmeg and a pinch of mignonette. Simmer all together over moderate heat. When the boiling down is complete, add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) Espagnole sauce and 1 glass of red Bordeaux wine. When the sauce has boiled down, strain it through a cloth, add 1 tablespoon of the white pine kernels which the Italians call pignoli. The pignoli should boil for a second in the sauce.' (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Piquante sauce (for small cuts of meat and various left-over meat dishes). SAUCE PIQUANTE – Make 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{3}$  pint, scant cup) Diable or devilled sauce (see above) with wine vinegar.

Add 1 tablespoon chopped gherkins and 1 tablespoon chopped parsley.

Poor man's sauce I (for dishes made with left-overs). SAUCE PAUVRE HOMME – Colour lightly in 1 tablespoon butter 1 good tablespoon flour. Moisten with  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (3 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) wine vinegar, boil down, and stir in 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{3}$  pint, scant cup) stock or water with a little meat glaze or extract. Season and simmer for a few seconds.

Add 1 tablespoon blanched chopped shallots, 1 tablespoon chopped parsley and 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) golden breadcrumbs.

The shallot may be replaced by chives, or both may be used.

Poor man's sauce II. SAUCE PAUVRE HOMME – Fry in 1 tablespoon butter 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) golden breadcrumbs. Moisten with  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (3 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) wine vinegar. Boil down and stir in stock. Simmer for a few moments and finish off with blanched, chopped shallots and onions, together with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) chopped parsley.

Poor man's sauce III (English cookery). SAUCE PAUVRE HOMME – Colour lightly in butter 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) chopped onion. Moisten with  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (3 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) white wine and  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (3 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) wine vinegar.

Boil down by two-thirds, stir in  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  pint,  $\frac{2}{3}$  cup) consommé and thicken with brown roux made with 10 g. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  oz., 1 tablespoon) butter and 10 g. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  oz., 2 tablespoons) flour. Cook for 10 minutes.

Finish off with 1 dessertspoon capers, 1 dessertspoon chopped parsley and a little cayenne.

Port wine sauce I (for meat, fowl, foie gras). SAUCE AU PORTO – Proceed as for Madeira sauce, replacing the latter with port wine.

Port wine sauce II for game birds, particularly wild duck (English cookery). SAUCE AU PORTO – Boil down by half 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) port to which  $\frac{1}{2}$  tablespoon chopped shallot, a sprig of thyme and a piece of bay leaf have been added. Add the juice of 1 orange and  $\frac{1}{2}$  lemon, and a pinch grated orange rind. Stir in 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{3}$  pint, scant cup) thickened brown veal stock. Simmer for a few moments and strain.

Portugaise sauce I (for eggs, fish, meat and poultry). SAUCE PORTUGAISE – Cook 1 good tablespoon finely chopped onion in 1 tablespoon oil. When it is golden in colour, add 4 peeled, coarsely chopped, tomatoes and a little grated garlic. Season.

Begin cooking over good heat, then cover the pan and cook very slowly, stirring from time to time, for 25 minutes. Stir in 4 tablespoons ( $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) thickened brown stock. Add 1 tablespoon chopped parsley and a little freshly ground pepper.

Portugaise sauce II for braised or roasted fillet of beef, and for ham (old recipe). SAUCE À LA PORTUGAISE – 'Take off carefully 2 small pieces of lemon peel and the same amount of orange peel; put them into a saucepan, adding 1 teaspoon coriander seeds, 1 teaspoon sugar and 1 glass Malaga. Simmer over a low heat, add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) consommé and strain this seasoning through a cloth. Add enough Espagnole sauce to accompany an entrée. After having boiled down the sauce to the desired point, add 1 glass Malaga. Boil down again, then pour the sauce into a bain-marie, and add the juice of a lemon and a little butter.' (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Provençal sauce (for eggs, fish, small cuts of meat, fowl, vegetables). SAUCE PROVENÇALE – Cook 50g. (2oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) chopped onion in oil until soft. Add 4 large peeled and pressed tomatoes, 1 small clove of crushed garlic, salt and pepper. Cook for a few minutes over good heat. Moisten with  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  pint,  $\frac{2}{3}$  cup) dry white wine. Boil down. Add 2  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, generous cup) light veal stock. Cook for 15 minutes. Add 1 good teaspoon chopped parsley.

Ravigote sauce (old recipe). SAUCE RAVIGOTE À L'ANCIENNE – 'Chop an onion and cook it lightly in a little clarified butter. Add a glass of Chablis, 1 tablespoon consommé, the juice of a lemon, a little garlic and shallot, a chopped gherkin, 1 tablespoon capers, some parsley roots, tarragon leaves, a small bouquet garni, a clove, a pinch of nutmeg and crushed peppercorns. Simmer for 20 minutes, strain into a saucepan containing 2 large tablespoons boiling Espagnole sauce and carefully remove all grease from this sauce. Boil down to the desired point, mix in 1 teaspoon fine mustard and strain through a cloth. When ready to serve, blend in a little fresh butter and 1 tablespoon chopped chervil and tarragon.' (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Straining a sauce through muslin by twisting (Larousse)

Red wine sauce I. SAUCE AU VIN ROUGE – See Burgundy or bourguignonne sauce.

Red wine sauce II (for eggs and fish). SAUCE AU VIN ROUGE – Cook in butter  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (3 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) vegetable mirepoix, seasoned with thyme and bay leaf till soft.

Pour in 5 dl. (scant pint,  $2\frac{1}{4}$  cups) red wine, add 1 small clove garlic, crushed, and a handful of mushroom skins. Boil down by half. Add 3 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint,  $1\frac{1}{4}$  cups) Espagnole sauce and a few tablespoons light stock or fumet from the fish being cooked. Boil down by half.

Add 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) butter, and a few drops anchovy essence, away from heat. Add a pinch of cayenne. Strain.

Red wine sauce III (for fish). SAUCE AU VIN ROUGE – Cook the fish in a liquor prepared with  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (3 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) vegetable mirepoix cooked in butter until soft, 5 dl. (scant pint,  $2\frac{1}{4}$  cups) red wine, 1 clove garlic and some mushroom skins.

Boil down the liquid by one-third. Thicken with 40 g. ( $1\frac{1}{2}$  oz., 3 tablespoons) Kneaded butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters).

Finish off as above with butter and anchovy essence.

Reform sauce for mutton cutlets (English cookery). SAUCE RÉFORME – Add to  $2\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, generous cup) Poivrade sauce a garnish composed of 1 gherkin, 1 hard-boiled egg white, 2 cooked mushrooms, 25 g. (1 oz.) pickled tongue and 1 small cooked truffle, all cut in short strips.

After the garnish is added to the sauce, avoid boiling.

Régence sauce for sweetbreads, oven-roast or braised chicken (old recipe). SAUCE RÉGENCE – ‘Cook without colouring, with 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) butter, 100 g. (4 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) lean ham cut in big dice and 1 onion cut in quarters. When the onions are almost cooked, add 1 chopped shallot.

‘Moisten with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) Graves, boil down by two-thirds, and add 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{3}$  pint, scant cup) chicken stock. Cook over low heat.

‘Rub the cooked onions through a fine sieve, add 4 dl. ( $\frac{3}{4}$  pint, scant 2 cups) Demi-glaze sauce and 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) concentrated chicken stock. Boil down until the sauce will coat the spoon. Strain.’ (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Robert sauce I (for grilled meat, mostly grilled pork). SAUCE ROBERT – Cook 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) finely chopped onion in 1 tablespoon of butter or lard till soft.

Moisten with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) white wine. Boil down and add 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{3}$  pint, scant cup) Demi-glaze sauce. Simmer for a few seconds. Add 1 tablespoon mustard.

Robert sauce II. SAUCE ROBERT – Sprinkle the cooked onion with 1 tablespoon flour, allow to colour lightly, moisten with white wine and add stock. Finish off with mustard.

Robert sauce III (old recipe). SAUCE ROBERT – ‘Cut 3 onions into small dice, cook till they are golden in clarified butter, drain and mix with some consommé and 2 large tablespoons (3 large tablespoons) Espagnole sauce. Boil down the sauce to the desired consistency, mix in a little sugar, a little pepper, a little vinegar and 1 tablespoon fine mustard.’ (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Roebuck sauce I (for small cuts of meat). SAUCE CHEVREUIL – Boil down by one-third 3 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint,  $1\frac{1}{4}$  cups) ordinary Poivrade sauce, adding in the course of cooking  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (3 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) red wine, poured in little by little. Season with a little cayenne and strain through a cloth.

Roebuck sauce II. SAUCE CHEVREUIL – Proceed as in the above recipe using Pepper or Poivrade sauce II for game.

Roebuck sauce III (English cookery). SAUCE CHEVREUIL – Cook 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) chopped onion and 40 g. ( $1\frac{1}{2}$  oz., 3 tablespoons) diced ham in butter until they colour. Add a bouquet garni, pour in  $\frac{3}{4}$  dl. (5 tablespoons, generous  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) wine vinegar and boil down almost to nothing.

Add 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{3}$  pint, scant cup) Espagnole sauce, boil for 25 minutes, skimming frequently.

Take out the bouquet garni and finish off the sauce with  $\frac{1}{2}$  glass port and 1 tablespoon redcurrant jelly.

Romaine sauce I (for venison). SAUCE À LA ROMAINE – Cook to a pale caramel 3 large lumps of sugar. Moisten with 1 tablespoon vinegar, add 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{3}$  pint, scant cup) Demi-glaze sauce and 4 tablespoons ( $\frac{1}{3}$  cup) game fumet. Simmer for a few minutes. Strain through a cloth. Add 1 tablespoon pine kernels, roasted lightly in the oven, and 1 tablespoon currants and sultanas, washed, soaked till swollen in warm water, and dried.

Romaine sauce II (old recipe). SAUCE À LA ROMAINE – ‘Chop up the white part of a celery heart and put it in a saucepan with a good pinch of coriander, a pinch of sugar, a clove of garlic, a little basil, bay leaf and 2 glasses Champagne. Simmer over low heat. When the celery is cooked, add 2 large tablespoons (3 large tablespoons) consommé and 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) Espagnole sauce. Boil down, pour in  $\frac{1}{2}$  glass Champagne and boil down again. Strain the sauce, using pressure, and before serving add a little butter and the juice of a lemon.’ (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Rouennaise sauce (for duck; may also be served with poached eggs). SAUCE ROUENNAISE – Bring to the boil 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{3}$  pint, scant cup) Bordelaise sauce (see above). Remove from direct heat, but keep the sauce hot, and add the finely chopped liver of a Rouen duck. Stir, season with salt, freshly ground pepper and a small pinch of spice. Strain through a cloth, pressing with a wooden spoon. Keep hot in the bain-marie.

This sauce may also be made with chicken livers.

Sainte-Menehoulde sauce (for grilled pork, chiefly pigs' trotters). SAUCE SAINTE-MENEHOULDE – Cook 1 large tablespoon finely chopped onion in 1 tablespoon butter till soft. Season with a pinch of salt and a little thyme and powdered bay leaf.

Moisten with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) white wine and 1 tablespoon vinegar. Boil down completely. Stir in 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{3}$  pint, scant cup) Demi-glaze sauce. Simmer for a few seconds over good heat and add 1 tablespoon each of mustard, chopped gherkins and chopped parsley and chervil, and a pinch of cayenne.

Salmis sauce (for game birds prepared in salmis). SAUCE SALMIS – Cook till soft in butter 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) vegetable mirepoix, together with the chopped carcase, skin and trimmings of the game being cooked. (See WOODCOCK, Salmis of woodcock.)

Moisten with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) white wine and boil down. Add 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{3}$  pint, scant cup) Demi-glaze sauce and 2 or 3 tablespoons game fumet or light stock. Simmer for 25 minutes and sieve, using pressure. Put the sauce back in the pan with 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{3}$  pint, scant cup) game fumet or light stock. Simmer for 20 minutes, skim and strain.

Pour over the pieces of game arranged in the sauté pan. Heat without boiling. The sauce must be thick enough to coat the pieces of game.

Salmis sauce with Champagne (old recipe). SAUCE SALMIS AU VIN DE CHAMPAGNE – ‘Put into a saucepan  $\frac{1}{2}$  bottle Champagne, add the trimmings of 6 partridges prepared for a salmis, a piece of bay leaf, 2 shallots and 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) consommé and simmer this fumet for an hour. Strain it through a sieve and boil it down by half. Add 2 large tablespoons (3 large tablespoons) Espagnole sauce.

‘When the sauce is almost boiled down to the proper point, pour into it  $\frac{1}{2}$  glass Champagne, and boil it down again to the desired consistency. Strain through a cloth and, before serving, blend in a little fine butter.

'To make a salmis with Bordeaux use a bottle of Bordeaux wine in place of the Champagne and for ordinary salmis make the fumet simply with stock, a shallot and a piece of bay leaf.' (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Salmis sauce with red wine. SAUCE SALMIS AU VIN ROUGE – Proceed as in the above recipe, using red wine instead of white.

Tarragon sauce I (for eggs, small cuts of meat, etc.). SAUCE À L'ESTRAGON – Boil down 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) white wine with 10 g. (scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  oz.) tarragon leaves, roughly chopped. Add 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) Demi-glace sauce or thickened brown stock. Boil for a few moments and strain through a cloth.

Add 1 tablespoon chopped tarragon. Garnish whatever is to be served with this sauce with tarragon leaves blanched for a moment in boiling salted water, cooled in cold water and drained.

Tarragon sauce II. SAUCE À L'ESTRAGON – Sauté the meat or poultry in butter. Drain, dilute the juices in the saucepan with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) white wine, add a handful of chopped tarragon, boil down, pour in stock or water with meat glaze or extract added, and bind with Kneaded butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters).

Tarragon sauce III (for poached fowl). SAUCE À L'ESTRAGON – Put a good handful of tarragon into the white stock in which the chicken was poached.

Remove all grease, strain the stock through muslin, boil it down, and thicken with arrowroot (corn starch) or potato flour.

Finish off with chopped tarragon.

Poached fowl served with this sauce is garnished with blanched tarragon leaves.

Tortue sauce for calf's head or other offal (U.S. variety meats) served 'en tortue'. SAUCE TORTUE – Bring to the boil 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) white wine. Add a sprig of thyme, quarter of a bay leaf, a sprig of crushed parsley, 1 or 2 sage leaves, a sprig of rosemary and a sprig of basil.

Cover the pan and allow to infuse over low heat, without boiling, for 15 to 20 minutes. Strain.

Add to  $\frac{2}{3}$  dl. (scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, generous cup) Demi-glace sauce 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) tomato sauce, 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) light stock and a handful of mushroom skins. Boil down by half. Add the strained infusion.

Simmer for few moments, and add a pinch of cayenne, a little spice, and 3 tablespoons (scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) Madeira. Strain through a cloth.

Tortue sauce with Madeira (old recipe). SAUCE TORTUE AU VIN DE MADÈRE – 'Put into a saucepan 1 glass dry Madeira, a little chopped lean ham, a pinch of mignonette, a pinch of pimento, a pinch of cayenne and a chopped shallot. Simmer over low heat and add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons), consommé, 2 large tablespoons (3 large tablespoons) well-stirred Espagnole sauce and a little tomato sauce.

'When this sauce is boiled down to the desired point, add to it  $\frac{1}{4}$  glass of Madeira. Bring to the boil once or twice, strain through a cloth and, before serving, add a little fresh butter.' (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Vénison sauce. SAUCE VENAISON – See above, Grand Veneur sauce.

Vénison sauce (old recipe). SAUCE VENAISON – 'Pour into a saucepan 1 glass old Burgundy wine, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) ordinary vinegar, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) sugar, the flesh of  $\frac{1}{2}$  lemon with its seeds removed,  $\frac{1}{2}$  pot of redcurrants. Boil down and add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) Espagnole sauce. Boil down again, mixing in at intervals a second glass of Burgundy. When the sauce is concentrated, strain through a cloth.' (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Victoria sauce for venison (English cookery). SAUCE VICTORIA – Add  $1\frac{1}{2}$  dl. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  pint,  $\frac{2}{3}$  cup) port and 3 tablespoons (scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) redcurrant jelly to  $2\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, generous cup) Espagnole sauce. Add 8 peppercorns, 2 cloves, a fragment of cinnamon and the peel of 1 orange.

Boil down by one-third, add the juice of an orange and a little cayenne and strain through a cloth.

Yorkshire sauce for braised ham and roast and braised duck (English cooking). SAUCE YORKSHIRE – Cook 1 large tablespoon of orange peel cut in a fine julienne in 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) port.

Drain the peel. Add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) Espagnole sauce and 1 tablespoon redcurrant jelly to the port. Season with a pinch of powdered cinnamon and a pinch of cayenne and simmer for a few moments. Add the juice of an orange and strain. Finish off with the orange peel cooked in port.

Zingara sauce (for small cuts of meat and poultry). SAUCE ZINGARA – Add a julienne composed of 1 tablespoon each of lean cooked ham, pickled tongue and mushrooms, and 1 heaped teaspoon truffles, to 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) Demi-glace sauce cooked with a few tablespoons tomato sauce and a few tablespoons mushroom stock. Season with a little paprika and keep warm without allowing the sauce to boil.

COMPOUND WHITE SAUCES: SAUCES COMPOSÉES, BLANCHES –

Aigrelette sauce with verjuice (old recipe). SAUCE AIGRELETTE AU VERJUS – 'Wash 30 verjuice grapes, pound them and press out the juice through a cloth. Boil 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) Allemande sauce with a little chicken glaze, a little butter, a pinch of nutmeg and finely ground pepper, and enough verjuice to render the sauce sharp and appetising.' (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Albert sauce for braised beef (English cookery). SAUCE ALBERT – Cook at boiling point for 20 minutes 75 g. (3 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) grated horseradish moistened with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) light consommé.

Add  $1\frac{1}{2}$  dl. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  pint,  $\frac{2}{3}$  cup) Butter sauce II 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) cream and 25 g. (1 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) fine breadcrumbs. Boil down over strong heat, stirring all the time. Strain, pressing with spoon. Put back in the saucepan, thicken with 1 egg yolk and season with salt and pepper.

Finish off with  $\frac{1}{2}$  teaspoon English mustard diluted with a few drops vinegar.

Albuféra sauce (for sweetbreads and poached or braised poultry). SAUCE ALBUFÉRA – Add 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) Suprême sauce, scant 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) concentrated veal stock and 1 tablespoon Pimento butter (see BUTTER).

Allemande sauce I or thick Velouté (for offal or U.S. variety meats, poached chicken, vegetables and eggs). SAUCE ALLEMANDE, VELOUTÉ LIÉ – For 5 dl. (scant pint,  $2\frac{1}{2}$  cups) of sauce put into a pan with a thick, flat bottom, 2 egg yolks (3 if they are small) and 4 dl. ( $\frac{3}{4}$  pint, scant 2 cups) light veal or chicken stock. Mix together. Add 5 dl. (scant pint,  $2\frac{1}{2}$  cups) Velouté sauce. Mix with a whisk.

Begin cooking over good heat, stirring with a wooden spoon to keep the sauce from sticking to the bottom of the pan. Boil down carefully, until the sauce coats the spoon. Add 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) butter, and strain through a cloth.

Keep in the bain-marie until ready to use. Whisk the sauce while it is in the bain-marie and butter the surface to prevent skin forming.

Depending on its use this sauce can be seasoned with a pinch of grated nutmeg and a squeeze of lemon juice.

Allemande sauce II (fish). SAUCE ALLEMANDE – Proceed as in the preceding recipe, using fish stock or fumet in place of the stock, and fish Velouté sauce in place of the Velouté sauce made with meat or poultry stock.

Allemande sauce III (mushroom flavoured). SAUCE ALLEMANDE AU FUMET DE CHAMPIGNONS – Proceed as in first recipe; add to the Velouté sauce a few tablespoons of the cooking juices of mushrooms. You can also add, in course of cooking, a good handful of mushroom skins and stalks.

Allemande sauce IV (truffle flavoured). SAUCE ALLEMANDE AU FUMET DE TRUFFES – As above. Replace the mushroom juices with fumet of truffles.

American sauce (for fish, shellfish, eggs). SAUCE AMÉRICAINE – In principle this sauce is the product of preparing lobster or crayfish à l'américaine.

It is used to coat braised fish, poached eggs and boiled eggs.

Anchovy sauce I (for fish). SAUCE ANCHOIS – Add to 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) Normande sauce or White wine sauce 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) anchovy butter or 1 tablespoon anchovy essence or paste. Strain.

Anchovy sauce II. SAUCE ANCHOIS – As above, using Béchamel sauce instead of Normande sauce.

Anchovy sauce III. SAUCE ANCHOIS – As above, using Butter sauce instead of Normande sauce.

Andalouse sauce (for eggs, fish, poultry). SAUCE ANDALOUSE – Add to 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) thick Velouté sauce, ½ dl. (3 tablespoons, scant ¼ cup) tomato essence or strongly concentrated tomato purée. Add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) sweet pimentos that have been peeled, braised and cut in dice, and 1 teaspoon chopped parsley.

This sauce may be seasoned with a little grated garlic.

Aurora sauce (for eggs, poultry, sweetbreads). SAUCE AURORE – Add to 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) Velouté sauce ½ dl. (3 tablespoons, scant ¼ cup) very thick tomato purée.

Finish off with 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter and strain.

Banquière sauce (for eggs, poultry, offal or U.S. variety meats, vol-au-vent). SAUCE BANQUIÈRE – Add to 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) Suprême sauce ¼ dl. (3 tablespoons, scant ¼ cup) Madeira. Strain through a cloth. Finish off with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) chopped truffles.

Bâtarde sauce (for boiled fish and vegetables). SAUCE BÂTARDE – See Butter sauce.

Béarnaise sauce (for grilled or sautéed meat, grilled fish). SAUCE BÉARNAISE – Put into a saucepan 1 tablespoon chopped shallot, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) tarragon and chopped chervil, a sprig of thyme, and a fragment of bay leaf. Moisten with ½ dl. (3 tablespoons, scant ¼ cup) each vinegar and white wine. Season with a pinch of salt and a pinch of mignonette pepper. Boil down by two-thirds. Allow to cool. Put into the pan 2 raw egg yolks mixed with 1 tablespoon water. Beat the sauce with a whisk over very low heat. As soon as the yolks begin to thicken, incorporate 100 g. (4 oz., ½ cup) fresh butter, little by little, whisking all the time.

Season the sauce, sharpen it if necessary with a squeeze of lemon juice and a pinch of cayenne. Strain. Finish off with 1 tablespoon each of chopped tarragon and chervil. Keep warm in a bain-marie.

Béarnaise sauce, tomato flavoured, or Choron sauce (for grilled meat). SAUCE BÉARNAISE, SAUCE CHORON – Add 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) strained Béarnaise sauce to 2 good tablespoons (3 good tablespoons) concentrated tomato purée.

Beaubarnais sauce (for grilled and sautéed meat and grilled fish). SAUCE BEAUBARNAIS – Add 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) strained Béarnaise sauce to 2 good tablespoons (3 good tablespoons) green Tarragon butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters).

Béchamel sauce with onion. BÉCHAMEL SOUBISE – Add Onion purée (soubise) (see PURÉE) to Béchamel sauce.

Bercy sauce (for fish). SAUCE BERCY – Cook 1 tablespoon chopped shallot gently in butter without letting it colour. Moisten with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) white wine and 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) fish fumet.

Boil down by half. Add 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) Velouté sauce based on fish stock. Cook at boiling point for a few moments over good heat. Add, away from the heat, 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter, and 1 tablespoon chopped parsley. Do not strain.

Bontemps sauce (for grilled meat and poultry). SAUCE BONTemps – Cook 1 tablespoon finely chopped onion in butter. Season with a pinch of salt and a little paprika. Pour in 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) cider. Boil down by two-thirds.

Add 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) Velouté sauce. Cook at boiling point for a few moments. Remove from heat and add 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter and 1 tablespoon mustard. Strain.

Brandade à la provençale for boiled fish, principally salt cod (old recipe). SAUCE BRANDADE À LA PROVENÇALE – 'Put into a saucepan 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) fish Allemande sauce, 3 egg yolks, a pinch of grated nutmeg, a pinch of finely ground pepper, a little pounded garlic, the juice of a large lemon and a little salt. After having mixed this seasoning perfectly, set the saucepan on some hot cinders, stirring all the time to obtain a perfectly thick and velvety sauce. Take it off the heat in order to mix in, spoonful by spoonful, 1½ glasses good oil, Provençal olive oil. Add the juice of a lemon and 1 tablespoon chopped and blanched chervil or tarragon.' (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Bread sauce for poultry and roast game birds (English cookery). SAUCE AU PAIN – Put 75 g. (3 oz., 1½ cups) freshly prepared breadcrumbs into 5 dl. (scant pint, 2½ cups) boiling water. Add 1 small onion studded with a clove, 25 g. (1 oz., 2 tablespoons) butter and a pinch of salt. Mix, bring to the boil, and cook gently for 15 minutes. Take out the onion and add to the sauce 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) cream. Whisk until smooth.

Breton sauce (for eggs, fish, white meat, poultry, offal or variety meats). SAUCE BRETONNE – Prepare a fine julienne of ½ medium-sized onion, the white of a leek and ¼ celery heart. Season with a pinch of salt and a little sugar. Cook slowly till soft with 1 tablespoon butter. Add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) uncooked mushrooms cut in julienne.

Moisten with ½ dl. (3 tablespoons, scant ¼ cup) white wine. Boil down to almost nothing, add 1½ dl. (½ pint, ¾ cup) Velouté sauce based on meat or fish stock, according to the final use. Cook at boiling point for a few moments over strong heat. Add 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) fresh butter and 1 tablespoon thick fresh cream. Do not strain.

When Breton sauce is to accompany braised fish, the latter must cook in the julienne indicated above, moistened with a few tablespoons of fish fumet or white wine. After the fish is cooked finish off the sauce as shown above.

Butter sauce I or Bâtarde sauce (for vegetables, boiled fish). SAUCE AU BEURRE, SAUCE BÂTARDE – Melt in a saucepan 25 g. (1 oz., 2 tablespoons) butter, add 25 g. (1 oz., ¼ cup) flour, mix, and moisten with 2½ dl. (scant ½ pint, generous cup) boiling salted water.

Stir the mixture vigorously with a whisk, and add 1 egg yolk mixed with 1 tablespoon cold water.

Add, over very low heat, 100 g. (4 oz., ½ cup) fresh butter cut into small pieces, stirring all the time. Season the sauce and strain. It may be sharpened with a few drops of lemon juice.

Butter sauce II (English cookery). SAUCE AU BEURRE À L'ANGLAISE – Proceed as above using 25 g. (1 oz., 2 tablespoons) butter and 25 g. (1 oz., ¼ cup) flour.

Do not thicken the sauce with egg yolk.

Butter sauce III (old recipe). SAUCE AU BEURRE – 'Put into a saucepan 1 small tablespoon flour and a little butter. Stir with a wooden spoon. Add  $\frac{1}{2}$  glass water or consommé, a little salt and grated nutmeg and the juice of  $\frac{1}{2}$  lemon. Stir over brisk heat, and as soon as it comes to the boil, remove the sauce. Mix in a good piece of butter. The sauce should then be velvety, very smooth and excellent to the taste.' (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

In his Traité des petites sauces, Carême gives a variety of white sauces deriving from this sauce. In modern practice all these are prepared using Allemande sauce or Suprême sauce as their base, and their recipes are given in their alphabetical order.

Butter sauce with chervil (old recipe). SAUCE AU BEURRE À LA PLUCHE DE CERFEUIL – 'Bring to the boil in a saucepan 1 large tablespoon Butter sauce, adding to it a little salt, pepper and grated nutmeg, the juice of  $\frac{1}{2}$  lemon, a good piece of butter and 1 tablespoon blanched chervil leaves.' (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Caper sauce I (for boiled fish). SAUCE AUX CÂPRES – Add to  $2\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, generous cup) Hollandaise sauce 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) well-drained capers.

Caper sauce II. SAUCE AUX CÂPRES – Proceed as above, using Butter sauce.

Caper sauce III, English (for boiled fish). SAUCE AUX CÂPRES À L'ANGLAISE – Prepare Butter sauce II. Finish it off with well-drained capers and a little anchovy essence.

Caper sauce IV, English (for boiled leg of mutton). SAUCE AUX CÂPRES À L'ANGLAISE – Prepare a white roux as for English Butter sauce, moisten it with the cooking broth of the mutton. Cook the sauce, strain it, finish off with the capers.

Caper sauce made with water can be served with boiled leg of mutton. This sauce is also served with boiled rabbit.

Cardinal sauce I (for fish). SAUCE CARDINAL – Boil down by half 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) Velouté sauce based on fish stock, and 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) fish fumet.

Add 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) cream, simmer for a few moments, remove from heat, add 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) Lobster or Spiny lobster butter (see BUTTER) a pinch of cayenne. Strain through a cloth. Add 1 tablespoon chopped truffles.

When this sauce is used for fish garnished with slices of truffle, leave out the chopped truffles.

Cardinal sauce II. SAUCE CARDINAL – Proceed as above, replacing the Velouté sauce by Béchamel sauce.

Celery sauce for boiled and braised poultry (English cookery). SAUCE AU CELERI – Put into a sauté pan the trimmed hearts of 3 heads of celery. Add a bouquet garni and 1 small onion stuck with a clove. Cover with light consommé. Cook slowly. Drain the celery, pound it, and sieve into a saucepan. Add to it an equal quantity of Cream sauce, dilute with 1 or 2 tablespoons of the concentrated celery cooking liquor and mix well. Heat without allowing to boil.

Chantilly sauce (for poultry and white offal or U.S. variety meats). SAUCE CHANTILLY – Blend 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) thick Suprême sauce with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) whipped cream.

White chaud-froid sauce I (for eggs, poultry, white offal or U.S. variety meats). SAUCE CHAUD-FROID BLANCHE – Put into a thick-bottomed sauté pan  $3\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (generous  $\frac{1}{2}$  pint,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cups) Velouté sauce and 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) mushroom fumet. Boil down over good heat, stirring with a wooden spoon. Add, a little at a time, 4 dl. ( $\frac{3}{4}$  pint, scant 2 cups) chicken or veal jelly and  $1\frac{1}{2}$  dl. ( $\frac{3}{4}$  pint,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) cream.

Boil down until the sauce will coat the spoon. To be certain of this consistency, chill on ice a small quantity of the sauce. If it is not firm enough add a few more tablespoons of jelly and boil down again.

Strain the sauce and whisk until it is quite cold.

Depending on its final use, chaud-froid sauce may be left as it is or flavoured with wine such as Madeira, sherry, etc., which is added to the sauce when it is almost cold.

Whit chaud-froid sauce II (for fish and shellfish). SAUCE CHAUD-FROID BLANCHE MAIGRE – Proceed as for White chaud-froid sauce I using Velouté sauce based on fish stock and fish aspic jelly in place of meat Velouté sauce and jelly. Strain.

Chaud-froid sauce à l'allemande. SAUCE CHAUD-FROID À L'ALLEMANDE – Proceed as for White chaud-froid sauce I, replacing the Velouté sauce with Allemande sauce.

Reduce the proportion of cream added in the course of cooking so that the sauce is less thick in consistency. Flavour with Madeira or other similar wine.

Chaud-froid sauce à l'andalouse. SAUCE CHAUD-FROID À L'ANDALOUSE – Prepare the sauce as for Chaud-froid sauce I. Flavour it with sherry and add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) orange peel cut in a very fine julienne, blanched, cooled in water and drained.

Chaud-froid sauce à l'aurore. SAUCE CHAUD-FROID À L'AURE – Add to White chaud-froid sauce I 3 tablespoons (scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) concentrated tomato purée. Strain.

Chaud-froid sauce à la banquière. SAUCE CHAUD-FROID À LA BANQUIÈRE – Add strained White chaud-froid sauce I to finely chopped truffles. Add 3 tablespoons (scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) Madeira.

Chaud-froid sauce Beauharnais. SAUCE CHAUD-FROID BEAUHARNAIS – Colour White chaud-froid sauce I before straining with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) purée of green herbs (tarragon and chervil) blanched, cooled in water, drained and rubbed through a fine sieve.

Chaud-froid sauce, blonde. SAUCE CHAUD-FROID BLONDE – Add to White chaud-froid sauce I during cooking 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) blond chicken glaze, and strain.

Chaud-froid sauce à l'écoissaise. SAUCE CHAUD-FROID À L'ÉCOSSAISE – Add to White chaud-froid sauce I, finished and strained, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) fine brunoise of carrot, the white part of leek and celery, all cooked gently in light stock, also 1 tablespoon diced pickled tongue and 1 tablespoon diced truffles. Flavour with Madeira.

Chaud-froid sauce à la hongroise. SAUCE CHAUD-FROID À LA HONGROISE – Add to White chaud-froid sauce I, in course of cooking, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) finely chopped onion which has been blanched, drained and cooked in 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) white wine till no liquid remains. Season with a good pinch of paprika. Strain through a cloth.

Chaud-froid sauce à l'indienne. SAUCE CHAUD-FROID À L'INDIENNE – Proceed as above. Season the chopped onion with 1 teaspoon curry. Strain through a cloth.

Chaud-froid sauce à la Nantua. SAUCE CHAUD-FROID À LA NANTUA – Recommended for fish and shellfish. Add to the ordinary White chaud-froid sauce II before straining 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) crayfish purée.

Strain, and add 1 tablespoon chopped truffles.

Chaud-froid sauce à la royale. SAUCE CHAUD-FROID À LA ROYALE – Add to White chaud-froid sauce I, before straining, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) truffle purée diluted with 1 tablespoon sherry.

Chaud-froid sauce à la sicilienne. SAUCE CHAUD-FROID À LA SICILIENNE – Add to the White chaud-froid sauce I, before straining, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) pistachio nuts, blanched, pounded finely in a mortar, diluted with a little cream and put through a fine sieve.

Chivry sauce I (for eggs and poultry). SAUCE CHIVRY – Boil down 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) white wine by half with 1 teaspoon chopped shallot and 1 large tablespoon chopped chervil and tarragon.

Add 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) chicken Velouté sauce and 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) white stock. Boil down by one-third. Add 2 large tablespoons (3 large tablespoons) Prin-tanier butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters). Strain.

Chivry sauce II (for braised fish). SAUCE CHIVRY – Proceed as above, replacing the chicken Velouté sauce with Velouté sauce based on fish stock and the white stock by fish stock or fumet.

Choron sauce (for grilled and sautéed meat). SAUCE CHORON – The same as Béarnaise sauce tomato flavoured.

Crayfish sauce I for fish (English cookery). SAUCE AUX QUEUES D'ÉCREVISSES À L'ANGLAISE – Proceed as for Lobster sauce II. Replace the lobster by diced crayfish tails.

Crayfish sauce II (old recipe). SAUCE AUX ÉCREVISSES – 'Wash 50 medium-sized crayfish and cook them with  $\frac{1}{2}$  bottle Champagne, 1 chopped onion, a bouquet garni, a pinch of mignonette and a little salt. When the crayfish are cold, drain them and strain the cooking liquor through a silk strainer. Boil down by half, and add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) Allemande sauce. Boil down to the desired consistency and add  $\frac{1}{2}$  glass Champagne. Strain the sauce through a cloth. Add a little glaze and best butter, and the shelled crayfish tails.

'Add to the sauce crayfish butter made from the crayfish shells.' (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Cream sauce (for vegetables, fish, eggs, poultry). SAUCE À LA CRÈME – Boil down by one-third 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{3}$  pint, scant cup) Béchamel sauce to which has been added 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) cream.

Remove from heat, add 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) butter and 3 tablespoons (scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) cream. Strain.

(See also English cream sauce.)

Curry or Indian sauce I (for eggs, poultry, mutton). SAUCE AU CURRIE, SAUCE INDIENNE – Cook till pale golden 100 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) chopped onion in 25 g. (1 oz., 2 tablespoons) butter. Add 2 roots of parsley and 1 chopped stick of celery, a sprig of thyme, half a bay leaf and a fragment of mace. Sprinkle with 25 g. (1 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) flour, and 1 small teaspoon curry powder. Mix and colour lightly.

Stir in 4 dl. ( $\frac{3}{4}$  pint, scant 2 cups) light stock or consommé, blend, bring to the boil, and simmer very slowly for 40 minutes. Strain through a cloth, pressing with a wooden spoon. Put back in the saucepan and reheat. Add 4 tablespoons ( $\frac{1}{3}$  cup) fresh cream and a squeeze of lemon juice.

The liquid for curry sauce can be  $\frac{3}{4}$  white stock and  $\frac{1}{4}$  coconut milk.

Curry sauce II. SAUCE AU CURRIE – Cook 100 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) chopped onion gently in butter. Sprinkle in 1 small teaspoon curry powder, add 1 seeded and chopped tomato, 1 grated clove of garlic, a sprig of parsley, a sprig of thyme and a fragment of bay leaf.

Stir in 3 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint,  $1\frac{1}{4}$  cups) thin Velouté sauce based on meat stock. Cook for 35 minutes, stirring frequently. Boil down by one-third, adding, in the course of cooking, 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) cream.

Strain the sauce through a cloth, reheat it and add a squeeze of lemon juice.

Curry sauce III (for poached eggs or shelled boiled eggs). SAUCE AU CURRIE – Cook 100 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) chopped onions slowly in butter. Sprinkle in 1 small teaspoon curry powder. Stir in 3 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint,  $1\frac{1}{4}$  cups) Béchamel sauce not too thick. Boil down over strong heat, and strain through a cloth. Heat, and add 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) butter.

Curry sauce IV (for fish and shellfish). SAUCE AU CURRIE – Proceed as in the first recipe, replacing the consommé by fish stock or fumet.

Curry sauce à l'indienne (old recipe). SAUCE AU CURRIE À L'INDIENNE – 'Put into a saucepan a few slices of lean ham, 1 chopped onion, a bouquet garni, 2 punnets of mushrooms, chopped, 3 cloves, a good pinch of pimento, a pinch of cayenne pepper and a little mace. Add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) chicken consommé. Simmer over very low heat, strain, and remove all grease. When it is somewhat boiled down mix in some Allemande sauce. Add a small infusion of saffron so as to colour it yellow, then strain through a cloth. Before serving, put in a little butter and 3 punnets of small mushrooms.

'Small green gherkins cut to look like olives can be added to this sauce.' (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Diplomat sauce or Riche sauce (for fish). SAUCE DIPLOMATE, SAUCE RICHE – Add 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{3}$  pint, scant cup) Normande sauce to 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) Lobster butter (see BUTTER). Add 1 tablespoon brandy, and a pinch of cayenne. Strain through a cloth.

If this sauce is served separately, add to it 1 tablespoon diced truffles and 1 tablespoon diced lobster flesh.

Écossaise sauce I (for eggs, poultry and white offal or U.S. variety meats). SAUCE ÉCOSSAISE – Add 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{3}$  pint, scant cup) strained Cream sauce to  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (3 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) vegetable brunoise cooked in butter until soft. Add diced French beans to the usual vegetables.

Écossaise sauce II. SAUCE ÉCOSSAISE – Proceed as above. Replace the cream sauce by Allemande sauce.

Écossaise sauce III. SAUCE ÉCOSSAISE – As above, with White wine sauce.

Egg sauce for fish, chiefly haddock and cod (English cookery). SAUCE AUX OEUF À L'ANGLAISE – Stir 2  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, generous cup) boiling milk into a white roux composed of 30 g. (1 oz., 2 tablespoons) butter and 15 g. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  oz., 2 tablespoons) flour. Season with salt, white pepper and nutmeg. Bring to the boil and cook for 6 minutes. Finish the sauce with 2 hot hard-boiled eggs cut in dice.

Egg and butter sauce for large boiled fish (English cookery). SAUCE AUX OEUF AU BEURRE – Add 100 g. (4 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) melted butter seasoned with salt, pepper and a squeeze of lemon juice to 2 hot hard-boiled eggs cut in large dice, and 1 teaspoon chopped and blanched parsley.

Egg sauce à l'écossaise. SAUCE AUX OEUF À L'ÉCOSSAISE – Prepare the sauce as above. Add the egg whites cut in small strips, and the yolks pressed into vermicelli-like threads through a strainer.

Mix very lightly so that the pieces of egg can be seen.

English sauce or Sauce à l'anglaise for poultry (old recipe). SAUCE À L'ANGLAISE – 'Chop the yolks of 4 hard-boiled eggs very finely, mix them, in a saucepan, with enough half-thickened Velouté sauce to sauce an entrée. Add a pinch of pepper and grated nutmeg, the juice of 1 lemon and a little anchovy butter.' (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

English bread and butter sauce for roast game birds (old recipe). SAUCE AU BEURRE ET AU PAIN À L'ANGLAISE – 'Bring to the boil 1 tablespoon breadcrumbs in 2 large tablespoons (3 large tablespoons) consommé, adding 1 small onion cut in two and a clove. Add a little salt, grated nutmeg and cayenne pepper. Simmer for 10 minutes, remove the onion and the clove, mix in 1 tablespoon Butter sauce. Before serving, add a little best butter.' (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

English cream sauce. SAUCE CRÈME À L'ANGLAISE – Stir 3  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (generous  $\frac{1}{2}$  pint,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cups) white consommé, 3 tablespoons (scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) Mushroom essence (see ESSENCE) and 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) cream into a white roux made of 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) butter and 30 g. (1 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) flour. Mix together.

Fennel sauce I (old recipe). SAUCE AU FENOUIL – 'Pick over and wash some fennel, chop it and put 1 tablespoon into a saucepan containing 2 large tablespoons (3 large tablespoons) boiling Allemande sauce. Add a little chicken glaze, a little butter, a pinch of nutmeg and the juice of a lemon.' (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Fennel sauce II for grilled or boiled fish, chiefly mackerel (English cookery). SAUCE AU FENOUIL – Add 1 tablespoon chopped and blanched fennel to 2½ dl. (scant ½ pint, generous cup) Butter sauce II.

Fines herbes sauce (for fish). SAUCE AUX FINES HERBES – Add ½ dl. (3 tablespoons, scant ¼ cup) finely grated shallot to 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) White wine sauce. Strain through a cloth. Add 1 tablespoon chopped chervil and parsley.

Foyot sauce (for grilled meat). SAUCE FOYOT – Add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) meat glaze to 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) strained Béarnaise sauce. Meat glaze is prepared by boiling down strong meat stock until it becomes a tacky syrup.

French sauce for fish (old recipe). SAUCE A LA FRANÇAISE – ‘Put into a saucepan some Béchamel sauce based on fish stock. When it is almost boiling, add a little garlic, a little grated nutmeg and Mushroom essence (see ESSENCE). When it has boiled for a moment, and just before serving, add Crayfish butter (see BUTTER) to give it a pinkish colour.

‘Shelled crayfish tails and small peeled mushrooms may be added to this sauce. I served this sauce for the first time in the house of Prince Paul de Wurtemberg.’ (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Freshwater fish sauce (English cookery) – Cut 25 g. (1 oz.) carrot and 15 g. (½ oz.) parsley roots into a fine julienne. Add 2 teaspoons shredded orange peel.

Put all together in a small saucepan, moisten with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) white wine and boil until the liquid is completely absorbed. Moisten again with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) fish court-bouillon made with white wine. Boil down until all liquid is absorbed. Add 2½ dl. (scant ½ pint, generous cup) Hollandaise sauce to the julienne.

Finish off with a few leaves of blanched parsley.

Garlic sauce – See GARLIC.

Godard sauce (for sweetbreads and poultry). SAUCE GODARD – Boil down by half 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) Champagne with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) mirepoix of vegetables.

Add 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) Demi-glaze sauce and 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) Mushroom essence (see ESSENCE). Boil down by one-third and strain.

Greek sauce (for fish). SAUCE À LA GRECQUE – Cook together in 1 tablespoon butter 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) onion and ¼ celery heart, both chopped. Add a bouquet garni composed of a stalk of fennel, a little thyme and bay leaf.

Moisten with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) white wine, add 10 coriander seeds and boil down by two-thirds. Stir in 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) Velouté sauce based on fish stock and 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) cream. Boil down by one-third, finish off with 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter and strain.

Hollandaise sauce I (for vegetables, fish and eggs). SAUCE HOLLANDAISE – Boil down by two-thirds 4 tablespoons (5 tablespoons) wine vinegar mixed with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) water, a pinch of salt and a pinch of coarsely ground pepper.

Let the saucepan cool a little, then add 5 raw egg yolks beaten slightly with 1 tablespoon water.

Whisk the sauce over very gentle heat. As soon as the yolks thicken to a creamy consistency add, little by little and beating all the time, 450 g. (1 lb., 2 cups) lukewarm melted butter.

Add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) water, a few drops at a time. Season and add a few drops lemon juice. Strain through a cloth. Keep warm in a bain-marie.

Hollandaise sauce can be made in a bain-marie.

Hollandaise sauce II (old recipe). SAUCE HOLLANDAISE – ‘Put into a saucepan 5 egg yolks, a little fine butter, salt, pepper and grated nutmeg. Stand the pan over very low heat. Stir the sauce constantly with a wooden spoon, and as it develops mix in small quantities of butter. After having added more than 225 g. (8 oz.), mix in 1 tablespoon vinegar.’ (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Hollandaise sauce suprême (old recipe). SAUCE HOLLANDAISE AU SUPRÊME – ‘Break 5 egg yolks into a saucepan, blend in a little best butter, salt, fine pepper, grated nutmeg, 1 tablespoon Allemande sauce and 1 tablespoon chicken glaze. Stir over very low heat, and as it continues to thicken, add to it a little butter three or four times, taking care to stir all the time. Before serving pour in a little vinegar and add a good piece of butter.’ (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Horseradish sauce, hot (English cookery). SAUCE RAIFORT CHAUDE – Proceed as for Albert sauce.

Hungarian sauce I (for small cuts of sautéed meat, eggs, fish, offal or U.S. variety meats, and poultry). SAUCE HONGROISE – Cook in butter, without allowing to colour, 2 large tablespoons chopped onion. Sprinkle with a good pinch of paprika, season with a pinch of salt, moisten with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) white wine and add a small bouquet garni. Boil down by two-thirds.

Stir in 2½ dl. (scant ½ pint, generous cup) Velouté sauce based on either meat or fish stock. Simmer over good heat for 5 minutes, strain through a cloth and finish off with 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter.

Hungarian sauce II. SAUCE HONGROISE – Cook the chopped onion in butter and sprinkle it with 1 tablespoon flour and a good pinch of paprika. Moisten with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) white wine and add a small bouquet garni. Boil down by two-thirds. Stir in 3 dl. (½ pint, 1¼ cups) light consommé or stock, or water to which a small quantity of meat glaze or extract has been added.

Cook very slowly for 25 minutes and finish off as above.

Hungarian sauce III. SAUCE HONGROISE – Stir the cooking liquor of 8 oysters into a white roux composed of 1 tablespoon butter and 1 tablespoon flour. Add 1½ dl. (¾ pint, ¾ cup) mushroom or fish fumet. Cook very slowly for 20 minutes. Thicken with 2 egg yolks, strain through a cloth, finish off with 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter and add the poached, drained and de-bearded oysters.

Indian sauce. SAUCE INDIENNE – See Curry sauce.

Ivoire sauce (for eggs, sweetbreads, poultry). SAUCE IVOIRE – Add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) concentrated brown veal stock or 1 tablespoon meat glaze to 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) Suprême sauce.

Joinville sauce (for fish). SAUCE JOINVILLE – Add to 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) Shrimp sauce 1 tablespoon truffles cut in a fine julienne. This sauce is also prepared with crayfish butter, and sometimes with mixed shrimp and crayfish butter.

Laguipière sauce I (for fish). SAUCE LAGUIPIÈRE – Add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) chopped truffles infused in 1 tablespoon Madeira to 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) Normande sauce.

Laguipière sauce II (old recipe). SAUCE LAGUIPIÈRE – ‘Put into a saucepan 1 large tablespoon Butter sauce add 1 tablespoon good consommé or a little chicken glaze, a pinch of salt, some nutmeg and vinegar or lemon juice. Boil for a few seconds, and mix in a good piece of fine butter.

‘This may be made with fish glaze instead of chicken glaze.’ (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Lobster sauce I (for fish). SAUCE HOMARD – Add 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) White wine sauce to 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) Lobster butter (see BUTTER). Add a pinch of cayenne and strain through a cloth. Add 1 tablespoon lobster flesh cut in very small dice.

Lobster sauce II, for fish (English cookery). SAUCE HOMARD À L'ANGLAISE – Add 2½ dl. (scant ½ pint, generous cup) Béchamel sauce to ½ tablespoon anchovy essence or paste and 40 g. (1½ oz., ¼ cup) lobster flesh cut in dice. Add a pinch of cayenne.

Lyonnais sauce (old recipe). SAUCE À LA LYONNAISE – ‘Blanch 4 large diced onions and simmer them in clarified butter. When almost cooked, drain them on a horsehair sieve, and mix them with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) game fumet and 2 large tablespoons (3 large tablespoons) Allemande sauce, stirring vigorously. When this is boiled down, add a little chopped and blanched tarragon, the juice of a lemon, a little grated nutmeg, a little butter, and a little game glaze.’ (Carême, L’Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Maître d’hôtel sauce (old recipe). SAUCE À LA MAÎTRE D’HÔTEL LIÉE – ‘Put into a saucepan 2 tablespoons half thickened Velouté sauce. Just before serving it should be boiling. Remove from heat, blend in a little glaze and some Maître d’hôtel butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters). Mix thoroughly.’ (Carême, L’Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Maltaise sauce I (for boiled vegetables). SAUCE MALTAISE – Add 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) Hollandaise sauce to blood-orange juice and 1 small tablespoon finely grated orange peel.

Maltaise sauce II. Proceed as above, using tangerine juice and peel.

This sauce may be flavoured with a few drops of Curaçao.

Marinière sauce (for fish, mussels, timbales, vol-au-vent). SAUCE MARINIÈRE – Prepare a Bercy sauce with mussel cooking liquor. Thicken it with egg yolks as for White wine sauce.

Morel sauce (old recipe). SAUCE AROMATIQUE AUX MORILLES – ‘Put into a saucepan a pinch of rosemary, the same amount of sage, thyme and basil, quarter of a bay leaf, a clove, a little mignonette and a pinch of nutmeg. Add 1 chopped onion and 1 tablespoon good consommé. Simmer for a few minutes, strain through a cloth, using pressure. Put into it 30 sound and well washed small morels. When boiling is established pour in enough Allemande sauce for an entrée and boil down to the desired point.

‘Before serving, blend in a little chicken glaze, a little fine butter, the juice of 1 lemon and 1 tablespoon chopped and blanched chervil.’ (Carême, L’Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Mornay sauce I (for eggs and vegetables). SAUCE MORNAY – Boil down by one-third 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) Béchamel sauce mixed with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) fresh cream. Add 40 g. (1½ oz., ½ cup) grated Gruyère and Parmesan cheese, mix, incorporate 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter, and strain.

Mornay sauce II (for chicken or eggs). SAUCE MORNAY – Proceed as in the preceding recipe, replacing the cream with light chicken stock.

Mornay sauce III (for fish). SAUCE MORNAY – Proceed as above, cooking the Béchamel sauce with fish stock or fumet in which the fish was cooked.

Mousseline sauce or Chantilly sauce (for fish and boiled vegetables). SAUCE MOUSSELINE, SAUCE CHANTILLY – Add 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) Hollandaise sauce to 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) whipped cream.

Mousseuse sauce (for fish and boiled vegetables). SAUCE MOUSSEUSE – Put into a basin, rinsed with boiling water and wiped dry, 250 g. (9 oz., generous cup) very fine butter softened to a creamy consistency, and season with a pinch of salt.

Whisk while adding, little by little, 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) cold water and a squeeze of lemon juice. Add 2 or 3 tablespoons (3 tablespoons or scant ¼ cup) whipped cream. This sauce is served cold.

Mustard sauce I (for boiled or grilled fish). SAUCE MOUTARDE – Add 1 tablespoon mustard to 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) Butter sauce. Strain.

Mustard sauce II. SAUCE MOUTARDE – Proceed as above, replacing the butter sauce by Hollandaise sauce.

Nantua sauce I (for eggs, fish, shellfish). SAUCE NANTUA – Boil down by half 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) Béchamel sauce to which have been added 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) each of the cooking liquor of crayfish and of cream.

Finish off with 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) Crayfish butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters), a few drops of brandy and a pinch of cayenne. Strain.

Nantua sauce II. SAUCE NANTUA – Heat 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) crayfish purée and dilute to the desired consistency with 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter and a few tablespoons cream. Add a pinch of cayenne. Strain.

Normande (Normandy) sauce I (for fish). SAUCE NORMANDE – Mix in a saucepan 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) Velouté sauce based on fish stock, 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) each of fish fumet and mushroom cooking liquor. Boil down by one-third over good heat. Add 2 egg yolks mixed with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) cream.

Finish off with 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter and 3 tablespoons (scant ¼ cup) cream. Strain through a cloth.

Normande (Normandy) sauce II. SAUCE NORMANDE – Boil down by half 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) fish fumet to which 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) mushroom skins have been added.

Add 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) Velouté sauce based on fish stock and 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) cream. Boil down by half. Add 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter and 4 tablespoons (5 tablespoons) cream. Strain through a cloth.

Onion sauce for boiled mutton, poultry, braised game, rabbit, tripe (English cookery). SAUCE AUX OIGNONS – Cook 100 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) chopped onions in 3 dl. (½ pint, 1½ cups) milk with salt, pepper and nutmeg. Drain as soon as they are cooked and chop again more finely.

Stir the milk in which the onions were cooked into a white roux composed of 25 g. (1 oz., 2 tablespoons) butter and 25 g. (1 oz., ¼ cup) flour. Bring to the boil, add the onions and cook gently for 8 minutes. Pour over the meat it accompanies.

Oyster sauce I (for fish). SAUCE AUX HUITRES – Add 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) Normande or White wine sauce (incorporating concentrated oyster cooking liquor) to 8 poached, drained and de-bearded oysters.

Oyster sauce II, for boiled cod (English cookery). SAUCE AUX HUITRES – Stir 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) oyster cooking liquor, and 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) each of milk and cream into a white roux of 25 g. (1 oz., 2 tablespoons) butter and 15 g. (½ oz., 2 tablespoons) flour. Season with a very small pinch of salt, bring to the boil and cook for 20 minutes.

Strain through a cloth, add 12 poached, de-bearded and sliced oysters, and a pinch of cayenne.

Paloise sauce (for grilled meat and poultry). SAUCE PALOISE – Proceed as for Béarnaise sauce, replacing the tarragon by mint.

Parsley sauce I for calves’ head, boiled poultry and rabbit, and braised veal (English cookery). SAUCE PERSIL – Add 1 tablespoon chopped and blanched parsley and a few drops of lemon juice to 2½ dl. (scant ½ pint, generous cup) Butter sauce.

Parsley sauce II (for mackerel and salmon). SAUCE PERSIL – Stir 2½ dl. (scant ½ pint, generous cup) parsley-flavoured court-bouillon left from cooking the fish into a white roux composed of 15 g. (½ oz., 1 tablespoon) butter and 15 g. (½ oz., 2 tablespoons) flour. Simmer for 8 minutes and strain.

Finish off with 1 tablespoon chopped parsley and a squeeze of lemon juice.

Piemontaise sauce for braised and pot-roasted chicken (old recipe). SAUCE À LA PIÉMONTAISE – ‘Cut 2 large onions into very small dice, and cook them to a golden colour in clarified butter. Strain, cook them in good consommé and remove all grease. Blend in enough Béchal sauce to accompany an entrée, 225 g. (½ lb.) Piedmont truffles cut in large dice, and 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) pignoli (pine kernels). After the sauce has boiled for an instant, mix in a little chicken glaze, a little garlic butter and the juice of a lemon.' (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Polonaise sauce (old recipe). SAUCE POLONAISE – 'Scrape a root of horseradish and grate half. Put 3 tablespoons (scant ¼ cup) into a saucepan with 1 tablespoon sugar. Dilute it little by little with half-thickened Velouté sauce (see above) in sufficient quantity to accompany an entrée. When the sauce comes to the boil, add the juice of 1 lemon, a little glaze and some fine butter.' (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Poulette sauce (for vegetables and poached offal or U.S. variety meats). SAUCE POULETTE – Add 1 tablespoon chopped parsley and a few drops lemon juice to 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) Allemande sauce.

Princesse sauce (old recipe). SAUCE PRINCESSE – 'Add some blanched, chopped parsley, a pinch of grated nutmeg, a little chicken glaze, a little butter and the juice of a lemon to 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) boiling Allemande sauce.' (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Printanière sauce (for eggs and poultry). SAUCE PRINTANIÈRE – Finish 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) Allemande sauce with 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) green Printanier butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters). Strain.

Provençal garlic sauce (old recipe). SAUCE À L'AIL À LA PROVENÇALE – 'Simmer in a saucepan 4 cloves garlic, a lightly seasoned bouquet garni, a pinch of mignonette pepper and 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) consommé. Boil down, take out the garlic and the bouquet, and add 2 large tablespoons (3 large tablespoons) Velouté sauce and the beaten yolks of 3 eggs. Boil for a few minutes, strain through a cloth, and mix in a little butter and lemon juice.' (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Ravigote sauce (for offal or U.S. variety meats and poultry). SAUCE RAVIGOTE – Boil down by two-thirds 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) white wine and 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) vinegar, to which have been added 1 chopped shallot, a sprig of thyme, a fragment of bay leaf, a sprig of parsley, a pinch of salt and a pinch of coarsely ground pepper.

Stir in 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) Velouté sauce and 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) mushroom cooking liquor. Boil down by one-third, finish off with 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter and 3 tablespoons (scant ¼ cup) cream. Add a pinch of cayenne and strain through a cloth.

Riche sauce (for fish) – See Diplomat sauce.

Richelieu sauce (old recipe). 'Dice 4 large onions, cook till golden in clarified butter, drain on a horsehair sieve and cook in 2 large tablespoons (3 large tablespoons) consommé, adding a little sugar, a little grated nutmeg and some coarsely ground pepper. Add 2 large tablespoons (3 large tablespoons) Allemande sauce, a little chicken glaze and a little fine butter. Strain the sauce through a cloth, using pressure.

'Add ½ tablespoon chopped and blanched chervil.' (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Royal sauce (for poached eggs and boiled chicken). SAUCE ROYALE – Boil down by half 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) chicken Velouté sauce, thinned with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) white chicken stock. Add, in the course of cooking, 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) cream, and 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) sieved truffles. Finish off with 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter and 1 tablespoon sherry. Strain.

Russian sauce for large cuts of beef (old recipe). SAUCE À LA RUSSE – 'Chop and blanch 1 tablespoon parsley, chervil and tarragon, drain, and mix them into some half-thickened

Velouté sauce. Add 1 tablespoon fine mustard, ½ tablespoon sugar, a pinch of fine pepper and the juice of a lemon.' (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Sage and onion sauce for roast pork and goose (English cookery). SAUCE À LA SAUGE – Chop 2 large onions, previously cooked in salted water and drained.

Put them into a saucepan with 100 g. (4 oz., 2 cups) freshly grated breadcrumbs and 25 g. (1 oz., 2 tablespoons) butter. Season with salt and pepper and add 1 tablespoon chopped sage. Cook for 5 minutes, mixing well with a wooden spoon. Add 3 tablespoons (scant ¼ cup) of the pan juices.

St. Malo sauce I (for grilled fish). SAUCE SAINT-MALO – Moisten with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) white wine 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) chopped onion lightly cooked in butter without colouring. Garnish with a sprig of thyme, a piece of bay leaf and a sprig of parsley. Boil down by two-thirds.

Stir in 1½ dl. (¾ pint, ¾ cup) Velouté sauce based on fish stock and 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) Espagnole sauce based on fish stock. Thin down with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) mushroom or fish fumet and boil down by one-third. Strain, pressing well. Finish off with 1 tablespoon mustard, a few drops Worcestershire sauce and 1 tablespoon butter.

St. Malo sauce II. SAUCE SAINT-MALO – Add to 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) White wine sauce ½ tablespoon chopped shallot cooked in white wine, 1 small tablespoon mustard and a few drops anchovy essence or ½ teaspoon anchovy paste.

Scotch egg sauce for cod (English cookery). SAUCE À L'ÉCOSSAISE – Stir 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) boiling milk into a white roux composed of 25 g. (1 oz., 2 tablespoons) butter and 15 g. (½ oz., 2 tablespoons) flour. Season with salt and pepper and a little grated nutmeg. Mix well and bring to the boil.

Add the chopped whites of 2 hard-boiled eggs, and blend in the yolks, rubbed through a coarse sieve.

Shallot sauce. SAUCE À L'ÉCHALOTE – Another name for Bercy sauce.

Shrimp sauce I (for fish). SAUCE AUX CREVETTES – Finish off 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) Normande or White wine sauce with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) Shrimp butter (see BUTTER). Add a pinch of cayenne and strain through a cloth.

Shrimp sauce II (English cookery). SAUCE AUX CREVETTES À L'ANGLAISE – Add to 2½ dl. (scant ½ pint, generous cup) English Butter sauce ½ teaspoon anchovy essence, 40 g. (1½ oz.) tiny shelled shrimps, and a pinch of cayenne.

Soubise sauce (old recipe). SAUCE SOUBISE – 'Cut 4 onions in half, make incisions from top to bottom down the onion, then cut them across and throw them into boiling water for a moment. Drain, and put them into a saucepan with a good piece of butter and a little consommé. Simmer over low heat. Strain again and pour into the saucepan with 2 good tablespoons (3 good tablespoons) concentrated consommé from which all grease has been removed. Add 2 large tablespoons (3 large tablespoons) Béchal sauce a pinch of nutmeg, a little sugar and a little chicken glaze. Strain through a cloth, using pressure. Before serving, blend in a little butter.' (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Suprême sauce I (for eggs, poultry, offal or U.S. variety meats and vegetables). SAUCE SUPRÊME, VELOUTÉ À LA CRÈME – For 5 dl. (scant pint, 2½ cups) sauce stir 5 dl. (scant pint, 2½ cups) chicken stock in a thick-bottomed saucepan. Boil down by half over good heat, adding, during the cooking, 3 or 4 dl. (½ pint, 1½ cups or ¾ pint, scant 2 cups) fresh cream.

When the sauce coats the spoon, incorporate, away from the heat, 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) fresh butter. Strain. Keep in a bain-marie until needed.

Suprême sauce II (old recipe). SAUCE AU SUPRÊME – 'Put into a saucepan some Allemande sauce in sufficient quantity to accompany an entrée. When it is almost boiling and just before serving, add 3 to 4 tablespoons (scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup to 5 tablespoons) chicken consommé and 2 small pats of butter.' (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Talleyrand sauce. SAUCE TALLEYRAND – Boil down by half 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) chicken Velouté sauce (see above) and 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) white stock. As soon as it is boiling add 4 tablespoons (5 tablespoons) fresh cream and  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (3 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) Madeira. Incorporate, away from the heat, 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) butter. Strain.

Add 1 tablespoon vegetable mirepoix (q.v.) and 1 tablespoon truffles and pickled tongue cut in very small dice.

Velouté sauce with green onions (old recipe). SAUCE VELOUTÉE À LA CIVETTE – 'Put into a saucepan 1 large tablespoon Allemande sauce and 1 tablespoon Tomato sauce (see above). Add a pinch of grated nutmeg, pepper, and the juice of a lemon. Boil for a moment then blend in shrimp butter and 1 small teaspoon very finely chopped onion.' (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Venetian sauce I (for eggs and poultry). SAUCE VÉNITIENNE – Boil down by two-thirds 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) vinegar to which 1 chopped shallot and 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) chopped chervil and parsley have been added.

Stir in 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) Allemande sauce, finish off with 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) Green butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters), strain, and add 1 tablespoon chopped chervil and tarragon.

Venetian sauce II (old recipe). SAUCE VÉNITIENNE – 'Boil in a saucepan 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) Allemande sauce, a good pinch of shredded tarragon leaves blanched and drained on a silk strainer, 1 tablespoon chicken glaze, a little butter, a pinch of grated nutmeg and a few drops good tarragon vinegar.' (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Véron sauce (for fish). SAUCE VÉRON – Cook the wine and herbs as for Béarnaise sauce. Stir in 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) Normande sauce and 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) very concentrated brown veal stock or fish glaze. Add a pinch of cayenne, strain, and add 1 tablespoon chopped chervil and tarragon.

Victoria sauce (for fish). SAUCE VICTORIA – Prepare 2  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, generous cup) Lobster sauce.

Add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) lobster flesh and truffles cut in very small dice.

Villeroi sauce (to coat foodstuffs to be fried à la Villeroi). SAUCE VILLEROI – Boil down 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) Allemande sauce thinned with 4 tablespoons (5 tablespoons) light stock and mushroom fumet until it will coat the back of the spoon. Strain, and stir well until it is cold.

This sauce is used when almost cold to coat foodstuffs which are then dipped in a mixture of egg, oil and seasoning, and breadcrumb before being fried in deep fat.

According to the recipe chosen, this sauce may be finished with Truffle essence (see ESSENCE), tomato purée or Onion soubise (see PUREE). It may also have truffles, chopped mushrooms, mirepoix of vegetables, etc. added to it.

Villeroi sauce for fish is prepared with Allemande sauce based on fish stock.

White wine sauce I (for fish). SAUCE VIN BLANC – Boil down by two-thirds  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  pint,  $\frac{2}{3}$  cup) fish fumet made with white wine. Allow to cool a little and add 2 egg yolks. Whisk over low heat until it thickens, as for Hollandaise sauce.

Add, little by little, 150 g. (5 oz., generous  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) melted butter, beating all the time. Season. Add a few drops lemon juice, and strain through a cloth.

Mushroom skins and stalks may be added to the sauce in the course of the cooking.

White wine sauce II. SAUCE VIN BLANC – Prepare 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$ pint, scant cup) Hollandaise sauce, adding in the course of preparation  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (3 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) concentrated fish fumet made with white wine. Season and strain through a cloth.

White wine sauce III (for fish to be glazed). SAUCE VIN BLANC – Boil down by half 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) fish Velouté sauce to which 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) fish fumet, made with white wine, has been added.

Add 2 egg yolks, cook for a few moments over low heat, beating and incorporating, little by little, about 75 g. (3 oz., 6 tablespoons) butter divided into tiny pieces. Season and strain.

COLD SAUCES. SAUCES FROIDES – Mayonnaise is the basis of many cold sauces which are used for hors-d'œuvre and cold entrées, and may be varied in a number of ways. Some of the best known cold sauces are given below.

Aïoli or beurre de Provence – Pound finely in a small mortar 5 cloves garlic. Add 1 raw egg yolk and a pinch of salt. Mix with the pestle. Pour into the mortar, little by little, stirring all the time, 2  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, generous cup) olive oil.

Add a few drops lemon juice and a few drops of water to thin down the consistency of the sauce.

Anchovy sauce. SAUCE ANCHOIS – Pound together hard-boiled eggs and anchovy purée or paste. Add oil, vinegar, and a little pepper.

Andalouse sauce. SAUCE ANDALOUSE – Mayonnaise sauce to which has been added  $\frac{1}{4}$  its weight of concentrated tomato juice and sweet pimentos, peeled, cut in dice and cooked in oil.

Apple sauce for pork, duck and goose (English cookery). SAUCE AUX POMMES – Cook the apples with very little sugar till they are soft. Flavour with powdered cinnamon.

This sauce is commonly used as accompaniment to a roast in Germany, England, Belgium and Holland.

Cambridge sauce for cold meat (English cookery). SAUCE CAMBRIDGE – Pound together hard-boiled egg yolks, anchovy fillets, capers, chives, chervil and tarragon. Add English mustard. Beat in oil and vinegar as for mayonnaise. Rub through a fine sieve or a cloth. Add chopped parsley and a pinch of cayenne.

Chantilly sauce (for asparagus and other boiled vegetables served cold). SAUCE CHANTILLY – Mayonnaise sauce I to which stiffly whipped cream has been added.

Cingalaise sauce. SAUCE CINGALAISE – A fine salpicon of hard-boiled egg yolks, sweet pimentos, tomatoes, boiled courgettes (zucchini), and cucumbers, seasoned with curry and salt and mixed with oil and lemon juice. Add chopped parsley and chives.

Collioure sauce. SAUCE COLLIOURE – Mayonnaise sauce I to which has been added essence or purée of anchovies and chopped parsley, with a little grated garlic.

Cressonnière sauce. SAUCE CRESSONNIÈRE – Season with oil, vinegar, salt and pepper, finely chopped watercress and finely chopped hard-boiled egg yolks. Mix.

Cumberland sauce for cold venison (English cookery). SAUCE CUMBERLAND – Add 1 small tablespoon chopped shallot, blanched and drained, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) orange and lemon peel cut in a fine julienne and blanched, and 1 tablespoon Dijon mustard to 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) melted red currant jelly. Add 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) port, the juice of an orange and lemon. Season with salt, ginger and cayenne.

Dijonnaise sauce. SAUCE DIJONNAISE – Pound together 4 hard-boiled egg yolks and 4 tablespoons (5 tablespoons) Dijon mustard. Season with salt and pepper. Beat with oil and lemon juice like a mayonnaise.

Gribiche sauce (for cold fish and shellfish). SAUCE GRIBICHE – Hard-boiled egg yolks reduced to a paste, beaten with oil and vinegar like a mayonnaise. Season with salt and pepper. Add chopped gherkins, capers, parsley, chervil and tarragon. Add the egg whites cut in a short julienne.

Mayonnaise sauce (Robert Carrier)

Horseradish sauce. SAUCE RAIFORT – Mix grated horseradish with breadcrumbs soaked in milk and squeezed. Season with salt and sugar. Add thick fresh cream and a little vinegar.

Indienne sauce. SAUCE INDIENNE – Mayonnaise sauce I seasoned with curry and with chopped chives added.

Maltaise sauce (for asparagus). SAUCE MALTAISE – Mayonnaise sauce I to which the juice of a blood orange and a julienne of blanched, rinsed and dried orange peel have been added.

Mayonnaise sauce I. SAUCE MAYONNAISE – Ingredients. 3 egg yolks, 5 dl. (scant pint, 2½ cups) olive oil, 1 tablespoon vinegar or lemon juice, 1 teaspoon salt, pinch of white pepper.

Method. Put the egg yolks into a bowl. Add the salt (very dry), white pepper and a few drops vinegar or lemon juice. Mix these ingredients with a whisk, not beating too hard.

Add the oil, drop by drop at first, then in a thin trickle, beating either with a whisk or with a wooden spoon. Absorb the whole of the oil into the mayonnaise in this way. Thin down the consistency of the sauce from time to time by adding a few drops of the vinegar or lemon juice. As soon as the sauce is finished, add, beating all the time, 2 or 3 tablespoons (3 tablespoons, or scant ¼ cup) boiling water. This is to preserve the texture of the mayonnaise and prevent it from 'curdling' if it is to be kept for some time.

To be sure of success in making this sauce, bear the following points in mind:

1. Keep to the exact proportions of egg and oil. The maximum amount of oil is 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) per egg yolk of medium size.

2. Use oil at room temperature, and if, in winter, the oil has coagulated, warm it very slightly before adding it to the yolks.

3. Add the oil drop by drop at the beginning. When the sauce begins to thicken a little, let it pour in a very thin trickle.

Mayonnaise sauce II (old recipe). SAUCE MAYONNAISE – 'Put into a medium-sized bowl 2 fresh egg yolks, a little salt and white pepper and a little tarragon vinegar. Stir quickly with a wooden spoon. As soon as it begins to thicken, blend in, little by little, 1 tablespoon olive oil and a little vinegar, taking care to beat the sauce against the sides of the bowl.

'On this continued beating depends the whiteness of the mayonnaise. As it takes on more body, add more oil, a little more vinegar and, at the beginning, a little aspic jelly. It is essential to put these ingredients in a little at a time, to prevent curdling.

'You will need for this preparation 2 glasses oil, ½ glass aspic jelly and enough tarragon vinegar to give an appetising taste. To make it whiter, add lemon juice.' (Carême, L'Art de la cuisine française au XIX<sup>e</sup> siècle.)

Mayonnaise sauce III (thick, to bind mixed salads, and coat various foodstuffs). SAUCE MAYONNAISE – Add to 2½ dl. (scant ½ pint, generous cup) mayonnaise 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) melted Meat jelly stock (see JELLY). Whisk well.

As soon as the jelly has been added to the mayonnaise, the sauce must be used promptly, because it will set very quickly. (This sauce is used in the same way as White chaud-froid sauce.)

Thick or jelly-strengthened mayonnaise may be finished off with various flavourings or with any of the ingredients specified for the different mayonnaise sauces.

Mayonnaise sauce with anchovy. SAUCE MAYONNAISE À L'ANCHOIS – Add 1 small tablespoon anchovy essence or anchovy purée or paste to 2½ dl. (scant ½ pint, generous cup) mayonnaise. Mix well.

Mayonnaise sauce with caviare. SAUCE MAYONNAISE AU

CAVIAR – Pound in a mortar 25 g. (1 oz., 2 tablespoons) caviare. Add, pounding constantly, 3 tablespoons (scant ¼ cup) mayonnaise. Strain through a fine sieve, add it to 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) mayonnaise and blend well.

Mayonnaise sauce with cress. SAUCE MAYONNAISE AU CRESSON – Add to the mayonnaise, kept very thick, chopped and pressed cress.

Green mayonnaise. SAUCE VERTE – Add mayonnaise to a purée of green herbs (spinach, watercress, parsley, chervil, tarragon, all blanched, cooled in water and pounded in a mortar). Strain.

Mayonnaise sauce à la russe. SAUCE MAYONNAISE À LA RusSE – Add to 3 dl. (½ pint, 1¼ cups) mayonnaise 4 dl. (¾ pint, scant 2 cups) liquid jelly and 1 tablespoon vinegar. Whisk on ice until the mixture takes on the character of a mousse. (Use for moulded vegetable salads.)

Mayonnaise sauce with shrimps. SAUCE MAYONNAISE AUX CREVETTES – Pound in a mortar 50 g. (2 oz., ½ cup) shrimps and 3 tablespoons (scant ¼ cup) mayonnaise.

Put this mixture through a fine sieve, add it to 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) mayonnaise, colour with a drop of carmine, and mix well.

Mayonnaise sauce with tarragon. SAUCE MAYONNAISE À L'ESTRAGON – Add to the mayonnaise, kept very thick, some finely chopped, fresh tarragon.

Mint sauce (English cookery). SAUCE MENTHE – Pour over 50 g. (2 oz.), shredded or chopped fresh mint 4 dl. (¾ pint, scant 2 cups) boiling vinegar. Season with salt, pepper and brown or white sugar.

Mousquetaire sauce. SAUCE MOUSQUETAIRE – Add to 5 dl. (scant pint, 2¼ cups) Mayonnaise sauce I, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) chopped shallot cooked in white wine till all liquid is absorbed, and 1 tablespoon dissolved meat glaze. Add a pinch of cayenne.

Mustard and cream sauce. SAUCE MOUTARDE À LA CRÈME – Add ½ Dijon mustard to ¾ very thick cream. Season with a little lemon juice, salt and pepper. Mix well with a whisk to render the sauce a little frothy.

Niçoise sauce. SAUCE NIÇOISE – Chop up finely 2 pimentos, add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) tomato purée and a few leaves of tarragon. Pass through a coarse sieve and add to 285 ml. (½ pint) Mayonnaise sauce I.

Orientale sauce. SAUCE ORIENTALE – A mixture of three parts Mayonnaise sauce III, tomatoes cooked to a fondue in oil and seasoned with saffron, and a salpicon of sweet peppers.

Parisian sauce (for cold asparagus). SAUCE PARISIENNE – Pound in a bowl 2 small Gervais cheeses (Petits suisses or 50 g., 2 oz. Philadelphia cream cheese). Season with salt and paprika. Beat with oil and lemon juice like a mayonnaise. Add 1 tablespoon chopped chervil.

Provençal sauce. SAUCE PROVENÇALE – Season with oil, vinegar, salt and pepper, a mixture of peeled tomatoes, hard-boiled eggs, capers, gherkins and parsley, all chopped. Flavour with a little garlic.

Ravigote sauce. SAUCE RAVIGOTE – Season with oil, vinegar, salt and pepper, a mixture of capers, onions, chives, parsley, chervil and tarragon, all chopped.

Rémoulade sauce. SAUCE RÉMOULADE – Mayonnaise sauce I to which has been added mustard, anchovy essence, gherkins, capers, parsley and chervil, all chopped.

Rémoulade sauce is also made by seasoning with oil, vinegar, salt and pepper a mixture of hard-boiled eggs, capers, gherkins and herbs, all chopped.

Russian sauce. SAUCE RusSE – Add to some Mayonnaise sauce I a quarter of its volume of a purée made with caviare and the creamy parts (coral, etc.) of a lobster, all pounded and rubbed through a fine sieve. Add mustard.

Vinaigrette sauce (Robert Carrier)

Sardalaise sauce. SAUCE SARDALAISE – Pound 6 hard-boiled egg yolks with 2 or 3 tablespoons (3 tablespoons or scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) thick fresh cream. Add to 4 large tablespoons (5 large tablespoons) fresh sieved truffles.

Beat this sauce with oil and lemon like a mayonnaise, season with salt and pepper and add 1 tablespoon Armagnac.

Shallot sauce (for raw oysters and shellfish). SAUCE ÉCHALOTE – Vinegar to which has been added finely chopped shallot seasoned with salt and freshly milled pepper.

Swedish sauce (for goose and cold pork). SAUCE SUÉDOISE – Mayonnaise to which apples cooked without sugar are added, seasoned with grated horseradish or mustard.

Tartare sauce. SAUCE TARTARE – Mayonnaise made with hard-boiled egg yolks and with chopped chives added.

La Varenne sauce. SAUCE LA VARENNE – Mayonnaise to which dry duxelles, made with oil and chopped parsley and chervil, have been added.

Verdurette sauce. SAUCE VERDURETTE – Put into a bowl 4 large tablespoons (5 large tablespoons) chopped chives which have been boiled, cooled in water and drained, 2 finely chopped hard-boiled egg yolks and 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) chopped chervil, tarragon and parsley. Add oil, vinegar, salt and pepper.

Vinaigrette sauce. SAUCE VINAIGRETTE, SAUCE À L'HUILE – Salads are usually seasoned at table. This seasoning is made in the proportion of 1 scant tablespoon vinegar to 3 tablespoons (scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) oil. Add salt and pepper.

Separately prepared Vinaigrette sauce is served with asparagus, cauliflower, boiled fish, etc. It is also served with calf's head, but with the addition of chopped parsley and onion, and sometimes thickened with pounded calf's brain.

Vincent sauce. SAUCE VINCENT – Add to some mayonnaise a purée of green herbs (sorrel, parsley, chervil, watercress, chives and burnet) and chopped hard-boiled egg yolks.

DESSERT SAUCES. SAUCES POUR LES ENTREMETS –

Apricot sauce. SAUCE À L'ABRICOT – Rub 12 ripe apricots through a fine sieve or crush in the blender. Put the pulp into a small copper pan and dilute it with 5 dl. (scant pint,  $2\frac{1}{4}$  cups) light syrup. Bring to the boil, take off scum and remove from heat when the sauce coats a spoon. Pass through a muslin bag or fine strainer. Flavour with 1 tablespoon liqueur.

Apricot sauce, which is used as an accompaniment to hot or cold sweets, can be served hot or cold, depending on the nature of these dishes. If served hot, it can be made smoother in texture by adding a very small quantity of fresh butter. When stewed, fresh, canned or bottled apricots are used, the syrup should be used for diluting the sauce.

Apricot sauce can also be made by diluting apricot jam with hot water. This sauce should be strained and flavoured, as described above.

Cherry sauce. SAUCE AUX CERISES – Prepare with fresh cherry pulp or cherry jam in the same way as for Apricot sauce. It is used as an accompaniment for hot or cold sweets.

Chocolate sauce I. CRÈME AU CHOCOLAT – Moisten 100 g. (4 oz.) grated semi-sweet chocolate with 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{3}$  pint, scant cup) lukewarm water. Stir over low heat until it softens. Add 3 tablespoons (scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) thick fresh cream and 1 tablespoon butter.

This sauce is served hot or cold.

Chocolate sauce II. CRÈME AU CHOCOLATE – Add softened sweet chocolate to 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) custard cream, prepared according to the recipe for Custard cream (see CREAMS.)

Custard sauces – See CREAMS, Custard creams.

Pineapple sauce. SAUCE À L'ANANAS – Use syrup in which pineapple has been cooked. Bring to the boil and thicken with 1 tablespoon arrowroot or cornstarch.

Sauceboat with coat of arms of Mme de Pompadour (Musée des Arts décoratifs)

Pass this syrup through a fine sieve or muslin bag and flavour it according to the recipe, with kirsch, rum or any other liqueur.

This thickened syrup is used for pouring over sweet dishes, hot or cold, such as tarts, puddings, etc. It takes the place of apricot sauce, which is normally used for this purpose.

Raspberry sauce. SAUCE AUX FRAMBOISES – Made in the same way as Strawberry sauce, substituting raspberries for strawberries.

Strawberry sauce. SAUCE AUX FRAISES – Use either strawberry jam or fresh strawberry pulp, diluted with syrup and flavoured with liqueur.

SAUCEBOAT. SAUCIÈRE – Part of dinner service, in porcelain or metal, generally oval in form.

Silver sauceboats are often supplied with a double bottom which can be heated.

SAUCISSON – There is a great variety of saucissons, large sausages which are served sliced.

The saucisson
(French Government Tourist Office)

Varieties of saucisson:
1. Saucisson de ménage; 2. Saucisson de Paris; 3. Saucisson de Lyon; 4. Saucisson d'Arles; 5. Lonzo de Corse; 6. Danish salami; 7. Milan salami; 8. Hungarian salami

Among the best-known French saucissons which require no cooking are those of Lyon, Arles, Lorraine, Brittany, Mortagne, Strasbourg and Luchon.

Italy produces those from Milan, Bologna and Florence. The mortadella of Bologna is also a saucisson.

Salami comes from Italy, Germany, Switzerland and other countries of Europe.

The manufacture of these large sausages is strictly controlled in France. They may be made with pork meat only, lean and fat, to which there may sometimes be added, for certain specialities, beef, veal or mutton.

Any sausages containing horse, donkey or mule meat, or having a proportion of flour, must carry labels detailing these contents exactly.

Dried sausage, such as comes from Arles or Lyon, the saucisson de ménage, the saucisson de montagne and other sausage of the same type, is eaten raw, as hors-d'œuvre.

The saveloy sausage of Paris, Lyon, Nancy and other places is poached in water and eaten as hors-d'œuvre, hot or cold.

Household or home-made sausage. SAUCISSON DE MÉNAGE, SAUCISSON VIEUX – This sausage is made in large pig's intestines with a forcemeat composed of lean pork meat, minced or chopped, seasoned with 45 g. (1½ oz., 2 tablespoons) salt, 1 teaspoon pepper, ½ teaspoon peppercorns, ¼ teaspoon saltpetre and a little chopped garlic for every 1 kg (2½ lb.) forcemeat.

Fill the skins, tie them lengthways and round, and hang in a drying place. After 3 or 4 weeks the skin becomes pink and small white marks appear here and there on the surface, showing that the sausages have 'ripened'.

This sausage is eaten when it has become well dried.

Lyon sausage (dry). SAUCISSON DE LYON (SEC) – Ham made from fresh pork, carefully trimmed and with all fat removed, is used to make this sausage. The meat is chopped, and seasoned with 45 g. (1½ oz., 2 tablespoons) salt and ½ teaspoon pepper for each 1 kg. (2½ lb.) meat.

Add, for every 1 kg. (2½ lb.) forcemeat, 135 g. (5 oz., generous cup) diced pork fat taken from a firm piece of pork fat which has been salted dry for 10 days.

Add to this mixture ½ teaspoon white peppercorns and a little chopped garlic. Press into a pig's intestine and tie at 45-cm. (18-inch) lengths. Hang in a drying place and leave for 48 hours. Press at each end to solidify the contents, and re-tie them. String the sausages lengthways and crossways so as to make them straight. Hang them again in the drying place, where they must be left for 3 or 4 months, until they are very dry.

Some beef, well trimmed and with all gristle, etc. removed, may be added to the pork. This addition hastens the drying of the sausages and does not harm the quality.

Lyon sausage is eaten raw as hors-d'œuvre.

Parisian saucisson. SAUCISSON-CERVELAS DE PARIS – Made with a forcemeat similar to that described above, seasoned, with 40 g. (1½ oz., 2 tablespoons) salt, ½ teaspoon pepper, a pinch of pounded pimento and a small pinch of saltpetre for each 1 kg. (2½ lb.). Fill skins as described above. Divide into sections of equal length. Hang the sausages above the stove for a day or two so that they dry and redden in colour.

Prepare for the table by poaching in water.

Plain saucisson. SAUCISSON-CERVELAS ORDINAIRE – Trim carefully some lean fresh pork and remove all gristle. Chop roughly. For every 5 kg. (11 lb.) of lean meat add 1 kg. (2½ lb.) finely chopped, fresh pork fat.

Season with 25 g. (1 oz., 1½ tablespoons) salt, ½ teaspoon pepper and a pinch of saltpetre to each 1 kg. (2½ lb.) pork.

Blend the mixture well and press into beef gut. Divide it into lengths of 20 to 30 cm. (8 to 12 inches), tying the ends of each sausage. Smoke lightly.

To cook. Poach in water or light stock for 30 to 45 minutes according to the size of the sausages.

These are served hot or cold, usually accompanied by a potato salad.

SAUERKRAUT (Pickled cabbage). CHOUROUTE – Finely shredded cabbage, which has been fermented in brine flavoured with juniper berries. The fermentation, which deprives the cabbage of a part of its nutritive value, makes it more digestible. The indigestibility attributed to sauekraut really derives from the salted or smoked and fat meats which normally accompany it.

The fermenting of the cabbage leaves encourages the production of lactic acid in the intestine. This acid is the antidote for colibacillosis.

Preparation of the cabbage. Remove the green and torn leaves surrounding the cabbage, and the stem. With the help of a slicing device or a knife with a large blade, slice the Manufacture of sauerkraut

T. Hopper into which the cabbages are fed; A. Lid with shredder; L. Strips of shredded cabbage; C. Layer of cabbage; S. Layer of salt cabbage finely. Wash it well, drain, and put into an earthenware crock which has been lined with cabbage leaves or vine leaves. Arrange the cabbage in layers, pressed down, each layer sprinkled with sea salt (coarse salt) and strewn with juniper berries. Put a handful of sea salt on the last layer, allowing  $1\frac{1}{2}$  kg. ( $3\frac{1}{4}$  lb.) salt for every 100 kg. (220 lb.) cabbage.

Cover with a cloth and set on top of it a round wooden lid, the diameter of which is smaller than the aperture. Put a non-porous stone on top of the lid.

Next day the water will have risen above the lid under this pressure. See that this is always so. Keep the barrel or crock in an airy place. At the end of about 3 weeks, when no more froth appears on top of the cabbage, the sauerkraut is ready. Replace the liquid with fresh water.

Each time some cabbage is taken out, remove the liquid with a wooden bowl. After taking out the cabbage add fresh water, put back the cloth, cover, and store.

Sauerkraut as soup garnish. CHOUCRROUTE POUR GARNITURE DE POTAGE – Wash, soak and press the sauerkraut, and put it in a white consommé to cook gently. Drain and add it to the soup.

Sauerkraut à l'alsacienne. CHOUCRROUTE À L'ALSACIENNE – Soak  $2\frac{1}{2}$  kg. ( $5\frac{1}{2}$  lb.) sauerkraut for a few hours in cold water. Drain by pressing it well between the palms of the hands to extract all the water. Spread it out, so that it is not congealed into lumps. Season with salt and freshly ground pepper. Put it in a heavy pan lined with smoked bacon rinds, and add 2 or 3 onions, each stuck with a clove, 3 quartered carrots, a large bouquet garni, 75 g. (3 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) juniper berries tied in a muslin bag, 300 g. (11 oz.) blanched fat breast of pork, a slice of smoked pork and 150 g. (5 oz., generous  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) goose fat or lard.

Add enough white consommé to come to the top of the sauerkraut. Cover with bards of larding bacon. Boil on the stove, then put the pan in the oven for 4 hours. Remove the lean and smoked pork.

When the sauerkraut is cooked, take the vegetables, bouquet garni and juniper berries out of the pan. Arrange the sauerkraut, well drained, in a deep dish. Garnish with the smoked pork cut into slices, the lean pork cut into rectangles, thin slices of ham, poached Strasbourg sausages and smoked saveloys.

Add potatoes which have been pared into a neat shape and boiled, or serve these separately.

Sauerkraut can be prepared with other garnishes. For instance, a salted brisket (U.S. corned beef), smoked goose, a smoked loin of pork, or salt pork can be cooked in the sauerkraut.

All these meats, which are intended to impart their flavour to the sauerkraut, must be removed from the pan before the cooking is completed, or they would be overcooked.

Sauerkraut prepared in the Frankfurt manner is much the same as à l'alsacienne, but the Strasbourg sausages in the garnish are replaced by frankfurters.

It is customary in Alsace to accompany the sauerkraut with a dish of pease-pudding and boiled potatoes.

Sauerkraut à la strasbourgeoise. CHOUCRROUTE À LA STRASBOURGEOISE – This name is given sometimes to Sauerkraut à l'alsacienne (see above).

Sauerkraut garnish I. CHOUCRROUTE POUR GARNITURE – Line a casserole with lard, bacon rinds, and sliced onions and carrots. Put in 1 kg. ( $2\frac{1}{4}$  lb.) soaked, rinsed and pressed sauerkraut. Put a bouquet garni and 12 juniper berries tied in muslin in the middle of the sauerkraut. Moisten with a white consommé from which not all the fat has been skimmed. Cover with bacon rinds. Bring to the boil on top of the stove, then cook in the oven for 3 hours.

Sauerkraut garnish II. CHOUCRROUTE POUR GARNITURE – Line a buttered casserole with slices of onion and carrot. Put the sauerkraut, which has been first washed, soaked, and pressed, on to this base. Season, and add a bouquet garni and a few juniper berries tied in muslin. Moisten with water. Cover with buttered paper. Cook in the same way as above.

Sauerkraut salad à l'allemande. CHOUCRROUTE EN SALADE À L'ALLEMANDE – Cook the sauerkraut in a white consommé or in water with whole onions. When the sauerkraut is cooked remove the onions and cut them into small dice. Add to the drained sauerkraut. Season with oil, vinegar, salt and pepper. Mix well. Arrange in a bowl in a dome. Garnish with hard-boiled eggs and slices of cooked beetroot.

SAUMUR – Town in the département of Maine-et-Loire, situated on the right bank of the Loire and famous for its château and cavalry school. It has given its name to a vinicultural region in Anjou where excellent dry white wines are produced. These also make attractive sparkling wines following the méthode champenoise. There are also rosés, Cabernet rosés and the red wines of Saumur-Champigny. (See ANJOU.)

SAUPIQUET – In the Middle Ages the sauipiquet was a wine sauce thickened with pain hallé (grilled bread or toast) which was served with roast rabbit, and also with waterfowl. Here is the recipe which Taillevent gives in the Viandier for this sauce:

'To make sauipiquet for coney or other roast, toast some bread and soak in some bouillon, melt bacon fat in a frying pan, put in some onion cut up very small and fry it. To serve four, take 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) cinnamon, 15 g. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  oz., 2 tablespoons) ginger and 7 g. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  oz., 1 tablespoon) small spices, some red wine and some vinegar. Mix the bread and all the spices together and boil in a pan, then pour over the roast.'

This sauce is similar to one made today in the south-west of France which accompanies roast hare.

SAUR – Herring that has been both salted and smoked. The word was formerly sauret or soret. (See HERRING.)

SAUREL – Long fish resembling the mackerel and sometimes in England called horse mackerel. Less positive in colour than the proper mackerel, it also lacks its false fins near the tail and has a row of spines on either side of the back. The flesh, of good quality, is not so fine as that of the real mackerel.

In U.S.A. the horse mackerel is the name given to an Atlantic species of tuna fish. The Atlantic bluefish is also Sauerkraut garnie (Chédeville. Phot. Nicolas)

SAUSAGE

sometimes called horse mackerel, and more closely resembles the saurel.

Prepare like mackerel (q.v.).

SAUSAGE. SAUCISSE – This word comes from the Latin salsisium, from salsus, salted.

Sausages of all kinds are usually bought already prepared. In France ordinary sausages, made from fresh pork, are made both long and flat in shape. The flat sausages are called crêpinettes. They are grilled, fried in butter or fat, or boiled. This last method is chiefly used for 'dry' sausages or smoked sausages, such as those of Frankfurt, Strasbourg, Spain (chorizos), Vienna, etc. See also under PORK.

Augsburgerwürste. SAUCISSES D'AUGSBOURG – Made in beef gut, with a forcemeat of coarsely chopped lean pork mixed with bacon fat cut in small dice, seasoned with salt, pepper, cloves, nutmeg and saltpetre. These sausages, after having been dried, are lightly smoked. They are poached in water.

Chorizos, red sausages. SAUCISSES ROUGES – Spanish speciality. They are made like Country sausages (see PORK), using pork forcemeat strongly flavoured with red pepper, and are used as an ingredient of potées. They are most frequently cooked with garbanzos, i.e. chick-peas, stewed à la mode d'Espagne (Spanish style).

Smoked sausages served with a salad of cucumber, tomato and celeriac (Claire)

Frankfurt sausages or Frankfurterwürste. SAUCISSES DE FRANCFORT – German speciality, most often used to accompany sauerkraut, and also served hot, as hors-d'œuvre, with grated horseradish. They are made from a forcemeat of lean beef, trimmed of all fat and well beaten, and pork meat. Saltpetre is added to give a slightly pink colour. They are tied together in pairs and smoked.

Plunge the sausages into boiling water. Cover the pan, and poach, just boiling, for 10 minutes. Drain and serve.

Gehirnwürste. SAUCISSES DE CERVEILLE – Made in pork gut with a forcemeat of equal parts of pork brains cooked in salted water to which vinegar has been added, and pork meat, half fat, half lean, seasoned with salt, pepper and mace. The sausages, tied together in pairs, are poached for 5 minutes in boiling water, then cooled and cooked in butter.

Sausages for garnish. SAUCISSES POUR GARNITURE – Small sausages, called chipolatas, are used as a garnish. They are pricked lightly with a needle and cooked under a grill or in the oven, as indicated in the recipe.

Grilled sausages. SAUCISSES GRILLÉES – Ordinary long or flat sausages are prepared in this way.

The long sausage is divided into lengths of 12 to 15 cm. (5 to 6 inches) or left whole, whatever its length, in which case it is twisted into a coil and secured with 2 skewers put in crossways.

Grilled sausages should be cooked slowly with moderate heat. They are generally served with mashed potatoes.

Grützwürste. SAUCISSES AU GRUAU – Made in pork gut in 10-cm. (4-inch) lengths with a forcemeat of wheat meal cooked in an aromatic stock, and rather fat pork skin, cooked and chopped, seasoned with salt, pepper, mace and chopped lemon peel. Submerge the sausages for 3 minutes in boiling water, drain and dry them, and toss in butter.

Knackwürste. SAUCISSES CROQUANTES – Made in pork gut with a forcemeat of 5 parts lean pork, 3 parts beef and 2 parts fresh pork fat, seasoned with salt, cumin, garlic and saltpetre.

The sausages are tied together in pairs, dried for 4 days, then smoked cold. They are poached for 10 minutes in water.

Knoblauchwürste. SAUCISSES À L'AIL – Sausage encased in pork gut made from a forcemeat of fat and lean pork, seasoned with salt, pepper, spices and pounded garlic.

Kochwürstel or Mettwürste. SAUCISSES À BOUILLIR – Made in beef gut with a forcemeat of lean pork meat and fresh pork fat, seasoned with salt, pepper and saltpetre. Poached in water.

Königswürste. SAUCISSES ROYALES – Made in pork gut with a forcemeat of equal parts of chicken and partridge meat. Add chopped truffles and mushrooms, bind with eggs, season with salt, pepper and mace and flavour with Rhine wine.

These sausages, which are rather large, are braised, then sliced when cold and served as hors-d'œuvre.

Sausages à la languedocienne. SAUCISSES À LA LANGUEDOCIENNE – Twist 1 kg. (2¼ lb.) Toulouse sausage (see below) into a coil and secure with 2 crossed skewers. Heat 3 tablespoons (4 tablespoons) lard or goose fat in a sauté pan and put in the sausage. Add 4 chopped garlic cloves and a bouquet garni. Cook with a lid on for 18 minutes. Drain the sausage, put it on a dish and pour over the pan juices, diluted with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) vinegar, moistened with 3 dl. (½ pint, 1¼ cups) Demi-glace sauce (see SAUCE) and 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) tomato purée. Boil for a few moments. Add 3 tablespoons (4 tablespoons) capers pickled in vinegar, and 1 tablespoon chopped parsley to the sauce.

Long sausages. SAUCISSES LONGUES – Ordinary sausages, thus called to distinguish them from the flat sausages or crêpinettes.

Madrilène sausages. SAUCISSES MADRILÈNES – Small sausages made in beef gut with a forcemeat of veal, fresh pork fat and sardine fillets in oil. These sausages are tied into rings, poached for 10 minutes in light veal stock, cooled, and fried in butter.

Nurnbergerwürste. SAUCISSES DE NUREMBERG – Made in pork gut with lean pork, seasoned with salt, pepper, thyme, nutmeg and marjoram, with the addition of bacon fat cut in small dice and flavoured with kirsch. They are tied into 100-g. (4-oz.) sections and fried in butter.

Polnischewürste. SAUCISSES DE POLOGNE – Made in pork gut, in 250 g. (9-oz.) sections, with a forcemeat of two-thirds lean and one-third fat pork, seasoned with salt, pepper, pimento and cloves, and bound with pig's blood, allowing 1 dl. (6 tablespoons scant ½ cup) to 500 g. (generous 1 lb.). These sausages are dried, then smoked. To serve, poach in water.

Rindfleischkochwürste. SAUCISSES DE BOEUF À BOUILLIR – Made in beef gut with a forcemeat of 3 parts lean beef and 2 parts fresh pork fat, seasoned with salt, pepper, coriander and saltpetre. These sausages are tied in pairs and dried for 48 hours. Poach for 10 minutes in water.

Sausage meat – See PORK, Pork sausages.

Sausages with risotto. SAUCISSES AU RISOTTO – Cook

chipolata sausages in butter and white wine. Put them in the middle of a border of risotto, turned out onto a dish. Add 1 tablespoon meat jelly to the pan juices and pour over the sausages.

Sausages with risotto à la piémontaise. SAUCISSES AU RISOTTO, À LA PIÉMONTAISE – Cook the sausages as described above, adding to them, towards the end of cooking, white truffles cut in thin slices. Put them in the middle of a risotto border and pour the pan juices over.

In Italy, a small quantity of chopped green cabbage is added to the risotto during cooking.

Sausage roll. FRIAND – Puff pastry filled with sausage meat.

Smoked sausages. SAUCISSES FUMÉES – Prepare like Country sausages (see PORK) and smoke in a smokehouse for 2 days. Poach in water.

These sausages are used as an ingredient for potées. They are also served hot, as an hors-d'œuvre.

Strasbourg sausages. SAUCISSES DE STRASBOURG – Alsatian speciality, made like smoked Frankfurt sausages. They are mainly used for garnishing sauerkraut.

Toulouse sausages. SAUCISSES DE TOULOUSE – Big sausages the forcemeat for which is chopped by hand. Grill or fry as ordinary long sausages.

Vienna sausages. SAUCISSES DE VIENNE – Austrian speciality found ready-made in food shops. They are prepared like Frankfurt sausages and are accompanied by the same garnishes.

Sausages in white wine. SAUCISSES AU VIN BLANC – Cook long sausages in butter in the oven. Drain them and arrange on croûtons fried in butter or toasted under the grill, allowing 2 sausages per croûton. Dilute the pan juices with white wine, add Demi-glace sauce (see SAUCE) and butter, and pour over the sausages.

Or: Brown 12 long sausages in butter in a sauté pan. Moisten them with 1½ dl. (¼ pint, ¾ cup) dry white wine. Cook in the oven with a lid on.

Drain and arrange in pairs on croûtons fried in butter. Boil down the white wine by two-thirds, bind with egg yolk, add a dash of lemon juice, 1 tablespoon meat jelly and 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter. Blend well.

Würstchen – Small sausages made in sheep's gut with a forcemeat of 2 parts lean pork, 1 part veal and 1 part throat meat of pork, seasoned with salt, pepper, pimento and cardamon and mixed with Rhine wine. The sausages are tied together in bunches. Poach for 3 minutes in salt water, then cool and grill.

Würste von Kalbsgekröse. SAUCISSES DE FRAISE DE VEAU – Made in pork gut with calf's mesentery, washed, blanched, finely chopped and cooked for a few moments in vinegar and then in an aromatic court-bouillon. Season with salt, pepper and nutmeg and bind, for every 1 kg. (2¼ lb.) with 2 eggs and 1½ dl. (¼ pint, ¾ cup) fresh cream. Poach the sausages for 10 minutes, allow to cool, and toss in butter.

SAUTÉ. SAUTER – To cook over a strong heat in fat or oil, shaking the pan and making whatever is in it sauter or jump, to keep it from sticking to the bottom. (See CULINARY METHODS.)

SAUTÉ – This generic term applies to preparations made from meat, fowl, game or fish, cut up into pieces of equal size, which are cooked over good heat in butter, oil or other fat.

Sautés differ from ragoûts in that the former are not sprinkled with flour before liquid is added, as is the case with ragoûts. A thickened liquid is added to the pan juices.

Sauté of fish. SAUTÉS DE POISSONS – Fillet large fish (perch, brill, cod, salmon, tunny, etc.). Trim the fillets and use the bones and scraps to make a fumet for the final sauce.

Cut the fillets in pieces 3 to 4 cm. (1 to 1½ inches) long.

Season and sauté them briskly in butter or oil. Drain. Dilute the pan juices with white or red wine, depending on the recipe. Add the prescribed sauce. Simmer for a few moments, add butter and strain through a cloth. Put the pieces of fish into this sauce and heat without allowing to boil.

Various garnishes may be added to sauté of fish, such as: mushrooms, aubergines, courgettes, artichoke bottoms, tomatoes, truffles, etc. Sautéed fish may be browned, or cooked without allowing to colour.

Sauté of game. SAUTÉS DE GIBIERS – Prepared with game meat or game birds. Recipes given under PHEASANT, RABBIT.

Sauté of meat. SAUTÉS DE VIANDES DE BOUCHERIE – Lamb, pork and veal are chiefly prepared in this way, though the method may be used with beef and mutton, bearing in mind that the latter should remain a little pink inside, and should not be allowed to boil in the accompanying sauce which is added after the pieces have been fried.

Sauté of poultry. SAUTÉS DE VOLAILLES – Recipes will be found under CHICKEN.

Sauté pan
(Larousse)

SAUTÉ PAN. SAUTOIR – Pan with a thick base and rather low sides used to sauté meat, vegetables, etc.

SAUTERNES – Commune of the Gironde, a district of Bazas, renowned for its sweet white wines. The communes of Barsac, Preignac, Sauternes, Bommes and Fargues together make up the territory whose right to give to its wines the name of Sauternes has been recognised. (See BORDEAUX.)

SAUVIGNON – Species of wine-producing vine cultivated in the Armagnac and the Bordelais. In the Sauternes district the Sauvignon gives some renowned wines.

SAVARIN – Cake made with a yeast mixture, soaked in flavoured syrup with rum or kirsch added.

Ingredients. 500 g. (18 oz., 4½ cups) sifted flour, 375 g. (13 oz., generous 1½ cups) butter, 25 g. (1 oz., 2 tablespoons)

Savarin mould
(Larousse)

sugar, 25 g. (1 oz.) yeast, 8 eggs, scant 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) warm milk, 1  $\frac{1}{2}$  teaspoons salt.

Method. Make a dough in the same way as for baba dough (see BABA).

Put the dough into a buttered ring mould of the type known as a savarin mould, filling it not more than three-quarters full.

Leave in a warm place until the dough has risen to the top of the mould. Cook in a hot oven for 45 minutes. Allow to cool completely before turning out.

To serve. Soak the savarin in a liqueur-flavoured syrup prepared in the following way:

Melt over heat 500 g. (18 oz., 2  $\frac{1}{4}$  cups) sugar and  $\frac{1}{2}$  litre (scant pint, 2  $\frac{1}{4}$  cups) water. Add 10 g. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  oz.) star anise, 2 teaspoons cinnamon, a few grains of coriander and a fragment of mace (the outer covering of the nutmeg).

When the syrup is boiling, flavour it with 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) rum or kirsch. Put the savarin on a dish and sprinkle it with the hot syrup. When the cake is well soaked, take it out of the dish, place it on a clean one and sprinkle over a few more tablespoons of the rum or kirsch before serving.

Cherry savarin à la Chantilly. SAVARIN AUX CERISES À LA CHANTILLY – Stone 1 kg. (2  $\frac{1}{4}$  lb.) Morello (dark) cherries, put them in a deep dish and sprinkle with sugar. Add a dozen crushed cherry stones tied in a muslin bag.

When the juice begins to run, cook the cherries in this juice over low heat. Allow to cool.

Prepare Chantilly cream (see CREAMS) flavoured with cherry brandy.

Drain the cherries and dry them, set them in the middle of a savarin soaked in the cherry juice and flavoured with cherry brandy or kirsch.

Cover the cherries with the chantilly cream piled into a dome. Decorate with cherries.

Savarin à la crème – Fill the inside of a soaked and flavoured savarin with  $\frac{1}{2}$  litre (scant pint, 2  $\frac{1}{4}$  cups) very thick French pastry cream (see CREAMS) mixed with 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) crushed macaroons. Serve cold or hot. In the latter case the top of the cream is sprinkled with fine sugar and glazed with a glazing iron.

Savarins served hot should normally be accompanied by a fruit sauce (apricot, redcurrant, or strawberry) flavoured with liqueur.

Savarin Montmorency – Remove the stalks and stones from 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) pale red semi-sweet cherries and poach them in 1 litre (1  $\frac{1}{4}$  pints, generous quart) light syrup. After about 4 minutes boiling, drain them and cook for a few minutes in a pan with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) kirsch. Use them to fill the middle of a savarin.

SAVORY. SARRIETTE – Aromatic garden herb with a scent recalling that of thyme, used as seasoning.

SAVOURIES – In Britain this term describes a range of light preparations. Served at the end of dinner, after dessert, these might be called 'post-œuvre' as distinct from hors-d'œuvre, which are served at the beginning of the meal. The following are the principal savouries: cheese straws, angels on horse-back (oysters and bacon, grilled), cheese fritters, various foodstuffs cooked on skewers, chou profiteroles with cheese, fried Camembert, canapés, various foodstuffs on toast, devilled chicken legs and wings, cheese condés, fried cheese custard shapes, various croquettes and kromesies, diablotins, rib bones of beef seasoned with mustard and cayenne and grilled, paillettes seasoned with Parmesan or paprika, cheese pancakes, tartlets and barquettes with various fillings, Welsh rarebit and other toasted cheese dishes, etc.

SAVOURING. DÉGUSTATION – The palatal appreciation of the flavour of a solid or liquid. The savouring or 'tasting' of wines and spirits is a highly refined art.

The preliminary operations consist of scrutinising the wine so as to judge its colour, detect any impurities and assess its limpidity and brilliance. Next, the sense of smell appreciates the aroma given off by the wine. The taste buds are dispersed throughout the mouth, some having specialised functions. Sourness is recognised with the tip of the tongue; sweetness with the flat of the tongue; under the tongue are the buds which respond especially to bitterness; tartness reacts upon the inner surface of the cheeks. Professional tasters put this specialised sensitivity to good use.

To savour a wine, for instance, a small sip is first taken. This is held in the front of the mouth against the teeth, while the tip of the tongue is gently moved back and forth to appreciate the sourness of the wine. Next, the head is tilted back a little and a deep breath is taken which is mixed with the liquid. At this point the aroma is savoured (this is given off by one of the essential oils contained in the skin of the grape and consequently depends on the variety); this aroma is present in unmaturing wines. It becomes more subtle and refined with maturity. Later the bouquet develops. This is present only in old wines and is due to the slow blending of the more volatile spirits, the ethers, aldehydes and essences of the wine. Finally, in these early stages, the taster takes note also of the special properties of the wine, the native tang, the standard flavour of the hybrid growths, the taste of cask, musk, sulphur, etc.

Wine tasting in a cellar (from a lithograph)

The wine is then spread over tongue and palate for about two seconds. At this point the taster will recognise the warmth of a full-bodied wine or its absence in a wine of less generous quality. He will experience a burning sensation if raw alcohol has been added. At the same time, the sweetness, smoothness and texture of the wine are appreciated, that is to say the relative proportions of sugar and tannin. Finally, the tartness and astringency are appreciated by rolling the wine against the cheeks.

At this point, professional tasters usually stop, spitting out the mouthful, since their vast experience enables them to judge a host of other subtle qualities in the wine.

There is something to be said, however, for swallowing the mouthful, provided that one is not obliged to taste too large a number of samples at the same session. By swallowing slowly, with the mouth closed, there are still further shades of taste to be distinguished. First of all some flavours which take about 10 seconds to develop, then the 'readiness' which arises from the fusion of aroma and bouquet, and finally the perfumed aftertaste which indicates that the wine 'ends well'.

The tasting of oil, butter, tea and other foods is carried out in the same way. It should be undertaken in the mornings on an empty stomach, or at least some considerable time after a meal. Above all, the taster should not smoke before tasting.

Haute Savoie (Château de Menthon)
(French Government Tourist Office)

SAVOY. SAVOIE – The territory of the Savoy, jagged with mountains, offers only a restricted space for the cultivation of such crops as cereals, buckwheat and potatoes, but the gentler slopes of the Alps provide fine pasture lands which nourish livestock for meat and dairy produce. The milk and cream used in the Savoie kitchen are culinary ingredients of the highest order. Vines are grown on the hillsides which face the midday sun. Fine orchards are planted with cherry, plum, pear and cider apple trees. Walnut trees and chestnuts prosper. The clearings in the woods abound with fragrant little strawberries, and the cool earth of the forests and meadows encourages the growth of mushrooms in summer.

Game, nourished by the aromatic herbs of the grasslands, is particularly good to eat; hares, partridges, quails and woodcock are plentiful. Excellent fish abounds in the cold waters of the lakes and rivers and torrents: carp, eel, perch, trout, char and burbot. Two delicious fish, the lavaret and the fêra, are almost unique to the province. The crayfish are small but good. The bees provide excellent honey, that of Tarentaise in particular being renowned.

Culinary specialties – Savoyarde cooking, done with ingredients of the highest quality, is good but a little heavy. There exist some special dishes.

Under the name of civet, hare and pork are prepared with a very rich sauce in which spices and aromatics are combined with the blood of the animal, wine and fresh cream.

In this cheese-producing region gratin dishes are greatly relished: gratins of crayfish, cardoons and potatoes have a place of honour.

The farçon is a local potato dish which constitutes a sweet pudding. Risssoles of meat or other mixtures and preparations made with veal and lamb offal (U.S. variety meats) – ears, sweetbreads, brains and liver – are much appreciated.

Savoyarde housewives are expert in the art of making sausages and pâtés. The hams of Celliers and Taninges, dried and smoked in the open air, are of high repute, as are the game pâtés of Bonneville. Among the fish dishes are: battered perch and trout; the salmon trout; Trout à la meunière; char cooked in court-bouillon. The fishermen of Lake Léman prepared a fish soup similar to the chaudrées, cotriades and *bouillabaisse*s of the sea coast.

Among the vegetables, cardoons are notable. The nouilles (noodles) and nouillettes aux oeufs of Albertville and Chambéry have a high reputation. Nut oil is much used for cooking and salad dressings.

Cheeses are numerous and choice: Chevette; Reblochon; Vacherin – which is an imitation of Gruyère – and Tome de Sixt, which is eaten very hard, several years after making.

The matefaim is a pancake which can be eaten with salt or sugar according to taste.

At Chamonix are made bonbons au miel des Alpes (Alpine honey sweets); nougat and good pastries; biscuits are made at Thonon; chocolate at Sallanches. At Saint-Genis-d'Aoste and at Taninges gateaux de Savoie are made according to the ancient tradition of the region.

Wines – Savoy produces some attractive wines. There are two appellations contrôlées: Crêpy and Seyssel, both white; also a sparkling Seyssel.

All the other wines belong to the V.D.Q.S. category. The appellations are: Vins de Savoie, Roussette de Savoie, Vins de Savoie mousseaux. The best known vineyards are: Marestel, Monthoux, Chautagne on the left bank of the Rhône; Monterminod, Chignin, Charpignat on the shores of Lake Bourget; Abymes, Apremont, Montmélian, Arbin, Cruet, Saint-Jean-de-la-Porte on the right bank of the Isère.

Cider is a popular drink in many of the cantons; Chambéry, Annecy and Rumilly brew beer. Savoy also produces an excellent kirsch, a marc brandy and a special spirit called lie, which is often added to coffee. The best known dessert wine of the province is Chambéry vermouth.

SAVOYARDE (À LA) – Name given to two different preparations:

1. Omelette à la savoyarde; pancake omelette filled with slices of potato sautéed in butter and thin shavings of Gruyère. (see EGGS.)

2. Potatoes chopped up raw, mixed with grated Gruyère and consommé and cooked in an earthenware dish. (See POTATOES, Potatoes à la savoyarde.)

SAVOY BISCUIT. SAVOIE (BISCUIT DE) – See SPONGE CAKE, Savoy sponge cake.

Gastronomic map of Savoie

SAWO MANILA – Malaysian name given in Java and in the Indian Archipelago to a fruit we know as American medlar or sapodilla. Its botanical name is Achras sapota. It is roughly the size of a lemon with a greyish skin and reddish-yellow, almost apricot-coloured, flesh. This fruit has an exquisite flavour but can only be enjoyed in its native habitat.

SAXIFRAGES – Name of a number of fleshy-leaved plants, some of which can be used as vegetables or in soup.

SCABIOUS, SCABIEUSE – Name of several different plants, formerly used as depuratives. Field scabious has succulent leaves which may be eaten cooked or in salad. Scabious is prepared like spinach.

SCALD, ÉBOUILLANTER – To plunge any food into boiling water to harden it and facilitate peeling. This process is also known as blanching.

SCALE, ÉCAILLER – To remove the scales of a fish. This is part of the process of dressing a fish before cooking.

SCALLION or SPRING ONION, CIBOULE – Plant closely related to the onion, but whereas the onion, when young, has leaves of a pale green tending to white at the bottom of the stem, those of the scallion or spring onion are dark green all the way down.

Scallions are found in the market in spring. They are chopped and eaten raw in green salads.

SCALLOP, PÉTONCLE – A species of bivalve mollusc with ribbed, rounded shells, belonging to the Pectinidae family. It is commonly found in France on the Channel and Atlantic coasts and is variously called olivette, vanette or vanneau. Scallops are common on the American coasts, varying in size from very small (bay scallops) to some very large varieties. Found rarely on the Mediterranean coast.

SCALLOP SAINT-JACQUES, COQUILLE SAINT-JACQUES – Bivalve mollusc, commonly known as the pilgrim shell, and called in French Coquille Saint-Jacques.

Before preparing scallops wash and scrub them well and put them in the oven at a very low heat, the rounded part downwards. They will open completely.

Sawo manila

Take out the flesh and the little coral tongue, which is a great delicacy. Do not discard the shells. Scrub them and keep for future use for various scallop shell dishes.

Poach the flesh and the coral in a court-bouillon made with white wine, well seasoned and flavoured with onion, thyme and bay leaf. Drain the scallops. They are now ready to be treated according to the recipe.

In U.S.A., the scallops have no coral and are rarely sold in the shells. All but the hinge is discarded.

Fried scallops. COQUILLES SAINT-JACQUES FRITES – Cook the scallops in court-bouillon, drain and slice. Marinate them for 30 minutes in oil, lemon juice and chopped parsley. Dip them in a light batter and fry in smoking-hot deep fat. Drain. Garnish with fried parsley and quarters of lemon.

Scallops fried in batter. FRITOT DE COQUILLES SAINT-JACQUES – Prepare like Fried scallops. Serve with Tomato sauce (see SAUCE).

Fried scallops Colbert. COQUILLES SAINT-JACQUES FRITES

COLBERT – Dip the white flesh of the scallops in egg and breadcrumbs. Fry in clarified butter. Heap on a serving dish, garnish with chopped parsley and serve with Colbert butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters).

Scallop brochettes. COQUILLES SAINT-JACQUES EN BROCHETTES – Open the scallops and remove the flesh and coral. Rinse these thoroughly in several waters. Pat dry in a towel.

Cut some bacon into small squares (about 1 cm.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  inch). Slide a clove of garlic backwards and forwards on each skewer then discard it. Alternate scallops, bacon and coral on the skewers. Season with salt and pepper. Sprinkle with oil and grill, turning occasionally, for 12 to 15 minutes.

Scallops au gratin. COQUILLES SAINT-JACQUES AU GRATIN – Cook the scallops as described at the beginning of this entry, cut in slices and set in scallop shells on a layer of duxelles, with the chopped onion bound with tomato sauce. Place the coral on top of the scallop slices.

Coat with tomato-flavoured Duxelles sauce (see SAUCES). Sprinkle with breadcrumbs and melted butter. Brown lightly in the oven.

Scallops au gratin à la dieppoise. COQUILLES SAINT-JACQUES AU GRATIN À LA DIEPPOISE – Set the cooked scallops and coral in the shells. Finish as for Brill à la dieppoise (see BRILL).

Scallops in mayonnaise. COQUILLES SAINT-JACQUES EN MAYONNAISE – Set the cooked scallops, seasoned with oil and vinegar and sprinkled with chopped parsley, in the shells, lined with a little shredded and seasoned lettuce. Coat with mayonnaise. Garnish with the coral, fillets of anchovies and capers. Surround with lettuce hearts, quartered hard-boiled eggs and stoned olives.

Scallops Mornay. COQUILLES SAINT-JACQUES MORNAY – Edge the scallop shells with a border of Duchesse potato mixture (see POTATOES) piped through a forcing bag. Line the bottoms of the shells with a spoonful of Mornay sauce (see SAUCE).

Add slices of scallop flesh and the coral. Coat with Mornay sauce. Sprinkle with grated cheese and melted butter and brown in the oven.

Fried scallops à la tartare. COQUILLES SAINT-JACQUES FRITES

Scallops Saint-Jacques (Prunier. Phot. Nicolas)

Top right: how to detach them Bottom right: scallops on skewers

Scallops Saint-Jacques (Larousse)

À LA TARTARE – Prepare the flesh of the scallops as for Fried scallops Colbert. Serve with Tartare sauce (see SAUCE).

Scallops fried in this way can be served with various sauces, such as Béarnaise, Hongroise, Portugaise, etc. (see SAUCE).

SCAMPI – See DUBLIN BAY PRAWNS.

SCARUS, PARROT-FISH. SCARE – Mediterranean fish with fine flesh which was particularly esteemed by the Romans. It is called parrot-fish because of its bright colours. Prepared in court-bouillon, à la meunière or fried.

SCHALETH, JEWISH. SCHALETH À LA JUIVE – Prepare Noodle paste (see NOODLES) as long in advance as possible, so that it is well 'rested' before using.

Roll out thinly, and line a large metal, well-buttered basin. Fill to three-quarters of its capacity with sweet apple purée prepared in this way:

Boil down 800 g. (1½ lb., 4½ cups) apple jam. Add 150 g. (5 oz., 1 cup) raisins, cleaned and seeded, and 250 g. (9 oz., 1½ cups) currants and sultanas, picked over, washed, and soaked in warm water. Add ½ teaspoon each of chopped orange and lemon peel, 125 g. (4 oz., ½ cup) sugar and a little grated nutmeg. Bind with 5 whole eggs and 3 yolks. Add 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) Malaga and mix well.

Cover the basin with a layer of pastry. Make a hole in the middle to allow steam to escape. Cook in a moderately hot oven for 50 minutes to 1 hour. Allow to stand for a few minutes before turning out.

SCHNITZEL. SCHNITZEL – Escalope (thin cutlet) of veal coated with egg and breadcrumbs and cooked in butter or oil, is known by this name in Germany and Austria. (See VEAL.)

SCOLYMUS. SCOLYME – Plant of the Compositae family found in the south-west of France. The Spanish scolymus has an edible root which is eaten in the same way as salsify.

SCOTER-DUCK. MACREUSE – Genus of duck among which are Polar species which migrate to both the Old and New World. Their oily flesh is strong in flavour but edible if the birds are young and properly cooked.

SCUM. ÉCUME – Froth which forms on the surface of a boiling liquid, or the skin which forms on top of a protein liquid such as soup, through the coagulation of soluble proteins when the liquid is cold.

SEA ANEMONES. ANÉMONES DE MER – Name commonly given to Actinia or starfish, edible molluscs which abound on the coasts of France, particularly on the Mediterranean side.

SEA BASS. LOUP DE MER – Name given in some districts to the sea perch.

In U.S.A. the sea bass of the eastern coast and the groupers of the southern shores are very similar to the French loup de mer.

Sea bream

SEA BREAM. DAURADE – Very delicately flavoured fish found in the Mediterranean end of the Gulf of Gascony and very occasionally in the English Channel.

The back is bluish white or dark blue, the flanks silvery-yellow, the belly white. The ancients called it golden eyebrow because of the brilliant golden crescent between its eyes. The French name for this fish is daurade.

Sea bream is best grilled à la meunière or boiled and served with melted butter.

SEA COW, MANATEE. LAMANTIN – The flesh of this herbivorous sea mammal, which tastes something like pork, is much esteemed in the West Indies, as is the 'bacon' made from it.

SEA EEL – See EEL.

SEAFOODS. FRUITS DE MER – Name applied to crustaceans and shellfish of various kinds, which are served together, raw or cooked. It is used, in particular, of a dish of raw shellfish served as an hors-d'œuvre, such as oysters.

Seafoods, which sometimes include slices of various fish, can be cooked in many different ways. They can be made into ragoûts, flans (tarts), risottos, stuffings, etc.

Seafood risotto. RISOTTO AUX FRUITS DE MER – Cook 2 litres (quarts) mussels and 1 litre (quart) cockles or small clams separately in white wine, seasoned with spices and herbs. Drain the shellfish and remove from their shells. Put them in a casserole with 200 g. (7 oz., generous 1 cup) shelled shrimps and 4 shelled scallops, previously cooked in white wine. Add 4 dl. (¾ pint, scant 2 cups) fish Velouté sauce (see SAUCE) which has been prepared separately by using the combined cooking liquors and a white roux of butter and flour. This sauce is cooked for 25 minutes and should be very smooth. Add 5 tablespoons (6 tablespoons) cream and simmer for a few minutes. Add 40 g. (1½ oz., 3 tablespoons) butter and strain.

Dish of seafoods (Larousse)

The ragoût, with the velouté added to it, should be kept hot without boiling.

Prepare the risotto. Sauté a chopped onion in butter without letting it brown. Mix in 250 g. (9 oz., 1¼ cup) rice, stirring well so that all the grains are well coated with butter. Add meat stock twice the volume of the rice a little at a time, allowing the rice to absorb the liquid before pouring on any more.

Cover, and cook for 15 to 20 minutes, stirring from time to time. Add 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter and 50 g. (2 oz., ½ cup) grated cheese.

Arrange the rice in a border on a large dish. Place in the centre the seafood ragoût and arrange the coral of the scallops on top.

SEA HOG – See PORPOISE.

SEAKALE. CHOU MARIN – This plant, which is appreciated in England, is little known in France, although it was introduced into cultivation a long time ago: M. Massey cultivated it in the royal vegetable garden at Versailles in 1820.

Seakale takes the form of a strong root out of which grow leaf rosettes consisting of long thick stalks terminating in fringed rounded crests, pale in colour.

The vegetable grows wild on the coasts of most of western Europe. The leaf stalks have a nutty flavour when cooked.

Seakale is eaten in the same way as asparagus or cardoons.

Trim and wash the seakale and tie 6 to 8 stalks at a time in bundles. Cook in boiling salted water. Drain.

SEAL. PHOQUE – Marine mammal hunted for its skin and the oil which is extracted from its fat. Seal's flesh is eaten by the Eskimos who, it is said, are particularly fond of its liver, lungs, heart and blood, which they make into sausages.

SEA PERCH. PERCHE DE MER – Name sometimes given to bass.

SEA SLUG. HOLOTHURIE – A creature rather like a worm. Some breeds are edible, among them the tripang found in Chinese waters, which is said to be highly prized among the gastronomes of the Far East.

SEASONING. ASSAISONNEMENT – This word defines both the act of seasoning a dish with one of the special substances (salt, for instance) and the substance itself.

Seasoning and flavouring are not the same things. Seasoning a preparation consists of adding a large or small amount of salt to it: flavouring a dish means enhancing its taste by the addition of condiments, aromatics and spices.

SEA URCHIN. OURSIN – Popular name of the marine animals of the Echinus species, with spines, several species of which are edible.

The best are the green sea urchin and the black sea urchin. The latter, called by various names in various regions – sea hedgehog, sea egg, etc. – is found at low tide on rocks.

There are few recipes for preparing the sea urchin. It is chiefly eaten, lightly boiled, like an egg. Cook it in salted boiling water, drain, open by cutting with scissors on the concave side (where the sea urchin's mouth is situated), drain it completely, throwing out the excremental part, then dip buttered morsels of bread into the shell.

In the region of Marseilles, where sea urchins are considered a delicacy, they are eaten out of the shell, as described,

Sea urchins (Merveilles des mers – Charlot I. Phot. Larousse)

but uncooked. They are opened, washed (in sea water if possible) and buttered sippets of bread are dipped into the yellow substance clinging to the walls of the shell.

It is said that sea urchin has great restorative powers. Its taste, when cooked, is not unlike crayfish.

Sea urchin purée. PURÉE D'OURSINS – Open 3 dozen well washed sea urchins and remove the part resembling hard roe. Rub this substance through a sieve. Add an equal quantity of thick Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE). Simmer for 5 minutes, then blend in 40 g. (1½ oz., 3 tablespoons) butter.

This purée can be used for filling tartlets or puff pastry vol-au-vent cases. It can also be spread on pieces of bread, lightly fried in butter, sprinkled with grated cheese, and put in a very hot oven to brown the top.

SEA WRACK, ROCK-WEEK. FUCUS – Species of seaweed of the membranous or filament type.

It is said that the inhabitants of Iceland, the Faroe Islands, Scotland, Norway, Denmark and North America use it for food in times of scarcity. In Scotland, the young stems of the tangle or sea-lettuce are sometimes eaten as a salad.

In Japan there is a flourishing industry in the by-products of seaweed in general and sea wrack in particular. Amanori and kombu are greatly prized for their gelatinous properties, used as condiments rather than as actual food.

SÉBILLE – Saucer or small bowl, usually made of wood, used in French cookery for beating eggs.

In large kitchens, parsley and other chopped ingredients set out for a particular dish are assembled in wooden sébilles of various capacities.

SELTZER-WATER. SELTZ, EAU DE SELTZ – Sparkling mineral water from Selters (Duchy of Nassau), sold in bottles. Artificial seltzer-water is effervescent water charged with carbonic gas under pressure, and sold in siphons.

SEMI-SPARKLING. MOUSTILLE – Certain red and white wines, which are not quite sparkling, have traces of effervescence. These are said to be semi-sparkling.

SEMOLINA. SEMOULE – Food made with cereals, mostly wheat, reduced to granules by coarse milling.

Semolina, particularly wheat semolina, is used to make groats, soups, puddings and various other dishes.

Semolina kasha (Russian cookery). KACHE DE SEMOULE – Mix 250 g. (9 oz., 1½ cups) coarse semolina and one beaten

Semolina pudding with stewed fruit (Claire) egg. Spread this mixture over a baking tin and dry it in the oven at low heat.

Sieve and poach for 20 minutes in consommé. Drain.

This kasha is used with coulibiac and various hors-d'œuvre in Russian cookery.

Semolina pudding. POUDING DE SEMOULE – Shower 250 g. (9 oz., 1½ cups) semolina into 1 litre (scant quart, generous quart) boiling milk sweetened and flavoured with vanilla. Add 40 g. (1½ oz., 3 tablespoons) butter and a pinch of salt. Mix well. Cook in the oven for 30 minutes.

Thicken, away from the heat, with 4 beaten eggs.

English semolina pudding. POUDING DE SEMOULE À L'ANGLAISE – Add to semolina prepared as in the previous recipe 4 egg yolks and 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) fresh cream for each litre (scant quart, generous quart) of the mixture.

Put in a buttered pie dish and cook in the oven in a bain-marie.

French semolina pudding – See PUDDING.

Semolina subrics. SUBRICS DE SEMOULE – Cook 125 g. (4½ oz., ¾ cup) semolina in ½ litre (scant pint, 2¼ cups) of consommé. Add 40 g. (1½ oz., 3 tablespoons) butter. Cover and cook for 25 minutes in the oven. Bind with 2 whole eggs and one extra yolk, and 50 g. (2 oz., ½ cup) grated cheese. Spread this mixture on a buttered baking tin. Butter the surface. Allow to cool. Cut out subrics with a round pastry cutter about 5 cm. (2 inches) in diameter. Fry on both sides in clarified butter.

Set in a crown and sprinkle with melted butter.

To simplify the operation the subrics may be made in squares or rectangles.

In the same way subrics may be made of maize (polenta), rice, vermicelli, noodles and all kinds of cereals and their derivatives.

Semolina subrics (sweet). SUBRICS DE SEMOULE (ENTREMETS) – Sprinkle 125 g. (4½ oz., ¾ cup) semolina into ½ litre (scant pint, 2¼ cups) milk previously boiled with 100 g. (4 oz., ½ cup) sugar, half a pod of vanilla and a pinch of salt.

Add 40 g. (1½ oz., 3 tablespoons) butter and mix well. Cook in the oven, covered, for 25 minutes.

Remove from the heat and bind with 4 egg yolks. Turn the mixture onto a baking tin in a layer 2 cm. (¾ inch) thick. Butter the surface and allow to cool.

Cut out in rings with a pastry cutter and fry on both sides in very hot butter. Arrange in a crown. Garnish the middle of each subric with apricot or redcurrant jelly.

SEPARATOR. ÉCRÈMEUSE – Implement used in dairies for separating the cream from the milk.

SEPT-ŒIL – Name (Seven-eye) sometimes given to the lamprey. The spawn of this fish are also called sept-ail.

SERDEAU or SERS-D'EAU – Official of the court of the King of France who received the dishes cleared from the table by the maitre d'hôtel. Also the place to which these left-overs were taken and from which they were re-sold. Formerly at the court of France it was the custom to keep food always ready to serve to those whose duty or business brought them in touch with the king.

To this end dishes cleared from the royal table were brought to a special room or serre, which came to be called the serre d'hôte, and, by corruption, the serdeau i.e. to be kept hot. A 'serre' is a hothouse.

Later, the custom of regaling the king's visitors fell into disuse and the left-overs, brought immediately to the serdeau as before, were sold by auction. This custom still existed at the time of Louis XIV and many Versailles households were cheaply provisioned in this way.

News-gatherers of the end of the eighteenth century were greatly amused by an adventure which happened at Versailles to an old gentleman whose state of fortune obliged him to make economies, and who was in the habit of making up his dinner from left-overs provided for him by the serdeau servants.

He had been called unexpectedly into a salon of the palace, when it was discovered that a very valuable snuff-box had suddenly disappeared without anybody having been seen to leave the room. To allay suspicion everybody present turned their pockets inside out, and, after a certain hesitation, the economy-minded courtier followed suit. One may imagine the burst of laughter that greeted the appearance of a piece of chicken that had been buried in his pocket, and which had been intended to constitute the poor gentleman's dinner.

The story appeared in all the papers after having acquired a number of embellishments.

SERRÉ – See CHEESE.

SERVICE – The word service used to mean a group of dishes composing part of a meal. There were at least three services. After each the table was cleared with the exception of the dormants or table centres and the bouts de table, on which were arranged the dishes for the next course.

The second sense of the word describes the manner of presenting the dishes to the guests. If the dishes are put on the table, each artistically arranged and set symmetrically, this is service à la française. Then there is the service à la russe, now widely adopted, in which the dishes are passed in a pre-determined order to each guest, the meat being cut up in advance. Some details of these two kinds of service are given below.

Table service can also be taken to mean the ensemble of objects which are used at table: linen, plates, glass and silver. In particular the utensils required to serve a special part of the meal are called services – e.g. coffee service, tea service, fruit service, etc.

In French the personnel of the restaurant who are responsible for serving meals are also called the service.

Service à la française and à la russe – The great service à la française, as it was practised during the First Empire and even more frequently during the Second, was only the continuation, in an already diminished form, of the ceremonial of the table observed under Louis XIV, which was called le grand couvert.

A meal served à la française was divided in three quite distinct parts, which were the services. The first service consisted of the series of dishes inscribed on the menu from soup to roast, including the hors-d'œuvre. The second comprised everything on the menu following the roast – cold second roasts and vegetables, continuing to the last item, the sweet dishes. The third service, completely independent of the kitchen, came from the pastrycook, which included decorated pieces, various pastries, petits fours, sweets, ices and fruit, all of which constituted the dessert.

The order of the menu was regulated by the number of entrées, that is to say the dishes of the second service had to be equivalent in number to those of the first service and never adding up to an odd number. But there were some deviations from the rule.

Thus in a menu in which there were 8 entrées, there had to be 2 soups, 2 large 'removes', 2 roasts, 2 cold pieces for the second roast, 2 side dishes and 2 vegetables (or 1 vegetable and a mixed salad).

Certain menus left by Carême (authentic menus for meals served principally at the table of the Prince Talleyrand) mention 32 and sometimes 48 entrées.

All the dishes for the first service were arranged on the table before the entry of the guests into the dining room, set on réchauds (hot plates) to keep them hot and covered with cloche lids.

This magnificence, this satisfaction in the display of riches, had its reverse side and presented various difficulties. It is easy to understand how overloaded were the tables if to these covered dishes are added the great table centres, baskets of flowers, candelabras full of candles, set places, glass, etc. But the greatest inconvenience of this service, almost inevitably, was that in spite of the réchauds the last dishes of the series, however great the dexterity of the carving and the speed of serving, had become somewhat chilled and no longer at their best. Moreover, it is equally evident that the guests could not try such a large number of dishes and must make a choice of one or two.

The service à la russe, popularized by Urbain Dubois round about 1860, is less rich, less representative and expressive of luxury, but it has the advantage of meeting in full the imperious demands of the table to 'serve hot'. The fundamental rule of this service is that everything should be organised in advance to this end. Here there is no more useless ornamentation, no more vulgar decoration; on the contrary, everything must be arranged so that the carving is done in the minimum time and the dish served to the guests before there is any change in its taste. By this method the guests help themselves – or have food served to them; but even though the carving is done in advance, the arrangement of the food on the dishes still demands correctness and an attractive appearance, especially when they are accompanied by a variety of different 'garnishes', which must always blend perfectly with the principal ingredient of the dish.

In service à la russe everything can be served piping hot if whoever is in charge of the kitchen can calculate from the time for which the meal is fixed the moment at which he must begin to dish up, working out for this purpose the time taken in cooking and the exact instant at which the food must be presented to the guests.

This rapid service, which proscribes all decoration or complicated arrangement of hot dishes, gives no scope to the culinary artist to exercise his talents. However, there is nothing in service à la russe to exclude cold dishes which are not spoilt by waiting, such as various chauds-froids, decorated shellfish in aspic, fancy terrines, glazed chickens, mousses in aspic, etc. In foodstuffs of this type the modern cuisine has made real progress in adopting a system of serving in bowls or deep dishes, so that there is no need for any supplementary preparation. Moulds have been almost completely abandoned.

In service à la russe, the guests at a party are divided into groups of 10 or 12 people, each group being served by one waiter, who is instructed in advance by the mistress of the house which guests to serve first and last. At a ceremonial meal it is customary to serve all the ladies first, beginning at the right of the master of the house. Dishes are offered on the left-hand side of the seated person; the plate is put down and taken away on the right. Wine is served on the right in the same order as the dishes, but the first drops are poured into the glass of the master of the house, so that small crumbs of cork do not fall into the glass of a guest.

On a less ceremonious occasion, where the master of the house carves and serves the food himself, the dishes, or the filled plates, should be passed round, beginning with the person on his right.

Service-berry

SERVICE-BERRY. ALISE – Fruit of various trees which should not be confused with sorb apple.

Wild service-tree as well as whitebeam tree, commonly called shadbush, grows freely in the mountainous regions of Europe.

The Fontainebleau wild service-tree is found chiefly in the wooded parts along the banks of the Seine.

The fruit of wild service-trees has a very pleasant acid taste.

SERViette, TABLE NAPKIN – Piece of linen to protect the clothing and to wipe mouth and fingers at table.

Its use is much less ancient than that of tablecloth or towel. Up to the fifteenth century one wiped one's fingers on the tablecloth or on the doublier, a second cloth, covered in its turn with a longière, yet a third, intended for this use. Later came napkins or touailles, but they were few and generally attached to the walls. It was only in the sixteenth century that the use of the individual table napkin became general. At first it was kept over the left arm, then the fashion for starched ruffs made it necessary for them to be tied round the diners' necks.

At court, the king's napkin, wrapped up and placed in the nef (the golden vessel which contained his personal cruet and cutlery) was presented to him after his food had been tested, by the personage of the highest rank among those present, a prince of the blood royal or a high dignitary.

The Maitre d'hôtel carried a rolled-up napkin over his left shoulder as an insignia of office.

SERViette (À LA) – Describes a way of serving certain foodstuffs, notably truffles. Truffles à la serviette are not cooked in a table napkin but are served in one, folded into a kind of pocket.

These truffles are cooked in liqueur wine and set in a bowl or a silver dish which is placed in a folded napkin.

Truffles cooked in hot ashes in the old-fashioned style are served à la serviette. Potatoes cooked in their jackets in the oven or in hot ashes are also served à la serviette.

SESAME

Rice à la serviette is rice cooked for 15 minutes in salted water, drained, rinsed under the cold tap, and finished in a very low oven or special drying oven wrapped in a napkin. This recipe will be found under Rice à l'indienne in the section on RICE.

Folded napkins are used in serving certain dishes, placed under earthenware dishes and casseroles or under metal dishes, under vol-au-vents and patties, and under the glass bowls in which cold jellied foods, mixed salads, iced sweets, etc., are served.

SESAME – Annual herbaceous tropical and subtropical plant, known to the ancient Greeks and Hebrews, the Egyptians and Persians, where its fruit or seeds have been used from time immemorial as a food grain and as oil.

These seeds, chiefly used to make halva (Turkish sweet), are also used for cakes, cookies (biscuits), and confectionery.

Industrially they are used to make an oil for oleomargarine, cosmetics and soap.

SET. PRIS – Used in terms of cookery for liquids coagulated by heat (custards) or cold (ice creams and jellied preparations).

SETIER – Old French measure of capacity for grain equal to 156 litres or measure of capacity for liquids equal to 8 pints.

Demi-setier is a term used in Paris to mean a quarter of a litre.

SEYSEL – Commune of the département of Ain where a well-known white wine of the same name is made.

SHAD. ALOSE – Migratory fish bearing some similarity to herring, but bigger in size. In the spring, the shad go up the rivers to spawn in fresh water.

There are two distinct species of shad: the Allis shad which is the more valued, and the Waite shad which is smaller and coarser.

The flesh of the shad, although a little heavy, is very delicate. The female is to be preferred to the male, but the latter are prized for their milt (soft roe). If caught soon after spawning these fish have the tastiest of flesh but they have numerous bones.

In U.S.A. a species of shad exists which is called Alosa menhaden. Shad's roe is much prized in U.S.A.

Like all fish, the shad must be eaten very fresh. Its freshness can be recognized by its shiny skin and clear eye.

In addition to the recipes given below, all those given for the preparation of bass, cod, herring and mackerel can be applied to shad, whether cooked whole, sliced or in fillets.

Scrape off the scales and clean the fish. Wash it quickly and dry. Keep the soft and the hard roes to prepare them as described in special recipes.

Shad Claudine. ALOSE CLAUDINE – Cut the shad into slices of uniform thickness. Butter an ovenproof dish, line the bottom with chopped shallots cooked in white wine, uncooked mushroom and chopped parsley. Put the slices of fish on top of these.

Moisten with a few tablespoons white wine. Season, scatter a few small dabs of butter and bake in the oven, basting frequently. Pour in 1½ dl. (¼ pint, ⅔ cup) thick fresh sour cream. Glaze in the oven.

Garnish with new potatoes tossed in butter.

Fried shad. ALOSE FRITE – Cut into slices, soak in milk, dredge with flour and deep-fry in sizzling fat.

Drain the shad and arrange on a napkin, garnish with fried parsley and quarters of lemon.

Fried shad à l'anglaise. ALOSE FRITE À L'ANGLAISE – Cut shad fillets into slices, dip them in egg and breadcrumbs and fry. Serve with Maître d'hôtel butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters).

Fried shad Only. ALOSE FRITE ONLY – Marinate the fillets of shad in oil, lemon juice, chopped parsley, salt and pepper.

Dip in batter and fry in deep fat. Serve with Tomato sauce (see SAUCE).

Grilled shad (whole). ALOSE GRILLÉE (ENTÈRE) – Clean a medium-sized shad, scrape off scales, wash and thoroughly wipe it. Make a few deep incisions in the fleshy part of the back, on both sides. Season with salt and pepper and marinate for an hour in oil, lemon juice, parsley, thyme and bay leaf.

Cook under a grill, on moderate heat, for 30 minutes.

Arrange on a long dish. Garnish the borders of the dish with half slices of lemon. Serve with Maître d'hôtel butter or with any other sauce suitable for grilled fish (see BUTTER, Compound butters or SAUCE).

Grilled shad (in slices). ALOSE GRILLÉE (EN TRANCHES) – Cut the shad into slices 2 cm (¾ inch) thick, season, marinate in oil, lemon juice, parsley, thyme and bay leaf for 15 to 20 minutes. Grill for 12 to 15 minutes. Serve in the same way as whole shad.

Shad with mushrooms, à la bonne femme. ALOSE AUX CHAMPIGNONS, À LA BONNE FEMME – Proceed as described in the recipe for Brill à la bonne femme. (See BRILL).

Shad on plank (American cookery). ALOSE SUR PLANCHETTE – Fillet a medium-sized shad. Trim and marinate for an hour in oil, lemon juice, salt and pepper. Put it, skin side down, on a buttered plank. If a female shad is being cooked, place the roes in the middle of the fillets. Secure the whole with two heated, buttered skewers.

Cook in the oven or under the grill. From time to time baste the fish with melted butter.

Put the plank on a long platter. Withdraw the skewers. Garnish with quarters of lemon and little sprigs of parsley. Serve with Maître d'hôtel butter, and a cucumber salad.

The cooking of certain dishes on planks, both fish and meat, is very popular in U.S.A. For this purpose an oak board is used, 35 cm. (14 inches) long, 30 cm (12 inches) wide and 3 cm (1¼ inches) thick. These boards have a ring at each corner.

Shad au plat. ALOSE AU PLAT – Choose a shad weighing about 700 to 800 g. (1½ to 1¾ lb.). Coat the inside with 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) kneaded butter, 1 tablespoon chopped parsley, a teaspoon chopped shallots, salt and pepper.

Put in a buttered ovenproof dish. Season with salt and pepper, sprinkle with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) white wine or mushroom stock, scatter a few small dabs of butter on the fish, and cook in the oven at 190°C. (375°F., Gas Mark 5) from 25 to 30 minutes.

Baste frequently during cooking. If the pan juices boil down too quickly, add a few drops mushroom stock or water.

Serve in the dish in which the fish is cooked.

Stuffed shad à l'ancienne. ALOSE FARCIE À L'ANCIENNE – Proceed as described in the recipe for Stuffed carp à l'ancienne (see CARP).

Stuffed shad à la ménagère. ALOSE FARCIE À LA MÉNAGÈRE –

Fill the shad with a stuffing prepared with a mixture of breadcrumbs, butter, lightly fried chopped onion, chopped parsley and chervil, all well seasoned.

Cook the shad as described in the recipe for Shad au plat.

Stuffed shad à la mode de Cocherel. ALOSE ÉTOUFFÉE À LA MODE DE COCHEREL – Stuff a shad weighing 2 kg. (4½ lb.) with the following: Pound the flesh of whiting in a mortar, season with salt, pepper and grated nutmeg and add, whilst still pounding, (for 300 g., 11 oz., whiting) one egg white. Rub through a fine sieve. Add 3½ dl. (generous ½ pint, 1½ cups) fresh double cream, little by little. Add 2 good tablespoons (3 tablespoons) chopped, blanched and drained spring onions, and one tablespoon of chopped parsley, blending with a wooden spoon.

Wrap the shad in very thin bacon rashers, secure with string and thread on skewers. Grill under medium heat for about 30–45 minutes. A few minutes before removing the skewers, take off the rashers and brown the fish.

Arrange the shad in a large dish and surround with the following garnish, arranged in separate groups: small new potatoes cooked in butter, quarters of young artichokes, blanched, drained and stewed in butter, small glazed new onions.

Dilute the pan juices with a glass of dry white wine, add 4 dl. (¾ pint, scant 2 cups) cream, boil down, add butter, strain, and serve in a sauceboat.

Stuffed shad à la portugaise. ALOSE FARCIE À LA PORTUGAISE – Stuff the shad as described in the preceding recipe, but add chopped mushrooms, lightly fried in oil, and a crushed clove of garlic to the stuffing.

Cook in oil in a fireproof dish. When half cooked add 2½ dl. (scant ½ pint, generous cup) Tomato fondue (see TOMATO). Finish cooking everything together, basting frequently. A few moments before removing from the oven, sprinkle with breadcrumbs, add a dash of oil and brown lightly.

SHAD-BUSH. AMELANCHIER – Genus of service-tree covering several types of shrubs bearing edible fruit.

This fruit, which is slightly astringent and has a tart flavour, is better when slightly over-ripe. It is popular with children.

SHAGGY INK CAP. COPRIN – Edible mushroom characterized by black spores, from which its name derives. Prepared in the same way as mushrooms. It should only be eaten when very young, while the gills are still pink.

SHALLOT. ÉCHALOTE – Pot vegetable which, according to Candolle (French botanist 1806–1893) is merely a derivative of the onion, with a slight taste of garlic. Some people find the shallot more readily digestible than onion.

Shallot butter. BEURRE D'ÉCHALOTE – Pound finely in a mortar 125 g. (4½ oz.) shallot, blanched, cooled under running water, drained and squeezed. Add 125 g. (4½ oz., ½ cup) fresh butter. Mix. Rub through a cloth or hair sieve.

This composite butter is used for cold hors-d'œuvre preparations, especially canapés; also as an additional ingredient in some sauces, and is served with grills.

Essence of shallot. ESSENCE D'ÉCHALOTES – Bring 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) vinegar to the boil. Add 50 g. (2 oz., ½ cup) chopped shallot. Boil for 5 minutes. Strain through muslin. Essence of shallot can be made with white wine instead of vinegar.

SHARK. REQUIN – Name of a number of carnivorous fish whose size varies from a few cm (inches) to several metres (yards) long. The flesh of the shark, though very tough, is used as a foodstuff by the Lapps and by some negro peoples who are very partial to it.

Shark fins are much esteemed by the Chinese.

SHARPEN. AIGUISER – Term in pastry-making, used figuratively speaking, of a cream or liquid, which means sharpening up, making it acid by adding lemon juice or citric acid.

The word is also used in the sense of spicing a dish strongly.

Sharpening steel (Coutellerie André. Phot. Larousse)

SHARPENING STEEL. FUSIL – Steel instrument used by butchers and cooks to sharpen their knives.

SHCHI – Russian soup. See SOUPS AND BROTHS.

SHE-ASS. ÂNESSE – Female ass. Its milk in content comes nearer to human milk than that of any other domestic animal. (See MILK.)

Ass's milk was much valued in France for medicinal purposes since François I took it as a cure. All the courtesans hastened to imitate their king, and that began the vogue for ass's milk.

SHEATH. GAINÉ – Type of wooden case bound with copper, nickel or leather in which butchers and cooks used to carry their knives. Such sheaths are no longer much in use today.

SHEEP – See MUTTON, LAMB.

Sheeps' brains. CERVELLE DE MOUTON – All recipes for lambs' and calves' brains are suitable for sheeps' brains. (See OFFAL or VARIETY MEATS.)

Sheep's or lamb's kidney pilaf I. PILAF AUX ROGNONS DE MOUTON – Put the rice into a buttered border (ring) mould and turn out on to a dish. Cover the rice with halved sheep's kidneys, sautéed in butter and finished as described in the recipe for Kidney sautéed in white wine (see OFFAL or VARIETY MEATS).

Sheep's or lamb's kidney pilaf II. PILAF AUX ROGNONS DE MOUTON – Proceed as described in the recipe for Shrimp pilaf II (see SHRIMPS) garnishing the pilaf with sheep's or lamb's kidneys, sliced, fried in butter and finished as described in the recipe for Kidneys sautéed in white wine (see OFFAL or VARIETY MEATS).

Sheep's liver. FOIE DE MOUTON – This liver is rather inferior in flavour. It can be cooked in the same way as calves' liver (see OFFAL or VARIETY MEATS).

SHELL. ÉGRENER – To detach corn or other cereal grain from the stalk.

The French terms écaler and écosser also mean to shell. Écaler is applied to removing shells or husks of fruit and vegetables, shelling eggs and shellfish. Écosser means to remove the shell or pod from peas and beans.

SHELLFISH – See CRUSTACEANS.

SHEPHERD'S PURSE (Corn salad). BOURSE-À-PASTEUR – Common name for a plant which is also known as bourse-à-berger and bourslette or boucette, often found in shady places. It is sometimes used in salads. If picked at flowering time, its taste is not unlike that of watercress. It is also called lamb's lettuce.

SHERBETS. SORBETS – These ices, which in France are usually served between the main courses, take the place nowadays of the liqueurs which formerly used to be served in the middle of the meal and which in some parts of France were called coup du milieu, and in others trou normand.

Sherbets are made from fruit, liqueurs and heavy wines.

Here is the recipe most commonly used:

For 1 litre (quart) of sherbet.  $\frac{1}{2}$  litre (scant pint,  $2\frac{1}{4}$  cups) of any sweet wine, the juice of 2 lemons and 1 orange, syrup (1 cup sugar and 2 cups water boiled 5 minutes, strained and cooled).

All sherbet mixtures must be made from a light syrup. The saccharometer should never register more than 15° (see SUGAR). Sherbets are iced as follows:

Pour the mixture into a Churn freezer already embedded in ice. Set the mechanism working. Alternatively, pour the mixture into a container and place in a food freezer. From time to time scrape the inside of the freezer to detach any sherbet sticking to the sides. This should not, however, be stirred into the rest of the mixture, as the sherbet, once it is frozen, should have a slightly gritty texture.

Stir in very gently some Italian meringue (a quarter of the volume of the sherbet, see MERINGUE) or, if preferred, the same amount of whipped cream, and whatever liqueur or dessert wine is desired.

Presentation of sherbets. The mixture should be removed from the freezer with a special conical scoop. Each portion should be set, point upwards, in a sherbet cup and sprinkled with the same liqueur or wine as that used in the mixture.

SHERRY. XÉRÈS, JEREZ – Name given in England to the Spanish wine Xérès.

Sherry is a fortified wine, produced principally from the Palomino grape in the countryside surrounding Jerez de la Frontiera in Spain. There is a great variety of sherries ranging, in colour, from a pale gold to dark brown and, in taste, from very dry to sweet. The dry sherries include Fino, Vino de Pasto, Manzanilla and a darker, older variety called Amontillado. Slightly sweeter varieties include those called Oloroso and Amoroso and among the dark and quite sweet varieties are Cream, Brown and East India.

Spanish sherries, unlike many of their imitators, are subject to a very special process of fermentation, ageing and blending which make their product unequalled in the world.

Sherry cobbler – Iced drink. Put into a glass, one-third filled with crushed ice, one tablespoon sugar and  $1\frac{1}{2}$  tablespoons (2 tablespoons) of Curaçao. Fill up the glass with sherry. Add a slice of orange.

SHIN. JARRET – Part of the leg of an animal behind the knee-joint. It corresponds with the tibia-tarsal or radio-carpal bone in humans. The shin of veal is used in the preparation of stock. It can also be cut into sections and braised. (See VEAL, Knuckle of veal.)

SHIRR – To break eggs into a baking dish and cook them either in the oven or on top of the stove. (See EGGS.)

SHORTBREAD – Make pastry with 500 g. (18 oz.,  $4\frac{1}{2}$  cups) flour, 200 g. (7 oz., scant cup) sugar, 500 g. (18 oz.,  $2\frac{1}{4}$  cups) softened butter, 125 g. ( $4\frac{1}{2}$  oz., 1 cup) ground almonds, 3 egg whites and powdered vanilla.

Press out on to a buttered baking sheet through a forcing bag fitted with a fluted pipe. Bake for 50 minutes in the oven at 140°C. (275°F., Gas Mark 1).

SHOULDER. ÉPAULE – The front leg of quadrupeds. Cuts from shoulder of beef are braised or used in hot-pots.

Shoulder of veal, usually boned and rolled into a long, tight bundle, is braised, pot-roasted or roasted. It is also used in sautés and ragoûts.

Shoulder of mutton and lamb, boned or whole, is cooked in the same way as the legs. It is also used in stews.

The shoulder of different types of venison is cooked in the same way as haunch of venison, but is more commonly used in civets.

SHOVELLER – See DUCK, Wild duck.

SHREDDER AND SLICER. MANDOLINE – A kind of plane, sometimes fluted, used for shredding or slicing vegetables, especially potatoes.

It is with an implement of this type that vegetables are shredded into matchsticks or straws or sliced very thin, as for potato crisps.

SHRIKE. PIE-GRIÈCHE – Popular name for small perching bird of the family Laniidae. It can be prepared in any way suitable for lark.

Sword shrimps (Kollar)

SHRIMPS. CREVETTES – Little shellfish used for hors-d'œuvre and garnishes.

The two principal European types are 1. the Sword shrimp (crevette rose), the head of which is armed with a long-toothed beak. It becomes rosy when cooked and the flesh is white and firm; 2. the Common shrimp (crevette grise) which is smaller, with a smooth short beak. It takes on a pinkish-grey colour when cooked. The flesh, which is rather limp, is less appreciated than that of the sword-shrimp.

Cooking of shrimps. Put the shrimps alive into boiling salted water. Do not add seasoning. When possible cook the shrimps in sea water which has been strained through muslin or through a fine sieve.

Cooked in this way and cooled, the shrimps are served as an hors-d'œuvre.

Shrimps in U.S.A. vary from the large size found off the southern shores, which average a dozen to 450 g. (pound), to the tiny ones, averaging 40 to 450 g. (pound). These small ones fished off the Alaskan and northern New England shores are less popular, although of a good flavour.

Shrimp aspic. ASPIC DE CREVETTES – Arrange peeled cooked shrimps in layers in a mould lined with clear aspic jelly, leaving the centre of the mould free. Fill the centre with a shrimp mousse made with the shrimp peelings or with Shrimp mousse described below.

Cover completely with aspic jelly which is almost set. Chill on ice or in the refrigerator before turning out.

Shrimp butter – See BUTTER, Compound butters.

Shrimp canapés – See HORS-D'ŒUVRE, Cold hors-d'œuvre.

Shrimp coquilles. COQUILLES DE CREVETTES – Made with peeled shrimps and Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE), to which shrimp butter is added.

Fried shrimps. CREVETTES FRITES – Cook the shrimps in boiling oil. Drain, and season with fine salt. Garnish with fried parsley.

Cold shrimp mousse. MOUSSE FROIDE DE CREVETTES – Cook the shrimps in a mirepoix in the same way as crayfish. (q.v.). Peel some of the shrimps in order to have enough tails with which to decorate the mould. Pound the rest with the mirepoix in which they were cooked. Pass the mixture through a fine sieve.

Add to the purée a quarter of its volume of Velouté sauce (see SAUCE) based on fish stock which has been boiled down. For every 500 g. (18 oz., 2 cups) purée, add 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) fish aspic. Add  $2\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, generous cup) cream, which has been whipped not too stiff.

Put the mousse in a mould lined with aspic and decorated with the shrimp tails, and if desired with some truffle decoration. Cover with aspic. Allow to get thoroughly cold. Turn out and arrange in a bowl.

Shrimp pilaf I. PILAF DE CREVETTES – Cook the rice and add to it 125 g. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  oz.) peeled shrimps. Mix carefully so as not to damage the rice grains.

Shrimp pilaf II. PILAF DE CREVETTES – Cook the rice and line a buttered mould with it.

Add a ragoût of peeled shrimps bound with Shrimp sauce II (see SAUCE). Cover with the rest of the rice, pressing lightly with the back of a spoon to pack the rice properly. Put in the oven for a few moments. Turn out on to a dish and surround with a ring of shrimp sauce.

Shrimp salad. SALADE DE CREVETTES – Season peeled shrimps with vinaigrette or mayonnaise. Decorate with quarters of hard-boiled eggs and lettuce hearts.

Shrimp salad à la dieppoise – See SALAD.

Shrimp soup: coulis, cream or bisque. POTAGES AUX CREVETTES: COULIS, CRÈME OU BISQUE – Prepare with shrimps cooked in a mirepoix like the soups of a similar nature prepared with crayfish. (See SOUPS AND BROTHS, Purée of shrimp soup.)

SILK-COTTON TREE. FROMAGER – Tree, native to tropical Africa. Its trunk is of white wood, somewhat reminiscent of cheese in appearance. For this reason, it is called 'fromager' in French. Oil is extracted from its fruit.

SILKWORMS (Chinese cookery). VERS À SOIE – This rather unusual foodstuff was very well thought of in the 'Celestial Empire', if we are to believe the account of a French missionary in China, Father Favaut:

'It is some centuries', he wrote, 'since our farmers in the Midi took up the production of silkworms, but I know they have never dreamed of using any of them for nourishment. In China it is not the same thing at all. During the long stay I have made in that country, I have often seen people eat silkworm chrysalids, and I have eaten them myself. I can state that they constitute an excellent stomachic, strengthening and refreshing at the same time, which delicate persons often use with successful results.'

'The cocoons having been unwound, a certain quantity of the chrysalids are gilled in the pan so that the watery part runs right off. Their outer covering comes off, and they are presented in the form of small yellow objects, rather like carp roes.'

'These are fried in butter, fat or oil, and sprinkled with stock (chicken stock is the best).'

'When they have boiled for five minutes they are crushed with a wooden spoon, and the whole mass is carefully stirred so that nothing is left in the bottom of the vessel. Some egg yolks are beaten, in the proportion of 3 to every 100 chrysalids, and poured over, and in this way a beautiful cream, golden yellow and of an exquisite flavour, is obtained.'

'Thus this foodstuff was prepared for the mandarins and the wealthy. As for the poor, after having grilled the chrysalids and removed their outer covering, they fried the rest in butter or fat and seasoned them with a little salt, pepper or vinegar; or even ate them just as they were, with rice, content simply to have removed their outer covering.'

SILLERY – Renowned Champagne wine harvested in the country around the commune of Sillery in the département of the Marne.

SILVER. ARGENTERIE DE TABLE – This term describes all the utensils in silver or silver-plated metal used at table.

More specifically this applies to individual pieces of silver which go in to make up what is called the 'cover', (U.S.A. 'place setting'), i.e. spoon, fork and knife, when the latter has a silver or silver-plated handle. (See FORK, SPOON.)

Table silver also includes other articles which in the olden days were called silver plate, articles of various shapes, such as round or oval dishes, large or small bowls, soup tureens, sauceboats, pie dishes, etc.

Among table silverware are also included decorative silver and silver-plate pieces, such as salvers, fruit baskets, pedestal dishes, etc.

SILVER BIRCH. BOULEAU BLANC – In the spring this tree, which grows in northern countries, contains a great deal of sour-sweet sap which, when fresh, makes a very pleasant drink.

SILVERSIDE or ATHERINE. PRÊTRE – Small regional sea fish of France about the size of a smelt, 10 to 18 cm. (4 to 7 inches) long, showing on its sides a silvery mark like a star. Its flesh is quite delicate.

SIMAROUBA – Tree, native to Guiana, whose bark is used for a bitter tonic.

SIMMER. MJOTER – To cook gently over a very low flame.

SIMMERING. FRÉMISSEMENT – The slight quivering of a liquid just before it comes to the boil. When poaching, the liquid should be kept in this state all the time.

Some foods, such as pot-au-feu, are cooked entirely by simmering.

SINGEING. FLAMBAGE – Process of rotating poultry and winged game, etc. over a spirit lamp or gas flame to burn off feathers and hair.

SINGER – French culinary term of unknown origin meaning to sprinkle with flour a ragoût or other preparation in order to thicken the sauce.

SINK. ÉVIER – The domestic equivalent of the professional chef's small washing-up sink. It is used for washing dishes, for washing vegetables and occasionally for washing small articles of cloth. This multiplicity of purpose requires that it be thoroughly cleaned after use. Sinks are made of ceramic, stone, enamelled cast-iron, plastic, or, most commonly nowadays, of stainless steel. They are single or double, round or rectangular, of varying depths and often equipped with a draining board that doubles up as a working surface. Sinks are supplied with hot and cold water. The evacuation of the water is done by means of a plug. Some sinks are equipped with a waste disposal unit.

SIPHON – Carafe of thick glass, often encased in wicker or metal, holding water that has been made effervescent with carbonic gas under pressure. Siphons are closed with a metal top provided with a lever which allows the liquid to escape. Some siphons allow Seltzer-water to be made with the aid of capsules called sparklets.

Water jug
(early seventeenth century)

Wine jug
(early seventeenth century)

Sugar caster (late seventeenth century)

Ewer
(early eighteenth century)

Sugar basin (Picasso, 1740)

Sauceboat (Depris, 1723)

Teapot
(Germain, 1750)

Coffee pot
(Germain, 1750)

Tray
(Germain, 1756)

Teapot
(Germain, late eighteenth century)

Tureen
(Joubert, 1761)

Cooler for glasses (1790)

TABLE SILVER

Plate and dishes (Daurat)

Soup tureen (Daurat)

Coffee and tea service (Christofle)

Tea service in silver and ebony (Daurat)

Modern silverware "Como" (Christofle) (Kollar)

MODERN SILVERWARE

Modern siphons (La Carpe. Phot. Nicolas)

SIRLOIN. ALOYAU – This joint includes the lumbar region, starting from the last rib down to and including the top part of the pelvic basin (sacrum). The different parts are: fillet, sirloin and rump steak.

Sirloin, whole or divided transversally into pieces of varying weight, is roasted or braised.

When served as a roast, it is treated as contrefilet or ribs of beef.

All recipes for the preparation of sirloin, whole, or cut into pieces, will be found under BEEF.

Tip of sirloin. BAVETTE – The lateral abdominal wall of the ox which gives a second grade of meat suitable for pot-au-feu and ragoûts. This cut also makes tasty steaks. (See BEEF.)

SKATE or RAY, RAIE – Name of flat scaleless fish, flattened vertically, characterised by the development of pectoral fins in the form of wings, with a long and relatively thick tail.

The skin of the skate is covered with a viscous coating which continues to re-form itself for 10 hours after death, so that it is possible by wiping the fish with a cloth and observing whether or not the coating re-forms to judge how fresh it is. The skate is the only fish which gains from being slightly 'high', though this should not be allowed to get to the point where the smell alters.

The flesh of the skate is less digestible than that of white fish; the liver is sought after by some connoisseurs.

In England, Belgium and Holland the skate is found in the shops already skinned.

To cook skate. Cut up the skate in chunks or divide it into the two wings. Put the pieces into a sauté pan and cover with water with 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) wine vinegar to each litre (quart) of water seasoned with salt. Bring to the boil, skim, reduce heat and gently poach the fish.

Drain. Remove the skin from both sides. Serve according to recipe.

Skate au beurre noir. RAIE AU BEURRE NOIR – Proceed with skate cooked in court-bouillon, drained and set on a serving dish the same as Salt cod with brown butter (see COD).

Skate au beurre noisette. RAIE AU BEURRE NOISSETTE – Prepared like Salt cod with noisette butter (see COD), using skate cooked in court-bouillon.

Boiled skate with various sauces. RAIE BOUILLIE, AVEC SAUCES DIVERSES – Cook the skate in court-bouillon. Drain. Garnish with fresh parsley. Serve with it one of the sauces suitable for boiled fish, (Bâtarde sauce, Cream sauce, Hollandaise sauce, etc., see SAUCE).

Fried skate. RAIE FRITE – Skin small skate. Cut in chunks, or, if they are very small, leave them whole. Soak in cold, boiled milk. Drain and flour them lightly. Fry in deep smoking fat. Drain, dry, season with salt, and garnish with fried parsley and lemon.

Skate au gratin. RAIE AU GRATIN – Prepared with the wings of small skates. Proceed in the same way as for Sole au gratin (see SOLE.)

Jellied skate. RAIE À LA GELÉE – Poach the wings of skate in fish stock with white wine. Let them cool in this liquor. Drain and set on a serving dish. Make aspic jelly from the cooking liquor, clarify it and pour over the skate. (See JELLY.)

Skate liver. FOIE DE RAIE – The liver of skate is very tasty. It is poached with the skate and served with it.

It can also be made into fritters. Poach pieces of skate liver, steep in oil, lemon juice and parsley, dip in butter, and deep-fry in boiling fat.

Skate liver can be served in shells, scooped-out breadcrumb, or cooked in tarts and pâtes.

Skate liver croûtes. CROÛTE AU FOIE DE RAIE – Fill hollow crusts of fried bread with skate liver, cooked in a court-bouillon and sliced. Coat with Mornay sauce (see SAUCE), cover with grated cheese, sprinkle with melted butter and brown.

Skate liver fritters. BEIGNETS DE FOIE DE RAIE – Poach skate liver in white wine. Allow to cool. Cut into slices and marinate in oil, lemon juice, chopped parsley, salt and pepper. Dip in light batter and fry in smoking fat. Drain, season with salt, and garnish with fried parsley and lemon.

Skate à la meunière. RAIE À LA MEUNIÈRE – Use the wings of small skates in the same way as for Sole à la meunière (see SOLE).

SKEWER. BROCHETTE – Small spit, made of silver or other metal and sometimes of wood, on which various substances can be threaded before being grilled or fried.

Preparations cooked on skewers are called brochettes in French. Thus we have: Brochette of chicken livers, Brochette of lamb's sweetbreads, Brochette of kidneys, etc.

Whole skate and wing of skate

(See OFFAL or VARIETY MEATS, Calf's kidneys on skewers; CHICKEN, Chicken brochettes.)

SKIM. ÉCRÉMER, ÉCUMER, DÉPOUILLER – To skim cream from milk is expressed in French by the word écrémer. To remove with a spoon or skimmer the scum which rises to the surface of a stock, sauce or ragoût is expressed by the words écumer or dépouiller.

Skimmer (Dehillerin. Phot. Larousse)

SKIMMER. ÉCUMOIRE – Flat perforated spoon, used for skimming.

SKIN. PEAU – The skin forms one-fifth of butcher's meat and is not normally used for food (except for the oxtail and muzzle). The skin of sucking pig, of poultry and of winged game is eaten. The skin of some aquatic birds is oily and has an unpleasant taste; it should, therefore, be taken off.

The skin of fruit contains valuable ferments and vitamins, but, being exposed to impurities, it should be peeled or carefully washed.

SKINNING. DÉPOUILLER – To remove the skin from ground game, e.g. skinning a hare (or rabbit).

Eels and conger eels are also said to be skinned when they are stripped for cooking.

SKIRRET. GIROLE, GIROLLE – Popular name for the mushroom which is known also as chanterelle. (See MUSHROOMS.)

SLAUGHTER. ABATAGE – The methods of killing the animals have a considerable influence on the appearance and the keeping quality of meat. They vary, however, according to the type of establishment and the kind of animal slaughtered.

In France, slaughtering, which should be preceded by an ante-mortem inspection of the livestock animal on the hoof, should be carried out only after a period of rest of several days, allowing the animals to recover from fatigue and ending with a day of complete fasting. These different rules are rarely complied with. The animals which are bled before being stunned give a meat of better quality and a higher keeping quality. The cutting of the medulla will avoid the suffering of a prolonged agony. Immediately after slaughter, the animals must at once be viscerated and undergo (this time compulsory) post-mortem inspection by a qualified inspector, at least in the slaughter houses of large towns.

Slaughtering an ox in Egyptian times

In Great Britain, the law says that slaughtering can be carried out after 48 hours of resting and 24 hours of complete fasting. Regulations demand that all animals must be stunned humanely, the only exception being made in the case of kosher or Mohammedan butchers where the severing of the medulla is not recommended. Both ante- and post-mortem inspections are compulsory.

In the U.S.A., a high percentage of the slaughtering is centralised in a few very large slaughtering and packing houses, over which rigid control is exercised by the Department of Agriculture through ante- and post-mortem inspection of all animals. Every animal is stunned before butchering. Each state is responsible by law for local slaughter houses under the Department of Health.

SLAUGHTER HOUSE. ABATTOIR – Establishment where butchers kill animals for the market.

There are model slaughter houses, like those of Chicago. In large cities, animals cannot be slaughtered except in public slaughter houses which provide for reliable ante- and post-mortem inspection, which is impossible in the privately owned slaughter houses, of which there are still too many in the country.

A modern slaughter house consists of:

A common slaughter hall, well lit, well aired, well equipped for the washing and transport of meat, in which each butcher is given sufficient floor space to perform his work.

A refrigerator, which may or may not be preceded by a cold room, used as a salesroom.

Lairages and pens for the livestock, where the animals arrive by rail and from where they have only a short walk to the main slaughter hall.

A tripe shop, with premises for washing and cleaning the viscera.

An inspection service with a well-equipped laboratory.

An industrial slaughter house consists of a building of several storeys. The animals are slaughtered on the top floor, to which they have access on foot; from there the carcase-meat on the one hand, and the by-products (blood, tallow, hide and various offals and scraps) on the other, are taken down to departments on lower floors by means of chutes on rails.

In these slaughter houses the workers each specialise in one type of work. A carcase passes through the hands of some fifty specialists. This contributes to increase of output since it is possible to slaughter up to 60 oxen an hour, thus lowering the manufacturing cost considerably. Inspection is provided and all the work is done in hygienic conditions.

Slaughter house La Villette: de-boning the animals (Phot. X)

The carcasses are scrubbed, washed in hot water at 18°C. (65°F.), from which they are sent to the refrigerator after having passed from 16 to 24 hours in pre-refrigeration in the hanging rooms.

These industrial slaughter houses are generally equipped with various installations which enable work to go on with processing and canning of meat.

SLEEVE-FISH. ENCORNET – Common name of the calamary. (q.v.).

SLIMNESS. MAIGREUR – Slimness, which is compatible with perfect health, should not be confused with emaciation. Some persons remain thin and do not put on weight, even if they eat a lot.

SLIVER. LÈCHE – Thin slice of bread or meat.

SLOE. PRUNELLE – Fruit of the sloe tree, also called the blackthorn, a tree found all over Europe.

The sloe, a tiny plum, dark blue in colour, is scarcely eatable, its flesh being very sour and sharp tasting.

In the Haute-Saône, there is a cultivated sloe which is used mainly in distilling, and for making jams. At Angers a much esteemed liqueur is made from sloes.

Sloes boiled in red wine have a very pleasant flavour and are a very effective cure for dysentery. Sloes may also be used to make vinegar and wine.

SMALLAGE. ACHE DES MARAIS – Wild plant (wild celery) which has been replaced in cookery by cultivated celery. It was used in cookery by the Romans.

This plant can be used as a salad.

SMALL FILLETS. PETITS FILETS – Term applied to little round slices of fillet of beef taken from the top or bottom end of the fillet or tenderloin.

Small filets are cut into pieces weighing from 100 to 125 g. (4 to 4½ oz.). They are grilled or fried in butter and, like beef

Tournedos (see BEEF), can be served with various garnishes and sauces.

SMELL. ODORAT – The sense of smell is active not only before a meal is taken, but also during the meal. The aroma released by fragrant parts of the food is inhaled and penetrates into the back-throat and nasal chambers.

It has been proved by experience that smell brings about the loosening of gastric secretion. In fact a strong secretion of gastric juices can be brought about by simply inhaling fragrant steam, provided it comes from a nourishing substance such as meat bouillon. It can therefore be said that the smell of well cooked food aids the digestion.

SMELT. ÉPERLAN – This fish, says Rondelet, is so called (éperlan – pearly fish) 'for its beautiful, pure whiteness, comparable with that of the pearl'. The smelt is one of the most delicate of all freshwater fish. It is classed as a freshwater fish although it lives in the sea, because, like a good many other migratory fish, it spawns in fresh water. Nevertheless, smelts seldom run up river beyond the tide-line. Thus in the Seine, where this fish is now much less common than it used to be, smelts are seldom found beyond the Martet weir near Elbeuf. The greatest abundance of smelts is to be found near Caudebec, and it is for this reason that there are three smelts on the civic arms of this French town. Smelts are also fairly plentiful around La Mailleraye and Villequier.

These tiny fish usually migrate up river between February 20th and March 15th and this is also the best season for catching them. They are, however, to be found in these waters all the year round, though less abundantly than during the spring run.

Freshly caught smelts have a strong smell, similar to that of the violet. This little fish is most delicate in flavour and fried smelts are regarded as one of the finest of all fish dishes.

Method of preparation. Gut and wash the smelts, leaving them in water for as short a time as possible. Dry them and proceed according to the recipe.

Smelts à l'anglaise. ÉPERLANS À L'ANGLAISE – Slit the smelts along the back. Open out gently. Dip in egg and breadcrumbs and fry in clarified butter.

To serve, pour over them half-melted Maitre d'hôtel butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters).

Smelts en escabèche. ÉPERLANS EN ESCABÈCHE – See HORS-D'ŒUVRE, Cold hors-d'œuvre, Escabèche of various fishes.

Fried smelts. ÉPERLANS FRITS – Dip the smelts in salted milk and flour. Shake off excess flour and plunge into deep hot fat. Drain. Dry in a cloth. Season with very dry table salt. Arrange in a clump with fried parsley and lemon.

Fried smelts, skewered. ÉPERLANS FRITS EN BROCHETTES – Impale the smelts on metal skewers, 6 to each skewer, and deep-fry as indicated in the previous recipe.

Smelts au gratin. ÉPERLANS AU GRATIN – Arrange the smelts in a long ovenware dish, buttered and lined with chopped shallots which have been cooked in white wine till the liquid is reduced to a coating in the pan. Put a small cooked mushroom on top of each smelt. Surround with finely sliced mushrooms. Mask with Mornay sauce (see SAUCE). Sprinkle with breadcrumbs. Pour on melted butter. Cook in the oven and brown.

Grilled smelts. ÉPERLANS GRILLÉS – Slit the smelts along the back. Take out the bone. Season and flour. Baste with melted butter and grill.

Garnish with fresh parsley and slices of lemon. Serve with Maitre d'hôtel butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters) or some other sauce suitable for grilled fish.

Grilled smelts à l'anglaise. ÉPERLANS GRILLÉS À L'ANGLAISE – Clean the smelts. Slit them lengthwise along the back and take out the bone. Open them out gently.

Pour melted butter over them. Season with salt and cayenne pepper and dust with fresh breadcrumbs. Grill fairly slowly. Turn the smelts over once during cooking, and serve with half-melted Maitre d'hôtel butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters).

It may seem difficult to grill such a small fish as the smelt. It is simple enough provided that the grill pan and grid are perfectly clean and well greased with oil. Some hardware stores sell grills especially designed for smelts.

Cold marinade of smelts. ÉPERLANS MARINÉS – See HORS-D'ŒUVRE, Cold hors-d'œuvre, Smelts in marinade.

Smelts on skewers. BROCHETTES D'ÉPERLANS – Clean the smelts and thread them through the eyes on metal skewers, allowing 8 to 10 small smelts per skewer. Soak in milk. Dredge lightly with flour. Deep-fry in sizzling fat.

Drain, dry on a cloth and sprinkle with fine very dry salt. Garnish with fried parsley and halves of lemon.

SMOKING. FUMAGE – Preserving process used especially for meat and fish. Woodsmoke is generally used because of its drying and sterilising properties. (See PRESERVATION OF FOOD.)

Sides of beef, especially rib and brisket, hams and other cuts of pork, sausages, poultry (goose in particular) and certain fish (herrings, salmon, eels, etc.), and some shellfish, can all be smoked.

Before smoking, all meat must be soaked in pickling brine. After it has been thoroughly wiped and dried, it is hung in a large chimney, not too near the fire, so that it may be dried right through. If the heat were too great, it would seal the meat and prevent the smoke from penetrating. For the same reason, the meat is very lightly smoked to begin with.

Some fish, such as herrings, are smoked without previous soaking. To get a suitable smoke, hardwood is used (oak, hornbeam), rather than wood of a resinous type. Green wood gives out more smoke than dry wood. Aromatic wood is often added to give an extra fragrance to the smoke, such as juniper with its berries, rosemary, laurel. Sometimes, though this is less common, spices are also added (liquorice, cloves, etc.).

Change the position of the smoking meat from time to time, so that all parts may be thoroughly impregnated. The length of time needed to complete the process varies with the size of the meat or fish. Smoking can be speeded up by injecting pickling brine flavoured with spices into the meat.

Various types of smoking chambers are used in the smoking of foodstuffs. Some are smoking boxes which can be used in household kitchens. Others, used in large pork-butchers' establishments, are elaborately constructed. They consist of several chambers through which the smoke, coming from a wood fire in the basement or on the ground floor of the building, passes, escaping through an outlet in the ceiling of the last chamber.

SNAIL. ESCARGOT – Common name for a land gastropod mollusc. It was highly prized as food as far back as Roman times. The art of fattening snails is said to have been discovered by a Roman named Fulvius Lupinus.

In France, the vineyard snail is the most popular. As there are not enough of these to meet all demands another variety, the petit-gris of southern France is also used.

To avoid the risk of poisoning, snails must be deprived of food for some time before they are eaten, for they may have fed on plants harmless to themselves but poisonous to humans. Furthermore, it is advisable only to eat snails which have sealed themselves into their shells to hibernate.

From a nutritional point of view, snails' flesh has little food

Skewering smelts (Larousse)

Fried smelts (Debillot. Phot. Larousse)

Vineyard snail value and is rather indigestible. However, it does contain a large quantity of both Vitamin C and mineral salts (calcium, magnesium, etc.).

Snails à l'arlésienne. ESCARGOTS À L'ARLÉSIENNE – 'Warm a little diced pork in a saucepan. Sprinkle with flour and moisten with a bottle of white wine. Add the snails, prepared in advance as follows:

'Take medium-sized snails, and soak them in tepid water. Next, blanch them with a handful of salt.

'Take them out of their shells and drain. Put them in the saucepan with a few cloves of garlic and plenty of herbs. Bring to the boil and leave to simmer slowly. When they are ready, drain them and put them back in their shells. Add a glass of Madeira and a pinch of cayenne pepper. Put the snails in the sauce and stir. Sprinkle with a little chopped parsley and the juice of a lemon.' (A. Hélie's recipe.)

Snails à la bourguignonne. ESCARGOTS À LA BOURGUIGNONNE – Scrape away the chalky substance sealing the shells. Wash the snails in several waters and soak them for 2 hours with coarse salt, vinegar and a pinch of flour. Wash them again in plenty of water and blanch them for 5 minutes in boiling water. Drain and cool under running water. Take the snails out of their shells. Remove the black part at the end of the tail known as the cloaca.

Put the snails in a saucepan. Moisten with equal parts of white wine and clear broth. The liquid should just cover the snails. Add carrots, onions, shallots and a large bouquet garni. Season with 8 g. (1 teaspoon) salt to every litre (quart) of stock. Simmer for 3 to 4 hours. Leave to cool in the stock.

Boil the empty shells for 30 minutes in water with soda crystals added. Drain them, wash in cold water and dry. Put inside each shell a piece of butter à la bourguignonne, about the size of a hazelnut. Put the snails in the shells and seal with Butter for snails, à la bourguignonne (see BUTTER, Compound butters).

Put the filled shells in a dish with a little water at the bottom or in a snail dish. Sprinkle with fresh breadcrumbs. Warm in a hot oven and serve.

Snail broth. BOUILLON D'ESCARGOTS – Soak 24 snails thoroughly as indicated in the recipe for Snails à la bourguignonne. Break the shells and remove the snails. (Do not dip them in boiling water as this will wash away their natural gelatine.) Put them in a saucepan and moisten with 3 litres (5½ pints, 6½ pints) water. Add 1 or 2 lettuces, a handful of purslane leaves and a little salt. (A piece of calf's head can also be added.) Skim. As soon as the broth is boiling steadily, Snail dish or escargotière (Dehillerin. Phot. Larousse) lower the heat and simmer slowly for 3 hours. Add to the broth 30 g. (1 oz.) gum arabic dissolved in a glass of tepid water. Strain through muslin.

Snails à la chablisienne. ESCARGOTS À LA CHABLISIENNE – Proceed as indicated for Snails à la bourguignonne, pouring into each shell a few drops white Chablis wine cooked with chopped shallot and parsley, enriched with meat essence and seasoned.

Put the snails back in the shells and seal with Butter for snails, à la bourguignonne (see BUTTER, Compound butters).

Snails Comtesse Riguidi. ESCARGOTS COMTESSE RIGUIDI – During the season when snails are unobtainable, said Grimod de la Reynière, cooks sometimes amuse themselves by cheating our palates by a not unpleasant imitation. A very fine stuffing is made either of game or fish, with fillets of anchovy, nutmeg, fine spices, finest herbes, bound with egg yolks. Snail shells are thoroughly washed and warmed. Each one is filled with the stuffing and served piping hot.

Here is another recipe for Mock snails Comtesse Riguidi. 'Put into large well washed snail shells little balls of lambs' sweetbread tossed in butter. Fill up the shell with a chicken cream stuffing and chopped truffles mixed together. Put the mock snails in an ovenware dish or a special snail dish. Sprinkle with breadcrumbs and cook for a few minutes in the oven.'

Special snail pincers and fork (Larousse)

A popular variant of this delicate dish consists in filling the snail shells with cocks' kidneys cooked in white wine.

Snails à la poulette. ESCARGOTS À LA POULETTE – Soak the snails in a pan of boiling water, with a pinch of salt and some ashes. Boil for 5 minutes, take out the snails and put them in cold water. Wash them with great care. Drain. Boil in a court-bouillon with salt, pepper, thyme, bay leaves and parsley for 1½ hours. Take the snails out of the court-bouillon and drain. Brown some chopped onions. Moisten with equal parts of white wine and water. When the liquid begins to boil, add a little Allemande sauce (see SAUCE). Put in the snails. Leave them for 5 to 7 minutes. Before serving, blend in a little best quality butter, egg yolks and a little lemon juice. Add more salt and pepper.

SNIPE. BÉCASSINE – Migratory bird bearing great resemblance to the woodcock, but only about half the size of the latter.

It can be prepared in any way suitable for woodcock, but the best method is roasting. In U.S.A. the Wilson's snipe or American snipe is almost identical.

Casserole of snipe. BÉCASSINES EN CASSEROLE – Truss the snipe, draw the heads round and run the beaks through the legs. Cover each with a rasher of fat bacon. Put them into a metal or earthenware casserole in which some butter has been heated. Season, and baste with butter. Cook in a hot oven for about 12 minutes. Put each bird on a small croûton fried in butter. Sprinkle with a tablespoon brandy and 2 or 3 tablespoons (3 or 4 tablespoons) game fumet.

Croustade of snipe with truffles. CROUSTADE DE BÉCASSINES AUX TRUFFES – Bone the snipe. Stuff with a piece of à gratin forcemeat (see FORCEMEAT) about the size of a small egg, mixed with diced truffles, well seasoned and sprinkled with a little brandy. Brown lightly in butter for a few moments. Arrange on a bed of Quenelle forcemeat (see FORCEMEAT) made with game. Cover with thin slices of truffles, seasoned and sprinkled with a little brandy. Cover with flaky pastry. Decorate the top of the croustade with pieces of rolled-out pastry cut in fancy shapes. Make a hole in the middle. Brush with egg yolk and bake in a hot oven. Pour into the croustade a few tablespoons of boiled down Demi-glace sauce (see SAUCE) based on a concentrated game stock.

Hot snipe pâté Lucullus. PÂTÉ CHAUD DE BÉCASSINES LUCULLUS – Bone 6 snipe. Stuff with a Fine panada forcemeat (see FORCEMEAT) mixed with one-third of its weight of foie gras, as well as the birds' trail, chopped.

Put a layer of this stuffing on the snipe, laid out flat on a table, and a piece of foie gras and a piece of truffle in the middle of each bird. Reshape the snipe in their original form and sprinkle with a few drops of brandy.

Line an oval-shaped mould for hot pâtés with pie pastry. Coat the inside of the mould with a layer of Fine panada forcemeat mixed with à gratin forcemeat, half and half. (See FORCEMEAT.)

Put the stuffed snipe into the pâté, packing them in tightly, and sealing them in with a layer of forcemeat similar to the one used for lining the pâté. Finish with a layer of forcemeat and cover with a rasher of fat bacon and a piece of rolled-out pastry. Seal and crimp the edges. Decorate with pastry cut in fancy shapes. Make an opening in the middle of lid to allow steam to escape. Brush with beaten egg, place on a baking sheet and bake in a moderate oven from 45 minutes to an hour.

Remove the pastry lid, cutting it carefully with a knife all around. Take off the bacon rasher covering the forcemeat. Unmould.

Pour into the pâté a ragoût of sliced truffles blended with a few tablespoons Madeira-flavoured, concentrated game stock. Replace the pastry lid on the pâté. Heat thoroughly in the oven.

This pâté can also be served cold. Pour into the pâté, when it is just warm, a few tablespoons cold but liquid aspic jelly based on game stock, and chill.

GREAT SNIPE. BÉCASSIN – Name commonly given to cul-blanc, a variety of snipe, which has distinctive white feathers on the tail.

It is prepared in any way suitable for snipe, mainly roasting.

SNOW. NEIGE – Certain cold dishes are served on a bed of ice grated with a special grater. This grated ice is known as neige.

SNOWBALL. BOULE DE NEIGE – Use a spherical mould. Line with chocolate ice cream. Fill with vanilla-flavoured Mousse mixture (see ICE CREAMS AND ICES) and diced crystallised fruit steeped in Maraschino. When the ice is turned out, cover it entirely with Chantilly cream (see CREAMS), put through a forcing bag with a fluted nozzle.

SNOW PARTRIDGE. ARBENNE – Variety of grouse also called Tibetan partridge. They are found in the Valais (Switzerland), in Savoy and in Piedmont. Snow partridge is treated like grouse (q.v.) or partridge (q.v.).

SOAKING. TREMPAGE – Immersion in water, principally of dried vegetables. Used also to describe the moistening of some gâteaux with syrup (see BABA, SAVARIN).

SOBRONADE (Soup) – Country soup, very popular in the Périgord countryside. It is made with both fresh and salt pork cut in large dice, and a variety of vegetables: haricot beans, carrots, leeks, celery and root vegetables. This is really a kind of potée.

SODA-WATER – Effervescent drink manufactured industrially. Soda-water, which is highly charged with carbonic gas, is added to syrups, fruit juices, whisky, etc.

SOFT ROE. LAITANCE, LAITE – The milt or sperm of the male fish, a smooth, white substance. It is a food rich in fat and phosphorus, and is easily digested.

Preparation of soft roes. Before they are cooked, soft roes must be cleansed in cold water and stripped of the little blood vessel that runs down one side. They are poached for a short time in stock made from a little water, lemon juice and butter, seasoned with salt.

For some purposes, soft roes can be lightly floured and fried in very hot butter. This method of preparation is called à la meunière. Soft roes à la meunière are served on canapés, toast or in tartlets, barquettes, etc.

Soft roes of carp and other fish. LAITANCES DE CARPES ET AUTRES POISSONS – The soft roes of carp are perhaps the most delicate of all edible soft roes. Next in order of merit are the roes of herring and mackerel.

Soft roes can be cooked in a number of ways: as fritters, in tartlets or barquettes, on canapés, in small vol-au-vent, as hot or cold hors-d'œuvre or as a light main dish. They can also be used as a garnish for braised or poached fish.

Soft roes à l'anglaise. LAITANCES À L'ANGLAISE – Clean the soft roes. Poach them for 2 minutes in stock as indicated above. Drain and leave to cool. Dip them in egg and breadcrumbs. Fry in butter, browning on both sides. Serve with half-melted Maitre d'hôtel butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters) on top, surrounded by fluted half slices of lemon.

Soft roes in barquettes. LAITANCES EN BARQUETTES – Poach the soft roes in stock as indicated above. Drain and place in baked barquettes filled with a salpicon of mushrooms blended with Velouté or Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE) based on fish stock. Spoon over some Normande sauce or other white sauce based on fish stock. Brown in a very hot oven.

Soft roes in brown butter I. LAITANCES AU BEURRE NOIR – Poach the soft roes in stock as indicated above. Garnish with capers and chopped parsley. Pour on a little lemon juice and a few spoonfuls Brown butter (see BUTTER Compound butters).

SOFTENING, BLETTING

Soft roes in brown butter II. LAITANCES AU BEURRE NOIR – Arrange the cooked soft roes on a dish, and garnish with capers. Pour over them a few drops of vinegar, and a few tablespoons brown butter in which 1 or 2 tablespoons shredded parsley have been fried.

Cold soft roes served with cold fish. LAITANCES FROIDES – Poach the soft roes in white wine and lemon juice. Leave them to cool in this stock. Drain, and dry them in a cloth.

If they are to be used as a garnish for cold fish, arrange them in barquettes of thin pastry baked blind. Cover them with mayonnaise or some other cold sauce.

If the roes are to be used as an ingredient of a composite salad, put them, drained and dried, on top of the salad and season with oil, vinegar or lemon juice, salt and pepper.

Soft roes on croûtons. LAITANCES EN CROÛTES – See FISH, Fish roes on toast.

Soft roe fritters. LAITANCES EN BEIGNETS – Poach the soft roes in stock as indicated above. Leave them to cool. Put them in a marinade of oil, lemon juice and chopped parsley. Dry. Dip them in batter and deep-fry.

Serve with fried parsley.

Soft roes as a garnish. LAITANCES POUR GARNITURES – Cleanse the soft roes in cold water. Put them in a casserole with a few tablespoons water, a squeeze of lemon juice, a pinch of salt and a small knob of butter. Bring them to the boil and simmer very gently for 3 minutes.

Soft roes in mayonnaise. MAYONNAISE DE LAITANCES – Poach the soft roes in salt water. Drain and dry.

Fill a salad bowl with a mound of finely shredded lettuce seasoned with oil, vinegar, salt and pepper, and drained. Place the soft roes on top.

Cover with mayonnaise. Surround with quartered hard-boiled eggs and lettuce hearts. Decorate with fillets of anchovy and capers.

Soft roes à la meunière. LAITANCES À LA MEUNIERE – Season the roes, dip them in flour and fry in butter. Proceed thereafter as in recipe for Sole à la meunière (see SOLE).

Soft roes in noisette butter. LAITANCES AU BEURRE NOISETTE – Proceed as for Soft roes in browned butter, without the capers and chopped parsley, and substituting Noisette butter for Brown butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters).

Soft roes in scallop shells à la normande. LAITANCES EN COQUILLES À LA NORMANDE – Poach and drain the soft roes as indicated above. Put them in scallop shells surrounded by a border of Duchess potato (see POTATOES) previously lightly browned in the oven. Place on top an oyster, poached and drained, a cooked mushroom, a teaspoon of shrimps and mussels. Cover with Normande sauce (see SAUCE) and decorate each shell with a generous strip of truffle.

Soft roe tartlets. LAITANCES EN CAISSES – Proceed as for Soft roes à la meunière. Serve in baked tartlets. Brown a handful of breadcrumbs in the cooking butter and pour this over the roes. Add lemon juice and chopped parsley.

SOFTENING, BLETTING. BLET, BLETTE – Term used to define the state of over ripeness (i.e. 'sleepiness') in certain kinds of fruit, preceding rotting.

In the case of some species of fruit (medlars, persimmons) the fruit does not attain the right state of ripeness, i.e. become edible, until it is bletted. In the case of other fruit (apples, pears, etc.), softening or over ripeness is a sign of the beginning of decay.

SOLE – Flat fish, in shape an elongated oval, almost completely surrounded by fins and covered with very small hard scale which are firmly attached to the skin. The colour of the skin varies according to the depth in which the sole is fished and varies from a dark brown to pale grey, but it is generally an olive brown with blackish irregular markings. The blind side of the sole is whitish in colour.

The eyes of the fish, placed on the right side (the brown side) are small and rather far apart; the mouth is arched, the teeth fine and pointed, and the lower jaw has short white barbels.

The sole is considered the best of the flat fish. Its flesh is white, firm, and delicate and is easily detached from the bones. It is very digestible.

This sole, which is fished in most European waters but not American waters, should not be confused with the fish known as lemon sole, which, though quite good to eat, is not to be compared with the true sole.

Sole can be prepared in a number of ways. Whole, they are fried, boiled, poached, braised, à la meunière and grilled. Filleted, they may be prepared in every way.

Each of the recipes for whole soles given below is applicable to fish weighing from 350 to 400 g. (12 to 14 oz.), enough to serve two people. Soles of medium size should be used for frying, à la meunière or grilling, because these are usually served one to each guest.

To remove the skin from sole, first make an incision near the tail

Holding the sole down with the right hand, pull off the skin with the left hand
(Larousse)

Trim the fish to the edge of the fillets before cooking. Soles trimmed in this way appear smaller, but they are easier to serve. If the backbone is broken before cooking it can be removed before serving.

The American 'sole' is not the same family as the English Dover sole, and differs markedly in texture. Lemon sole, dab, winter flounder and grey sole can be used in the following recipes.

Sole à l'américaine – Split the sole on the side from which the skin has been removed. Raise the fillets slightly and break the backbone in two or three places. Season the inside of the fish.

Poach the sole very gently in a white wine fish fumet. Drain. Surround with a Salpicon à l'américaine of lobster or spiny lobster (see SALPICON). Put 2 slices of lobster or spiny lobster on top of the sole. Coat with Américaine sauce (see SAUCE) to which some concentrated fumet and butter have been added.

This dish is often called Sole à l'armoricaine, since many people think that Lobster à l'américaine should really be à l'armoricaine.

Sole à l'amiral – Only very large soles with thick fillets are prepared in this way. For the recipes see Brill à l'amiral under BRILL.

Sole à l'anglaise – This name generally means a grilled sole accompanied by melted butter or Maitre d'hôtel butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters) and boiled potatoes. It can also be sole poached in salted water and milk, accompanied by melted butter and boiled potatoes.

The same name is applied to a sole boned when raw, coated in egg and breadcrumbs, cooked in clarified butter and served with rather soft maitre d'hôtel butter.

Sole à l'arlésienne – Poach the sole in fumet. Garnish with very small tomatoes peeled and cooked in butter, and sliced artichoke bottoms cooked in butter and their own juices, and finished in a little cream.

To coat the sole, boil down the cooking liquor and add a little fish aspic jelly and concentrated tomato pulp mixed with butter and a little grated garlic.

Atteraux of sole à l'ancienne. ATTEREAUX DE SOLES À L'ANCIENNE – Cut each fillet into 3 or 4 pieces. Season and seal them in butter. Thread the pieces on a silver skewer, alternating them with sliced truffles and mushrooms. Dip the skewers into Villeroi sauce (see SAUCE). Coat in egg and breadcrumbs and fry in clarified butter. Garnish with fried parsley and quarters of lemon.

Atteraux of sole à la moderne. ATTEREAUX DE SOLES À LA MODERNE – Prepare as above, but without dipping in villeroi sauce. Serve with Tomato sauce (see SAUCE) or other suitable sauce.

Sole with aubergines. SOLE AUX AUBERGINES – Cook the sole in butter à la meunière. Surround with slices of aubergines cooked with butter or oil. Sprinkle with chopped parsley and a few drops of lemon juice and pour over the hot butter in which the fish was cooked.

Alternatively, poach the sole in a fumet over very low heat. Drain, wipe, and surround with slices of aubergines cooked in butter. Coat with White wine sauce (see SAUCE). Glaze in a hot oven.

The sole may be prepared with courgettes (Italian marrows or zucchinis), cucumbers cut in oval chunks and simmered in butter, sliced artichoke bottoms sautéed in butter, celeriac quartered and simmered in butter, or sweet pimentos cut in large julienne cooked in butter or oil. Drain off the cooking liquor. Boil it down by one-third and thicken with a tablespoon kneaded butter. Add a good tablespoon of butter. Coat the sole with this sauce and glaze in a hot oven.

Barquettes or tartlets of sole. BARQUETTES, TARTELETES DE

SOLES – Made with salpicon of sole, truffles and mushrooms, bound with a brown or white sauce.

Beignets of sole. BEIGNETS DE SOLES – Make a salpicon of sole, as for ordinary croquettes. Bind with Velouté or Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE) and allow to cool.

Divide into small portions and roll each into a ball. Dip into a light batter and fry in deep fat. Serve in a mound, and garnish with fried parsley. Serve with Tomato sauce (see SAUCE) or any sauce suitable for fried fish.

Sole Bercy I – Put the sole on a fireproof dish which has been buttered and sprinkled with chopped shallot and parsley.

Moisten with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) white wine and a squeeze of lemon juice. Scatter 20 g. ( $\frac{3}{4}$  oz.,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  tablespoons) butter cut up into small pieces on top.

Cook the sole in the oven, basting often so as to glaze the fish.

Sole Bercy II – Put the sole in a fireproof dish on a layer of chopped onions lightly cooked in butter without becoming too much coloured. Surround with 4 trimmed, sliced mushrooms, sautéed in butter. Season. Moisten with  $1\frac{1}{2}$  dl. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  pint,  $\frac{2}{3}$  cup) red Burgundy. Cook in the oven.

Drain off the cooking liquor. Boil down by one-third and thicken with 20 g. ( $\frac{3}{4}$  oz.,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  tablespoons) butter worked together with flour. Add 20 g. ( $\frac{3}{4}$  oz.,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  tablespoons) of butter. Coat the sole with this sauce and glaze in a hot oven.

Sole à la bonne femme – Trim a medium-sized sole, slit it longways along the side from which the skin has been removed and raise the fillets a little on each side to loosen the backbone.

Season inside and out and put into a buttered fireproof dish lined with a layer of chopped raw mushrooms and a pinch of chopped parsley.

Add 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) white wine and a few drops lemon juice. Dot the surface with 15 g. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  oz., 1 tablespoon) butter cut in tiny pieces.

Bring to the boil, then put in the oven, cover and cook for 10 minutes. Drain off the cooking liquor into a pan. Boil it down and thicken with 15 g. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  oz., 1 tablespoon) butter worked together with flour.

Coat the sole with this sauce. Glaze in a hot oven.

Sole à la bourguignonne – The same as Sole with red wine, the recipe for which is given below.

Sole à la bretonne – Season the sole and put it on a buttered baking tin spread with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) Végétale fondue (see FONDUE). Pour over 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) fish fumet made with white wine. Cook, covered, in the oven, basting often.

Drain the fish. Coat with its cooking liquor to which 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) fresh cream have been added.

Brochettes of sole à la duxelles. BROCHETTES DE SOLES À LA DUXELLES – Cut the fillets into pieces of equal size. Sandwich them together two by two with a stuffing made of hard-boiled egg yolks, breadcrumbs and chopped parsley. Thread them on skewers, alternating them with slices of mushrooms dipped in butter. Season, and brush them with melted butter. Cover with white breadcrumbs and grill. Set on a dish on a layer of duxelles bound with Velouté sauce (see SAUCE).

Sole cardinal – Stuff a boned sole with Pike forcemeat (see FORCEMEAT) mixed with Lobster butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters). Poach it in nearly boiling white wine. Garnish with slices of lobster or spiny lobster, or surround with a salpicon of one or other of these shellfish. Coat with Cardinal sauce (see SAUCE) to which some of the concentrated cooking liquor has been added. Sprinkle with chopped lobster coral.

Fillets of sole are prepared in this way, spread with the pike forcemeat and folded in two.

Sole Colbert – Split the sole along the side from which the skin has been removed. Raise the fillets. Break the backbone in two or three places so that it may easily be removed after cooking.

Soak the sole in cold boiled milk, flour it, coat in egg and breadcrumbs. Roll back the fillets on themselves so as to leave the backbone free.

Fry the sole, drain it, remove the backbone. Fill the cavity with Maître d'hôtel butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters).

Croquettes and kromeskijs of sole. CROQUETTES, CROMESQUIS DE SOLES – These small preparations are served as a hot hors-d'œuvre or a small entrée. They are made like ordinary croquettes, the recipe for which is given under HORS-D'ŒUVRE, Hot hors-d'œuvre.

Curried sole. SOLE À L'INDIENNE – Spread on a baking dish a layer of chopped onions cooked till soft in butter, mixed with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) peeled, pressed, chopped tomatoes also cooked in butter. Season with a teaspoon curry. Set a trimmed sole on top, and pour over it 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) mushroom stock. Poach in the oven.

Add to the cooking liquor 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) Velouté or Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE) based on fish stock and 3 tablespoons (4 tablespoons) thick fresh cream. Boil for a few moments. Finish off with a teaspoon butter and a few drops lemon juice. Coat the fish with this sauce and serve with Indian-style rice (see RICE, Rice à l'indienne).

Recipes given below for Fillets of sole à l'indienne can also be applied to whole sole.

Sole à la diplomate – Split the sole, raise the fillets, remove the backbone, and stuff with a whiting forcemeat (see FORCEMEAT, Fish forcemeat) with cream and diced truffles. Poach in a fumet that is nearly boiling. Drain and dry. Remove the side bones. Surround by a salpicon of lobster. Coat with Diplomat sauce (see SAUCE). Put on top of the sole four thick slices of truffles glazed with fish aspic jelly (see ASPIC, Aspic of fish).

Sole dorée – See Golden sole below.

Fillets of sole. FILETS DE SOLES – Fillets of sole are removed when raw.

According to their final use, the fillets are either left as they are and flattened lightly, or rolled after being slightly flattened.

All methods of preparation given for the whole sole, as well as those given elsewhere for flat fish of various kinds, are applicable to fillets of sole. These can be served à la meunière, fried, boiled, poached and grilled. They are accompanied by various sauces and garnishes.

Fillets of sole can be rolled up to make paupiettes, recipes for which are to be found below.

Each of the recipes which follow requires 8 fillets.

Fillets of sole cooked à la meunière or in a white wine fumet may also be garnished with aubergines, cucumbers cut into 'pigeons' eggs' and cooked in butter, pimentos peeled, cut in strips and stewed in butter or oil, tomatoes halved and cooked in butter or oil, and other vegetables cooked in butter or oil, braised, boiled or stewed in their own juices.

Instead of coating the fillets with white wine sauce, they may be covered with Mornay sauce (see SAUCE) and browned in the oven.

Fillets of sole à l'américaine. FILETS DE SOLES À L'AMÉRICAIN – Poach the folded fillets in white wine. Drain them and finish off as described in the recipe for Sole à l'américaine.

This dish is often served under the name of Fillets of sole à l'armoricaine.

Fillets of sole à l'ancienne. FILETS DE SOLES À L'ANCIENNE – Coat 8 lightly flattened fillets of sole with a thin layer of whiting forcemeat (see FORCEMEAT, Fish forcemeat) to which a third of its weight of dry duxelles has been added. Fold the fillets, and coat with egg and breadcrumbs; cook in clarified butter. Arrange in a circle on a dish, alternating them with little cutlets of whiting forcemeat made in special moulds and poached. Garnish the middle of the dish with a ragoût composed of shrimps, mushrooms and truffles bound with fish Velouté sauce (see SAUCE), mixed with cream and flavoured with Madeira. Sprinkle the fillets with a little Noisette butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters).

Fillets of sole à l'anglaise I. FILETS DE SOLES À L'ANGLAISE – Flatten and season the fillets and coat them with egg and breadcrumbs. Cook in clarified butter. Cover with softened Maître d'hôtel butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters).

Serve with boiled or steamed potatoes.

Fillets of sole à l'anglaise II. FILETS DE SOLES À L'ANGLAISE – Fillets of sole poached in salted water and milk, served with boiled potatoes and melted butter.

Fillets of sole à l'armoricaine. FILETS DE SOLES À L'ARMORICAINE – The same as Fillets of sole à l'américaine.

Aspic of fillets of sole à la parisienne. ASPIC DE FILETS DE SOLES À LA PARISIENNE – Cook 8 large fillets in a concentrated fumet, based on fish stock and made with white wine. Drain

How to cut fillets of sole (Larousse)

How to skin fillets of sole (Larousse) and cool under pressure. Cut each into two pieces and coat with White chaud-froid sauce (see SAUCE). Decorate with cut-out pieces of truffle and glaze with jelly. Set in an aspic mould lined with fish jelly and decorated on the bottom and sides. The fillets should be arranged upright, one against the other. Fill the middle of the mould with a Parisian salad (see SALAD) dressed with thick mayonnaise. Cover with a layer of fish jelly. Set on ice.

Turn out the aspic either directly onto a dish or on a base of rice or a buttered croûton of bread. Decorate with quartered hard-boiled eggs and small lettuce hearts. Surround with chopped jelly.

Fillets of sole Bercy. FILETS DE SOLES BERCY – Proceed, using fillets, as for Sole Bercy.

Fillets of sole, boiled or poached. FILETS DE SOLES BOUILLIS, POCHÉS – Poach the flattened fillets in salted water and milk. Drain. Serve with melted butter or some other sauce such as Butter, Hollandaise or Cream sauce (see SAUCE).

Fillets of sole Boitelle. FILETS DE SOLES BOITELLE – Arrange in a circle in a buttered sauté pan the folded and seasoned fillets. For 8 fillets add 100 g. (4 oz., 2 cups) chopped mushrooms, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) concentrated fish fumet and a squeeze of lemon juice. Poach, keeping the pan covered.

Arrange the fillets in a deep dish, put the mushrooms in the middle and pour over the pan juices to which 50 g. (2 oz., 4 tablespoons) butter have been added.

Fillets of sole à la bonne femme. FILETS DE SOLES À LA BONNE FEMME – Using flat fillets of sole, prepare like Sole à la bonne femme.

Fillets of sole à la bordelaise. FILETS DE SOLES À LA BORDELAISE – Season the fillets, set them in a buttered fish kettle with slices of carrot and onion and a bouquet garni. Moisten with a glass of red Bordeaux. Poach for 8 minutes.

Drain the fillets and set them on a dish with peeled mushrooms and small glazed onions.

Boil down the cooking liquor, adding to it 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) Demi-glaze sauce (see SAUCE). Beat butter into this sauce, strain, and coat the fillets.

Border of fillets of sole à la dauphine. BORDURE DE FILETS DE SOLES À LA DAUPHINE – This dish is served under the name of Fillets of sole à la dauphine.

Border of fillets of sole diplomate. BORDURE DE FILETS DE SOLES DIPLOMATE – Poach the fillets in a fumet made with white wine. Drain, wipe, and set on a moulded border made with whiting forcemeat (see FORCEMEAT, Fish forcemeat), alternating the fillets with slices of round truffles. Surround the border with a few spoonfuls of Diplomat sauce (see SAUCE). Fill the middle of the dish with a salpicon of lobster. Coat the fillets and the truffles with the cooking liquor, boiled down, with butter added.

Fillets of sole cardinal

Fillets of sole à la bourguignonne. FILETS DE SOLES À LA BOURGUIGNONNE – Prepared like Sole à la bourguignonne.

Fillets of sole à la cancalaise. FILETS DE SOLES À LA CANCALAISE – Fold the fillets and cook them in a concentrated fish fumet, to which the liquor from oysters poached for the garnish has been added. Drain, dry, and set them in the form of a circle. Fill the middle of the dish with peeled shrimps. Put two poached and de-bearded oysters on top of each fillet. Coat with White wine sauce (see SAUCE) to which some boiled down fumet has been added.

Fillets of sole cardinal. FILETS DE SOLES CARDINAL – Stuff the fillets with pike or whiting forcemeat, finished with lobster or crawfish butter, and poached in fish fumet that is nearly boiling.

Arrange the fillets on a dish in a circle, alternating them with slices of lobster or spiny lobster. Coat with Cardinal sauce (see SAUCE) to which some of the concentrated fumet has been added. Sprinkle with chopped lobster coral.

Fillets of sole à la catalane. FILETS DE SOLES À LA CATALANE – Coat lightly flattened fillets with egg and breadcrumbs mixed with a little chopped parsley. Cook in half oil, half butter. Set on a layer of Tomato fondue (see FONDUE) seasoned with a little garlic. Surround with diced aubergines sautéed in oil. Put a slice of peeled lemon on top of each fillet. Sprinkle with the cooking butter.

Fillets of sole with Chambertin or other red wine. FILETS DE SOLES AU CHAMBERTIN OU AUTRE GRAND VIN ROUGE – Poach the fillets in a fish fumet made with red wine (Chambertin, Mâcon, Romanée, Vougeot, Corton or other fine red Burgundy) as for Sole with red wine (see below).

The garnish for these fillets of sole is usually composed of mushrooms and small glazed onions. The whole sole or the fillets cooked with red wine may also be garnished with soft roes, mushrooms, truffles, shrimps or crayfish, pike quenelles, etc.

Fillets of sole Chauchat

Fillets of sole Chauchat. FILETS DE SOLES CHAUCHAT – Cook rolled fillets in butter and lemon juice, without letting them brown. Cover with Mornay sauce (see SAUCE). Surround with a border of sliced fried potatoes. Sprinkle with grated cheese, dot with butter and brown.

Fillets of sole Chivry. FILETS DE SOLES CHIVRY – Cook rolled fillets with chopped shallot and concentrated fish fumet. Drain, and arrange in a circle on a dish, alternating them with heart-shaped croûtons of bread fried in butter. Coat with Chivry sauce (see SAUCE). Pour round the fillets a border of Fish jelly (see JELLY).

Fillets of sole, cold. FILETS DE SOLES FROIDS – Fillets of sole can be prepared as aspics (see ASPIC); rings (see BORDERS, Cold rings); glazed with Chambertin, Champagne or jelly; as a mayonnaise (like Salmon mayonnaise); as a salad (like Lobster or Spiny lobster salad). Cold sole can also be made into pâtés and terrines.

Fillets of sole with courgettes (zucchini) I. FILETS DE SOLES AUX COURGETTES – Cook the flattened fillets à la meunière. Surround with courgettes cut in thick slices, cooked in butter or oil. Sprinkle with chopped parsley and a few drops of lemon juice. Pour over the cooking butter, very hot.

Fillets of sole with courgettes (zucchini) II. FILETS DE SOLES AUX COURGETTES – Cook the folded fillets in fish fumet made with white wine. Surround them with slices of courgettes cooked in butter. Coat with White wine sauce (see SAUCE) to which some concentrated fumet has been added. Glaze in a hot oven.

Fillets of sole Crêcy. FILETS DE SOLES CRÉCY – Poach the rolled fillets in fish fumet. Drain them. Coat with a sauce made by boiling down the cooking liquid and adding 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE) and 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) carrot purée.

Garnish with small new carrots, glazed.

Fillets of sole Cubat. FILETS DE SOLES CUBAT – Cook the flattened fillets in mushroom stock and butter. Set them on a fireproof dish. Coat with thick Mushroom purée (see PURÉE). Put 2 slices of truffle on each fillet. Coat with Mornay sauce (see SAUCE) and brown in the oven.

Fillets of sole Daumont. FILETS DE SOLES DAUMONT – Spread the sole fillets with fish forcemeat (pike or whiting) finished off with Crayfish butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters.) Poach them in nearly boiling fish fumet. Drain and dry.

Set on a dish, each fillet placed on top of a large mushroom cap cooked in butter and filled with a Salpicon of crayfish (see CRAYFISH).

Coat with Normande sauce (see SAUCE). Garnish with soft roes coated with egg and breadcrumbs and sautéed in butter.

Fillets of sole dauphine. FILETS DE SOLES DAUPHINE – Poach the rolled fillets in Madeira which has had truffle and mushroom skins infused in it. Cool, drain, and mask with Villeroi sauce (see SAUCE) which has had some of the cooking liquor and Crayfish butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters) added. Coat with breadcrumbs and fry in clarified butter.

Drain and set on a moulded border of Pike forcemeat (see FORCEMEAT) cooked in a ring mould in a bain marie. Put in the middle of the dish a ragoût composed of cooked mushrooms, little pike quenelles, crayfish and sliced truffles, bound with thick Velouté sauce (see SAUCE). Serve with Nantua sauce.

Fillets of sole à la dieppoise. FILETS DE SOLES À LA DIEPPOISE – Cook the fillets in a nearly boiling fish fumet. Drain and dry. Surround with a Dieppoise garnish (see GARNISHES) composed of shelled mussels cooked in white wine and grey or pink shelled crayfish. Coat with White wine sauce (see SAUCE) to which the boiled down cooking liquor from the fillets and mussels has been added.

Fillets of sole à la diplomate. FILETS DE SOLES À LA DIPLOMATE – See Border of fillets of sole à la diplomate.

Fillets of sole à l'espagnole. FILETS DE SOLE À L'ESPAGNOLE – Season the fillets with salt and paprika. Flour and fry in oil. Set on a dish on a bed of tomatoes that have been peeled, drained, chopped, cooked in oil, and seasoned with salt, paprika and a little garlic.

Put at each end of the dish sweet pimentos, peeled, cut in strips and fried in oil, and place on top of the fillets slices of onion floured and fried in oil.

Fillets of sole à la fécampoise. FILETS DE SOLES À LA FÉCAMPOISE – Name sometimes given to Fillets of sole à la trouvaillaise.

Fillets of sole à la florentine. FILETS DE SOLES À LA FLORENTINE – Cook seasoned fillets in butter and lemon juice, without the addition of fumet.

Set on a fireproof dish on a layer of blanched leaf spinach, drained and simmered in butter. Coat with Mornay sauce (see SAUCE). Sprinkle with grated Parmesan and a little melted butter. Brown in the oven.

Fillets of sole, fried. FILETS DE SOLES FRITS – Prepare like other fried fish.

Fried fillets of sole are arranged in a mound and garnished with fried parsley and lemon. They may also be cooked on metal skewers.

Fillets of sole en goujons

Fillets of sole en goujons. FILETS DE SOLES EN GOUJONS – Cut the fillets diagonally across in pieces 2 cm ( $\frac{3}{4}$  inch) wide. Dip these in milk, drain, and flour them, shaking well to remove excess flour. Fry in deep fat or oil.

Drain and add salt. Garnish with fried parsley and lemon.

Sole fillets prepared in this way are often used as garnish for large braised fish.

Fillets of sole au gratin. FILETS DE SOLES AU GRATIN – Prepare, using slightly flattened fillets, as Sole au gratin.

Fillets of sole, grilled. FILETS DE SOLES GRILLÉS – Flatten the fillets slightly and season them. Brush with oil or melted butter and cook under the grill at a moderate heat. Surround with slices of lemon and small sprigs of fresh parsley.

Grilled fillets of sole are usually accompanied by melted butter or softened Maître d'hôtel butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters). They may also be served with one of the sauces recommended for grilled fish.

It is customary to serve boiled potatoes with grilled fillets of sole, as well as mushrooms, tomatoes, etc.

Fillets of sole à la hongroise. FILETS DE SOLES À LA HONGROISE – Put the folded fillets, seasoned with salt and paprika, into a sauté pan with 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) finely chopped onion cooked until soft in butter, with a peeled, drained and crushed tomato, seasoned with paprika, added when the onion is almost cooked. Add 4 tablespoons ( $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) fish fumet made with white wine. Cover, and cook all together. Drain the fillets and arrange in a ring, alternating them with heart-shaped croûtons.

Pour over the fillets the cooking liquor, boiled down and mixed with 4 tablespoons ( $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) thick fresh cream, with butter and a squeeze of lemon juice added.

Potatoes cut to look like olives and cooked in butter and water may be added to this dish, set in the middle of the ring.

Fillets of sole à l'indienne I. FILETS DE SOLES À L'INDIENNE – Divide each fillet into two pieces and fry in clarified butter.

Set the fillets on a bed of rice à l'indienne and pour a Curry sauce based on fish stock (see SAUCE) round.

Fillets of sole à l'indienne II. FILETS DE SOLES À L'INDIENNE – Cut the fillets into narrow strips and into a little knot. Prepare separately the following coulis:

Cook 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) chopped onion in butter until soft. Add a small eating apple, peeled and cut in dice, a medium-sized tomato, peeled and pressed, a little grated garlic, a sprig of thyme, and a powdered bay leaf. Sprinkle with curry. Pour in 1½ dl. (¼ pint, ¾ cup) coconut milk or milk of almonds. Season. Cook for 10 minutes. Stir in 1½ dl. (¼ pint, ¾ cup) thick cream, bring to the boil, and add a squeeze of lemon juice.

Put the twists of sole fillets to cook in this sauce. Serve with Rice à l'indienne (see RICE).

Fillets of sole à la Jacques. FILETS DE SOLES À LA JACQUES – 'Put in a deep saucepan some chopped onion that has previously been cooked in butter till soft, 250 g. (9 oz., 1½ cups) sliced potato and 250 g. (9 oz., 2½ cups) sliced mushrooms.

'Pour in a little white wine and fish fumet. Season with salt and pepper and add a bouquet garni. Cook, boiling rapidly.

'When the potatoes are three-quarters cooked, put into the saucepan 8 fillets of sole, each cut in two. Add a small pinch of powdered saffron and cook briskly for 6 minutes. Take out the fillets. Boil down the liquid if necessary.

'To serve, arrange the potatoes and mushrooms in a deep dish, put the fillets on top, sprinkle with the cooking liquor, chopped parsley and chervil.' (Azéma.)

Fillets of sole Joinville. FILETS DE SOLES JOINVILLE – Poach the folded fillets in fumet that is nearly boiling. Drain, and arrange them in a circle on a dish, placing them with the points upwards instead of in the usual way. Fix a peeled pink shrimp on the tip of each fillet.

Put in the middle of the circle a Joinville garnish composed of shrimps, mushrooms and diced truffles, all bound with Joinville sauce (see SAUCE). Coat the fillets with Joinville sauce to which has been added some of the concentrated cooking liquor. Put on each fillet a slice of truffle glazed with fish jelly.

Fillets of sole en julienne. FILETS DE SOLES EN JULIENNE – Prepared and fried like Fillets of sole en goujons, but the fillets are cut more finely.

Fillets of sole Marguery. FILETS DE SOLES MARGUERY – This is the recipe given by M. Mangin, who for some thirty years was head chef of the celebrated Restaurant Marguery, at the time when M. Marguery directed the establishment himself.

'Fillet two fine soles. Use the bones and trimmings to make a white wine fumet, flavoured with a little chopped onion, a sprig of thyme, quarter of a bay leaf and a little parsley. Season with salt and pepper. Simmer for 15 minutes. Add to this fumet, which should be strained and concentrated, the strained cooking liquor of a litre (quart) of mussels cooked in the usual way, using white wine.

'Place the fillets of sole, floured and lightly flattened, on a buttered baking dish. Sprinkle over a few tablespoons of the fumet. Cover with buttered greaseproof paper and poach gently.

'Drain the fillets well. Set them in an oval dish and surround with a double row of shelled mussels and shrimps. Keep hot, while the sauce is prepared.

'The sauce. Add the cooking juices of the soles to the fumet and strain. Boil down by two-thirds. Remove from the heat, allow the sauce to cool a little, then add 6 egg yolks. Whisk the sauce over gentle heat, like a hollandaise, incorporating about 350 g. (12 oz., 1½ cups) of the finest butter, slightly melted. Season the sauce and strain. Coat the fillets with it, and garnish. Brown in a hot oven.'

Fillets of sole Marivaux. FILETS DE SOLE MARIVAUX – Poach the folded fillets in fumet that is nearly boiling. Drain and set them on a dish in the middle of a border of Duchess potato mixture (see POTATOES) piped through a forcing bag on top of a layer of chopped Mushrooms cooked in cream (see MUSHROOMS) mixed with chopped truffles. Coat with a light Mornay sauce (see SAUCE). Brush the border with egg, sprinkle with grated Parmesan and brown in the oven.

Fillets of sole à la meunière. FILETS DE SOLES À LA MEUNIÈRE – Flat fillets fried in butter as for Sole à la meunière.

Fillets of sole Montreuil. FILETS DE SOLES MONTREUIL – Made with flat fillets in the same way as Sole Montreuil.

Fillets of sole Montrouge. FILETS DE SOLES MONTROUGE – Cook the folded fillets in butter, moistening them with a few drops of white wine. Drain them. Garnish with small peeled mushrooms cooked in butter and bound with cream.

Coat the whole with a sauce made by adding to the cooking juices 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) Mushroom purée (see PURÉE), a few tablespoons cream and some butter.

Fillets of sole Mornay. FILETS DE SOLES MORNAY – Cook the fillets, left flat, in fumet that is nearly boiling. Coat with Mornay sauce (see SAUCE), sprinkle with grated Parmesan and brown in the oven.

Fillets of sole Murat. FILETS DE SOLES MURAT – Cut the fillets in strips, flour and sauté them in butter.

Sauté separately, for every 8 fillets, 2 medium-sized diced potatoes and two half-cooked diced artichoke bottoms. When these are cooked mix the fillets with them, and sauté together over heat for a few moments. Set in a deep dish. Put on top 8 slices of tomatoes seasoned and sautéed in oil. Sprinkle with chopped parsley, add a little meat glaze and a squeeze of lemon juice, and pour over a few tablespoons Noisette butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters).

Fillets of sole with mushrooms. FILETS DE SOLES AUX CHAMPIGNONS – Cook folded fillets of sole and 2 peeled mushrooms for each sole in a nearly boiling white wine fish fumet. Set the fillets on a dish with the mushrooms on top.

Boil down the cooking liquor with an equal quantity of fresh cream, add butter, strain, and pour over the fillets.

These fillets may also be coated with White wine sauce (see SAUCE) with concentrated fumet added before straining.

Fillets of sole with mussels. FILETS DE SOLES AUX MOULES – Poach the folded fillets in fish fumet and the cooking liquor of mussels. Set on a dish, and surround with mussels cooked in white wine. Coat with White wine sauce (see SAUCE) to which some concentrated cooking liquor has been added.

Fillets of sole à la Nantua. FILETS DE SOLES AUX ÉCREVISSES À LA NANTUA – Poach the folded fillets in a fish fumet that is nearly boiling. Drain, dry, and set them in a circle on a dish. Coat with Nantua sauce (see SAUCE) to which some boiled down cooking liquor has been added. Put a slice of truffle on each fillet.

Fillets of sole à la Nantua (old recipe). FILETS DE SOLES À LA NANTUA – Poach the fillets very gently in white wine. Set them, well drained, on a moulded border made with Pike forcemeat (see FORCEMEAT) finished off with Crayfish butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters). Garnish the middle of the dish with Crayfish tail ragoût à la Nantua (see CRAYFISH). Coat the fillets with Nantua sauce (see SAUCE) to which some fumet has been added. Put a large slice of truffle on top of each fillet.

Fillets of sole à la normande. FILETS DE SOLES À LA NORMANDE – Poach the fillets, left flat, gently in fumet. Drain, set them on a serving dish, and surround them with Normande sauce (see SAUCE). Finish as for Sole à la normande.

Fillets of sole à l'orientale. FILETS DE SOLES À L'ORIENTALE – Prepare, using flat fillets, like Red mullet à l'orientale (see HORS-D'ŒUVRE). This dish is served hot or cold.

Fillets of sole à la normande

Fillets of sole Orly. FILETS DE SOLES ORLY – Prepare as for Whiting Orly (see WHITING).

Fillets of sole with oysters. FILETS DE SOLES AUX HUÎTRES – Fold the fillets and cook them in fish fumet. Drain and dry. Put on top of each fillet 2 oysters de-bearded and poached in their own liquor. Coat with Normande sauce or White wine sauce (see SAUCE) to which some boiled down fumet and oyster liquor have been added.

Fillets of sole à la panetière. FILETS DE SOLES À LA PANETIÈRE – Flatten and trim the fillets and fold them in 2. Season with salt and pepper, flour and sauté them in butter.

Prepare separately a ragoût of mushrooms à la crème. Arrange the fillets in a crown on a thick, round slice of bread, hollowed out, buttered and crisped in the oven. Put the mushrooms in the middle. Warm for a few moments in the oven and serve.

Fillets of sole Parmentier. FILETS DE SOLES PARMENTIÈRE – Poach the fillets in fumet and drain them. Set each into half of a medium-sized potato baked in the oven and partly scooped out, as for Potatoes Georgette (see POTATOES). Coat the fillets with Mornay sauce (see SAUCE) to which some concentrated cooking liquor has been added. Sprinkle with grated Parmesan and melted butter. Brown in the oven.

Fillets of sole à la paysanne. FILETS DE SOLES À LA PAYSANNE – Prepare with folded fillets like Sole à la paysanne.

Fillets of sole à la piémontaise. FILETS DE SOLES À LA PIÉMONTAISE – Season the folded fillets, flour, and sauté in butter. Set each on a croûton cut out of a layer of polenta to the same size as the fillets, and fried in butter.

Put on top of each fillet 4 slices of white truffles seasoned with salt and pepper and lightly sautéed in olive oil. Pour round the cooking juices diluted with white wine, to which have been added a few tablespoons tomato purée and butter.

Fillets of sole en pilaf. FILETS DE SOLES EN PILAF – Cut the fillets into little squares. Season, flour, and sauté briskly in butter. Set the fillets in the middle of a border of Pilafrice (see PILAF). Serve with Tomato sauce or Curry sauce (see SAUCE).

Fillets of sole sur le plat. FILETS DE SOLES SUR LE PLAT – This dish is most often prepared with a whole sole, but may be made with fillets. (See Sole sur le plat, below).

Fillets of sole princesse. FILETS DE SOLES PRINCESSE – Poach the folded fillets in fumet. Set them on a dish and coat them with Normande sauce (see SAUCE) to which some concentrated cooking liquor has been added.

Garnish with very small fine pastry barquettes, filled with green asparagus tips bound with butter, and slices of truffles dipped in fish aspic jelly.

Alternatively, the fillets may be coated with egg and breadcrumbs and sautéed in clarified butter. Garnish with alternate clusters of asparagus tips in butter and diced truffles sautéed in butter and bound with a few drops of Madeira sauce (see SAUCE). Sprinkle the fillets with Noisette butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters.)

Fillets of sole Riche. FILETS DE SOLES RICHE – Riche sauce is so called because it was a speciality of the famous Parisian restaurant Riche, which has now disappeared.

The sauce is made with Normande sauce (see SAUCE) finished off with Lobster butter (see BUTTER) and a few tablespoons Truffle essence (see ESSENCE).

Poach the folded fillets in hot fumet. Drain, and arrange them on a dish in a circle. Garnish the middle with a salpicon of lobster flesh and truffles. Coat with Riche sauce (see SAUCE).

Fillets of sole Richelieu

Fillets of sole Richelieu. FILETS DE SOLES RICHELIEU – Coat the fillets with egg and breadcrumbs and fry them in butter.

Garnish with slices of truffles and cover with Maître d'hôtel butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters.)

Fillets of sole Saint-Germain. FILETS DE SOLES SAINT-GERMAIN – Flatten lightly 8 fillets, season them with salt and pepper, brush with melted butter and coat with freshly made breadcrumbs. Sprinkle with butter and grill on both sides at a moderate heat, letting them colour slightly.

Surround with rather thick Béarnaise sauce (see SAUCE) and garnish with Noisette potatoes (see POTATOES).

Fillets of sole with shrimps. FILETS DE SOLES AUX CREVETTES – Cook the folded fillets in fish fumet made with white wine. Drain, surround with peeled shrimps, and coat with Shrimp sauce (see SAUCE) to which has been added boiled down fumet left from the cooking.

Fillets of sole Sylvette. FILETS DE SOLES SYLVETTE – Put 8 fillets in a sauté pan lined with 3 tablespoons (4 tablespoons) fine mirepoix composed of carrot, the white of leek, onion and celery cut in very small dice, cooked until soft in butter.

Moisten with  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (3 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) sherry. Cook, covered. When three-quarters cooked, add 4 tablespoons ( $\frac{1}{3}$  cup) mixed truffles and mushrooms cut in small dice.

Garnish with very small tomatoes stuffed with a white fish purée, topped with crumbs and browned in the oven. Boil down the cooking liquor, add to it a few tablespoons thick fresh cream and butter, and pour over the fillets.

Timbale of fillets of sole à l'ancienne. TIMBALE DE FILETS DE SOLES À L'ANCIENNE – Prepare a Timbale pie crust (see TIMBALE). Cook empty. Turn it out of the mould, return it to the oven and allow it to become golden brown.

Cook 12 paupiettes of sole, prepared with pike forcemeat finished off with lobster butter, in concentrated fumet.

Prepare separately a ragoût, made of de-bearded and poached oysters, shelled mussels cooked in white wine, slices of lobster, cooked mushrooms and slices of truffle. Bind this ragoût with fish velouté sauce mixed with fresh cream, finished off with Lobster butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters) and a few drops of brandy.

Three-quarters cook some macaroni in salted water, drain, finish with fresh cream seasoned and dressed with butter. Put a layer of macaroni in the pie while still hot. On top put half of the ragoût and 6 of the paupiettes. Cover with macaroni, add another layer of ragoût and the other 6 paupiettes. Finish with the rest of the macaroni and a row of truffle slices.

Put back the pastry 'lid' on the timbale and return it to the oven for a few minutes.

Timbale of filets of sole Grimaldi. TIMBALE DE FILETS DE SOLES GRIMALDI – Prepare like Fillets of sole à l'ancienne with filets of sole spread with truffled Fish forcemeat (see FORCEMEAT), Crayfish tail ragoût à la Nantua (see CRAYFISH), slices of truffles and macaroni with cream.

This timbale can also be made with langoustines (i.e. scampi or Dublin Bay prawns) and sauce finished with crayfish butter instead of crayfish and crayfish sauce.

Timbale of filets of sole à la normande. TIMBALE DE FILETS DE SOLES À LA NORMANDE – Prepare as above with paupiettes of sole spread with whiting forcemeat, poached oysters, mussels cooked in white wine, peeled shrimps, truffle slices and macaroni with cream.

Instead of a pastry 'lid' place on top of the pie trussed crayfish and gudgeon coated in egg and breadcrumbs and fried.

Timbale of filets of sole Victoria. TIMBALE DE FILETS DE SOLES VICTORIA – Prepare in a broad, shallow pastry crust that has been cooked empty.

Spread the filets with Pike forcemeat (see FORCEMEAT) finished off with Truffle purée (see PURÉE), and cook them in concentrated fish fumet made with white wine.

Prepare a ragoût of sliced spiny lobster, oysters, mushrooms and truffles bound with velouté sauce mixed with cream and finished off with Lobster butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters) and brandy.

Put a few spoonfuls of ragoût in the bottom of the pie and arrange the paupiettes, well drained, in a circle on top. Fill the centre with the rest of the ragoût. Coat with Normande sauce (see SAUCE) and put on top of each paupiette a slice of truffle dipped in fish aspic jelly.

Fillets of sole en torsade. FILETS DE SOLES EN TORSADE – Arrange flattened and seasoned filets of sole in a buttered savarin mould. Place the filets crossways, overlapping each other a little and leaving their ends just outside the mould.

Using a forcing bag, fill the inside of the mould with some Fish forcemeat (see FORCEMEAT) (e.g., quenelles, mousseline, etc.), adding, according to the kind of forcemeat used, truffles, mushrooms, Lobster or other shellfish butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters). Tap the mould to settle the contents. Fold the ends of the filets over the forcemeat and press them down.

Poach in a bain-marie in a moderately hot oven. Take out of the oven, allow to cool for a few minutes, then turn out and serve with a sauce suitable for fish (see SAUCE).

Fillets of sole à la trouvillaise. FILETS DE SOLES À LA TROUVILLAISE – Prepare like Fillets of sole à la dieppoise, but coat the filets with White wine sauce (see SAUCE) to which Shrimp butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters) has been added.

Turban of filets of sole. TURBAN DE FILETS DE SOLES – Prepare in the same way as Fillets of sole en torsade.

Fillets of sole à la vénitienne I. FILETS DE SOLES À LA VÉNITIENNE – Poach the folded filets in fumet. Arrange in a ring, alternating them with heart-shaped croûtons of bread fried in butter. Coat the filets with Venetian sauce (see SAUCE) to which some of the boiled down cooking liquor has been added.

Fillets of sole à la vénitienne II. FILETS DE SOLES À LA VÉNITIENNE – Plumerey, the successor of Carême, gives a different recipe for this preparation: 'The filets of folded soles are poached in white wine, then drained, wiped and arranged in a crown. The centre is garnished with a salpicon of lobster and truffles bound with Venetian sauce (see SAUCE), without herbs but finished with Lobster butter (see BUTTER). The filets are coated with green Venetian sauce and garnished with chopped and blanched parsley.'

Fillets of sole Véron. FILETS DE SOLES VÉRON – Coat the filets with egg and breadcrumbs and cook in clarified butter. Serve on a layer of Véron sauce (see SAUCE).

Fillets of sole Victoria. FILETS DE SOLES VICTORIA – Poach the folded filets in fumet that is nearly boiling. Drain and arrange on a serving dish in a circle. Garnish the middle of the dish with a salpicon of spiny lobster flesh and truffles. Coat with White wine sauce (see SAUCE) finished off with Lobster or spiny lobster butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters). Brown in a hot oven.

Vol-au-vent of filets of sole. VOL-AU-VENT DE FILETS DE SOLES – Prepare with filets or paupiettes of sole and a garnish of mushrooms and truffles in the same way as for Chicken vol-au-vent (see VOL-AU-VENT).

Fillets of sole Walewska. FILETS DE SOLES WALEWSKA – Poach the filets, left flat, in fish fumet that is nearly boiling. Put on top of each fillet a slice of lobster or spiny lobster and a slice of raw truffle. Coat with Mornay sauce (see SAUCE) finished off with Lobster or spiny lobster butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters). Brown in a hot oven.

Fillets of sole with red wine. FILETS DE SOLES AU VIN ROUGE – Made with red wine like Fillets of sole with Chambertin.

Fillets of sole with white wine. FILETS DE SOLES AU VIN BLANC – Poach folded filets in a fumet made with white wine, like Sole with white wine.

Sole à la florentine – Poach in fish fumet that is nearly boiling. Drain and remove the backbone. Set on a fireproof dish on a bed of blanched, drained and pressed leaf spinach simmered in butter. Coat with Mornay sauce (see SAUCE). Sprinkle with butter and melted cheese. Brown in oven.

Fried sole. SOLE FRITE – Soak the sole in milk, drain and flour it. Plunge into hot fat or oil. Drain as soon as it is a golden colour, and season with very dry salt. Garnish with fried parsley and lemon.

Sole fritters. FRITOT DE SOLES – Marinate the filets for 30 minutes in oil, lemon juice, chopped parsley, salt and pepper. Dip in a light batter and fry in deep fat. Arrange in a mound. Garnish with fried parsley and lemon. Serve with Tomato sauce (see SAUCE).

Golden sole. SOLE DORÉE – Cook the sole, floured, in clarified butter. Top with a row of lemon slices and sprinkle with Noisette butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters).

Sole au gratin I – Put a sole weighing about 300 g. (11 oz.) into a buttered fireproof dish lined with 1 or 2 tablespoons (2 or 3 tablespoons) of dry duxelles. Season with salt and pepper.

Garnish with mushrooms cut in thick slices. Place 3 or 4 cooked mushroom caps on top of the soles. Coat with Duxelles sauce (see SAUCE) to which some concentrated fish fumet has been added. Sprinkle with breadcrumbs. Cook in a moderate oven until brown. Squeeze over a few drops of lemon juice.

Sole au gratin II – Put the sole, well seasoned, into a buttered fireproof dish lined with chopped shallot and parsley moistened with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) white wine and a few drops of lemon juice. Dot little pieces of butter on top. Cook in the oven for 5 minutes. Drain off the cooking liquor, boil down, and add to it 4 tablespoons (5 tablespoons) duxelles. Add a teaspoon Tomato purée (see PURÉE).

Garnish the sole with mushrooms and pour the sauce over. Sprinkle with breadcrumbs and melted butter. Brown in a hot oven.

Grilled sole. SOLE GRILLÉE – Make shallow incisions across the sole, season it, brush with oil or melted butter, and cook under the grill at a moderate heat. Surround with slices of lemon and small bunches of fresh parsley, and serve with Maître d'hôtel butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters) or any sauce suitable for grilled fish.

Gulyas of sole. GULYAS DE SOLES – Cut the fillets into square pieces. Season and put them into a sauté pan in which (for 8 fillets) 100 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) chopped onion seasoned with 1½ teaspoons paprika have been cooked in butter. Sauté the pieces of sole quickly on each side. Take them out of the pan and put in 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE), 1 tablespoon tomato purée and 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) fresh cream. Simmer for a few moments. Put the pieces of sole back in the pan and cook for another 3 minutes. Serve with boiled potatoes.

Sole marchand de vin – Insert into a sole, with the fillets cut and raised a little, a piece of butter the size of a walnut seasoned with salt and pepper. Put the fish on a buttered baking dish sprinkled with a tablespoon of chopped shallot. Season, pour over 1½ dl. (¼ pint, ¾ cup) red wine and poach in the oven.

Set the sole on a serving dish. Coat with a sauce made by boiling down the poaching liquor and adding to it a teaspoon of fish or meat glaze, 40 g. (1½ oz., 3 tablespoons) butter, a pinch of chopped parsley and a few drops of lemon juice.

Sole à la marinère – Poach the sole very gently in a fish fumet to which chopped shallot has been added. Drain, and set it on a dish. Surround with Mussels à la marinère (see MUSSELS) removed from their shells and de-bearded. Coat with Marinière sauce (see SAUCE) to which concentrated fumet has been added.

This dish is sometimes garnished with peeled shrimps.

Sole en matelote à la normande. – Cut 2 large thick soles into pieces. Season with salt and pepper and arrange in a sauté pan in which a chopped onion has been cooked very gently without being allowed to colour. Pour over 3 dl. (½ pint, 1¼ cups) dry white wine and a squeeze of lemon juice.

Cook for 10 minutes. Drain the pieces and put them in a sauté dish, together with mushrooms cooked in a flour and water court-bouillon, peeled shrimps, and Mussels à la marinère (see MUSSEL) removed from their shells. Pour over a Normande sauce (see SAUCE) incorporating the cooking liquor of both the soles and the mussels. Heat without allowing to boil.

Arrange the pieces of sole on a dish and garnish with the mussels, shrimps, and the mushrooms arranged in groups. Set thin slices of truffles heated in butter on top of each piece, and garnish with smelts coated in egg and breadcrumbs and fried, and croutons of bread fried in butter.

This dish may also be prepared using cider as the cooking liquid.

Sole à la ménagère – Put the sole in a fireproof dish on a layer of carrots, onion and celery, chopped and cooked in butter until soft. Season with salt, pepper, a pinch of thyme and powdered bay leaf. Moisten with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) red wine. Cover and cook in the oven. Drain off the cooking wine. Thicken this with a tablespoon Kneaded butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters), then stir in extra butter. Coat the sole with this sauce. Glaze in a hot oven.

Sole à la meunière – Season and flour the sole and cook in butter.

Set on a serving dish. Sprinkle with chopped parsley and squeeze over a few drops of lemon juice. Pour over the hot cooking butter.

Sole à la meunière, various garnishes. SOLE À LA MEUNIÈRE – Cook the sole as indicated above. Set on a dish and surround with a garnish. Finish as in the last recipe. Garnish with:

Aubergines cut in rounds and sautéed in butter, cèpes sliced and sautéed in butter (with the addition, if liked, of chopped shallot or a little garlic), sliced sautéed mushrooms set on top of the fish, courgettes prepared in the same way as aubergines, potatoes cut in large dice and sautéed in butter, orange, peeled and sliced, the sole having a few drops of orange juice instead of lemon juice squeezed over it with the cooking butter, grapes, peeled and sprinkled with butter, sliced tomatoes sautéed in butter or oil, truffles cut in thick strips, cooked lightly in the butter in which the sole was cooked.

Sole meunière Mont-Bry – Prepare in advance 200 g. (½ lb.) noodles cut very finely (dried noodles will not do for this purpose). Heat and peel 6 large tomatoes and press them to remove all seeds and juice. Add to these a medium-sized onion, chopped and cooked in butter until golden, a pinch of salt, a pinch of sugar and a little crushed garlic. Cover and cook gently.

Prepare separately 3 soles weighing about 450 g. (about 1 lb.) each. Detach the fillets a little from the backbone (on the side from which the brown skin has been removed) and season with salt and pepper. Toss them in flour and cook in clarified butter until golden brown.

In another pan heat 100 g. (4 oz., ½ cup) clarified butter. Put in the noodles and sauté them until they are lightly fried and crisp.

Set the soles on a heated dish, squeeze over a little lemon juice, sprinkle chopped parsley over, surround with the tomato, and arrange the noodles in a mound at each end of the dish. Sprinkle the soles generously with Noisette butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters) and serve immediately so that when the dish arrives at the table the butter is still hot and frothy.' (Philéas Gilbert.)

Sole Montreuil – Poach the sole in nearly boiling fumet. Surround with potato balls cooked in salted water. Coat the sole with White wine sauce and the potato balls with Shrimp sauce or any other pink sauce made with a shellfish butter (see SAUCE).

Sole Mornay – Cooked like Brill Mornay, see BRILL.

Sole Mousse. MOUSSE DE SOLES – Small preparations made with the same mixture as for large mousses (see FISH, Fish mousse), but cooked in dariole moulds, cassolettes or goffered paper cases.

Cold mousselines of sole are used to garnish large cold fish.

Sole with mushrooms. SOLE AUX CHAMPIGNONS – Prepare with whole sole in the same way as for Brill with mushrooms (see BRILL) or Fillets of sole with mushrooms.

Sole à la Nantua – Cooked in the same way as Brill with crayfish à la Nantua (see BRILL).

Sole à la niçoise – Season the sole, brush it with oil, and grill. Surround with a niçoise garnish composed of tomatoes cooked in butter until soft, tarragon mixed with a little anchovy butter, black olives and capers; these being arranged in separate groups. Place anchovy fillets and slices of peeled lemon on the sole.

Sole Noël – Poach the sole in the cooking liquor of mussels or in Chablis. Cook 4 peeled mushroom caps in the same baking dish.

Set the sole, well drained, in a fireproof dish, with the mushrooms on top. Surround with shelled mussels and shrimps.

Boil down the cooking liquor. Thicken it with 2 egg yolks and beat in extra butter. Coat the sole and garnish with this sauce. Brown quickly in a very hot oven. (Octave Vaudable's recipe.)

Sole à la normande – Sole au vin blanc accompanied by a complicated garnish, including ingredients such as truffles, which have no fundamental place in Normandy cooking. The dish came from Normandy in the guise of stewed fish with cream, being originally prepared with cider instead of white wine. Experts have added a rich garnish.

Trim the sole, split it, and raise the fillets a little from the skinned side. Break the backbone in two or three places. Poach in fish fumet made with white wine, nearly boiling, to which the cooking juices of the mussels, oysters and mushrooms have been added. Drain and wipe the fish, and remove the backbone.

Garnish, for a sole weighing about 400 g. (14 oz.): 4 poached and de-bearded oysters, 12 mussels cooked in white wine, 25 g. (1 oz.) peeled shrimps and 4 peeled mushrooms cooked in white wine, 6 slices truffles, 4 fried gudgeon, 4 trussed crayfish cooked in court-bouillon, and 4 croûtons of bread fried in butter.

Coat with Normande sauce (see SAUCE) made with the fumet in which the fish was cooked. Add the other garnishes: the truffles, glazed with fish aspic jelly, the oysters and the mushrooms set in a straight line down the middle of the fish, the croûtons of bread fried in butter alternating with the truffles on top of the fish, the fried gudgeon and the crayfish arranged on the sides of the dish. Coat the sole with sauce and pour a ring of light fish jelly, or meat aspic jelly around the fish.

Croûtons of fried bread are often replaced by small cut-outs of puff pastry. Frequently, too, the fried gudgeon are replaced by fried smelts.

Pâté of sole (hot and cold). PÂTÉS DE SOLES CHAUDS ET FROIDS – Prepare like other fish pies, using fillets of sole (usually spread with forcemeat and rolled in paupiettes), Pike forcemeat (see FORCEMEAT) or forcemeat made of any other fish, and truffles. (See PÂTÉ.)

When these pies are to be served hot, pour into them, before serving, a few tablespoons of Fish fumet (see FUMET) mixed with cream, or a few tablespoons of the accompanying sauce.

When served cold, a few tablespoons of Fish aspic (see ASPIC) are poured in through the hole in the top of the 'lid'. This should be done only when the pie is completely cold.

Paupiettes of sole. PAUPIETTES DE SOLES – Fillets of sole spread with a fish forcemeat or some other mixture, rolled up and cooked slowly in a fish fumet, or in butter.

All the garnishes and sauces used for fillets of sole are applicable to paupiettes. Rolled paupiettes of sole are also served cold.

Paupiettes of sole Mont-Bry. PAUPIETTES DE SOLES MONT-BRY – Spread fillets thinly with Fish forcemeat (see FORCEMEAT). Roll them in paupiettes. Cook very gently in fish fumet made with white wine.

Drain the paupiettes and set each one in a tomato which has been cooked in oil and half-filled with risotto seasoned with saffron. Coat the paupiettes with the cooking liquor concentrated and mixed with fresh cream, to which chopped chervil and tarragon have been added.

Paupiettes of sole à la nissarde. PAUPIETTES DE SOLES À LA NISSARDE – Spread the fillets with Pike forcemeat (see FORCEMEAT) finished off with Anchovy essence (see ESSENCE) or purée and chopped parsley. Roll in paupiettes.

Poach these in concentrated fumet, drain them, and set each into half a courgette cooked in butter and slightly hollowed out. Place on a dish.

Boil down the cooking liquor, add tomato purée and butter, blend, and pour over the paupiettes. Sprinkle with grated Parmesan and a few drops of oil. Brown in the oven.

Paupiettes of sole Paillard. PAUPIETTES DE SOLE PAILLARD – 'Lay out on the table the flattened fillets of sole. Season and spread them thinly with Fish forcemeat (see FORCEMEAT) finished off with mushroom purée. Roll them into cork-shaped pieces. Put them into a sauté pan lined with chopped onions and mushrooms, add a bouquet garni and moisten with fish fumet or dry white wine. Cook, covered, in the oven for 12 minutes.

'Drain the paupiettes, arrange them in a deep, buttered dish, cover and keep warm.

'Strain the cooking liquor through muslin and add to it an equal quantity of mushroom purée, 2 egg yolks and 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) fresh cream. Bring just to the boil, whisking all the time, and add the seasoning.

'Coat the paupiettes with this sauce, glaze in a very hot oven, and serve immediately.' (A. Deland, formerly head chef at the Restaurant Paillard.)

At the Restaurant Paillard, these paupiettes were served on artichoke bottoms.

Sole à la paysanne – For a sole weighing 350 g. (12 oz.): Cook a carrot, an onion, a tender stick of celery and the white part of a leek gently in butter, seasoning them with salt and a pinch of sugar. When cooked, moisten them with just enough warm water to cover them. Add 1 tablespoon diced French beans and 1 tablespoon fresh green peas. Finish cooking the vegetables together, boiling down the liquid a little.

Put the sole, seasoned with salt and pepper, into a buttered earthenware dish. Cover with the vegetable mixture and its cooking liquor. Poach the sole in this liquid, and drain off as much as possible, boiling down the liquid. Add 15 g. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  oz., 1 tablespoon) butter, stirring well. Pour this sauce over the sole and glaze in a hot oven.

This method of preparation is sometimes described on menus as sole à la russe, but it is more logical to call it à la paysanne because the vegetables are cooked à la paysanne.

Pilaf of sole. PILAF DE SOLES – Cut the fillets of sole into small square pieces and sauté them in butter. Add sliced mushrooms, also sautéed in butter. Set the fish in the middle of Rice pilaf (see PILAF) shaped into a border mould. Coat the fish with Tomato sauce or Normande sauce (see SAUCE.)

Sole sur le plat – Put a little butter, seasoned with salt and pepper, inside a sole whose fillets have been slightly raised, and set in a buttered fireproof dish. Season further with salt and pepper. Moisten with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) fish fumet and a few drops of lemon juice. Dot small pieces of butter over the fish.

Cook in the oven, basting frequently, until the liquor is reduced to a syrupy consistency and has given the sole a blonde glaze. Serve in the dish in which it was cooked.

Sole sur le plat may also be prepared replacing the fumet with wine: Alsace wine, Chablis, dry Champagne, Cassis, Paupiettes of sole Mont-Bry

Sauternes, Monbazillac, Seyssel, Jurançon, Muscadet, vin rosé, various red wines of Burgundy, Bordelais and other regions.

Poached sole, various sauces. SOLE BOUILLIE, POCHÉE – Cook the sole in a stock or court-bouillon made of milk and water seasoned with salt. Drain and set on a perforated dish. Garnish with parsley and boiled potatoes. Serve with melted butter or a sauce suitable for poached fish: Hollandaise, Fines herbes, Lobster, etc. (see SAUCE).

Sole à la portugaise – Put the seasoned sole into a fireproof dish lined with cooked tomatoes mixed with chopped onion cooked in oil and seasoned with a little garlic. Moisten with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) fish fumet and 3 to 4 tablespoons (4 to 5 tablespoons) olive oil. Cook in the oven, basting often. Sprinkle the sole with breadcrumbs and brown lightly. Add chopped parsley and a few drops of lemon juice.

Sole à la provençale – Put the seasoned sole into an oiled dish. Moisten with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) fish fumet with a little garlic. Sprinkle over a tablespoon of oil and cook in the oven. When almost cooked, surround with halved tomatoes sautéed in oil. Set 4 slices of peeled lemon on the fish. Sprinkle with breadcrumbs and finish cooking in the oven. Sprinkle with chopped parsley and serve in the cooking dish.

Purée of sole. PURÉE DE SOLES – Cook fillets of sole in butter and press through a fine sieve. Bind with Béchalme sauce or with fish Velouté sauce mixed with cream (see SAUCE).

This filling is used mostly as a filling for flaky pastry, patties, tartlets, barquettes or similar preparations.

Quenelles of sole. QUENELLES DE SOLES – Quenelle forcemeat made with sole is prepared in the same way as Pike forcemeat. (See QUENELLE and FORCEMEAT.)

It is set on cut-out pieces of puff pastry or oval croûtons of bread fried in butter, and accompanied by garnish prescribed for fillets of sole, and coated with sauce to blend with the rest of the dish.

Sole Richelieu – Prepared with a whole sole in the same way as Fillets of sole Richelieu.

Risotto of sole. RISOTTO DE SOLES – Made of Pilaf of sole with Risotto (see RICE) instead of pilaf rice.

Shelled mussels or shrimps or any other shellfish may be added to these dishes, as well as mushrooms.

Sole à la russe – See Sole à la paysanne.

Sole Saint-Germain – This method is mainly applied to fillets of fish.

Coat the sole with butter and breadcrumbs, sprinkle with melted butter, and cook under the grill at a low heat. Set on a hot dish, surround with potatoes cut to look like olives and cooked in butter. Serve with Béarnaise sauce (see SAUCE).

Scallop shells of sole. COQUILLES DE SOLES – Prepare with fillets of sole cooked in butter, like Brill in scallop shells (see BRILL).

Sole with shrimps. SOLE AUX CREVETTES – Prepare with the whole sole poached in a fish fumet that is almost boiling. Drain the sole, set on a dish, and surround with mussels cooked in white wine, and peeled shrimps. Coat with White wine sauce (see SAUCE). Serve as it is, or glaze in a hot oven.

Sole with red wine. SOLE AU VIN ROUGE – Season the sole with salt and pepper. Put it in a baking dish on a layer of chopped onions and carrots which have been tossed in butter. Add a sprig of thyme, a piece of bay leaf and mushroom skins. Dot the top of the fish with tiny pieces of butter. Poach, covered, in the oven. Drain, dry, trim and remove the backbone.

Set on a dish, and coat with its cooking liquor finished off according to the instructions given elsewhere for Red wine sauce for fish (see SAUCE). Garnish with mushrooms and small white onions.

Red wine used to poach fish may be of any of a number of different vintages, Bordeaux, Burgundy, Côtes du Rhône, Touraine, etc. Vin ordinaire may also be used.

Sole with white wine. SOLE AU VIN BLANC – Poach the sole very gently in a fumet made with white wine. Drain the fish, trim it, remove the backbone. Coat with a White wine sauce prepared with the fumet in which the fish was cooked, according to one of the recipes given for this sauce (see SAUCE).

Serve as it is or glaze in a very hot oven.

SOLILEM or SOLIMEME – Cake, Alsatian in origin.

Ingredients. 500 g. (1 lb. 2 oz.,  $4\frac{1}{2}$  cups) sifted flour, 125 g. (4 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) butter, 15 g. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  oz., 1 tablespoon) sugar, 15 g. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cake) yeast, 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) cream, 4 eggs, 10 g. ( $1\frac{1}{2}$  teaspoons) salt.

Method. Make a paste with a quarter of the flour, the yeast and a little warm water. Leave in a warm place to rise.

Add 2 eggs and  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (3 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) of the cream. Add the rest of the flour and knead the dough. Incorporate in this paste the butter, the rest of the cream and the eggs, added little by little. Beat the dough. It should be quite soft, and may have a little more cream added to it if it is too firm.

Half-fill a round buttered mould with the dough. Leave to rise. Bake in the oven. Turn the cake out of the mould, cut in two layers, sprinkle each layer with melted, slightly salted butter. Put the two pieces together and serve very hot.

SOLOMON'S SEAL. MUGUET ANGUMEUX – Plant found in the woods. The young shoots are edible and are prepared like asparagus.

This plant is also known as sceau de Solomon.

SOMMELIER – Employee charged with the care of the cellars or a member of a religious order concerned with the convent plate, linen, bread and wine.

In large restaurants the sommelier is in charge of the wines, both in the cellar and the wine sold in the restaurant. The function of a sommelier in a large establishment demands extensive knowledge of wines. He must also understand how to choose wines to blend with particular foods.

A sommellerie is either a group of persons engaged in looking after the cellars and drinks in a royal household, or the place where the work of the sommelier is done, notably in monasteries and convents.

SOMMIER – Name formerly given to the servants of the kitchen, pantry and sommellerie in the palace of the French kings.

SORB-APPLE. SORBE – Fruit of the sorb, a tree of the Rosaceae family. Two varieties are known: The rowan or mountain ash, whose fruits, much relished by thrushes, are highly astringent but used in some districts for distilling; and the sorb or service tree whose fruits become edible when over-ripe and serve to make a kind of cider.

SORBETS – See SHERBETS.

SORGHUM. SORGHU – Cereal, native of Africa but long cultivated in southern Europe and China. It is a kind of millet. Its grain is used mostly to make porridges and flat cakes; the stalks, which serve for fodder, contain a high percentage of sugar and can be used to make a fermented drink.

SORREL. OSEILLE – Hardy perennial herb which dates back before 300 B.C. and still grows wild today in Asia, Europe and North America. It is also cultivated.

In the thirteenth century it was listed as an English herb; it has long been used in the making of soups and sauces. The young under-leaves of this plant, also called sour grass, are used as salad greens or as a vegetable.

Sorb-apples on branch

Braised sorrel or sorrel purée. OSEILLE BRAISÉE, PURÉE D'OSEILLE – Put 1 kg. (2½ lb.) sorrel, picked over and washed in several waters, into a big saucepan. Moisten with ½ dl. (3 tablespoons, scant ¼ cup) water and cook on slow heat until it goes down in volume. Drain in a sieve.

Prepare a blond roux (q.v.) made of 60 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter and 30 g. (1 oz., ¼ cup) flour. Mix well, add 6 dl. (1 pint, 2½ cups) white stock, season with salt and a little castor sugar, cover the pan and cook in the oven for 2 hours.

Rub the sorrel through a fine sieve and put it back in the pan to reheat. Bind with a liaison of 3 whole eggs (or 6 yolks), beaten, mixed with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) cream, strained and blended with 150 g. (5 oz., 10 tablespoons) butter. Stir well. Add to the roux.

Chiffonnade of sorrel. CHIFFONNADE D'OSEILLE – Pick over, wash and shred the sorrel into a fine julienne. Simmer gently in butter until all the water has evaporated.

Chiffonnade of sorrel in butter is used as an element of garnish for various dishes. (See SOUPS AND BROTHS; EGGS, Sorrel omelette.)

Chiffonnade of sorrel with cream. CHIFFONNADE D'OSEILLE À LA CRÈME – Cook the chiffonnade on slow heat until it goes down in volume, as described in the preceding recipe. When the liquid is completely evaporated, moisten with a few tablespoons fresh double cream. Simmer for a few minutes.

This is used for the same purposes as the sorrel chiffonnade cooked with butter.

Preserved sorrel. CONSERVE D'OSEILLE – Pick over, wash and cook the sorrel slowly as described above. Dry off thoroughly, extracting all the water. Compress it into a stone jar with a wide neck. Cool. Pour over a thick layer of clarified beef fat to seal it and keep in a cool place.

Sorrel can also be bottled by putting it, after it is cooked, into jars or cans and treating them in a steriliser in the usual manner.

SOT-L'Y-LAISSE – This term, meaning 'a fool leaves it', is used to describe the small piece of flesh situated above the parson's nose of a chicken or other fowl which is considered a delicacy. In old French cookery 'ragoûts of sot-l'y-laisse' are often mentioned.

SOUBISE – Purée of onions and rice used as an accompaniment to various cuts of meat, large and small. (See PURÉE.)

SOU-FASSUM (Nice cookery) – Stuffed cabbage. Blanch the cabbage as for Stuffed cabbage (see CABBAGE), and stuff with a forcemeat made of 500 g. (generous 1 lb., 2 cups) sausage meat, 200 g. (7 oz., 1½ cups) diced streaky bacon, blanched and fried, 100 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) chopped onion, lightly cooked in butter, 250 g. (9 oz., 3½ cups) blanched and chopped beetroot leaves, 2 peeled and chopped tomatoes, 100 g. (4 oz., ¾ cup) fresh peas, 100 g. (4 oz., ½ cup) blanched rice, the chopped cabbage heart, chopped parsley, crushed garlic, salt and pepper.

Reform the cabbage, wrap in muslin, and cook for 3 hours in a mutton or ordinary pot-au-feu.

Serve with Tomato sauce (see SAUCE).

SOUFFLÉS – Sweet and savoury, made of ingredients cooked to a purée, thickened with egg yolks and with stiffly beaten egg whites folded in, poured into a soufflé dish or into cassolettes and baked in the oven.

The same name has been extended to include quite different preparations, more like mousses or mousselines, served either hot or cold.

Small soufflés are made in cassolettes of fireproof porcelain, ovenproof glass or metal or in special goffered paper cases.

Prepare the soufflé mixture according to the recipe. Turn the mixture into the buttered cassolettes, filling these three-quarters full. Smooth the surface.

Set the cassolettes on a baking sheet and cook in a cool oven for 8 to 12 minutes. Serve immediately.

True soufflés are divided into two main categories: savoury soufflés, served as hors-d'œuvres or small entrées or sometimes as a savoury, and sweet soufflés.

SAVOURY SOUFFLÉS. SOUFFLÉS DE CUISINE – Prepare the basic ingredient, whether purée of meat, fish, shellfish or vegetable, or a bouillie.

Bind this ingredient, away from the heat, with 3 egg yolks for every 250 g. (9 oz.) of the mixture. Season quite strongly so as to compensate for the weakening effect of adding egg whites. Mix.

Incorporate 3 or 4 stiffly beaten egg whites and mix quickly, but do not beat. Fill a buttered soufflé dish with this mixture to within a finger's breadth from the top. Smooth over the surface. Cook in a moderate oven for 20 to 25 minutes. Serve immediately.

The same method is used to cook small soufflés in cassolettes.

Brain soufflé. SOUFFLÉ DE CERVELLE – Bind 250 g. (9 oz., 1 cup) Brain purée (see PURÉE) with 1½ dl. (¾ pint, ¾ cup) thick Béchéamel sauce (see SAUCE). Season with salt, pepper and grated nutmeg.

Add 3 egg yolks, and fold in 3 stiffly beaten egg whites. Fill a buttered soufflé dish with the mixture. Finish as above.

Brain soufflé à la chanoinesse. SOUFFLÉ DE CERVELLE À LA CHANOINESSE – Prepare the mixture as above. Add 50 g. (2 oz., ½ cup) grated Parmesan and 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) truffles cut in a fine julienne. Finish as above.

Brain soufflés are often served as an hors-d'œuvre and cooked in cassolettes as for small soufflés.

Calf's liver or chicken liver soufflé. SOUFFLÉ DE FOIE DE VEAU, FOIES DE VOLAILLE – Pound in a mortar 250 g. (9 oz.) diced calf's liver, sautéed in butter and mixed with 35 g. (1½ oz., 3 tablespoons) butter and 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) thick béchéamel sauce. Season.

Press through a strainer. Add 2 egg yolks and 3 beaten egg whites. Finish as above.

Chicken liver soufflé is prepared in the same way.

Cheese soufflé. SOUFFLÉ AU FROMAGE – Make a white roux of 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter, 60 g. (2½ oz., ¾ cup) flour and 2 dl. (¾ pint, scant cup) milk. Season with salt, pepper and grated nutmeg. Stir over strong heat until boiling.

Cheese soufflé

Remove from heat, add 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) grated Gruyère, 3 egg yolks and 3 beaten egg whites. Finish as above.

This mixture is also cooked in cassolettes and served as an hors-d'œuvre.

Soufflés are also made with Parmesan, Cheddar or Dutch cheese.

Chestnut soufflé. SOUFFLÉ DE MARRONS – Proceed with chestnut purée, as for Potato soufflé.

Chestnut soufflé soubise. SOUFFLÉ DE MARRONS SOUBISE – Prepare the basic mixture in the usual way, using two-thirds Chestnut purée and one-third Onion soubise I (see PURÉE).

Chicken soufflé. SOUFFLÉ DE VOLAILLE – Pound in a mortar 250 g. (9 oz.) cooked white chicken meat with 2 to 3 tablespoons (3 to 4 tablespoons) thick béchamel sauce. Season and press through a sieve.

Cool, add 1 tablespoon butter and mix. Incorporate 3 egg yolks and 3 beaten egg whites. Finish as above.

This recipe applies to chicken, turkey and guinea fowl. The mixture can be served in cassolettes as an hors-d'œuvre.

Chicken soufflé à la mirepoix. SOUFFLÉ DE VOLAILLE À LA MIREPOIX – Add to the mixture prepared as above, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) Vegetable mirepoix (see MIREPOIX). Finish as above.

Chicken soufflé with truffles (soufflé à la reine). SOUFFLÉ DE VOLAILLE AUX TRUFFES – Add to the mixture, prepared as above, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) chopped truffles.

Chicory soufflé. SOUFFLÉ DE CHICORÉE – Dry 250 g. (9 oz.) sieved braised chicory over heat, stirring and shaking to prevent sticking.

Chicory soufflé with Parmesan. SOUFFLÉ DE CHICORÉE AU PARMESAN – Proceed as above, finishing the mixture with 60 g. (2½ oz.,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) grated Parmesan.

Crayfish soufflé à la normande. SOUFFLÉ D'ÉCREVISSES À LA NORMANDE – Prepare the basic mixture in the same way as for Shrimp soufflé (see below). Replace the shrimps with a similar quantity of crayfish.

Turn into a buttered soufflé dish, alternating layers of the soufflé mixture with a salpicon of poached and drained oysters, truffles and mushrooms. Finish as in the preceding recipes.

Fish soufflé. SOUFFLÉ DE POISSON – Cook the fish in butter, and press through a sieve. For every 250 g. (9 oz.) fish add 1½ dl. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  pint,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) thick béchamel sauce. Bind with 3 egg yolks and incorporate 3 or 4 beaten egg whites. Finish as in the preceding recipes.

This recipe applies to all fish. It can also be applied to left-over fish which has been cooked in butter or white wine.

Soufflé of foie gras (à la Périgueux) – See MOUSSES, Foie gras mousse (hot).

Game soufflé. SOUFFLÉ DE GIBIER – Pound in a mortar 250 g. (9 oz.) cooked game with 1½ dl. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  pint,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE) based on game fumet. Season and sieve.

Add 3 egg yolks and 3 stiffly beaten egg whites. Finish as in the preceding recipes.

Chiefly served in cassolettes as an hors-d'œuvre.

Game soufflé à la Périgueux. SOUFFLÉ DE GIBIER À LA PÉRIGUEUX – Add to the above mixture 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) chopped truffles. Finish as above.

Ham soufflé. SOUFFLÉ DE JAMBON – Proceed, with 250 g. (9 oz.) lean cooked ham, as for Game soufflé.

Served chiefly in cassolettes as an d'œuvre.

Ham soufflé à la strasbourgeoise. SOUFFLÉ DE JAMBON À LA STRASBOURGEOISE – Add to Ham purée (see PURÉE) one third of its weight of Pâté de foie gras and 1 tablespoon chopped truffles. Finish as in the preceding recipes.

Soufflé à la hongroise – Prepare a mixture as for Brain soufflé, adding 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) chopped onion cooked in butter till soft and seasoned with paprika, and 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) diced mushrooms sautéed in butter. Finish off as in the preceding recipes.

Chiefly served in cassolettes as an hors-d'œuvre.

Jerusalem artichoke soufflé. SOUFFLÉ DE TOPINAMBOURS – Proceed in the same way as for Potato soufflé using a Jerusalem artichoke purée (see PURÉE) instead of potato purée.

Lettuce soufflé. SOUFFLÉ DE LAITUES – Proceed as for Chicory soufflé, replacing the chicory with braised, chopped lettuces. Grated Parmesan may be added, if liked.

Lobster soufflé. SOUFFLÉ DE HOMARD – Proceed as for Shrimp soufflé, replacing the shrimps with lobster purée.

Meat soufflé. SOUFFLÉ DE VIANDES – Proceed with the meat as for Calf's liver soufflé. Any meat may be used for this soufflé if it has been poached or braised, and according to the kind of meat, béchamel sauce, velouté sauce or any other sauce that will blend with the meat is used to bind the purée.

Parmesan soufflé. SOUFFLÉ AU PARMESAN – Blend 75 g. (3 oz.,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) sifted flour with 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) boiled milk. Season with salt, pepper and grated nutmeg.

Stir over good heat until boiling, then take off the heat and add 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) grated Parmesan, 25 g. (1 oz., 2 tablespoons) butter, 3 egg yolks and 3 beaten whites. Finish as in the preceding recipes.

Also served in cassolettes as an hors-d'œuvre.

Potato soufflé. SOUFFLÉ DE POMMES DE TERRE – Bind 4 dl. ( $\frac{3}{4}$  pint, scant 2 cups) Potato purée (see POTATOES) with 4 tablespoons ( $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) cream. Season. Add 3 egg yolks and 3 beaten egg whites. Finish in the usual way.

Potato soufflé with cheese. SOUFFLÉ DE POMMES DE TERRE AU FROMAGE – As above, adding to the purée 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) grated Gruyère or Parmesan.

Potato soufflé à la hongroise. SOUFFLÉ DE POMMES DE TERRE À LA HONGROISE – As above, incorporating chopped onion softened in butter and seasoned with paprika in the potato purée.

Sweet potato soufflé. SOUFFLÉ DE PATATES – Proceed with sweet potato purée in the same way as for Potato soufflé.

Shrimp soufflé (or other crustacean). SOUFFLÉ DE CREVETTES – Bind 200 g. (7 oz.,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) Shrimp purée (see PURÉE) with 1½ dl. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  pint,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) thick Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE) to which the reduced cooking liquor from the shrimps has been added.

Add 3 egg yolks and fold in 3 beaten egg whites. Finish as in the preceding recipes.

Prawn, crayfish, lobster, spiny lobster and crab soufflés are prepared in the same way. A salpicon of shrimps or the flesh of the shellfish used may be added to the mixture.

These soufflés are chiefly served as an hors-d'œuvre, cooked in cassolettes.

Spinach soufflé

Spinach soufflé. SOUFFLÉ D'ÉPINARDS – Proceed as for Chicory soufflé, replacing the chicory with an equal quantity of spinach, blanched, drained, pressed and chopped or sieved, and simmered in butter. Finish as in the preceding recipes.

Spinach soufflé à la florentine. SOUFFLÉ D'ÉPINARDS À LA FLORENTINE – Prepare the basic mixture as above, adding 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) grated Parmesan to the cooked spinach. Finish as in the preceding recipes.

Spiny lobster soufflé. SOUFFLÉ DE LANGOUSTE – Prepare as for Shrimp soufflé, but using a spiny lobster purée instead of a shrimp purée.

Sweetbread soufflé. SOUFFLÉ DE RIS DE VEAU – Proceed as for Calf's liver soufflé, replacing the liver with an equal quantity of calf's sweetbreads.

Mostly served in cassolettes as an hors-d'œuvre.

Tomato soufflé. SOUFFLÉ DE TOMATES – Bind 3 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint,  $1\frac{1}{4}$  cups) thick tomato purée with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) thick béchamel sauce. Remove from heat and add 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) grated Parmesan, 3 egg yolks and 3 beaten egg whites.

Finish as in the preceding recipes.

This soufflé may be made without the addition of grated Parmesan, or chopped tarragon may be added instead.

Truffle soufflé (Soufflé à la royale). SOUFFLÉ AUX TRUFFES – Bind 150 g. (5 oz.,  $\frac{2}{3}$  cup) Truffle purée (see PURÉE) with  $1\frac{1}{2}$  dl. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  pint,  $\frac{2}{3}$  cup) béchamel sauce made with Truffle essence (see ESSENCE). Season.

Add 3 egg yolks and 3 beaten egg whites. Finish as in the preceding recipes.

Chiefly served in cassolettes as an hors-d'œuvre.

Truffle soufflé with Parmesan. SOUFFLÉ AUX TRUFFES ET AU PARMESAN – Add to a Parmesan soufflé mixture 60 g. ( $2\frac{1}{2}$  oz.,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) truffles cut in a fine julienne. Finish as in the preceding recipes.

Mostly served in cassolettes as an hors-d'œuvre.

Vegetable soufflé. SOUFFLÉ DE LÉGUMES – Any vegetable, reduced to a purée, may be used to make soufflé. Before egg yolks are added, these purées should be dried out over heat and béchamel sauce should be added as necessary, if they are too thin.

Proceed in the same way as for Chicory soufflé.

Artichokes, asparagus, aubergines, carrots, celery, mushrooms, cauliflower, courgettes, turnips, etc., may be used to make soufflés in this way.

SWEET SOUFFLÉS. SOUFFLÉS D'ENTREMETS – Several kinds of basic mixture are used for these soufflés. They can be divided into two principal types: cream-based and fruit-based.

The cream-based mixtures are used for the greater number of soufflés, the basic recipe is varied by the flavouring used and the ingredients added.

Soufflés are made in straight-sided containers of silver, fireproof porcelain or ovenproof glass. Silver soufflé dishes are sometimes provided with an inner dish in which the soufflé is cooked. These utensils are buttered and sprinkled with fine sugar.

Soufflés are cooked in a moderate oven so that the heat penetrates right to the middle of the mixture. A few moments before cooking is finished the soufflé is sprinkled with sugar and glazed in the hottest part of the oven.

The cooking time varies according to the size of the soufflé, but for the quantities given below should be 14 to 16 minutes.

Once cooked and glazed the soufflé must be served without delay.

Cream-based mixtures. APPAREILS À LA CRÈME –

Mixture A. Bring 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) milk to the boil with 40 g. ( $1\frac{1}{2}$  oz., 3 tablespoons) sugar and a pinch of salt. Add 25 g. (1 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) sifted flour blended with a little cold milk. Flavour as required. Cook, stirring, for 2 to 3 minutes. Remove from the heat and add 2 egg yolks, 10 g. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  oz., 1 tablespoon) butter and 3 stiffly beaten egg whites.

Mix quickly and fill a buttered and sugared soufflé dish. Smooth the surface of the soufflé. Cook in a moderate oven. Two minutes before serving sprinkle with sugar to glaze.

Mixture B. Proceed in the same way as for Mixture A, replacing the flour with a teaspoon of potato starch.

Mixture C. Mix 65 g. ( $2\frac{1}{2}$  oz.,  $\frac{2}{3}$  cup) flour, 65 g. ( $2\frac{1}{2}$  oz.,  $\frac{1}{3}$  cup) fine sugar, a pinch of salt, 1 whole egg and 1 egg yolk in a saucepan.

Stir in  $2\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, generous cup) boiling milk and cook, stirring well to keep the mixture from sticking to the bottom. Flavour as required.

Remove from the heat and add 25 g. (1 oz., 2 tablespoons) butter, 1 egg yolk, and 3 stiffly beaten egg whites. Finish as above.

Mixture D. Place 25 g. (1 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) sifted flour, 40 g. ( $1\frac{1}{2}$  oz., 3 tablespoons) sugar and a pinch of salt in a saucepan. Mix smoothly with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) cold milk, add flavouring and cook for a few minutes over moderate heat, stirring all the time.

Remove from the heat and add 3 egg yolks, 10 g. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  oz., 1 tablespoon) butter, and fold in 3 stiffly beaten egg whites.

Finish as above.

Mixture E. Blend  $1\frac{1}{2}$  teaspoons arrowroot with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) cold milk in a saucepan. Add 40 g. ( $1\frac{1}{2}$  oz., 3 tablespoons) sugar and a pinch of salt. Bring to boiling point and cook for a moment, stirring all the time.

Add, away from the heat, 2 egg yolks and 2 stiffly beaten egg whites. Finish as above.

This mixture is used in invalid cookery.

Mixture F. Put 40 g. ( $1\frac{1}{2}$  oz., 3 tablespoons) sugar, 3 egg yolks and a pinch of salt into a small saucepan. Beat well with a spatula.

Stir in 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) boiling milk. Stir over the heat until the first bubbles begin to appear. Remove from the heat and add 2 or 3 stiffly beaten egg whites. Finish as above.

This recipe is also used in invalid cookery.

Flavouring soufflés. The flavour is added to the basic mixture during or after cooking. Vanilla pods and lemon, orange and mandarin peel are added during cooking. Liquors are added away from the heat before incorporating egg whites.

Chopped candied fruits are also added just before folding in the egg whites.

Fruit-based mixtures. APPAREILS À PURÉE DE FRUITS – Add

250 g. (9 oz., scant  $1\frac{1}{4}$  cups) sugar, cooked to small crack degree (see SUGAR) to 200 g. (7 oz., scant cup) fruit purée. Boil for a moment. Pour the mixture onto 5 or 6 stiffly beaten egg whites, and mix quickly.

Turn into a buttered soufflé dish sprinkled with sugar. Cook in the same way as described in the preceding recipes.

Although soufflés of fresh fruit are made with this mixture, they may also be made with a cream-based mixture. A very thick fruit purée is added before incorporating the egg whites.

Almond soufflé. SOUFFLÉ AUX AMANDES – Fill a soufflé dish with a cream-based mixture in which Almond milk (see ALMOND) has been used instead of ordinary milk, and to which 2 or 3 tablespoons chopped roasted almonds, have been added. Cook in the usual way. Sprinkle with chopped almonds.

Fresh almond soufflé. SOUFFLÉ AUX AMANDES FRAÎCHES – As above, replacing the roasted almonds with fresh, blanched almonds.

Ambassadrice soufflé. SOUFFLÉ AMBASSADRICE – Cream-based soufflé well flavoured with vanilla, with the addition of 2 crumbled macaroons and 2 to 3 tablespoons fresh, blanched almonds flavoured with rum.

Apple soufflé. SOUFFLÉ AUX POMMES – Proceed as for Apricot soufflé (see below) using stewed apples or apple jam.

Russian apple soufflé. SOUFFLÉ AUX POMMES À LA Russe – Add some thick apple purée to the stiffly beaten egg whites (two-thirds apple purée and one-third egg white).

Fill a soufflé dish with the mixture and cook in the usual way.

Apricot soufflé I. SOUFFLÉ AUX ABRICOTS – Fill a buttered soufflé dish, sprinkled with sugar, with a cream-based mixture flavoured with kirsch, and with the addition of pieces of apricot cooked in syrup, well drained then soaked in kirsch.

Apricot soufflé II. SOUFFLÉ AUX ABRICOTS – Proceed as above, using one of the cream-based mixtures with the addition of a very thick apricot purée flavoured with kirsch.

Apricot soufflé III. SOUFFLÉ AUX ABRICOTS – Fill the soufflé dish with apricot purée, made as described in the recipe for fruit-based mixtures and flavoured with kirsch.

In all the above recipes for apricot soufflé, a salpicon of candied apricots, soaked in kirsch or some other liqueur, should be added.

Alternatively, as the dish is filled, spoonfuls of very thick apricot jam may be added to the soufflé mixture.

Cherry soufflé I. SOUFFLÉ AUX CERISES – Cream-based soufflé mixture flavoured with kirsch or cherry brandy, mixed with stoned cherries cooked in their own juice with sugar.

Cherry soufflé II. SOUFFLÉ AUX CERISES – Cream-based soufflé mixture made with cherry pulp according to the recipe for fruit-based soufflé mixture.

Chestnut soufflé – See Mont-Bry soufflé.

Chocolate soufflé. SOUFFLÉ AU CHOCOLAT – Cream-based soufflé mixture to which 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) grated chocolate, melted over a very low heat or dissolved in a little milk has been added. Powdered cocoa may be used instead of grated chocolate.

Cocoa soufflé – See Chocolate soufflé.

Coffee soufflé. SOUFFLÉ AU CAFÉ – Cream-based soufflé mixture with the addition of 4 or 5 tablespoons of coffee essence.

Curaçao soufflé. SOUFFLÉ AU CURAÇAO – Cream-based soufflé mixture flavoured with orange peel and a small glass of Curaçao.

Hazelnut soufflé. SOUFFLÉ AUX AVELINES – Cream-based mixture to which 2 to 4 tablespoons hazelnut praline have been added.

Soufflés made with almonds, hazelnuts, walnuts and pistachio nuts are usually made without any flavouring. A little vanilla or a liqueur, preferably rum or kirsch, may, however, be added.

Lemon soufflé. SOUFFLÉ AU CITRON – Cream-based soufflé mixture flavoured with finely chopped lemon peel.

Liqueur-flavoured soufflé. SOUFFLÉ AUX LIQUEURS – Proceed, using the required liqueur, as for Curaçao soufflé.

To all liqueur-flavoured soufflés, in addition to the liqueur used in the basic mixture, sponge finger biscuits, cut into small squares and soaked in the same liqueur, may be added.

Mont-Bry soufflé. SOUFFLÉ MONT-BRY – Cream-based soufflé mixture mixed with one-third of its volume of chestnuts cooked in syrup and strongly flavoured with vanilla. Garnish with marrons glacés soaked in kirsch.

Orange or mandarin soufflé. SOUFFLÉ À L'ORANGE, À LA MANDARINE – Cream-based soufflé mixture flavoured with the finely chopped peel of orange or mandarins.

Palmyra soufflé. SOUFFLÉ PALMYRE – Cream-based soufflé mixture well flavoured with vanilla, mixed with small pieces of sponge finger biscuits soaked in kirsch and anisette.

Peach soufflé. SOUFFLÉ AUX PÊCHES – Use one of the recipes given for Apricot soufflé, substituting peaches.

Pear soufflé. SOUFFLÉ AUX POIRES – Use one of the recipes for Apricot soufflé, replacing the apricots with pears cooked in sugar and their own juice without any added liquid.

Praline soufflé. SOUFFLÉ PRALINE – Cream-based soufflé mixture flavoured with vanilla, with 2 to 3 tablespoons of praline added.

When making this soufflé the praline may be put into the milk used to make the cream-based mixture.

Rothschild soufflé I. SOUFFLÉ ROTHSCCHILD – Cream-based soufflé mixture to which 2 to 3 tablespoons of salpicon of candied fruits soaked in brandy have been added.

When the soufflé is almost cooked, decorate with crystallised cherries.

Rothschild soufflé II. SOUFFLÉ ROTHSCCHILD – Cream-based soufflé mixture to which 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) of salpicon of candied fruits, soaked in Danziger goldwasser, have been added.

When the soufflé is almost cooked, decorate with large strawberries.

Strawberry soufflé I. SOUFFLÉ AUX FRAISES – Cream-based soufflé mixture mixed with wild strawberries or ordinary large strawberries sprinkled with sugar.

Strawberry soufflé II. SOUFFLÉ AUX FRAISES – Cream-based soufflé mixture mixed with a very thick strawberry pulp.

Strawberry soufflé III. SOUFFLÉ AUX FRAISES – Strawberry pulp prepared as a fruit-based soufflé mixture.

Tea soufflé. SOUFFLÉ AU THÉ – Cream-based soufflé mixture prepared with milk in which tea has been infused.

Vanilla soufflé. SOUFFLÉ À LA VANILLE – Cream-based soufflé mixture flavoured with vanilla.

Violet soufflé. SOUFFLÉ AUX VIOLETTES – Cream-based soufflé mixture flavoured with a few drops of essence of violets and with candied violets added.

In the same way soufflés may be made with other candied flowers such as roses and orange flower petals.

Walnut soufflé. – SOUFFLÉ AUX NOIX – Cream-based soufflé mixture mixed with lightly toasted and chopped walnuts and flavoured with walnut juice. This soufflé can be made with fresh walnuts.

SOUPE – The French word soupe was once used to describe various ingredients put into a bouillon or broth, whether made with fish or meat. Thus, for example, the croûtons of bread or the meat in the broth were soupes.

Nowadays in France the word soupe, as distinct from the more frequently used potage, is used to designate a peasant-style soup, of which the principal examples are cabbage soup, garbure and various thick vegetable soups, usually garnished with bread.

Coffee soufflé (Robert Carrier)

SOUPS AND BROTHS. POTAGES, SOUPES – In the seventeenth century the word potage did not have the same meaning as it has today. In those days the name was given to big dishes of meat or fish boiled with vegetables:

‘Cependant on apporte un potage:

Un coq y paraissait en pompeux equipage’.

‘A potage is, however, brought in:

A cock is seen in it, in state.’

(Boileau, Satire III).

The old potage à la jambe de bois is a good example of such a dish.

The soup is now what Grimod de la Reynière described so well when he said: ‘It is to a dinner what a portico or a peristyle is to a building; that is to say, it is not only the first part of it, but it must be devised in such a manner as to set the tone of the whole banquet, in the same way as the overture of an opera announces the subject of the work’.

In other words, the soup must be in harmony with the whole menu.

At a family gathering, or at an intimate dinner, soup is served in a soup tureen placed on the table, and the master or the lady of the house serves it to the guests.

At ceremonial dinners, especially of the kind where the menu includes two soups – a clear and a thick – this service is performed at a table placed not far from the dining table and the servants pass the plates to the guests. Whatever manner is adopted, soup must be served piping hot, in very hot plates.

Soups are based on meat stocks or made with water, with bread added to them, supplemented by vegetables, quenelles, chiffonades, pasta products, cereal starches and various other garnishings. (See GARNISHES.)

Depending on their consistency, soups can be classified into two big categories: clear soups and thick soups.

A clear soup is a consommé with various light garnishes added. The garnishings must be of the kind that go with the consommé: meat stock clarified and at the same time strengthened with lean chopped beef, diced aromatic vegetables and egg whites.

There are several kinds of thick soups. The liaison, or thickening, is obtained either naturally by the dissolving of the farinaceous contents of the ingredients used, or by an addition of roux or some other element such as cooked rice, bread boiled to pulp, purée of a starchy vegetable, etc. A number of thick soups are bound with a liaison of egg yolks and cream just before serving.

In this section thick soups are classified under three sub-headings: cream, purées and velouté.

Purée soups are either purées of feculent vegetables or leguminous plants, when the liaison is achieved naturally by the starch constituents of these vegetables, or purées of shellfish (bisques), fish, meat and vegetables, the liaison of which is obtained by the addition of a supplementary element.

In the cream soups (shellfish, fish, meat and vegetable) the liaison is obtained by the addition of a certain quantity of Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE).

In velouté (whether shellfish, fish, meat or vegetable) the liaison is obtained by the addition of Velouté sauce (see SAUCE) and the final binding with yolks and cream.

The following should also be mentioned:

1. Thickened consommés. Ordinary or double consommés based on meat, fish or vegetable stock, to which egg yolks and fresh cream are added at the last moment.

2. Compound or mixed thick soups. Made by mixing, in well-defined proportions, different kinds of soups which do not clash in flavour. These can be thickened with egg yolks and fresh cream.

3. Special flour of various cereals, oatmeal, corn (maize), barley, rice, etc., diluted with meat or vegetable stock, which are sometimes called bouillies, can also be put in the category of thick soups. These soups can also be bound with egg yolks and cream. They are mainly given to children.

Following the section on thick velouté soups, there is a section dealing with special and velouté soups, another on classical and regional soups, and one on international soups and broths.

CLEAR SOUPS. POTAGES CLAIRS –

Simple white consommé or grande marmite – Ordinary meat stock made in a big stockpot is called simple white consommé or bouillon. We specify the big stockpot, grande marmite, to differentiate it from a soup called petit marmite, the recipe for which is given elsewhere in this book.

This simple consommé serves as a basis for all clear soups. If it is prepared with all the usual nutritive and aromatic ingredients, it should be very savoury.

The following cuts of meat are best for consommé: Round of beef and silverside, these cuts make a savoury stock, but give rather dry boiled beef if it is to be eaten separately.

Leg of beef (comprising the whole of the upper tibial part, sold in transversal sections), shin, which also makes good stock.

Shoulder of beef, shoulder blade, neck and ox-cheek furnish cuts which also produce good stock. Boned ox-cheek makes quite good stock.

Various sub-divisions of the shoulder: clod, chuck end, the gemellus muscle (situated in front of the shoulder blade) – all of which are cuts of the second category – produce good stock. To these various cuts butchers usually add, as ‘make-weight’, pieces of knuckle, leg, and other bony and gristly parts.

Rib of beef, which makes excellent stock, is subdivided into fore-ribs (five ribs situated in the shoulder part), and middle-rib, (four ribs from the eighth to the eleventh rib); and chuck end of the clod (three ribs).

The top of sirloin, and the flank which with the lower end of the breast (gristle, middle and thick end) constitute the pis de boeuf.

In addition to the basic cuts of meat mentioned above, it is a good idea to add chicken bones and giblets (previously browned in the oven) to the stockpot, as this improves the stock.

Marrow bones (broken into chunks and each wrapped in a piece of muslin) can also be added. The cooked marrow can be extracted and spread on bread or toast.

Potage à la jambe de bois

Ingredients. For 5 litres (4½ quarts, 5½ quarts) consommé:
Nourishing ingredients. 2 kg. (4½ lb.) lean beef, 1½ kg. (3¼ lb.) beef knuckle (with bone).

Aromatic ingredients. 3 or 4 big carrots, 2 or 3 turnips, 1 parsnip, 3 to 4 leeks tied in a bundle, 2 stalks of celery, one medium-sized onion with one or two cloves stuck in it, one clove of garlic, a sprig of thyme and a quarter of a bay leaf (optional).

Method I. Tie the meat with string and put it into a big stockpot. Add 7 litres (6 quarts, 7½ quarts) cold water.

Bring to the boil. When boiling is established a layer of slightly coagulated albumen forms on the surface. Remove this carefully, i.e. skim the stockpot clean. Season with 35 g. (1½ oz., 2 tablespoons) coarse salt.

Put all the vegetables into the stockpot. Simmer very slowly, so that the boiling is hardly perceptible, for 5 hours. Remove surplus fat carefully and strain the stock through a cloth, or through a very fine strainer.

Stock should not go on cooking for longer than 5 hours.

Method II. Put the bones, broken into small pieces, into the stockpot and cover with cold water. Bring to the boil, skim, add salt and simmer slowly for 2½ hours. Bring to the boil and put in the meat, boned and tied with string. Bring to the boil again, skim and season. Add the vegetables. Simmer slowly for about 4 hours.

Do not put in all the salt at the beginning; complete the seasoning at the end of the cooking, if necessary.

To serve or use stock. Skim off fat and strain the stock. Use it for making soup, add it to sliced bread, various pasta products and other garnishings, as indicated in the recipe.

Use the meat and the vegetables as described in the recipe for Boiled beef with root vegetables (see BEEF).

Clarified consommé or consommé riche. CONSOMMÉ CLARIFIÉ OU CONSOMMÉ RICHE – Ingredients. For 2 litres (3½ pints, 4½ pints) consommé:

Nourishing ingredients. 750 g. (1½ lb.) chopped lean beef, with all sinews and gristle removed.

Aromatic ingredients. 1 large carrot, 100 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) white part of leeks.

Clarifying element. 1 raw egg white.

Liquid. 3 litres (5¼ pints, 6½ pints) simple stock.

Method. Put the chopped meat, diced vegetables and egg white into a saucepan. Mix and add cold or warm stock. Bring to the boil, stirring constantly with a wooden spoon or with a whisk. When boiling is established, draw the saucepan to the edge of the burner and simmer very slowly for 1½ hours.

Remove surplus fat and strain the consommé.

Simple chicken consommé. CONSOMMÉ SIMPLE DE VOLAILLE – Proceed as described in the recipe for Simple white consommé, adding to the nourishing ingredients indicated a small chicken, previously browned in the oven, or an equivalent quantity of chicken giblets and carcasses.

Clarified chicken consommé. CONSOMMÉ DE VOLAILLE CLARIFIÉ – Proceed, using the same ingredients, as described in the recipe for Clarified consommé, adding to the beef 3 sets chopped chicken giblets. It is also recommended to add a small chicken, previously browned in the oven, and the bones of a roast chicken, if available. The addition of chicken is almost essential to give the consommé the desired flavour. The chicken can later be made up into various dishes.

Simple fish consommé. CONSOMMÉ SIMPLE DE POISSON –

Ingredients. For 5 litres (4½ quarts, 5½ quarts) consommé:

Nourishing ingredients. 1½ kg. (3¼ lb.) pike or other fish, 600 g. (1 lb. 6 oz.) bones of sole or other fish, 1 kg. (2¼ lb.) turbot or other fish head.

Aromatic ingredients. 300 g. (11 oz., 2½ cups) chopped onions, 2 to 3 leeks, a handful of parsley, 25 g. (1 oz., ½ cup) chopped celery, a pinch of thyme, one bay leaf.

Seasoning. 40 g. (1½ oz., 2 tablespoons) coarse salt.

Liquid. 5 litres (4½ quarts, 5½ quarts) water, 6 dl. (1 pint, 2½ cups) white wine.

Method. Proceed as described in the recipe for Simple white consommé. Add onions cut in slices and finely sliced leeks. Boil slowly for 45 minutes. Strain the stock and use as indicated in the recipe.

Clarified fish consommé. CONSOMMÉ DE POISSON CLARIFIÉ – For 2 litres (3½ pints, 4½ pints):

Nourishing ingredients. 750 g. (1½ lb.) of the flesh of pike or whiting (net weight, without bones or skin).

Aromatic ingredients. 75 g. (3 oz., ¾ cup) chopped leeks, several sprigs parsley.

Clarifying element: 2 egg whites.

Liquid: 2½ litres (4½ pints, 5½ pints) fish stock.

Method. Proceed as described in the recipe for Clarified beef consommé. Simmer very slowly for 30 minutes. Strain the consommé and use as indicated in the recipe.

Simple game consommé. CONSOMMÉ SIMPLE DE GIBIER – Game which is too old to be cooked in any other way is used for this consommé.

Ingredients. For 5 litres (4½ quarts, 5½ quarts) consommé:

Nourishing ingredients. 2 kg. (4½ lb.) shoulder and neck of venison, 1 kg. (2¼ lb.) forequarter of hare, or an equivalent quantity of rabbit, one old pheasant, one old partridge.

Aromatic ingredients. 2 to 3 carrots, 300 g. (11 oz., 2½ cups) chopped onions, 3 leeks, 150 g. (5 oz., 1¼ cups) chopped celery, several sprigs parsley, 2 cloves of garlic, 2 sprigs of thyme, one bay leaf, 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) juniper berries, 3 cloves.

Seasoning. 40 g. (1½ oz., 2 tablespoons) coarse salt.

Liquid: 6 litres (5½ quarts, 6½ quarts) cold water.

Method. Brown all the game in the oven and put in the stockpot. Add cold water and bring to the boil.

Skim, season, and add the vegetables, lightly browned in the fat rendered by the game. Add a bouquet garni, the juniper berries, and the cloves in a herb bag.

Draw the stockpot to the edge of the stove and simmer slowly for 3½ hours. Remove surplus fat and strain the stock. Use as indicated in the recipe.

The game which is served for making this consommé can be used for preparing patties, croquettes, hashes, etc., as well as for purée and salpicon.

Petite marmite – For 6 persons:

Nourishing ingredients. 400 g. (14 oz.) top of rump, 200 g. (7 oz.) rib of beef, 100 g. (4 oz.) marrow bone, 2 sets chicken giblets.

Aromatic ingredients. 2 to 3 small carrots, 1 small turnip, 2 to 3 leeks (white part only, cut in chunks), 2 small onions, quarter of a head of celery, quarter of a small head of cabbage.

Liquid. 2½ litres (4½ pints, 5½ pints), cold simple consommé.

Method. Put the meat, the marrow bone (wrapped in a piece of muslin) and the cold consommé into a pan. Bring to the boil and skim.

Add carrots and turnips, cut down to a uniform size and shape (blanching the vegetables, if they are old); leeks, cut in chunks and blanched; small onions lightly cooked on the stove; celery, blanched and cut into small pieces; cabbage, also blanched and rolled into a tight ball. Simmer very gently for 4 hours, adding a little stock from time to time to make up for the loss of liquid by evaporation.

One hour before serving, add the chicken giblets and continue cooking.

Remove surplus fat, but bear in mind that petite marmite should have a few light circlets of fat on the surface. Remove the marrow bone, unwrap and put it back into the pan.

Serve with bread, sliced and dried in the oven, or rusks.

SOUPS AND BROTHS

The chicken giblets can be browned in the oven before being put in the stock.

The cabbage, instead of being cooked in the pan, can be cooked separately in fat stock, and added to the consommé just before serving.

Petite marmite with chicken. PETITE MARMITE AVEC VOLAILLE – Proceed as described in the above recipe.

Add a small chicken, previously browned in the oven.

Serve in the same way as ordinary Petite marmite.

Pot-au-feu – Family soup, prepared in earthenware, cast-iron or aluminium utensils in the same way as Petite marmite.

This preparation provides two dishes: the soup – which should have toasted bread, pasta products, rice and, in general, all garnishings suitable for clear soups, added to it – and meat and vegetables. Gherkins, samphire pickled in vinegar, coarse salt and mustard are served with the boiled beef, tomato sauce, grated horseradish or horseradish sauce can also be served with it (see SAUCE).

The classical pot-au-feu is made of beef and chicken. In certain regions of France it is customary to add veal, pork and sometimes mutton. The chicken is occasionally replaced by duck or turkey.

Whatever meat is used for this dish, the method is the same. It is important only to make sure that the various meats are given long enough time to cook.

Pot-au-feu à l'albigeoise – Prepare the pot-au-feu as described in the recipe for Petite marmite, but using the following nourishing ingredients: silverside, veal knuckle, salted pork knuckle. When all the ingredients are nearly cooked, add a dry Country sausage (see PORK) and, a few minutes before serving the soup, a quarter of Confit d'oie (see GOOSE).

This pot-au-feu should have plenty of vegetables, particularly cabbage. Serve as described in the basic recipe for Pot-au-feu.

Pot-au-feu à la béarnaise, called Poule-au-pot – Prepare the pot-au-feu as described in the preceding recipe, adding a chicken stuffed with a forcemeat made of fresh pork and chopped Bayonne ham, mixed with chopped onion, garlic, parsley and chicken liver.

Serve as described in the basic recipe for Pot-au-feu.

Pot-au-feu à la languedocienne – Prepare like the basic Pot-au-feu, adding a piece of fat bacon previously blanched and rinsed in cold water.

Serve as indicated in the basic recipe for Pot-au-feu.

CONSOMMÉS WITH GARNISHES. CONSOMMÉS GARNIS – The recipes which follow have been worked out for 5 persons and are based on various kinds of consommés: beef, chicken, game, fish. The quantity of consommé required is 1½ litres (2½ pints, 3½ pints).

Directions for the supplementary ingredients of these consommés will be found under the heading GARNISHES.

In some of these recipes the consommé has to be thickened with arrowroot, starch or tapioca. This liaison should be very light, just sufficient to give the consommé a mellow texture.

Consommé à l'alsacienne – To simple consommé add sauerkraut cooked in stock and Strasbourg sausages (see SAUSAGES), poached, skinned and cut into slices.

Consommé à l'ambassadrice – Chicken consommé thickened with tapioca, garnished with 24 small, truffled chicken quenelles and 12 small profiteroles filled with a purée of Foie gras and chervil leaves.

All garnished consommés, thickened with arrowroot or tapioca, should be strained through a muslin cloth immediately after the liaison has been effected.

Consommé à l'américaine I – Proceed as described in the recipe for Consommé à la madrilène II. Serve cold in cups.

Consommé à l'américaine II – Chicken consommé thickened with arrowroot, garnished with gombos (okra or ladies' fingers) blanched in salted water then drained and cooked in stock, together with diced tomatoes cooked in stock, and chervil leaves.

Consommé à l'amiral – Fish consommé thickened with arrowroot. Garnish with 24 small quenelles made of Pike forcemeat (see FORCEMEAT) flavoured with crayfish butter, 6 oysters poached, de-bearded and cut in half, and 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) julienne of truffles cooked in Madeira. Sprinkle with chervil leaves.

Consommé à l'ancienne – See Consommé croûte au pot à l'ancienne.

Consommé à la basquaise – Simple consommé garnished with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) julienne of sweet pimentos cooked in stock, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) diced tomatoes cooked in stock, and 4 tablespoons (½ cup) rice cooked in stock. Sprinkle with chervil leaves.

Consommé Beauharnais – Chicken consommé thickened with arrowroot, garnished with paupiettes of lettuce, poached in stock and cut into slices, asparagus tips and a julienne of truffles. Sprinkle with chervil leaves.

Consommé with birds' nests. CONSOMMÉ AUX NIDS D'HIRONDELLES – Prepare a strong chicken consommé, clarify and strain through muslin.

Soak swallows' nests in cold water for 2 hours. When they swell and become transparent, clean them carefully, i.e. remove bits of egg shell and other foreign matter which they may contain, even though they have already been cleaned before being sold. Blanch these nests for 5 or 6 minutes and drain.

Put the nests into boiling consommé. Poach, keeping them on a gentle but sustained boil, for 45 minutes. Serve boiling hot. This soup is always served in cups.

Consommé Bizet – Chicken consommé thickened with tapioca, garnished with very small Chicken quenelles (see QUENELLES) mixed with chopped tarragon leaves. Sprinkle with chervil leaves.

Serve with very small profiteroles filled with a brunoise of vegetables.

Consommé à la bourgeoise – Simple consommé garnished with diced carrots and turnips, diced potatoes boiled in stock, and chervil leaves.

Consommé Brancas – Simple consommé garnished with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) chiffonade of lettuce and sorrel, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) vermicelli poached in stock, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) julienne of mushrooms fried in butter, and chervil leaves.

Consommé with bread. CONSOMMÉ AU PAIN – Serve boiling consommé with a plate of long French bread, thinly sliced and dried in the oven, and grated cheese.

Consommé Brillat-Savarin – Chicken consommé, thickened with tapioca, garnished with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) julienne of breast of chicken, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) savoury pancakes (crêpes) cut into lozenges, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) chiffonade of lettuce, sorrel and chervil leaves.

Consommé brunoise – Cut into small dice 3 small carrots, 1 small turnip, 2 to 3 leeks (white part only), 25 g. (1 oz., ½ cup) chopped onion and 50 g. (2 oz., ½ cup) of the white part of celery.

Season with salt and a pinch of sugar. Cook gently in 50 g. (2 oz., ½ cup) butter in a covered pan for 25 minutes. Moisten with 3 dl. (½ pint, 1¼ cups) consommé and cook for an hour. 25 minutes before serving, add a tablespoon fresh garden peas and a tablespoon diced French beans. Add 1½ litres (2½ pints, 2½ pints) consommé. Boil for a few minutes, skim and sprinkle with chervil leaves.

Fresh garden peas and French beans can be replaced by the tinned (canned) variety, in which case they are added only at the last moment, just before serving.

Consommé brunoise with various garnishes – Prepare the soup as described above. Add garnish, such as pasta products, tapioca, pearl barley, rice, semolina, etc., which can either be cooked in the consommé itself, or separately.

Consommé brunoise can also be served with very small poached eggs, quenelles, profiteroles, and plain royale (savoury custard, cut into slices and then into fancy shapes) or a royale of vegetables. (See GARNISHES.)

Consommé à la cancalaise – Fish consommé thickened with arrowroot, garnished with 24 small Pike quenelles (see QUENELLES), 12 oysters, poached, de-bearded and cut in half, and chervil leaves.

Consommé Célestine – Chicken consommé thickened with tapioca, garnished with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) small slices of rolled pancakes stuffed with Chicken forcemeat (see FORCEMEAT), and chervil leaves.

Consommé chasseur – Game consommé, thickened with tapioca, garnished with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) julienne of mushrooms cooked in  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (3 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) Madeira wine, and chervil leaves. Serve with 20 small profiteroles filled with game purée.

Consommé aux cheuveux d'ange – Basic consommé garnished with 4 tablespoons ( $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) fine, poached vermicelli.

Consommé with chicken gIBLETS. CONSOMMÉ AUX ABATIS DE VOLAILLE – Prepare a pot-au-feu and put into it 4 chicken pinions (wing tips) and 2 necks, cut into 3 or 4 pieces and tied in a piece of muslin.

Serve the consommé with the pinions and the pot-au-feu vegetables cut into small pieces.

Consommé with stuffed chicken gIBLETS. CONSOMMÉ AUX ABATIS DE VOLAILLE FARCIS – Prepare chicken consommé and poach in it 4 chicken pinions, boned and stuffed with Quenelle forcemeat (see FORCEMEAT).

Strain the consommé and add the gIBLETS. This consommé is prepared using a full set of gIBLETS, consisting of 2 pinions, neck (with a part of the head left attached), the skinned gizzard and 2 feet.

Often, however, it is made only with pinions. This consommé is frequently served under the name of Consommé with chicken pinions.

Consommé with chicken pinions (wing tips). CONSOMMÉ AUX AILERONS – Using chicken pinions, proceed as described in the recipe for Consommé with chicken gIBLETS.

The consommé can also be made of turkey and duck pinions.

Consommé with chicken pinions (wing tips) and rice. CONSOMMÉ AUX AILERONS AU RIZ – Prepare the consommé as described in the recipe for Consommé with chicken gIBLETS. Add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) rice, blanched and cooked in stock.

Consommé à la chilienne – Chicken consommé garnished with rice cooked in stock and a salpicon of green pimentos, also cooked in stock, sprinkled with chervil leaves. Serve diablotins at the same time.

Consommé à la Colbert – Chicken consommé garnished with a brunoise of spring vegetables, 4 small poached eggs, and chervil leaves.

Consommé Colnet – Chicken consommé garnished with a brunoise of carrots and celery, lightly cooked in butter, oeufs filés (beaten egg, strained into the consommé through a fine strainer, to look like threads – see GARNISHES, Spun eggs), and chervil leaves.

Consommé Commodore – Fish consommé thickened with arrowroot, garnished with poached, de-bearded clams cut in small pieces, and diced tomatoes cooked in stock.

Consommé à la Crécy – Chicken consommé thickened with tapioca, garnished with a brunoise of carrots lightly cooked in butter, and chervil leaves.

Consommé with garden cress. CONSOMMÉ AU CRESSON ALÉNOIS – Pick the leaves off the stalks of garden cress, blanch them for a minute in salted water, drain and rinse in cold water. Add to 1 litre (scant quart, generous quart) boiling consommé.

Consommé croûte au pot – Pot-au-feu consommé garnished with the stockpot vegetables (carrots, turnips, leeks and cabbage) cut in small pieces.

Serve with hollowed-out crusts of bread dried in the oven, or sprinkled with stockpot fat and browned lightly.

Consommé croûte au pot à l'ancienne – As above. Serve with hollowed-out crusts of bread filled with chopped stockpot vegetables and browned in the oven or under a grill.

Consommé Dalayrac – Chicken consommé thickened with tapioca, garnished with a julienne of breast of chicken, mushrooms and truffles.

Consommé aux diablotins – Chicken consommé thickened with tapioca. Serve with slices of bread covered with cheese and browned as described in the recipe for diablotins.

Consommé à l'écoissaise – Pearl barley cooked in consommé, garnished with a julienne of carrot, celery and leek, lightly cooked in butter, and chervil leaves.

Consommé Edward VII – Chicken consommé thickened with arrowroot, garnished with a royale of truffles, thin slices of cold Chicken loaf (see CHICKEN) and asparagus tips. Add a few tablespoons of port to the consommé.

Consommé à la flip – Chicken consommé thickened with tapioca, garnished with a julienne of lettuce and leeks, lightly cooked in butter and dropped into the consommé. Add cooked ham cut in julienne strips, and chervil leaves.

Consommé Florence – Basic consommé garnished with vermicelli cooked in stock. Add to the boiling consommé à julienne of uncooked truffles. Cover the saucepan and simmer without allowing it to boil.

Consommé à la florentine – Chicken consommé with œufs filés (see GARNISHES, Spun eggs), 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) rice cooked in stock, and chervil leaves.

Consommé Florette – Chicken consommé thickened with tapioca, garnished with a julienne of leek, lightly cooked in butter, and rice cooked in stock. Serve with thick fresh cream and grated Parmesan cheese.

Consommé à la gauloise – Chicken consommé thickened with tapioca, garnished with very small, poached cocks' combs, small cocks' kidneys, pancakes cut in julienne strips, and chervil leaves.

Consommé with gombos (okra or ladies' fingers) à l'orientale. CONSOMMÉ AUX GOMBOS À L'ORIENTALE – Fennel-flavoured chicken consommé thickened with rice or potato flour, garnished with gombos (okra), blanched, drained, and cooked in stock; and with rice cooked in stock and spiced with a pinch of cayenne pepper.

Consommé Grimaldi – Chicken consommé with tomato juice, garnished with a julienne of celeriac cooked in stock, tomato royale and chervil leaves.

Consommé à la hollandaise – Consommé seasoned with paprika, garnished with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) small quenelles of calf's liver, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) diced bone marrow poached in stock, and chervil leaves.

Consommé houblonnière – Consommé thickened with rice or potato flour, garnished with hop shoots cooked in stock, and chervil leaves.

Consommé Hudson – Fish consommé with tomato juice, thickened with arrowroot, garnished with crab flesh cut into small pieces, diced cucumbers cooked in stock, and chervil leaves.

Consommé à l'impériale – Proceed as described in the recipe for Consommé à la gauloise, replacing the savoury pancakes by rice cooked in stock and adding some fresh garden peas, cooked in water and drained.

Consommé à l'infante – Chicken consommé thickened with arrowroot. Serve with 24 small profiteroles filled with a purée of foie gras mixed with thick chicken Velouté (see SAUCE).

Consommé à l'irlandaise – Simple consommé with a salpicon of mutton cooked in the consommé, pearl barley, diced stockpot vegetables, and chervil leaves.

Consommé à l'italienne – Chicken consommé garnished with three kinds of Royale (see GARNISHES), cut into dice or slices: royale of chicken purée, royale of asparagus tips and royale of tomato purée. Sprinkle with chervil leaves.

Consommé julienne – Cut 3 small carrots, 1 small turnip, 2 leeks (white part only), 40 g. (1½ oz., ½ cup) chopped onion and 40 g. (1½ oz., ½ cup) tender celery into very thin sticks 2–5 cm. (1 inch) long.

Season with a pinch of salt and another of sugar. Soften in a pan in 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter on slow heat for 25 minutes.

Add 50 g. (2 oz., ¾ cup) cabbage heart cut into julienne strips, blanched and drained, and a shredded lettuce.

Cook everything together, with the lid on, for 45 minutes. Moisten with 3 dl. (½ pint, 1¼ cups) consommé and simmer gently for 35 minutes.

25 minutes before serving, add 25 g. (1 oz., ¾ cup) sorrel shredded into a fine chiffonnade and a tablespoon fresh garden peas.

Add 1¼ litres (2½ pints, 2¾ pints) consommé, boil for a few seconds, skim, add chervil leaves.

Consommé julienne with various garnishes. CONSOMMÉ JULIENNE AVEC GARNITURES DIVERSES – This consommé, based on meat, fish or vegetable stock, can be served with the following garnishes: pasta products, pearl barley, rice, semolina or tapioca.

Quenelles, profiteroles or ordinary royale can also be added to it.

Consommé Léopold – Consommé thickened with semolina. Add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) of a julienne of sorrel lightly cooked in butter, and chervil leaves.

Consommé Leverrier – Chicken consommé thickened with tapioca, garnished with various royales cut out in the shape of stars, and sprinkled with chervil leaves.

Consommé with macaroni. CONSOMMÉ AU MACARONI – Consommé garnished with macaroni cut in very small pieces and three-quarters cooked in salted water, drained, and finished off in the consommé. Serve with grated cheese.

Consommé à la madrilène I – Chicken consommé with 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) concentrated tomato pulp added to it, seasoned with a pinch of cayenne pepper.

This is mostly served very cold in cups.

Consommé à la madrilène II – Prepare the consommé, adding to it during clarification 3 dl. (½ pint, 1¼ cups) raw tomato pulp rubbed through a sieve.

Strain the consommé through a muslin cloth, pressing lightly, and chill before serving.

Diced sweet pimentos, cooked in stock, are often added to consommé madrilène.

Consommé Mercédès – Chicken consommé, with ½ dl. (scant pint, 2¼ cups) sherry and a pinch of cayenne pepper added, garnished with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) cocks' kidneys, skinned and cut in very thin slices, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) cocks' combs, split in two and cut into star shapes, and chervil leaves.

Consommé à la messine – Petite marmite consommé, with very small chipolata sausages, poached and skinned, and small cabbage rolls.

Consommé à la neige de Florence – Serve separately as an accompaniment to boiling consommé, Neige de Florence, which the guests add to the soup themselves.

Neige de Florence, a pasta product which is found in shops, is a substance presented in the shape of extremely fine white flakes.

Consommé Nesselrode – Game consommé with profiteroles filled with Chestnut purée soubise (mixture of onion and chestnut purées – see PURÉE, Végétale purées) and a salpicon of mushrooms.

Consommé Nemrod – Game consommé, thickened with arrowroot, flavoured with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) port, garnished with 4 tablespoons (½ cup) very small quenelles made of game forcemeat mixed with chopped truffles.

Consommé with noodles. CONSOMMÉ AUX NOUILLES – Consommé with 70 to 90 g. (2½ to 3½ oz.) fresh noodles, three-quarters cooked in water, drained and finished off in the consommé. Serve with grated cheese.

Consommé à la d'Orléans – Chicken consommé thickened with tapioca, garnished with 4 tablespoons (½ cup) small quenelles made of three kinds of Chicken forcemeat (see FORCMEAT): one with cream, one with tomato and one with pistachio nuts or spinach. Add a sprinkling of chervil leaves.

Oxtail consommé or soup à la française. CONSOMMÉ OU POTAGE QUEUE DE BOEUF À LA FRANÇAISE – Put 2 kg. (4½ lb.) oxtail, cut into chunks, with 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) veal knuckle into a stockpot. Add 3 litres (5¼ pints, 6½ pints) white stock. Bring to the boil, skim, season, add the usual vegetable garnish and simmer gently, so that boiling is hardly perceptible, for 5 hours.

Strain the stock. Pour it into a pot into which you have put 400 g. (14 oz.) lean beef and veal, chopped, browned in butter, and sprinkled with a tablespoon of arrowroot (cornstarch). Clarify, strain the stock through a muslin cloth or a fine strainer. Add the pieces of oxtail and 250 g. (9 oz.) carrots and turnips, scooped out to look like small, uniform balls and cooked in stock.

This soup used to be called grand hochepot.

Consommé à la parisienne – Chicken consommé with a macédoine of vegetables, slices of plain royale, and chervil leaves.

Consommé with pasta products. CONSOMMÉ AUX PÂTES D'ITALIE – Pour 75 to 90 g. (3 to 3½ oz., scant cup) pasta into 1½ litres (2¾ pints, 3¼ pints) boiling consommé. Cook, keeping up slow but sustained boiling from 8 to 12 minutes, depending on the nature of the pasta.

Serve with grated cheese.

Consommé with pearl barley. CONSOMMÉ À L'ORGE PERLÉ – Consommé with 75 g. (3 oz., ½ cup) pearl barley, washed in warm water, blanched and cooked in white stock for 2½ hours. The barley can be cooked in the consommé.

Consommé Pépita – Chicken consommé with tomato juice, seasoned with paprika, garnished with tomato royale (see GARNISHES, Royale of tomato purée) cut in dice, peeled and diced pimentos cooked in stock, and chervil leaves.

Consommé with plover or lapwing eggs. CONSOMMÉ AUX OEUF DE PLUVIER, DE VANNEAU – Chicken consommé with poached plover or lapwing eggs.

Consommé with poached eggs. CONSOMMÉ AUX OEUF POCHÉS – Consommé garnished with six small poached eggs.

Consommé princesse – Chicken consommé thickened with tapioca, garnished with very small chicken forcemeat quenelles, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) green asparagus tips, and chervil leaves.

Consommé Princess Alice – Chicken consommé thickened with tapioca, garnished with a tablespoon of a julienne of artichoke hearts, a tablespoon of a chiffonnade of lettuce, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) fine vermicelli cooked in stock, and chervil leaves.

Consommé printanier – Consommé with spring vegetables added to it, sprinkled with chervil leaves.

Consommé printanier aux perles or au riz – As above. Reduce the proportion of vegetables and add barley or rice cooked in stock, sprinkle with chervil leaves.

Poached eggs, quenelles, profiteroles, royales, etc., can also be served in consommé printanier.

Consommé with profiteroles. CONSOMMÉ AUX PROFITEROLES – Consommé thickened with tapioca, sprinkled with chervil leaves.

Serve with profiteroles filled with purée.

Consommé with quenelles. CONSOMMÉ AUX QUENELLES – Clear or thickened consommé garnished with chicken or other quenelles, and sprinkled with chervil leaves.

Consommé Rachel – Chicken consommé thickened with tapioca, garnished with very small chicken forcemeat quenelles, small lettuce rolls, filled with purée of Chicken sauté à la crème, and chervil leaves.

Consommé with ravioli. CONSOMMÉ AUX RAVIOLI – Thickened or clear consommé with 24 small ravioli, filled according to taste and sprinkled with chervil leaves.

Consommé à la reine – Chicken consommé thickened with tapioca, garnished with plain royale, a julienne of breast of chicken, and chervil leaves.

Consommé à la Reine-Jeanne – Chicken consommé thickened with tapioca, garnished with very small chicken quenelles and chervil leaves.

Serve with profiteroles filled with a chicken purée bound with almond milk.

Consommé with rice. CONSOMMÉ AU RIZ – Consommé to which 60 to 80 g. (2 or 3 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  to  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) rice, cooked in white stock, is added. Serve with grated cheese.

Consommé à la royale – Chicken consommé, thickened with tapioca, garnished with diced royale, and sprinkled with chervil leaves.

Consommé with sago. CONSOMMÉ AU SAGOU – Using sago, proceed as above.

Consommé à la Saint-Hubert – Game consommé thickened with tapioca, garnished with a game purée royale and a julienne of mushrooms cooked in butter with Madeira.

Consommé with salep. CONSOMMÉ AU SALEP – Using salep, proceed as described in the recipe above.

Consommé with semolina. CONSOMMÉ À LA SEMOULE – Pour 75 to 90 g. (3 to 3½ oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) semolina into 1½ litres (2¾ pints, ¾ pints) boiling consommé. Simmer 18 to 20 minutes. Serve with grated cheese.

Consommé à la strasbourgeoise – Consommé flavoured with a light infusion of juniper berries, thickened with rice or potato flour, garnished with 4 tablespoons ( $\frac{1}{3}$  cup) of a julienne of red cabbage cooked in stock and a Strasbourg sausage, poached, skinned and cut in thin slices. Serve with grated horseradish.

Consommé with tapioca. CONSOMMÉ AU TAPIOCA – Pour 80 to 100 g. (3 to 4 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  to  $\frac{2}{3}$  cup) tapioca into 1½ litres (2¾ pints, ¾ pints) boiling consommé. Stir to avoid formation of lumps and cook, keeping up sustained boiling from 15 to 20 minutes. Serve with grated Parmesan cheese.

Consommé with vermicelli. CONSOMMÉ AU VERMICELLE – Pour 75 to 90 g. (3 to 3½ oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) vermicelli into 1½ litres (2¾ pints, ¾ pints) boiling consommé. Cook, keeping up sustained boiling, from 5 to 12 minutes, depending on the thickness of the vermicelli. Serve with grated Parmesan.

COLD CONSOMMÉS. CONSOMMÉS FROIDS – These consommés, intended for luncheons or suppers, are served in cups.

Their preparation is similar to that of hot consommés. They should be strongly flavoured and very clear.

Celery-flavoured consommé. CONSOMMÉ À L'ESSENCE DE CÉLÉRI – Prepare 1½ litres (2¾ pints, ¾ pints) consommé. Clarify and add half a bunch of finely chopped celery. Strain and chill before serving.

Consommé flavoured with game fumet. CONSOMMÉ AU FUMET DE GIBIER – Prepare as described in the recipe for Game consommé.

Tarragon-flavoured consommé. CONSOMMÉ À L'ESSENCE D'ESTRAGON – Add 20 g. (4 tablespoons,  $\frac{1}{3}$  cup) fresh tarragon leaves to consommé before straining. Leave to infuse without boiling. Strain and serve as described above.

Tomato-flavoured consommé – See Consommé à la madrilène.

Truffle-flavoured consommé. CONSOMMÉ À L'ESSENCE DE TRUFFES – Add to clarified consommé 60 g. (2 oz., 2 cups) parings of fresh truffles. Strain, remove surplus fat, and add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) Madeira or port.

Consommé with various wines. CONSOMMÉ AUX VINS DIVERS – Clarify and strain consommé. When it is nearly cold, add various wines, such as Madeira, Marsala, Port, sherry, etc., allowing about 8 to 10 cl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) per litre (scant quart, generous quart) consommé.

THICK SOUPS. POTAGES LIÉS – Cream, purée and velouté soups are classed in this category. Cream soups are composed of a purée of shellfish, vegetables, fish, or poultry, thickened with Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE).

Purées of starchy vegetables or leguminous plants are composed of vegetables rich in starch, such as sweet potatoes, potatoes, etc.; of leguminous plants, such as white or red dried beans, kidney beans, lentils split peas, etc. These ingredients, being sufficiently rich in starch content, require no additional element for the purpose of liaison.

Purées of fresh vegetables, less rich in starch, are thickened with additional elements: cooked rice or a purée of some other vegetable richer in starch content.

Meat, poultry or fish purées are composed of these various ingredients with the addition of supplementary liaison: rice, bread to pulp, purées of leguminous plants or cereals.

Shellfish purée soups, better known as bisques, which are thickened with rice or, according to the old method, with bread reduced to pulp, are also classified in this category.

Veloutés are also composed of a purée, bound with velouté and with a final liaison of egg yolks and cream.

CREAM SOUPS. POTAGES CRÈMES – Soups, the basic element of which includes a certain quantity of béchamel, finished off with fresh cream.

Like all other thickened soups, cream soups can be garnished with pasta products, rice, barley, tapioca, julienne, brunoise, chiffonnade, quenelles, croûtons, etc.

The recipes which follow have been worked out to serve 4 to 6 helpings.

Basic method of preparing cream soups (vegetable). Shred and blanch the vegetable indicated and cook in butter, allowing 60 to 80 g. (2 to 3 oz., 6 tablespoons) butter to 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) vegetable.

Add 8 dl. (1½ pints, 1½ pints) béchamel prepared by diluting a white roux of 35 g. (1½ oz., 3 tablespoons) butter and 45 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) flour, with 8½ dl. (1½ pints, 2 pints) milk. Simmer very gently from 12 to 18 minutes, depending on the nature of the vegetables used. Rub through a sieve. Heat and blend in 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{3}$  pint, scant cup) fresh cream.

Cream of artichoke soup. POTAGE CRÈME D'ARTICHAUTS – Cook eight blanched and sliced artichoke hearts in butter. Add 8 dl. (1½ pints, 1½ pints) béchamel and simmer gently for 12 minutes.

Rub through a sieve. Dilute with 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{3}$  pint, scant cup) white consommé and heat to boiling point. Add seasoning if necessary, and 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{3}$  pint, scant cup) fresh cream and a tablespoon chervil leaves.

Cream of asparagus soup (green). POTAGE CRÈME D'ASPERGES VERTES – As above, using green asparagus tips, blanched and cooked slowly in the béchamel.

Cream of white asparagus, called Argenteuil. POTAGE CRÈME D'ASPERGES BLANCHES, DIT ARGENTEUIL – Using the tips of 1 kg. (2 $\frac{1}{4}$  lb.) white asparagus blanched and simmered in butter in a covered pan, proceed as described in the recipe for Cream of artichoke soup.

Rub through a sieve as soon as the asparagus is put into the béchamel.

Cream of barley soup I. POTAGE CRÈME D'ORGE – Wash 300 g. (11 oz., 1 $\frac{1}{2}$  cups) pearl barley in several waters and soak it for an hour in warm water. Put it into 8 dl. (1 $\frac{1}{3}$  pints, 1 $\frac{3}{4}$  pints) white consommé, add a sliced stalk of celery, bring to the boil and simmer gently for 2 $\frac{1}{2}$  hours.

Rub through a sieve, dilute with a few tablespoons consommé, heat and finish off with 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{3}$  pint, scant cup) fresh cream. Add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) pearl barley cooked in consommé.

The consommé can be replaced by milk.

Cream of barley soup II. POTAGE CRÈME D'ORGE – Using barley flour, proceed as described in the recipe for Cream of oatmeal soup (see below).

Cream of bean soup. POTAGE CRÈME DE HARICOTS VERTS – Like Cream of artichoke soup, replacing the artichokes by 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) French beans, three-quarters blanched.

Cream of celery soup. POTAGE CRÈME DE CÉLERI – Using 2 bunches of blanched and shredded celery, proceed as described in the recipe for Cream of artichoke soup.

Cream of chicken soup. POTAGE CRÈME DE VOLAILLE – Put a plump, tender chicken into a saucepan with 8 dl. (1 $\frac{1}{3}$  pints, 1 $\frac{3}{4}$  pints) simple white consommé. Season, add 2 leeks and a stalk of celery, tied in a bundle. Bring to the boil, skim, cover, and simmer gently.

When the chicken is cooked, drain and bone it. Keep the breast fillets for garnishing and pound the rest of the flesh finely in a mortar. Rub this purée through a fine sieve. Mix with 8 dl. (1 $\frac{1}{3}$  pints, 1 $\frac{3}{4}$  pints) béchamel. Heat to boiling point, add a few tablespoons of the consommé in which the chicken was cooked, taste for seasoning. Strain through a sieve and add 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) fresh cream.

Dice the breast fillets and add to the soup.

Cream of chicory (U.S. endive) soup. POTAGE CRÈME D'ENDIVES – Slice the chicory and simmer it in butter in a covered pan. Finish off as described in the recipe for Cream of endive soup (see below).

Cream of Chinese artichoke, Ocra and Jerusalem artichoke. POTAGE CRÈME DE CROSNE, OXALIS, TOPINAMBOURS – Like Cream of artichoke soup, replacing the latter by 400 g. (14 oz.) Chinese artichokes (or Ocra, or Jerusalem artichoke), blanched and cooked in butter.

Cream of crayfish soup – See Cream of shrimp soup below.

Cream of endive soup. POTAGE CRÈME DE CHICORÉE – Blanch, press and chop 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) tender endives, and cook in butter.

Add 8 dl. (1 $\frac{1}{3}$  pints, 1 $\frac{3}{4}$  pints) béchamel sauce. Finish off as described in the recipe for Cream of artichoke soup.

Cream of leek soup. POTAGE CRÈME DE POIREAUX – Shred and blanch 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) leeks and cook them in butter in a covered pan.

Finish off as described in the recipe for Cream of artichoke soup.

Cream of lettuce soup. POTAGE CRÈME DE LAITUES – Using lettuce, proceed as in the recipe for Cream of endive soup.

Cream of leek soup, garnished with duchess potatoes

Cream of lobster soup – See Cream of shrimp soup below.

Cream of marrow soup. POTAGE CRÈME DE COURGETTES – Like Cream of artichoke soup, replacing the artichokes by 400 g. (14 oz.) marrow, blanched and cooked in butter.

Cream of mushroom soup. POTAGE CRÈME DE CHAMPIGNONS – This soup is principally made from cultivated mushrooms or morels.

Slice the mushrooms, cook them in butter in a covered pan and proceed as described in the recipe for Cream of artichoke soup.

Cream of nettle soup. POTAGE CRÈME D'ORTIES – As Cream of spinach soup (see below), replacing the spinach by young nettles.

Cream of oatmeal soup. POTAGE CRÈME D'AVOINE – Pour 150 g. (5 oz., 1 $\frac{1}{4}$  cups) oatmeal flour, diluted with 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{3}$  pint, scant cup) cold milk, into 8 dl. (1 $\frac{1}{3}$  pints, 1 $\frac{3}{4}$  pints) boiling milk.

Stir until smooth, bring to the boil and simmer very gently for 1 $\frac{1}{2}$  hours. Rub through a sieve. Re-heat. Add 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) cream.

The milk can be replaced by consommé.

Cream of rice soup I. POTAGE CRÈME DE RIZ – Cook 200 g. (7 oz., 1 cup) blanched and drained rice very gently in a pint of white consommé, with a little butter, for 45 minutes.

Rub through a sieve and finish off as described in the recipe for Cream of barley soup.

Cream of rice soup II. POTAGE CRÈME DE RIZ – Using rice flour, proceed as described in the recipe for Cream of oatmeal soup.

Cream of shrimp (or other shellfish soup). POTAGE CRÈME DE CREVETTES ET AUTRES CRUSTACÉS – Fry 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) mirepoix in butter, add 350 g. (12 oz., 2 cups) uncooked shrimps, and sauté together. Season with salt and pepper, moisten with  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (3 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) white wine and a tablespoon of brandy which has been set alight. Cook for 5 minutes.

Keep aside a dozen shrimps' tails for the garnish. Pound the shrimps in a mortar. Add 8 dl. (1 $\frac{1}{3}$  pints, 1 $\frac{3}{4}$  pints) béchamel. Rub through a sieve.

Heat, dilute, if necessary, with a few tablespoons white consommé, taste for seasoning, and finish off with 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{3}$  pint, scant cup) fresh cream.

Cream of spinach soup. POTAGE CRÈME D'ÉPINARDS – Cook 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) blanched and pressed spinach in butter. Finish off with béchamel as described in the recipe for Cream of endive soup.

Cream of spinach soup

Cream of spiny lobster soup – See Cream of shrimp soup.

Cream of watercress soup. POTAGE CRÈME DE CRESSON – Using 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) watercress cooked in butter, proceed as for Cream of endive soup.

PURÉE SOUPS. POTAGES PURÉES – The various purée soups described below can have pasta products, rice, tapioca, perles, pearl barley, brunoise, julienne, chiffonnade, etc., added to them.

The recipes given for vegetables and leguminous plants are intended for soups to be made with meat stock. These can also be prepared as Lenten fare by replacing stock by water and using milk for the final liaison. Lean bacon, indicated as an ingredient for some of these soups, will be omitted from a Lenten soup.

The recipes have been worked out to serve 5 or 6 helpings.

Purée of bean soup. POTAGE PURÉE DE FÈVES – Cook 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) fresh shelled beans in 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) butter, with a sprig of savory, a pinch of salt and 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) water, keeping the pan covered. Rub through a fine sieve and finish off as described in the recipe for Purée of celery soup (see below).

Purée of red haricot bean soup, called à la Condé. POTAGE PURÉE DE HARICOTS ROUGES, DIT À LA CONDÉ – Pick over and wash 350 g. (12 oz.,  $1\frac{3}{4}$  cups) red haricot beans and put them into  $1\frac{1}{2}$  litres ( $2\frac{3}{4}$  pints,  $3\frac{1}{4}$  pints) cold water. Boil, skim, add 15 g. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  oz.,  $2\frac{1}{2}$  teaspoons) salt, a medium-sized onion studded with a clove, a quartered carrot, a bouquet garni and 50 g. (2 oz.) lean bacon, cut in large dice, blanched and lightly fried. Add  $1\frac{1}{2}$  dl. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  pint,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) boiling red wine and leave, uncovered, to simmer very gently.

When the beans are quite done drain them, remove the garnishing, and rub through a fine sieve. Put the purée back into the pan, pour in the liquor, adding a few tablespoons of consommé if necessary. Strain, bring to the boil, and blend in 60 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) butter.

Serve with small croûtons, fried in butter.

The bacon may be omitted. In old culinary practice this soup was made with game consommé and was sometimes garnished with rice, cooked in consommé, instead of croûtons.

Purée of white haricot bean soup, called Soissonnaise. POTAGE PURÉE DE HARICOTS BLANCS, DITE SOISSONNAISE – Using white haricot beans, proceed as described in the recipe for Red haricot bean soup, omitting the red wine.

Serve with small croûtons, fried in butter.

Purée of Brussels sprouts soup. POTAGE PURÉE DE CHOUX DE BRUXELLES – Proceed using Brussels sprouts, as described in the recipe for Purée of celery soup.

Purée of carrot soup I, called Crécý. POTAGE PURÉE DE

CAROTTES, DITE CRÉCY – Cook 3 to 4 sliced carrots in 60 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) butter in a covered pan. Add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) chopped onions, a pinch of salt and a pinch of sugar. If using old vegetables, parboil them before cooking in butter.

When the carrots are quite soft add 1 litre (scant quart, generous quart) consommé and 100 g. (4 oz., 8 tablespoons) rice. Simmer gently, covered.

Rub through a sieve, dilute with a few tablespoons stock, heat, add 60 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) butter and serve with small croûtons fried in butter.

Purée of carrot soup II, called Crécý. POTAGE CRÉCY – Cook the carrots as described in the preceding recipe, replacing the rice by an equivalent amount of stale, crustless bread, or rusks dried in the oven. Finish off as described above.

Purée of cauliflower soup, called Dubarry. POTAGE PURÉE DE CHOU-FLEUR, DIT DUBARRY – Cook together 400 g. (14 oz.) of blanched and drained cauliflower and 250 g. (9 oz.,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cups) sliced potatoes, in 6 dl. (1 pint,  $2\frac{1}{2}$  cups) milk with a pinch of salt.

Rub through a sieve. Dilute with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) milk, heat, and add 60 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) butter and a tablespoon of chervil leaves. Serve with small croûtons, fried in butter.

The milk can be replaced by consommé.

Purée of celery soup. POTAGE PURÉE DE CÉLERI – Slice 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) of the white part of celery stalks (or the same amount of blanched celeriac) and cook in 60 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) butter in a covered pan. Moisten with 1 litre (scant quart, generous quart) of stock, add 250 g. (9 oz.,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cups) potatoes cut in quarters and simmer gently.

Rub through a sieve, dilute the purée with a few tablespoons of consommé, heat, and blend in 60 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) butter.

Purée of chestnut soup. POTAGE PURÉE DE MARRONS – Shell and peel 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) chestnuts and cook them in 1 litre (scant quart, generous quart) white consommé. Add a quarter of a head of celery cut up and cooked in 25 g. (1 oz., 2 tablespoons) butter with a tablespoon chopped onion.

Rub through a sieve, add a few tablespoons consommé or boiled milk, and finish off with fresh butter.

Serve with small croûtons, fried in butter.

Purée of chicken soup à la reine I. POTAGE PURÉE DE VOLAILLE À LA REINE – Bring to the boil a tender chicken with 1 litre (scant quart, generous quart) white consommé and the white part of leeks and a stalk of celery tied in a bundle.

Skim, add 100 g. (4 oz., generous  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) blanched and drained rice, cover, and simmer gently.

When the chicken is cooked, drain and bone it. Pound the flesh finely in a mortar with the rice, leaving a part of the breast for garnish. Dilute this purée with a few tablespoons of the consommé in which the chicken was cooked and rub through a sieve, pressing it with a wooden spoon.

Put into a pan, heat to boiling point, and dilute with a few tablespoons white consommé. Thicken with 2 egg yolks diluted with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) cream. Blend and incorporate 60 to 80 g. (2 to 3 oz., 4 to 6 tablespoons) butter. Dice the breast fillets and add to the soup.

Purée of chicken soup à la reine II (old recipe). POTAGE PURÉE DE VOLAILLE À LA REINE – 'Take a chopine ( $\frac{1}{2}$  litre, scant pint,  $2\frac{1}{4}$  cups) consommé, put into it a piece of crustless bread the size of an egg and let it boil a few times. Pound finely in a mortar the breast of chicken cooked on a spit with 12 sweet almonds, 3 bitter almonds and 6 hard-boiled egg yolks. When the mixture has been well pounded, add the consommé, with the bread and a demi-setier (3 dl.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  pint,  $1\frac{1}{4}$  cups) cream or good milk. Rub the sauce through a sieve, season and keep hot in a bain-marie.'

This recipe has been extracted from a sixteenth-century recipe book. Soup 'à la reine' used to be served every Thursday at the Court of the Valois. Queen Marguerite de Valois, it is said, was very fond of it.

For a long time afterwards soups called 'à la reine' were prepared from partridges or pigeons. These various soups were sometimes served poured over crusts crumbled and pulped in a plate.

Purée of chicory soup. POTAGE PURÉE D'ENDIVES – Cook a medium-size (400 g., 14 oz.) head of coarsely shredded chicory (U.S. endive) slowly in butter in a covered pan. Season with salt and a little sugar.

Add 250 g. (9 oz., 1½ cups) sliced potatoes. Moisten with 6 dl. (1 pint, 2½ cups) consommé. Simmer, covered, for 30 minutes.

Rub through a sieve and finish off as described in the recipe for Purée of celery soup.

Soup purée Condé – See Purée of red haricot bean soup.

Soup purée Conti – See Purée of lentil soup below.

Soup purée Conti à la brunoise. POTAGE PURÉE CONTI À LA BRUNOISE – Add 4 or 5 tablespoons (5 or 6 tablespoons) of an ordinary brunoise and chervil leaves to 1½ litres (2½ pints, 3¼ pints) Purée of lentil soup (see below).

Soup purée Conti à la julienne. POTAGE PURÉE CONTI À LA JULIENNE – As above, replacing the brunoise by a julienne.

Purée of crab soup. POTAGE PURÉE DE CRABES – Like Purée of crayfish soup, replacing the crayfish by an equivalent quantity of crab.

Purée of crayfish soup or crayfish bisque. POTAGE PURÉE, BISQUE D'ÉCRIVISSES – Ingredients. 18 crayfish, 100 g. (4 oz., ½ cup) butter, 2 dl. (⅓ pint, scant cup) mirepoix, 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) white wine, 2 dl. (1½ tablespoons, 2 tablespoons) brandy, 80 g. (3 oz., ½ cup) rice, 1 litre (scant quart, generous quart) white consommé, 1½ dl. (¼ pint, ⅔ cup) fresh cream, salt, pepper, cayenne pepper, thyme, bay leaf, parsley.

For the garnish.

Method. Dress and wash 12 of the crayfish and add to the mirepoix, previously cooked in butter until soft.

Season with a pinch of salt and a little freshly ground pepper, add 2 sprigs parsley, a sprig of thyme and a fragment of a bay leaf. Sauté the crayfish on strong heat until the shell turns red.

Moisten with brandy which has been set alight, and the white wine. Boil down by two-thirds, add 1½ dl. (¼ pint, ⅔ cup) consommé and cook for 10 minutes.

Shell the remaining crayfish, keeping the tails and shells for the garnish. Pound the shells finely in a mortar, adding the rice, cooked separately in 4 dl. (⅔ pint, scant 2 cups) consommé, and the liquor left from cooking the crayfish. Rub this purée through a sieve, pressing it with a wooden spoon into a saucepan. Dilute with the rest of the consommé, boil for a few seconds, strain, and keep hot in a bain-marie.

Add 80 g. (3 oz., 6 tablespoons) butter divided into tiny pieces, and the fresh cream. Blend, correct seasoning if necessary, and flavour with a small pinch of cayenne pepper. Pour into a soup tureen, garnish with the shells filled with fish forcemeat and poached, and the diced tails.

Consommé can be replaced by fish stock or fumet.

Soup purée Crécy – See Purée of carrot soup.

Soup purée Crécy aux perles. POTAGE PURÉE CRÉCY AUX PERLES – 1½ litres (2½ pints, 3¼ pints) Purée of carrots à la Crécy with 4 tablespoons (⅓ cup) of perles, cooked in stock, added to it.

Soup purée Crécy with rice. POTAGE PURÉE CRÉCY AU RIZ – 1½ litres (2½ pints, 3¼ pints) Purée of carrot soup à la Crécy with 4 tablespoons (⅓ cup) of rice, cooked in stock, added to it.

Purée of garden cress soup. POTAGE PURÉE DE CRESSON

ALÉNOIS – Pick over and wash 250 g. (9 oz.) garden cress, chop it and cook in a covered pan with 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter.

Moisten with 1 litre (scant quart, generous quart) strong stock, add 250 g. (9 oz., 1½ cups) sliced potatoes, and simmer gently.

Rub this purée through a sieve, and add a little stock and milk, 3 tablespoons (4 tablespoons) cream and a piece of fresh butter.

Pour into a soup tureen and garnish with leaves of garden cress, blanched in salted water and drained.

Soup purée with croûtons – See Purée of split pea soup.

Soup purée Dubarry – See Purée of cauliflower soup.

Soup purée Freneuse – See Purée of turnip soup.

Purée of game soup. POTAGE PURÉE DE GIBIER – Roast a pheasant or 2 partridges in the oven until three-quarters done, keeping them a little on the firm side. Remove from cooking and brown 1½ dl. (¼ pint, ⅔ cup) mirepoix in the fat given out by the game. Put the game and the mirepoix into a pan with 200 g. (7 oz., generous ¾ cup) lentils, three-quarters cooked. Add a bouquet garni, season, moisten with 1 litre (scant quart, generous quart) simple consommé or game consommé. Bring to the boil, cover, and simmer gently.

Drain the game and bone. Pound the flesh in a mortar, adding the drained lentils. Dilute the purée with the liquid left in the pan and rub through a sieve, pressing it with a wooden spoon. Put back in the pan. Heat, taste for seasoning and add 80 g. (3 oz., 6 tablespoons) butter.

Purée of Jerusalem artichoke soup. POTAGE PURÉE DE TOPINAMBOURS – Using Jerusalem artichokes, proceed as described in the recipe for Purée of sweet potato soup.

Purée of lentil soup à la Conti. POTAGE PURÉE DE LENTILLES À LA CONTI – Proceed, using lentils, as described in the recipe for Purée of red haricot bean soup, omitting the red wine.

Purée of lettuce soup. POTAGE PURÉE DE LAITUES – Proceed, using lettuce, as described in the recipe for Purée of chicory soup.

Purée of lobster soup or lobster bisque. POTAGE PURÉE, BISQUE DE HOMARD – Like Purée of crayfish soup, replacing the crayfish by an equivalent quantity of small lobsters, cut into pieces and sautéed with a mirepoix.

Garnish with diced lobster tails.

Purée of marrow soup – See Purée of pumpkin soup below.

Soup purée Parmentier. See Purée of potato soup below.

Purée of fresh pea soup, called Saint-Germain. POTAGE PURÉE DE POIS FRAIS, DIT SAINT-GERMAIN – Cook 500 g. (generous pound) fresh peas in salted water, drain, and rub through a sieve.

Dilute the purée with 8 or 10 dl. (1½ to 1¾ pints, 1¾ pints to a quart) white consommé. Bring to the boil and finish off with 60 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) fresh butter. Add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) fresh garden peas cooked in water and drained, and some chervil leaves.

Purée of split pea soup. POTAGE PURÉE DE POIS CASSÉS – Pick over and wash 350 g. (12 oz., 1½ cups) split peas, soak them in cold water for 2 hours, and cook in 1½ litres (2½ pints, 3¼ pints) cold water.

Bring to the boil, skim, season, add a mirepoix of 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) diced lean bacon, blanched and fried lightly with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) chopped carrots and 1 tablespoon diced onion. Put in a bouquet garni, adding to it the green part of 2 leeks.

After cooking, rub through a sieve, put the purée back into the pan, add a few tablespoons consommé and finish off with fresh butter and a tablespoon of chervil leaves.

Serve with small croûtons fried in butter.

This soup can also be prepared as a Lenten dish by omitting the bacon and diluting the purée with milk.

Soup purée portugaise – See Purée of tomato soup below.

Fresh pea soup, called Saint-Germain, with ham added (Robert Carrier)

Purée of potato soup Parmentier. POTAGE PURÉE DE POMMES DE TERRE, DIT PARMENTIER – Shred the white part of 2 leeks and cook lightly in 25 g. (1 oz., 2 tablespoons) butter.

Add 500 g. (1 lb.) potatoes cut in quarters. Moisten with 1 litre (scant quart, generous quart) white consommé. Season, and boil fast.

As soon as the potatoes are cooked, mash them and rub through a sieve. Add a few tablespoons consommé or cream and finish off with 60 g. (2 oz., 4 tablespoons) fresh butter and a tablespoon of chervil leaves.

Serve with small croûtons, fried in butter.

Purée of sweet potato soup. POTAGE PURÉE DE PATATES – Peel and quarter 600 g. (1 lb. 6 oz.) sweet potatoes and cook them in white consommé. Rub through a sieve and add  $\frac{1}{2}$  litre (scant pint,  $2\frac{1}{4}$  cups) consommé. Bring to the boil, stir, and finish off by incorporating 60 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) fresh butter.

Serve with small croûtons fried in butter.

Purée of pumpkin soup I (based on meat stock). POTAGE PURÉE DE POTIRON AU GRAS – Peel and cut 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) pumpkin into pieces. Cook in (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) butter and 4 tablespoons ( $\frac{1}{3}$  cup) water in a covered pan. Season with a good pinch of salt.

Purée of split pea soup, garnished with bacon

Purée of potato soup Parmentier

SOUPS AND BROTHS

When the pumpkin is quite soft, rub it through a fine sieve. Put the purée back into the pan, dilute it to the desired consistency with 6 to 8 dl. (1 to 1½ pints, 2½ to 3½ cups) consommé, bring to the boil, and finish off with 60 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) fresh butter.

Serve with small croûtons, fried in butter.

Purée of pumpkin soup II (Lenten). POTAGE PURÉE DE POTIRON AU MAIGRE – Cook the pumpkin as described in the preceding recipe.

Dilute the purée with boiling milk and add 3 or 4 tablespoons (4 or 5 tablespoons) castor sugar. Finish off with butter.

Serve with small croûtons, fried in butter.

Purée of purslane soup. POTAGE PURÉE DE POURPIER – Proceed as described in the recipe for Purée of garden cress soup, replacing the cress by fresh purslane.

Soup purée à la reine – See Purée of chicken soup.

Soup purée Saint-Germain – See Purée of fresh pea soup.

Purée of shrimp soup or shrimp bisque. POTAGE PURÉE, BISQUE DE CREVETTES – Like Purée of crayfish soup, replacing the crayfish by an equivalent quantity of shrimps.

Soup purée soissonnaise – See Purée of white haricot bean soup.

Purée of spiny lobster soup or spiny lobster bisque. POTAGE PURÉE, BISQUE DE LANGOUSTE – Like Purée of crayfish soup, replacing the crayfish by an equivalent quantity of small spiny lobsters.

Purée of tomato soup

Purée of tomato soup I. POTAGE PURÉE DE TOMATES – Cook 50 g. (2 oz., ½ cup) sliced onion in butter in a covered pan. Add 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) seeded and sliced tomatoes. Season with salt and pepper and add one crushed clove of garlic and a bouquet garni.

Cook gently for a few moments, stirring all the time. Add 100 g. (4 oz., generous ½ cup) rice, moisten with 1 litre (scant quart, generous quart) consommé, stir, and simmer gently.

Rub through a sieve, put back in the pan, dilute with a few tablespoons consommé, heat, and incorporate 60 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter. Add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) rice cooked in consommé or water.

Purée of tomato soup II. POTAGE PURÉE DE TOMATES – Sauté the onion in butter until soft, then fry the tomatoes in the same pan for a few moments. Sprinkle with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) flour. Moisten with consommé, stir, and season. Garnish and finish off as described above.

Purée of turnip soup, called à la Freneuse. POTAGE PURÉE DE NAVETS, DIT À LA FRENEUSE – Cook 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) sliced and blanched turnips gently in butter in a covered pan. Moisten with 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) consommé and cook until three-quarters done.

Add 250 g. (9 oz., 1½ cups) sliced potatoes, moisten with 5 dl. (scant pint, 2½ cups) consommé and finish cooking on brisk heat.

Rub through a sieve and finish off as described in the recipe for Purée of celery soup.

VELOUTÉ SOUPS. POTAGES VELOUTÉS – These soups are composed of a Velouté sauce (see SAUCE), based on vegetable, meat, fish or shellfish, cooked in velouté, or, in the case of shellfish, added to the velouté just before rubbing it through a sieve. These soups are thickened with a liaison of egg yolks, cream and butter.

Veloutés can be served with all the garnishes indicated for cream and purée soups such as pearl barley, printanière, asparagus tips, quenelles, royale, tapioca. These garnishes are added to the soup after it has been put through a sieve and thickened.

The recipes which follow have been worked out to serve from four to six persons.

For vegetable veloutés. Prepare a velouté using 80 g. (3 oz., ¾ cup) white roux and 8 dl. (1½ pints, 1¾ pints) simple white or chicken consommé or white stock.

Add the vegetable indicated for this velouté, having first blanched it, if necessary, and cooked it in butter.

Simmer gently until the vegetable is cooked. Rub through a sieve, pressing it through with a wooden spoon. Dilute the soup with a few tablespoons white consommé. Heat to boiling point. Remove from heat and thicken with a liaison of 3 egg yolks and 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) cream. Blend in from 80 to 100 g. (3 to 4 oz., 6 to 8 tablespoons) fresh butter.

For meat, poultry or game velouté. Prepare the velouté as described above.

Put the meat, fowl or game into it. The meat should be boned and tied with a string, the fowl or game trussed as for an entrée. Simmer gently until the basic ingredients are cooked.

Drain, bone, if necessary, and pound in a mortar, keeping a small part as a garnish for the soup. Dilute with white consommé and finish off as described in the preceding recipe.

For fish velouté. Using boned fish, proceed as described in the recipe above for meat, poultry or game velouté, using Lenten or fish stock for making the velouté, or meat or chicken stock.

For shellfish velouté. Cook the shellfish indicated with a mirepoix, then pound it in a mortar with the liquor in which it was cooked. Add it to a velouté based on meat or fish stock. Rub through a sieve and finish off as described above.

Compound butter, flavoured with the appropriate shellfish, is usually added to shellfish velouté soups.

Artichoke velouté soup. POTAGE VELOUTÉ D'ARTICHAUTS – Prepare 8 dl. (1½ pints, 1¾ pints) velouté based on white consommé. Blanch and slice 8 artichoke hearts and simmer lightly in butter in a covered pan. Cook in the velouté.

Rub through a sieve. Dilute with white consommé. Heat, thicken with a liaison of 3 egg yolks and 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) cream. Incorporate 80 to 100 g. (3 to 4 oz., 6 to 8 tablespoons) butter.

Garnish with artichoke hearts cooked in a court-bouillon and diced, and chervil leaves.

Asparagus velouté soup. POTAGE VELOUTÉ D'ASPERGES – Using the tips of 450 g. (1 lb., 3 cups) asparagus blanched and cooked in butter in a covered pan, proceed as described in the recipe for Artichoke velouté soup.

This soup can be made of white or green asparagus.

Celery velouté soup. POTAGE VELOUTÉ DE CÉLÉRI – Like Artichoke velouté soup, using celery cooked in butter in a covered pan.

Chicken velouté soup I. POTAGE VELOUTÉ DE VOLAILLE – Prepare 8 dl. (1½ pints, 1¾ pints) velouté. Add a medium-sized, tender young chicken. Simmer gently. Drain the chicken, bone it, keep a part of the breast fillets for garnish, and pound the rest in the mortar. Add this chicken purée to the velouté. Rub through a sieve and finish off as described in the recipe for Artichoke velouté soup. Garnish with diced breast fillets.

Chicken velouté soup II. POTAGE VELOUTÉ DE VOLAILLE – Prepare the velouté and cook the chicken as described in the preceding recipe.

When pounding the chicken meat, add to it 60 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) butter and 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) fresh double cream. Rub through a horse-hair sieve. Thicken the velouté, strain, and add the chicken purée. Finish off with fresh butter and cream.

Chicken velouté soup à l'écoissaise. POTAGE VELOUTÉ DE VOLAILLE À L'ÉCOSSAISE – Add 4 tablespoons ( $\frac{1}{3}$  cup) of a fine brunoise of vegetables, softened in butter, and chervil leaves, to Chicken velouté soup.

Chicken velouté soup à la Nantua. POTAGE VELOUTÉ DE VOLAILLE À LA NANTUA – Flavour Chicken velouté soup with crayfish butter. Garnish with shelled crayfish tails.

Chicken velouté soup à la portugaise. POTAGE VELOUTÉ DE VOLAILLE À LA PORTUGAISE – Add to Chicken velouté soup 4 tablespoons ( $\frac{1}{3}$  cup) tomatoes, peeled, pressed out, cut into small pieces and cooked in butter in a covered pan.

Chicken velouté soup sultane. POTAGE VELOUTÉ DE VOLAILLE SULTANE – Flavour the soup with pistachio butter and garnish with small quenelles made of Chicken forcemeat (see FORCEMEAT).

Crayfish velouté soup. POTAGE VELOUTÉ D'ÉCREVISSES – Like Shrimp velouté soup below, replacing the shrimps by 12 crayfish, cooked with a mirepoix and pounded in a mortar.

Finish off with Crayfish butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters).

Endive (U.S. chicory), spinach or lettuce velouté soup. POTAGE VELOUTÉ DE CHICORÉE, D'ÉPINARDS, DE LAITUE – Like Artichoke velouté soup, using one or other of these vegetables.

Frog velouté soup à la sicilienne. POTAGE VELOUTÉ DE GRENOUILLES À LA SICILIENNE – Proceed as described in the recipe for Smelt velouté soup below, replacing the smelts with 48 frogs' legs cooked in butter.

Finish off as described in the recipe for Artichoke velouté soup, flavouring it with pistachio butter.

Game velouté soup – See Partridge velouté soup below.

Loebster velouté soup. POTAGE VELOUTÉ DE HOMARD – Like Shrimp velouté soup, using lobster cooked with a mirepoix.

Mushroom velouté soup, also called Pierre-le-grand. POTAGE VELOUTÉ DE CHAMPIGNONS, PIERRE-LE-GRAND – Like Artichoke velouté soup, using purée of cultivated mushrooms.

Oyster velouté soup. POTAGE VELOUTÉ AUX HUÎTRES – Prepare 8 dl. (1 $\frac{1}{2}$  pints, 1 $\frac{3}{4}$  pints) fish velouté, as described in the basic recipe. Add to it the water of 24 oysters.

Thicken the soup as described in the recipe for Artichoke velouté soup, and garnish it with poached and de-bearded oysters.

Partridge velouté soup. POTAGE VELOUTÉ DE PERDRIX – Prepare 8 dl. (1 $\frac{1}{2}$  pints, 1 $\frac{3}{4}$  pints) velouté as described in the basic recipe. Add 2 partridges, previously browned lightly in the oven. Simmer gently. Drain the partridges, bone them and pound the flesh in a mortar, except for a part of the breast fillets, kept for garnish. Add this purée to the velouté.

Rub through a sieve and finish off as described in the recipe for Artichoke velouté soup. Garnish with the breast fillets, cut in dice.

Various game velouté soups are prepared in the same way, using wood-grouse, pheasant, hazel-grouse, etc.

Shrimp velouté soup. POTAGE VELOUTÉ DE CREVETTES – Prepare 8 dl. (1 $\frac{1}{2}$  pints, 1 $\frac{3}{4}$  pints) of velouté as described in the recipes for vegetable veloutés.

When sieving add 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) shrimps, cooked with a mirepoix and pounded in a mortar, having kept some shrimp tails for the garnish.

Finish off as described in the recipe for Artichoke velouté soup, but add Shrimp butter instead of ordinary fresh butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters).

Shrimp velouté soup à la normande. POTAGE VELOUTÉ DE CREVETTES À LA NORMANDE – As above. Garnish with 12 shelled shrimp tails, 8 poached and de-bearded oysters and 8 small pike quenelles.

Smelt velouté soup I. POTAGE VELOUTÉ D'ÉPERLANS – Prepare the velouté as described in the basic recipe, using fish consommé if desired.

Cook 250 g. (9 oz.) smelts in butter with a tablespoon chopped onion, drain, pound in a mortar, and add to the velouté before sieving.

Strain and finish off as described in the recipe for Artichoke velouté soup.

Smelt velouté soup II, à la dieppoise. POTAGE VELOUTÉ D'ÉPERLANS À LA DIEPPOISE – As above, adding to the velouté a few tablespoons of the liquor in which mussels were cooked and garnishing the soup with 12 poached mussels and 12 shelled shrimps' tails.

Smelt velouté soup III, à l'indienne. POTAGE VELOUTÉ D'ÉPERLANS À L'INDIENNE – As above. Sprinkle the smelt fillets with a tablespoon curry powder while cooking them in butter with chopped onion.

Spiny lobster and Dublin Bay prawn velouté soup. POTAGE VELOUTÉ DE LANGOUSTE, LANGOUSTINE – Like Shrimp velouté soup, using spiny lobster or Dublin Bay prawns cooked with a mirepoix.

SPECIAL SOUPS. POTAGES SPÉCIAUX – The recipes for these soups, based on purées or on veloutés with various garnishes, have been worked out to serve 4 to 6 persons.

Potage ambassadeurs – Prepare 1 $\frac{1}{2}$  litres (2 $\frac{3}{4}$  pints, 3 $\frac{1}{4}$  pints) Purée of fresh pea soup, add to it 4 tablespoons ( $\frac{1}{3}$  cup) of a chiffonnade of sorrel cooked in butter, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) rice poached in consommé, and chervil leaves.

This soup can also be made by adding a chiffonnade of mixed lettuce and sorrel.

Andalusian soup. POTAGE ANDALOUSE – Add 1 $\frac{1}{2}$  litres (2 $\frac{3}{4}$  pints, 3 $\frac{1}{4}$  pints) Purée of tomato soup to 2 $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, generous cup) tapioca cooked in consommé.

Potage Apicius (old recipe) – 'Boil down consommé by half for soup. Blanch 350 g. (12 oz.) lasagne in salted boiling water. Drain and simmer for 20 minutes in half of the boiled-down consommé, with 125 g. (4 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) best butter, a pinch coarse ground pepper and a pinch grated nutmeg. Boil down the breast of a fowl to purée, add to the lasagne and mix. Put a layer of the lasagne into a soup tureen, follow with a layer of big cocks' combs and kidneys cooked in consommé, then add a plateful of small truffles, cut to look like olives, sautéed in butter with a little chicken jelly. Sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. Continue to superimpose these various elements in successive layers. Pour over the consommé left over from cooking the lasagne and serve.'

Potage d'Artois – Prepare 1 $\frac{1}{2}$  litres (2 $\frac{3}{4}$  pints, 3 $\frac{1}{4}$  pints) Purée of white haricot bean soup, add to it 4 tablespoons ( $\frac{1}{3}$  cup) of a fine brunoise of vegetables cooked in butter until soft, and chervil leaves.

Potage Bagration I (based on meat) – Prepare 8 dl. (1 $\frac{1}{2}$  pints, 1 $\frac{3}{4}$  pints) velouté as described in the basic recipe for these soups. Add to it 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) lean veal, cut in large dice and lightly fried in butter. Simmer gently.

Drain the veal. Pound it finely in a mortar and add to the velouté. Rub through a sieve and heat to boiling point. Thicken with a liaison of 3 egg yolks and 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) cream. Add more seasoning, if necessary, and incorporate 80 to 100 g. (3 to 4 oz., 6 to 8 tablespoons) butter. Garnish with poached and diced macaroni. Serve with grated cheese.

SOUPS AND BROTHS

Potage Bagration II (based on fish) – Proceed as described in the preceding recipe, using velouté based on fish stock and replacing the veal by 250 g. (9 oz.) fillets of sole, previously fried lightly in butter.

Potage Balvet, also called Jubilé. POTAGE BALVET, DIT AUSSI JUBILÉ – Prepare 1½ litres (2¾ pints, 3¼ pints) Purée of fresh pea soup, dilute with a little consommé and add 4 tablespoons (½ cup) of stockpot vegetables.

Potage bonne-femme I – Shred finely 100 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) of the white part of leeks and cook in butter in a covered pan. Moisten with 1½ litres (2¾ pints, 3¼ pints) white consommé. Add 250 g. (9 oz., 1½ cups) sliced potatoes. Season and simmer gently. Add from 60 to 80 g. (2 to 3 oz., 4 to 6 tablespoons) butter and some chervil leaves. Serve with long French bread thinly sliced and dried in the oven.

The consommé can be replaced by water or milk.

Potage bonne-femme II – Cook the leeks in butter in a covered pan. Add 6 dl. (1 pint, 2½ cups) of a very thin potato purée and ½ l. (scant pint, 2¼ cups) consommé. Add 150 g. (5 oz., ¾ cup) sliced potatoes and simmer gently. Add 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) cream, 60 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter and some chervil leaves.

Potage Camérani (old recipe) – ‘Soften slowly in butter 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) of a fine brunoise of vegetables, with a little turnip added to it. Add 12 chicken livers, trimmed and cut in very small dice. Season and brown on brisk heat.

‘Separately, and as quickly as possible, poach 125 g. (4 oz.) macaroni in salted water. Drain, dress with butter and season.

‘To serve, put the macaroni into a silver dish, buttered and sprinkled with grated Parmesan cheese, alternating with layers of chopped chicken livers and sprinkling each layer with Parmesan. Heat for a few minutes on a low flame.’

Following ancient usage, this is classified as a soup.

Potage cultivateur – Cut 2 or 3 small carrots, a small turnip, 6 tablespoons (½ cup) of the white part of leeks and 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) onions, into large dice.

Season with salt and a pinch of sugar. Cook in 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter in a covered pan. Moisten with 1½ litres (2¾ pints, 3¼ pints) white consommé and cook for 1¼ hours. About 25 minutes before serving, add 150 g. (5 oz., ¾ cup) sliced potatoes and 75 g. (3 oz.) well blanched diced bacon.

The potatoes can be replaced by rice.

Potage Darblay – See Potage julienne Darblay below.

Potage Faubonne – Add 4 tablespoons (½ cup) of a julienne of vegetables, cooked gently in butter, and some chervil leaves, to 1½ litres (2¾ pints, 3¼ pints) Purée of split pea soup.

This soup can also be made of white bean or any other vegetable purée, or a pheasant purée and a garnish composed of pheasant fillets and a julienne of truffles.

Potage fermière – Shred finely 2 or 3 small carrots, 1 small turnip, 6 tablespoons (½ cup) of the white part of leeks, chopped, 4 tablespoons (½ cup) onions and 75 g. (3 oz., 1¼ cups) shredded cabbage heart. Season, and simmer slowly in 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter in a covered pan.

Moisten with 8 dl. (1½ pints, 1¾ pints) water in which white beans have been cooked, and 6 dl. (1 pint, 2½ cups) white consommé. Cook for 1¼ hours. Add 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) cream, 4 tablespoons (½ cup) cooked white beans and some chervil leaves.

This soup can also be prepared as a Lenten dish by omitting the consommé and using the water left over from cooking the beans.

Potage Fontanges – Prepare 1½ litres (2¾ pints, 3¼ pints) Purée of fresh pea soup, dilute with a little consommé and add to it 4 tablespoons (½ cup) of a chiffonnade of sorrel cooked in butter until soft, and some chervil leaves.

Potage Fontanges

This soup is sometimes thickened with a liaison of egg yolks and cream and garnished with croûtons.

Potage gentilhomme – Garnish 1½ litres (2¾ pints, 3¼ pints) Purée of game soup based on lentil purée with 4 tablespoons (½ cup) small game quenelles.

Potage Germiny – Moisten 200 g. (7 oz.) sorrel shredded into a chiffonnade and softened in butter, with 1½ litres (2¾ pints, 3¼ pints) consommé.

Thicken with a liaison of 8 to 10 egg yolks diluted with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) fresh cream. Add a tablespoon of chervil leaves. Serve with long French bread, thinly sliced and dried in the oven.

Potage Jubilé – Another name for Potage Balvet.

Potage julienne à l'allemande – Prepare 1 litre (scant quart, generous quart) Potage julienne. Thicken with a liaison of 4 egg yolks diluted with 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) cream. Add 80 to 100 g. (3 to 4 oz., 6 to 8 tablespoons) butter and some chervil leaves.

Potage julienne à la cévenole – Prepare 1 litre (scant quart, generous quart) of a light Purée of chestnut soup. Add ½ litre (scant pint, 2¼ cups) of a julienne, cooked in butter and consommé. Boil for 5 minutes. Blend in 60 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter and sprinkle with a tablespoon of chervil leaves.

Potage julienne Darblay – Prepare 1½ litres (2¾ pints, 3¼ pints) Purée of potato soup, dilute with a little consommé, add 4 tablespoons (½ cup) of a julienne of vegetables lightly cooked in butter. Cook together, simmering gently for 10 minutes.

Thicken with a liaison of 3 egg yolks diluted with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) fresh cream. Incorporate 60 to 80 g. (2 to 3 oz., 4 to 6 tablespoons) butter and add chervil leaves.

Potage Lamballe – Add 7 dl. (1¼ pints, 1½ pints) rather thick consommé with tapioca to 8 dl. (1½ pints, 1¾ pints) Purée of fresh pea soup.

Potage Longchamp – Add 3 tablespoons (4 tablespoons) of a chiffonnade of sorrel, lightly cooked in butter, 5 dl. (scant pint, 2¼ cups) consommé with vermicelli and some chervil leaves to 1 litre (scant quart, generous quart) Purée of fresh pea soup.

Potage Marigny – Like Potage Fontanges. Decrease the proportion of the chiffonnade of sorrel and add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) garden peas and diced French beans cooked in water.

Oyster soup I. POTAGE AUX HUÎTRES – Prepare 1½ litres (2¾ pints, 3¼ pints) velouté based on fish consommé, as described in the basic recipe for these soups. Thicken with a liaison of 3 egg yolks diluted with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) cream, and blend in some butter. Garnish with 12 oysters poached in their strained liquor. Add blanched and drained chervil leaves.

The liquor drained out of the oysters should be added to the velouté.

Spice with a pinch of cayenne pepper.

Oyster soup II. POTAGE AUX HUÎTRES – Make 80 g. (3 oz.,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) white roux and dilute it with 8 dl. (1  $\frac{1}{2}$  pints, 1  $\frac{1}{2}$  pints) of the liquid in which mussels were cooked, or concentrated fish stock, mixed with the liquor of 12 oysters. Mix and simmer gently.

Thicken with a liaison of 3 egg yolks diluted with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) cream. Finish off as described in the preceding recipe.

Potage paysanne – Shred finely 1 medium-large carrot, 1 small turnip, 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) the white part of leeks, 25 g. (1 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) chopped onion, 25 g. (1 oz.) celery and 25 g. (1 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) shredded cabbage heart.

Season with salt and a pinch of sugar. Cook slowly in 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) butter in a covered pan.

Moisten with 1  $\frac{1}{2}$  litres (2  $\frac{3}{4}$  pints, 3  $\frac{1}{4}$  pints) white consommé. Cook for 1  $\frac{1}{2}$  hours. About 25 minutes before serving, add 100 g. (4 oz.,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cups) thinly sliced potatoes, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) fresh garden peas, 1 tablespoon chervil leaves.

Serve with long French bread, thinly sliced and dried in the oven.

This soup can be prepared as a Lenten dish by replacing the consommé with water. In that case, add 60 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) butter before serving.

Potage Pierre-le-Grand (Peter the Great's soup) – See Mushroom velouté soup.

This soup can also be made by mixing mushroom and hazel-grouse purées.

Portuguese soup. POTAGE PORTUGAIS – Cook 75 g. (3 oz.,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) chopped onion and 100 g. (4 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) diced, blanched lean bacon in butter in a covered pan.

Add 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) sliced, seeded tomatoes, a small bouquet garni, and half a clove of garlic. Sauté for 10 minutes. Add 100 g. (4 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) rice.

Moisten with 1  $\frac{1}{4}$  litres (2  $\frac{1}{4}$  pints, 2  $\frac{3}{4}$  pints) white consommé. Season and simmer gently for an hour. Rub through a sieve, pressing with a wooden spoon. Heat the purée, dilute with a few tablespoons consommé and incorporate in it 60 to 80 g. (2 to 3 oz., 4 to 6 tablespoons) butter. Add 4 tablespoons ( $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) rice, cooked in consommé.

Potage Raphaël – This was classified by Carême as an Italian soup.

'Prepare a Petite marmite in the usual manner and cook a small chicken in it.

'Bone the chicken completely, keep one fillet of breast, pound the rest of the meat in a mortar while still hot, and rub through a fine sieve. Collect the purée in a soup tureen, pour over a few tablespoons of strained consommé, cover and keep by.

'Allowing 2 litres (3  $\frac{1}{2}$  pints, 4  $\frac{1}{2}$  pints) of the Petite marmite consommé for 10 persons, skim off surplus fat and strain. Bring to the boil. Pour into it 100 g. (4 oz.,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) coarse-ground semolina and simmer gently for 25 minutes. Add the chicken purée, little by little, to the semolina, stirring with a whisk. Add 20 small cocks' combs (or 10 medium-sized ones, cut in half), cooked in a light court-bouillon, as well as the breast fillet and two small truffles, shredded into a fine julienne.' (Philéas Gilbert.)

Potage Saint-Cloud – Soup made of Purée of fresh pea soup, called Saint-Germain, served with diced croûtons, fried in butter.

Potage santé – Prepare 1  $\frac{1}{2}$  litres (2  $\frac{3}{4}$  pints, 3  $\frac{1}{4}$  pints) of a light Soup purée Parmentier and add to it 4 tablespoons ( $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) of a chiffonnade of sorrel, lightly cooked in butter until soft.

Thicken with a liaison of 3 yolks, diluted with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) cream. Incorporate 100 g. (4 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) butter and add some chervil leaves.

Serve with long French bread, thinly sliced and dried in the oven.

Potage Solférino – Cook in butter 75 g. (3 oz.,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) of the white part of leeks and 75 g. (3 oz.,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) of the red part of carrots, both shredded, until tender, in a covered pan.

Add 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) sliced and seeded tomatoes, a small bouquet garni and, if liked, half a clove of garlic. Cook for 10 minutes.

Moisten with 1 litre (scant quart, generous quart) white consommé, add 250 g. (9 oz., 1  $\frac{1}{2}$  cups) sliced potatoes. Season and simmer gently.

Remove the bouquet garni and the garlic. Drain the vegetables and rub them through a sieve. Add the liquor left in the pan to this purée and dilute it with a few tablespoons consommé. Bring to the boil and skim the surface. Add 80 to 100 g. (3 to 4 oz., 6 to 8 tablespoons) butter.

Garnish with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) small potato balls, scooped out with a vegetable baller and cooked in white consommé, and chervil leaves.

Potage Velours – Add  $\frac{1}{2}$  litre (scant pint, 2  $\frac{1}{4}$  cups) consommé substantially thickened with tapioca to 1 litre (1  $\frac{1}{4}$  pints, generous quart) Purée Crêpe.

Potage Xavier – Prepare 1  $\frac{1}{2}$  litres (2  $\frac{3}{4}$  pints, 3  $\frac{1}{4}$  pints) Cream of rice soup. Thicken it with a liaison of 3 egg yolks diluted with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) cream. Incorporate 80 to 100 g. (3 to 4 oz., 6 to 8 tablespoons) butter.

Serve with a chicken royale, cut in very small dice.

CLASSICAL AND REGIONAL SOUPS. SOUPES – We have grouped here various classical and regional soups of France.

Many of these have bread added to them. The bread should be light and porous and should have innumerable small holes, so as to be easily imbued with the soup. It should be stale, cut in slices of varying thickness, depending on the nature of the soup. Toast it or dry it in the oven.

Soupe aïgo-saou (Provençal cookery) – Put into a saucepan 1 kg. (2  $\frac{1}{4}$  lb.) white fish cut into pieces, a medium-sized sliced onion, 4 chopped tomatoes, 4 potatoes cut in quarters, 2 cloves of garlic and a bouquet garni, composed of parsley, celery, thyme and bay leaf. Season with 25 g. (4 teaspoons) salt and a good pinch of pepper. Add 2 litres (3  $\frac{1}{2}$  pints, 4  $\frac{1}{2}$  pints) water and boil fast from 18 to 20 minutes. Strain the soup into a tureen over slices of bread sprinkled with a dash of oil.

Arrange the fish and the potatoes on a dish and serve with ailoi or rouille, which is prepared as follows. Pound a big clove of garlic with a red pepper in a mortar. Add a piece of bread (crumb, i.e. soft part only) the size of a walnut, soaked and pressed out.

Over the whole, little by little and stirring constantly, pour about 2  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, generous cup) olive oil. Add a few tablespoons fish stock.

Soupe aïgo à la ménagère (Provençal cookery) – Colour lightly a chopped onion and the white part of 3 leeks in oil. Add 2 seeded and chopped tomatoes, 4 crushed cloves of garlic, a small piece of fennel, a piece of dried orange peel, a bouquet garni, 4 sliced potatoes and a small pinch of saffron. Add 2 litres (3  $\frac{1}{2}$  pints, 4  $\frac{1}{2}$  pints) water. Season with 20 g. (3 teaspoons) salt and a pinch of pepper. Boil fast for 15 minutes.

Poach eggs in this soup, allowing 1 per person. Drain the eggs, arrange them on a dish with the potatoes, which have been taken out of the saucepan and sprinkled with chopped parsley.

Strain the rest of the soup over slices of home-made bread arranged in a deep dish.

Soupe aïgo bouïdo à la ménagère (Provençal cookery) – Boil 2 litres (3½ pints, 4½ pints) water into which you have put 15 crushed cloves of garlic, a bouquet garni, a sprig of sage, 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) olive oil, 25 g. (4 teaspoons) coarse salt and a pinch of pepper.

Pour this soup into a tureen over slices of bread sprinkled with chopped parsley.

Soupe aïgo bouïdo with poached eggs (Provençal cookery). SOUPE AÏGO BOUÏDO AUX ŒUFS POCHÉS – Prepare the soup as described in the preceding recipe and poach the eggs in it. Arrange the eggs on slices of bread in a deep dish. Pour the soup over them and add a pinch of parsley.

Soupe albigeoise – This soup is made not only in the Albi region but throughout the western part of France.

It is a potée with rib of beef, salt pork, sausage and confit d'oie (preserved goose) as basic nutritive ingredients, with the following vegetables: cabbage, carrots, turnips, leeks, onions, potatoes, and plenty of garlic.

The potée albigeoise differs very little from other French potées, the best of which is the Auvergne potée.

Arles soup. SOUPE ARIÉGEAISE – Potée prepared in the same manner as the Auvergne potée, with cabbage, carrots, turnips, onion, leek and potatoes, and salt pork, sometimes confit d'oie, and a succulent farci. There is always plenty of garlic.

Black pudding water soup or bougras (Périgord cookery). SOUPE À L'EAU DE BOUDIN, BOUGRAS – This soup is usually prepared during Shrovetide, when pigs are slaughtered and delicious black puddings are made.

Bring the water in which black puddings have been poached to the boil. For 2½ litres (4½ pints, 5½ pints) of this water, add a head of curly green cabbage cut into pieces and blanched, carrots, turnips, leeks, celery and quartered onions. Simmer gently for 40 minutes. Add 400 g. (14 oz.) potatoes cut in thick slices and cook for another 35 minutes.

Fifteen minutes before serving, remove some of the vegetables with a perforated spoon, slice them, fry in fat, sprinkle with flour, moisten with a few tablespoons of stock and add to the soup. (This is called 'fricassée' in Périgord and it is added to most soups.)

Pour the boiling soup into a tureen lined with thin slices of home-made bread.

Soupe à la bonne femme – Cook gently the finely shredded white part of 4 leeks in a covered saucepan, with 40 g. (1½ oz., 3 tablespoons) butter, without allowing the leeks to colour. When they are quite soft, add 3 litres (5½ pints, 6½ pints) ordinary consommé and bring to the boil. Add 350 g. (12 oz., 2 cups) sliced potatoes. Bring to the boil, season and simmer gently.

When the soup is ready, remove the saucepan from heat and add 60 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter and 1 tablespoon of chervil leaves.

Soup with cabbage and miques (Périgord cookery). SOUPE AUX CHOUX ET AUX MIQUES – Put the cabbages into a saucepan and cover with water. Add a piece of salt unsmoked ham or a salt chine of pork, carrot, turnips, rape, onions studded with cloves, celery, garlic, a bouquet garni and the usual seasoning.

Using maize (U.S. corn) flour, make some miques (q.v.).

A few minutes before serving the soup, take some of the vegetables out with a perforated spoon, fry them in fat, sprinkle with flour, moisten with a few tablespoons stock and put back into the saucepan.

Serve with soup garnished with thin slices of bread and, on a separate dish, the ham or chine of pork placed on the cabbage and surrounded by the miques.

Soupe à la farine (Alsatian cookery) – Pour 3 tablespoons (4 tablespoons) flour, mixed with cold consommé or water until quite smooth, into 1½ litres (2½ pints, 3½ pints) boiling consommé. Season with salt, pepper and a pinch of grated nutmeg and mix well. Boil for 5 minutes. Add 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) fresh cream and 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) butter.

Fish soup with vermicelli à la marseillaise. SOUPE DE POISSON AU VERMICELLE À LA MARSEILLAISE – Sauté 2 good tablespoons (3 tablespoons) of sliced onion in oil in a saucepan with a thick, flat bottom. When the onion is cooked, sprinkle it with a tablespoon flour and fry for a moment, stirring with a spoon.

Cover with 2 litres (3½ pints, 4½ pints) water. Add 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) fish bones and trimmings cut into very small pieces. Season with salt and pepper. Add a tablespoon pounded parsley, a fragment of bay leaf, a sprig of thyme, a little crushed garlic, 4 tablespoons (½ cup) tomato purée and a good pinch of powdered saffron. Cook over a fairly high heat for about 20 minutes.

Strain the fish stock through a fine strainer. Bring to the boil and pour into it 4 tablespoons (½ cup) vermicelli. Poach for 10 minutes. Add half a tablespoon chopped parsley.

Soupe au fromage – See Onion soup gratinée below.

Garlic soup à la provençale. SOUPE À L'AIL À LA PROVENÇALE – Put 2 litres (3½ pints, 4½ pints) water, 24 small cloves of garlic, a sprig of thyme, a clove, a branch of sage, 25 g. (4 teaspoons) salt and a pinch of pepper into a saucepan. Boil fast for 20 minutes.

Strain the soup through a fine strainer and pour it into a tureen over about 20 small slices of bread which have been sprinkled with grated cheese and placed in the oven for an instant to melt the cheese, and with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) olive oil poured over them. Let the bread swell properly before serving.

Onion soup. SOUPE À L'OIGNON – Slice 250 g. (9 oz.) onions finely and fry in butter, without allowing to colour. When nearly done, sprinkle with 25 g. (1 oz., ¼ cup) flour. Stir with a wooden spoon for a few moments. Add 2 litres (3½ pints, 4½ pints) white consommé, or water. Cook for 25 minutes. Pour over slices of bread dried in the oven.

Onion soup gratinée, also called cheese soup. SOUPE À L'OIGNON GRATINÉE, SOUPE AU FROMAGE – Prepare like ordinary onion soup. Pour into an ovenproof dish over slices of bread dried in the oven and arranged in layers, each being covered with grated cheese. Sprinkle with grated cheese and a little melted butter. Brown in the oven.

Périgord soup 'sobronade'. SOUPE PÉRIGOURDINE 'SOBRONADE' – This dish constitutes a solid dish rather than a soup.

Soak 750 g. (1¾ lb., 4 cups) white beans in cold water and put them into a big saucepan. Cover with cold water. Add 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) fresh pork, fat and lean, and 250 g. (9 oz., 1 cup) ham cut into small pieces. Bring to the boil and skim.

Add one or two turnips cut in thick slices (one-third of these previously fried, fricassée with chopped fat bacon), 3 carrots and a quartered stalk of celery, an onion studded with 2 cloves, a bouquet garni and chopped garlic and parsley. Season with salt and pepper and cook, covered.

Boil for 20 minutes. Add 250 g. (9 oz., 1½ cups) potatoes cut in thick slices. Cook on low heat for 1½ hours. Pour this soup into a tureen over thin slices of stale bread.

Tourain périgourdin (Périgord cookery) – Make a fricassée by frying 150 g. (5 oz., 1¼ cups) finely sliced onions in fat, colouring them slightly but not allowing them to brown. Sprinkle with a good tablespoon flour, add 2 crushed cloves of garlic, moisten with a few tablespoons boiling water and mix until smooth.

Cook 2 big, seeded tomatoes in 2 litres (3½ pints, 4½ pints) stock or water with salt and pepper. Drain the tomatoes, mash them and add to the stock. Add the fricassée to the stock. Simmer steadily for 45 minutes. Thicken with a liaison of 2 egg yolks diluted with a few tablespoons stock. Pour into a soup tureen over thin slices of home-made bread.

Like all onion soups, the Périgord tourain can be gratinée. Pour it into a deep dish over slices of bread, each layer of which has been sprinkled with grated Gruyère cheese. Sprinkle the surface with grated cheese and slowly brown the top in the oven.

Spelt soup (Provençal cookery). SOUPE D'ÉPEAUTRE – Put 1 kg. (2½ lb.) shoulder or leg of mutton into a saucepan. Cover with 3 litres (5¼ pints, 6½ pints) water, bring to the boil and skim. Add an onion studded with 2 cloves, 2 carrots, 1 turnip, 1 leek, 1 stalk of celery, 1 clove of garlic and season with salt.

Add 4 handfuls spelt (a kind of chaffy wheat with small brownish grain). Simmer very gently for 3 hours.

Whiting soup à la bretonne. SOUPE DE MERLAN À LA BRETONNE – This soup is a kind of cotriade (Breton bouillabaisse). It is prepared in the same manner as the latter, using whittings cut in chunks, potatoes, and all the aromatic herbs characteristic of that dish. It can, in fact, be considered as a kind of bouillabaisse made without tomatoes, oil, garlic or saffron. (See COTRIADE.)

INTERNATIONAL SOUPS AND BROTHS. POTAGES ET SOUPES ÉTRANGERS –

Beer soup (German cookery). SOUPE À LA BIÈRE – Stir 1½ litres (2¾ pints, 3¼ pints) light beer into a roux of 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter and 65 g. (2½ oz., ⅔ cup) flour. Season with salt, pepper and cinnamon. Add a teaspoon of sugar. Boil for a few minutes.

Bind with 1½ dl. (¼ pint, ⅔ cup) thick cream and pour piping hot over slices of toast.

Beetroot (U.S.A. beet) soup à l'allemande. POTAGE DE BETTERAVE À L'ALLEMANDE – Peel a raw beetroot, cut it into chunks, and bake in the oven in a casserole with 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter and a pinch of salt.

Rub through a fine sieve and add one-third of its volume of potato purée, prepared as described in the recipe for Purée of potato soup.

Dilute the soup with consommé. Place over a moderate heat, season, and add from 65 to 80 g. (2½ to 3 oz., 5 to 6 tablespoons) fresh butter. Serve with croûtons fried in butter.

Beetroot soup à la russe. POTAGE DE BETTERAVE À LA Russe – Cut a raw beetroot into julienne. Add one-third of its volume of onion and celery, also cut into julienne.

Soften the vegetables slowly in a casserole with 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter, a pinch of salt and a teaspoon sugar. When they are cooked, add 1½ litres (2¾ pints, 3¼ pints) chicken consommé. Boil for 25 minutes. Skim off surplus fat and add chervil leaves to the soup, with croûtons fried in butter.

Polish borsch. POTAGE BORTSCH POLONAIS – Soften slowly in butter a julienne of 1 onion, the white part of 2 leeks, 200 g. (7 oz.) head of cabbage, 250 g. (9 oz.) raw beetroot (U.S.A. beet), a stalk of celery and a parsnip. Cover with 2 litres (3½ pints, 4½ pints) white consommé.

Onion soup (Robert Carrier)

Whiting soup à la bretonne (Claire)

Add a small duck browned in the oven, 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) blanched brisket of beef and a small piece of blanched lean bacon. Garnish with a bouquet garni containing, in addition to the usual herbs, some fennel and marjoram. Bring to the boil, skim, and simmer gently until all the meats are completely cooked, removing the duck and the bacon as soon as they are done.

Fifteen minutes before serving, add 8 small chipolata sausages to poach in the soup. Remove all the meat garnish. Cut the breast of duck, beef and bacon into dice and the sausages into slices. Add a tablespoon Mushroom essence (see ESSENCE) to 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) of the juice of raw, grated beetroot, and a tablespoon chopped and blanched fennel and parsley to the soup.

Serve with the meat garnish and a sauceboat of soured cream.

The sausages can be grilled instead of being poached in the soup. The soured cream is often put in the soup, instead of being served separately.

Russian borsch. POTAGE BORTSCH À LA RUSSE – 2½ litres (4½ pints, 5½ pints) stock, 3 to 4 beetroots (U.S.A. beets), 250 g. (9 oz.) fresh cabbage, 2 carrots, 1 parsnip, 2 stalks celery, 100 g. (4 oz.) boiled ham (optional), 6 Frankfurter sausages (optional), 1 large onion, 3 tablespoons (4 tablespoons) tomato purée (or 100 g., 4 oz. fresh tomatoes), 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) vinegar, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1 to 2 bay leaves, sprig of dill, sprig of parsley, 1½ teaspoons salt, ½ teaspoon pepper, 1½ dl. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  pint,  $\frac{2}{3}$  cup) sour cream.

Clean and shred beetroot, carrots, parsnip, celery and the onion. Cut the root vegetables first into slices then into little 'matchsticks'. The decorative appearance of the vegetables in borsch is very important. Put into a saucepan, add tomatoes or tomato purée, sugar, and enough stock, with a little fat (if the stock has no fat, add 1 or 2 tablespoons butter), to cover the vegetables. Simmer for 15 to 20 minutes, stirring from time to time and adding stock or water to prevent sticking. Add shredded cabbage, mix well and simmer another 15 to 20 minutes. Pour in all the stock, add salt and pepper to taste, bay leaf, 1 tablespoon vinegar, and simmer until the vegetables are done. Potatoes may be put in the borsch – whole if they are small, cut into chips if large. When the borsch is ready and just before serving, a few slices of boiled ham or sausages of the Frankfurter type can be added to it.

To give the characteristic attractive colour, keep 1 beetroot for last minute use. Rub it through a fine grater, cover with a cupful of stock, bring to the boil, simmer for 2 to 3 minutes with a teaspoon of vinegar, and strain the liquid into the borsch. Sprinkle with finely chopped parsley and dill. Add the sour cream and serve. Mushroom patties or buckwheat croûtons may accompany the borsch.

Botvinya (Russian cookery). POTAGE BATWINIA – Boil 1 kg. (2 lb.) fish and leave to cool. Cook 350 g. ( $\frac{3}{4}$  lb.) spinach and 225 g. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  lb.) sorrel separately and rub them through a sieve. Cut fresh cucumbers into strips, grate some horseradish and chop some spring onions. Amalgamate the spinach and the sorrel purées, season with salt and pepper, add a little sugar and a teaspoonful of lemon zest and dilute with a little white wine.

Pour the botvinya into a tureen or into plates. Cut the fish into portions and put on a dish, garnish with fresh cucumbers, spring onions, horseradish and chopped dill. Surround the fish with cooked crayfish tails and lettuce hearts. Serve with ice cubes in a bowl, and a sauceboat of soured cream.

Potage Camaro à la brésilienne – Truss a chicken as for an entrée and put it into an earthenware casserole. Cover with water. Bring to the boil, skim, season and add a bouquet of parsley, chervil and a medium-sized onion. Cook for 30 minutes.

Add 4 tablespoons ( $\frac{1}{3}$  cup) rice and cook, simmering gently, for 2 or 3 hours, depending on the tenderness of the bird. Untruss the chicken. Put it back into the casserole and serve.

Cherry soup I (German cookery). SOUPE AUX CERISES – Put in a stewpan 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) of stoned cherries, with 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) hot water, a small piece of cinnamon bark and a small piece of lemon peel. Cook over a high heat for 8 to 10 minutes. Press the cherries through a fine sieve.

Dilute this purée with 2½ dl. (scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, generous cup) Bordeaux wine, previously boiled with the crushed cherry stones and then strained through muslin. Mix, bring to the boil, and bind with a teaspoon potato flour blended with a little cold water.

Stir in a small spoonful of sugar and pour very hot into the tureen. Add some rusks broken into small pieces.

Cherry soup II. SOUPE AUX CERISES – Cook 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) stoned cherries in water, cinnamon, lemon peel and 25 g. (1 oz., 2 tablespoons) sugar. Boil for 4 minutes. Thicken with a teaspoon potato flour blended with cold water.

Dilute with 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) Bordeaux wine, previously boiled with the crushed cherry stones and strained.

Pour boiling hot into the tureen, and serve with pieces of rusk or slices of brioche lightly toasted.

Cherry soup III. SOUPE AUX CERISES – Melt 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$ cup) butter in a saucepan. Add 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) stoned cherries, 25 g. (1 oz., 2 tablespoons) sugar, a little cinnamon and some lemon peel. Moisten with 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) water. Boil for 8 minutes and pour onto slices of toast.

Beer soup (Scarnati)

English chicken soup or chicken broth I. SOUPE AU POULET À L'ANGLAISE – Put into a deep stewpan or marmite a medium-sized chicken. Pour in  $1\frac{1}{2}$  litres (3 pints, 4 pints) plain stock. Bring to the boil, skim, add salt.

Put in for flavouring an onion stuck with a clove, a bunch of herbs and a stick of celery, and add 100 g. (4 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) rice. Simmer very slowly till cooked.

Take out the chicken and cut it into small pieces. Put it back in the stewpan, having removed the onion and herbs. Add  $1\frac{1}{2}$  dl. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  pint,  $\frac{2}{3}$  cup) chopped vegetables cooked in butter, and bring to the boil.

English chicken soup II. SOUPE AU POULET À L'ANGLAISE – Cook 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) chopped mixed vegetables in butter until they are soft. Pour in  $1\frac{1}{2}$  litres (3 pints, 4 pints) plain stock. Put in a medium-sized chicken cut up while raw into small pieces. Bring to the boil, skim. Add 100 g. (4 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) rice and simmer slowly.

Chotodrie soup (Polish cookery). SOUPE CHOTODRIE – Cut a cooked beet in thin rounds and put them in a tureen. Add 2 diced egg yolks, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) peeled shrimps, and thin slices of cucumber. Sprinkle with chopped fennel and chives. Bring to the boil pickled cucumbers mixed with a little yeast and 1 litre ( $1\frac{1}{2}$  pints, generous quart) sour milk. Season, mix 1 litre ( $1\frac{1}{2}$  pints, generous quart) of the juice with the soup, and chill on ice.

Clam soup with vegetables or Manhattan clam chowder (American cookery). SOUPE DE CLAMS AUX LÉGUMES – Cook gently in butter 100 g. (4 oz.) salt pork cut in small dice. When almost cooked add a medium-sized diced onion. Cook without allowing it to colour. Add 2 sticks of celery and one or two peeled diced green peppers.

Sprinkle with a good tablespoon flour (optional). Cook lightly, stirring all the time. Pour in  $1\frac{1}{2}$  litres ( $2\frac{3}{4}$  pints,  $3\frac{1}{4}$  pints) light stock or water. Bring to the boil. Add 2 medium-sized tomatoes, peeled, seeded, and cut in dice, and 300 g. (11 oz.,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cups) potatoes cut in slightly bigger dice. Season and cook briskly.

Open 3 dozen hard-shelled clams, keeping their liquor. Trim them, putting aside the stomachs. Chop the trimmings and put them in a saucepan with the clam liquor and 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) water. Cook for 15 minutes. Strain through a fine strainer and add this liquid to the soup. Put into the latter the soft parts of the clams cut into large dice. Bring to the boil, cover, and leave them to poach on the lowest possible heat.

Finish the soup with a pinch of thyme, a spoonful chopped parsley and 125 g. (4 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) butter. Heat and serve with water biscuits (soda crackers) whole or broken.

New York clam chowder differs from that of New England, which is a soup made with diced salt pork, onion, potatoes, clams and rich milk.

Cock-a-leekie (Scottish cookery). SOUPE AU COQ ET POIREAUX OU COCKY-LEEKY – Add to chicken broth (made with a medium-sized fowl), strained and skimmed of its fat, 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) of the white part of leeks cut into thin strips and simmered in butter, and the flesh of the chicken cut in thin pieces.

Although this recipe seems to demand a cockerel, the soup is most often prepared with a plump, tender hen.

Gulyas soup (Hungarian cookery). POTAGE GULYAS – This soup is made of beef cut into small pieces, onion, and stock seasoned with paprika. It has either potatoes, cooked in the stock, or noodles added to it.

Gumbo or okra soup (American cookery). SOUPE AUX GOMBOS, SOUPE OKRA – Cook 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) chopped onions very lightly in 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) butter. Add 75 g. (3 oz.) bacon (or raw ham) cut in dice and cook for 3 minutes. Put in 250 g. (9 oz.) diced, raw chicken flesh. Cook lightly, shaking the pan, until the pieces of chicken are quite firm. Pour in  $1\frac{1}{2}$  litres ( $2\frac{3}{4}$  pints,  $3\frac{1}{4}$  pints) chicken stock, bring to the boil and cook gently for 25 minutes. Add 150 g. (5 oz.) of chopped gumbos and 2 peeled, seeded, drained and crushed tomatoes. Cook for 25 minutes.

Gulyas soup (Claire)

Skim all fat from the soup, and before serving add 3 tablespoons (4 tablespoons) rice, boiled in salted water for 15 minutes and rinsed in cold water.

This soup should be highly seasoned. It is sometimes finished off with a few drops of Worcestershire sauce.

Hare soup (English cookery). POTAGE AU LIÈVRE – Cut the forequarters and legs of hare in pieces and cook in butter with 5 tablespoons (6 tablespoons) of a mirepoix consisting of carrots, onion, white part of leeks, lean ham, a sprig of parsley, thyme and a bay leaf.

When all these ingredients are well browned, sprinkle them with 30 g. (1 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) arrowroot or cornstarch. Brown the arrowroot lightly, add 2 litres ( $3\frac{1}{2}$  pints,  $4\frac{1}{2}$  pints) ordinary stock, season, and simmer gently for  $2\frac{1}{2}$  hours.

Remove the legs with a perforated spoon, bone them, cut in small dice and keep this salpicon hot. Moisten with a few tablespoons of strained stock. Add the hare's liver, cut in small slices, and poach lightly.

Take out the rest of the hare with a perforated spoon and bone it. Add the liver to the boned hare meat, pound together in a mortar and rub through a sieve.

Strain the stock and skim it for 25 minutes. Flavour it with 3 tablespoons (4 tablespoons) of sweet marjoram, basil and rosemary infusion, add 60 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) butter, and spice with a pinch of cayenne pepper.

Put the hare purée into a soup tureen and pour the stock over it. Mix well with a whisk. Add the hare salpicon to the soup with 4 tablespoons ( $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) of port.

It is usual in England to add a tablespoon of redcurrant jelly to hare soup just before serving.

Potage Hocheport à la flamande – Put 600 g. (1 lb. 6 oz.) brisket of beef, 300 g. (11 oz.) shoulder of mutton, 300 g. (11 oz.) breast of mutton, 150 g. (5 oz.) pigs' tails, 600 g. (1 lb. 6 oz.) pigs' feet, 300 g. (11 oz.) pigs' ears and 250 g. (9 oz.) salted bacon into a big stockpot.

Cover these meats with 3 litres ( $5\frac{1}{2}$  pints,  $6\frac{1}{2}$  pints) water, season with 12 g. ( $1\frac{1}{2}$  teaspoons) salt. Bring to the boil, skim, and simmer gently.

After 2 hours of cooking add 2 carrots, 1 onion, 4 leeks (white part only), a head of cabbage and 3 big potatoes – slicing all these vegetables. Continue to cook, simmering gently for about 2 hours.

Serve the bouillon of this soup in a tureen, garnishing it with a few vegetables. Serve the meats and rest of the vegetables separately. Add 12 chipolata sausages poached in the soup.

Leberknödeln or Hungarian soup with liver dumplings. POTAGE HONGROIS – Cut 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) lean beef (taken from the top of contre-filet) into large dice and brown it in butter with 100 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) chopped onion. Season with salt, a good pinch of paprika, 3 g. (scant teaspoon) cumin and a pinch of garlic. Sprinkle with 20 g. (1 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) flour. Cook for a few moments, dilute with 2 litres (3½ pints, 4½ pints) ordinary stock, bring to the boil, and simmer for 1 hour. Add 150 g. (5 oz., 1 cup) diced potatoes.

When serving, put 3 tablespoons (4 tablespoons) diced croûtons fried in butter into the soup.

Hungarian soup with liver dumplings. SOUPE AUX BOULETTES DE FOIE – Add to 1½ litres (2¾ pints, 3¼ pints) boiling consommé, liver dumplings prepared in this way:

Cook 150 g. (5 oz.) diced calf's or ox liver in lard or butter for a few moments. Season, and sauté over a moderately high heat.

Pound the liver in a mortar and rub it through a sieve into a basin. Stir until smooth and add 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) softened butter, 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) chopped onions cooked for a few moments in butter, 40 g. (1½ oz.,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) fresh breadcrumbs, 1 teaspoon chopped parsley, and 2 beaten eggs.

Season with salt, paprika and grated nutmeg. Mix well.

Make dumplings or long quenelles and poach them in 1½ litres (2¾ pints, 3¼ pints) boiling consommé for 15 minutes.

Lithuanian soup. SOUPE LITUANIENNE – Add half a celery heart, sliced into strips and cooked gently in butter, to 1½ litres (2¾ pints, 3¼ pints) very light potato soup (without butter). Cook for 30 minutes. Add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) sorrel leaves cooked till soft in butter, 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) sour cream and 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) fresh butter.

Garnish with little squares of streaky bacon, poached and skinned chipolata sausages, and fried egg yolks.

Leber-suppe or purée of liver soup. (Hungarian cookery). SOUPE À LA PURÉE DE FOIE – Cook 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) onion, 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) carrot, 50 g. (2 oz.) lean salt pork and a shallot, all finely chopped, in melted butter with a sprig of thyme and half a bay leaf.

When the vegetables are cooked, add 200 g. (7 oz.) diced calf's or ox liver. Season with salt, pepper and grated nutmeg and brown quickly. Sprinkle with 1½ tablespoons (2 tablespoons) flour. Stir in 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) white wine and 1½ litres (2¾ pints, 3¼ pints) consommé. Cook for 25 minutes.

Drain the liver and vegetables and pound together in a mortar. Rub through a fine sieve. Add the cooking liquor, diluting it, if necessary, with a few tablespoons consommé. Bring to the boil and serve with small croûtons of bread fried in butter.

Livonian soup with klyotski (Russian cookery). POTAGE LIVONIEN AUX KLOSKI – Chop an onion and 50 g. (2 oz.) sorrel leaves finely and cook them in 3 tablespoons (4 tablespoons) butter in a covered pan. Add 500 g. (1 lb.) blanched, well drained spinach. Cook together for a few moments, then add 4 dl. ( $\frac{3}{4}$  pint, scant 2 cups) Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE). Mix well and simmer gently for 15 minutes.

Rub through a sieve. Dilute with 1 litre (1¾ pints, generous quart) ordinary stock. Put back into the saucepan for fifteen minutes, skimming frequently. Finish off with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) cream and 60 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) butter, and serve with klyotski (quenelles) prepared as follows:

Make 200 g. (7 oz.) of unsweetened Chou pastry (see CHOU). Add to it a tablespoon chopped, blanched and pressed out shallots, 25 g. (1 oz., 1½ tablespoons) chopped, lean cooked ham and 25 g. (1 oz.) very small croûtons fried in butter.

Take up a little of the mixture with a teaspoon and drop into boiling water or stock. The klyotski are ready when they float up to the surface.

Mille-fanti soup (Italian cookery). SOUPE MILLE-FANTI – Put into a basin 80 g. (3 oz., 1½ cups) fresh breadcrumbs, 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) grated Parmesan cheese and 2 beaten eggs. Season with salt, pepper and nutmeg and mix well. Add, little by little, to 1½ litres (2¾ pints, 3¼ pints) boiling consommé.

Cover the pan and cook very slowly for 8 minutes. Stir with a whisk before serving.

This soup, which is a kind of panada of cheese and egg, can be made with water in place of consommé.

Minestrone (Claire)

Minestrone (Italian cookery) – Melt in a saucepan 40 g. (1½ oz., 3 tablespoons) chopped salt pork fat and add 50 g. (2 oz., 3 slices) streaky bacon cut in small pieces, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) chopped onion and the chopped white of a leek. Cook gently for 5 minutes. Pour in 1¾ litres (3 pints, 4 pints) water, season, and bring to the boil. Add a carrot, a turnip, a potato and a tender stick of celery cut in small pieces, the heart of a small cabbage similarly cut and 2 tomatoes peeled, seeded and chopped. Boil for 25 minutes. Add 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) diced French beans, 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) fresh peas and 80 g. (3 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) rice. Cook very gently for 45 minutes.

Add a tablespoon chopped salt pork fat crushed with 2 cloves of garlic, a tablespoon chopped basil and a tablespoon chopped parsley. Any vegetables in season may be put in minestrone.

Mock-turtle soup (English cookery) – Soak a calf's head in water, bone it and cook in white stock with carrots, onion, celery, a bouquet garni, cloves, salt and pepper. Drain the head, cut off the ears (which are not used for this soup), trim the rest of the meat and put it under a press between two plates. When it is quite cold, cut it into pieces. Keep these hot in a little of the stock, to be added to the soup later.

Prepare a clear brown gravy, made of slices of salt leg of pork, veal knuckle and a half-roasted chicken. Dilute with stock. When the meats are nearly done and gravy is boiled down, add the stock and stockpot vegetables. Simmer gently for about 2 hours.

Strain. Thicken with a little arrowroot diluted with cold stock. Add to it an infusion of basil, spring onion, marjoram, thyme and bay leaf in Madeira or port.

Strain the soup through a muslin cloth and pour it into a soup tureen. Garnish with the pieces of calf's head kept for this purpose, and small quenelles made of forcemeat mixed with pounded, hard-boiled egg yolks.

Mulligatawny soup I – Ingredients. 2 litres (3½ pints, 4½ pints) water, 1 kg. (2½ lb.) mutton, 2 onions, 2 carrots, 2 apples, 1 small turnip, a bouquet garni, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) flour, 1 tablespoon curry powder, the juice of a ½ lemon, salt.

Method. Remove the fat from the mutton and melt it in the saucepan. Slice the apples and vegetables and when there is sufficient liquid fat to fry them, take out the pieces of fat, put in the vegetables and cook for about 15 minutes. Sprinkle in the flour and curry powder, fry for a few minutes, add the meat cut in small pieces, a teaspoon salt, the herbs and water. Boil, remove the scum as it rises, cover, and cook gently for about 3 hours. Strain, rub the meat through a sieve, and return to the saucepan. When boiling, add the lemon juice, season, and serve with well-cooked rice.

The bones and remains of any kind of meat or poultry may be used instead of mutton.

Mulligatawny soup II (English cookery) – Cut a medium-sized chicken as for fricassée and cook it in 2 litres (3½ pints, 4½ pints) white stock with sliced carrot and an onion, a bouquet garni, a sprig of parsley and 3 tablespoons (4 tablespoons) mushroom parings.

Brown a chopped onion lightly in 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter. Sprinkle with 20 g. (1 oz., ¼ cup) cornflour and a small spoonful curry powder. Moisten with the chicken stock and cook gently for 10 minutes.

Strain through a sieve, simmer for 15 minutes, and add 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) cream.

Put the trimmed pieces of chicken into a soup tureen and strain the soup over them. Serve with Rice à l'indienne (see RICE).

Mutton broth (English cookery) – Cook a coarse brunoise composed of a carrot, a turnip, 2 leeks (white part only), a good stalk of celery and a white onion in butter. Cover with 2 litres (3½ pints, 4½ pints) white stock. Add 300 g. (11 oz.) breast and neck of mutton and 100 g. (4 oz., ¼ cup) blanched barley. Simmer gently for 1½ hours.

Drain the mutton, bone it, cut into large dice and put it back into the broth. Add a tablespoon chopped and blanched parsley.

Mutton soup à la grecque (Greek style). POTAGE DE MOUTON À LA GRECQUE – Make 1½ litres (2¾ pints, 3¼ pints) of light Purée of split pea soup.

Fry 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) boned breast of mutton, cut in large dice, in butter with 4 dl. (¾ pint, scant 2 cups) brunoise of vegetables. Moisten with 3 litres (5¼ pints, 6½ pints) light stock or water. Season with salt and pepper. Bring to the boil, skim, and simmer gently for 1½ hours.

Mix the Purée of split pea soup and the mutton stock, leaving in it the pieces of mutton and the brunoise. Boil for a few moments.

Clear oxtail soup (English cookery). POTAGE OXTAIL CLAIR – Put 1½ kg. (3½ lb.) oxtail, cut in small chunks, into a stewpan, on a foundation of sliced carrots, leeks and onions. Sweat in the oven for 25 minutes.

Cover with 2½ litres (4½ pints, 5½ pints) stock made by cooking 1½ kg. (3½ lb.) gelatinous bones for 7 or 8 hours in 3¼ litres (5¾ pints, 7 pints) water. Season.

Simmer gently, so that the boiling is imperceptible, from 3½ to 4 hours.

Strain the soup and skim off surplus fat. Clarify by boiling it for an hour with 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) chopped lean beef and the white part of two leeks, finely sliced, both these ingredients whisked with a raw white of egg.

Strain the stock through a cloth. Garnish with pieces of oxtail and 3 dl. (½ pint, 1¼ cups) of coarse brunoise of carrots, turnips and celery sweated in butter and dropped into the stock. Add a tablespoon of sherry.

Thick oxtail soup (English cookery). POTAGE OXTAIL LIÉ – Proceed as for Clear oxtail. When the broth has been strained, thicken it with 50 g. (2 oz., 4 tablespoons) brown roux to each litre (quart), and 3 good tablespoons (4 tablespoons) tomato purée. Garnish with mixed vegetables cut up and cooked in butter, as for clear oxtail soup. Flavour with sherry.

Olla-podrida soup. POTAGE OLLA-PODRIDA – See OLLA-PODRIDA.

Oyster soup with okra (American cookery) – Put 100 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) chopped pork fat into a thick-bottomed saucepan, and when the fat melts add 100 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) chopped onion and cook it gently without letting it colour. Add 3 tomatoes peeled and cut in quarters, 10 okras, 1 small green pepper finely chopped, and 1 litre (scant quart, generous quart) white stock. Season with salt and pepper (a little curry powder may be added, if liked). Cook for 15 minutes, then put in 24 de-bearded oysters with their liquor, and poach them for a few moments. Thicken the soup with a little arrowroot.

Pistou soup I (Italian cookery). SOUPE AU PISTOU – Cook, in 1½ litres (2¾ pints, 3¼ pints) boiling water, 250 g. (9 oz., 1 cup) diced French beans, 3 potatoes cut in small pieces, and 2 peeled tomatoes, seeded, and crushed. Season.

When the vegetables are almost cooked add 100 g. (4 oz.) spaghetti. Finish cooking very slowly.

Pound in a mortar 2 cloves of garlic with several basil leaves. Add, still pounding, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) oil and 2 or 3 tablespoons (3 or 4 tablespoons) stock. Pour the soup into a tureen, adding to it the above mixture and 4 tablespoons (½ cup) grated Parmesan.

This soup, of Genoese origin, is popular in Provence.

Pistou soup II. SOUPE AU PISTOU – Cook gently a medium-sized onion and a leek, cut in small pieces, in a tablespoon butter. Add 2 peeled, drained and crushed tomatoes.

Pour in 1½ litres (2¾ pints, 3¼ pints) stock or water, bring to the boil, and add 250 g. (9 oz., 1 cup) diced French beans and 3 potatoes cut in small pieces. Season.

Finish off as in the preceding recipe.

The garlic paste prescribed for binding the pistou soup can also be prepared with chopped salt pork fat. Sometimes halved tomatoes, seeded and grilled, are also added.

Puchero soup (Spanish pot-au-feu). POTAGE PUCHERO – Prepare as for Olla-Podrida, but boil down the quantity of basic ingredients, especially the meats.

Potage Rahm-suppe (German cookery) – Cook 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) each of butter and flour together without colouring, and stir in 1 litre (scant quart, generous quart) white stock and the same quantity boiled milk. Put in a small onion stuck with a clove, and a sprig of parsley, and season with a pinch of cumin, some grated nutmeg, 6 g. (1 teaspoon) salt and 3 peppercorns. Cook for 45 minutes. Strain the soup and thicken it with 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) sour cream, letting it boil for 1 minute. Serve with croûtons of bread fried in butter.

Rassol'nik (Russian cookery). POTAGE ROSSOLNICK – Prepare 2 litres (3½ pints, 4½ pints) slightly thickened chicken broth and add 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) fresh cucumber juice. Cut celery roots and large parsley roots (Hamburg parsley) into the shape of tiny carrots, cutting a cross in the base of each. Cut pickled cucumbers into small chunks. Blanch all these vegetables well and add to the chicken broth. Cook gently for 40 minutes, keeping the soup well skimmed.

Add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) cucumber juice and bind with 2 egg yolks beaten in 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) cream. Add very small dumplings of chicken forcemeat and poach in the soup.

Shchi (Russian cookery). POTAGE STSCHY – Cook 2 large chopped onions in 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) butter until they are a pale golden colour. Sprinkle with 2 tablespoons flour, cook for a few moments, and stir in  $2\frac{1}{2}$  litres (4 $\frac{1}{2}$  pints, 5 $\frac{1}{2}$  pints) white stock. Bring to the boil. Add 250 g. (9 oz.) brisket of beef cut into large dice, blanched for 10 minutes in salted water, drained and trimmed, and 250 g. (9 oz.) coarsely chopped sauerkraut. Add a good bunch of herbs and cook very gently for about 3 hours. Add  $1\frac{1}{2}$  dl. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  pint,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) sour cream and a teaspoon chopped blanched parsley.

Solyanka (Russian cookery). POTAGE SOLIANKA – Prepare 2 litres (3 $\frac{1}{2}$  pints, 4 $\frac{1}{2}$  pints) ham-flavoured consommé, and add 250 g. (9 oz.,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cups) braised sauerkraut and a tablespoon blanched parsley leaves.

Sour cream soup I (Hungarian cookery). SOUPE À LA CRÈME AIGRE – Add to  $1\frac{1}{2}$  litres (2 $\frac{1}{2}$  pints, 3 $\frac{1}{2}$  pints) thin white sauce an onion stuck with a clove, a bouquet garni, a pinch of powdered cumin and grated nutmeg. Cook for 20 minutes, skimming well. Rub through a fine sieve. Add 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) sour cream and serve with croûtons of bread fried in butter.

Sour cream soup II. SOUPE À LA CRÈME AIGRE – Make a white roux of 3 tablespoons (4 tablespoons) each of butter and flour. Stir in 1 litre (scant quart, generous quart) stock and  $\frac{1}{2}$  litre (scant pint,  $2\frac{1}{4}$  cups) boiled milk. Finish and garnish as above.

Sweet-sour soup, or Mehlsuppe, also called flour soup (German cookery). SOUPE AIGRE-DOUCE, SOUPE À LA FARINE – Cut up finely a medium-sized onion and the white parts of two leeks, and cook them for a few moments in 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) butter. Sprinkle with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) flour. Add  $1\frac{1}{2}$  litres (2 $\frac{1}{2}$  pints, 3 $\frac{1}{2}$  pints) stock or water and cook for 25 minutes. Stir in 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) thick cream and a tablespoon fresh butter.

Milanaisé tripe soup, or Butséga. SOUPE AU GRAS-DOUBLE À LA MILANAISE – Cut in thin strips 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) veal tripe, blanched, trimmed and drained. Put in a saucepan with onion and the white part of a leek, also chopped, and cooked with diced salt pork fat. Cook for a few moments, sprinkle with a tablespoon flour and stir in 2 litres (3 $\frac{1}{2}$  pints, 4 $\frac{1}{2}$  pints) stock or water. Bring to the boil. Add 2 peeled, seeded, sliced tomatoes, a cabbage heart cut in thin strips, 5 tablespoons (6 tablespoons) peas and a few broccoli heads. Season and cook briskly.

Turtle soup (English cookery). POTAGE À LA TORTUE – This soup, made from the large sea turtle, is prepared with the bony carapace and plastron only, from which the outside or thin hard shell has been removed.

The carapace and plastron of the animal (bled for as long as possible after killing) are cut into pieces, blanched for a few minutes in boiling water, cleaned of the outer shields that cover them, put in a big stewpan with richly flavoured consommé, savoury vegetables and Turtle herbs (see HERBS), and cooked like an ordinary broth for 6 or 7 hours. The pieces of turtle are drained, boned, cut into pieces and kept warm in strained broth.

The liquor used to cook the turtle can be a stock made with the flesh of the interior of the animal, reinforced with some beef and chicken. The soup is strained through a cloth, reheated and enriched with 4 dl. ( $\frac{3}{4}$  pint, scant 2 cups) Madeira (or sherry) to each litre (quart).

The aromatic herbs used for flavouring are basil, marjoram, sage, rosemary, savoury and thyme. Coriander and peppercorns are also added in a little muslin bag.

Just before serving, the pieces of turtle are put back in the soup.

Turtle soup (thick). POTAGE À LA TORTUE – Made in the same way as described in the previous recipe. After straining it is thickened with a roux of 25 g. (1 oz., 4 tablespoons) flour and 2 tablespoons butter, or with 80 g. (3 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) arrowroot to 1 litre (scant quart, generous quart) soup.

Ukha (Russian cookery). POTAGE OUKA – Prepare fish stock using sturgeon, tench or perch, well spiced with parsnip, celery, fennel and mushroom parings.

Make small paupiettes of lavaret or white fish and poach them. Prepare 250 g. (9 oz.,  $2\frac{1}{4}$  cups) julienne of parsnip, and the white part of leek and celery. Cook in butter, and when quite soft moisten with a few tablespoons strained fish stock.

Clarify the stock, either with caviar or chopped whiting, and strain through a cloth.

Add the paupiettes and julienne of vegetables to the soup. Serve with a timbale of cooked buckwheat and a dish of small Rastegais (see HORS-D'ŒUVRE, Hot hors-d'œuvre).

Veal soup with herbs (Dutch cookery). SOUPE DE VEAU AUX HERBES – Veal stock thickened with a white roux, seasoned with aromatic herbs and garnished with quenelles or dumplings made with veal and chopped herbs.

SOUPIR DE NONNE (Nun's sigh) – Name sometimes used for the soufflé fritter made of chou pastry commonly called Pet de nonne. (See FRITTERS, Soufflé fritters.)

SOUP LADLE. LOUCHE – Deep spoon used to serve soup. Soup ladles are made in different sizes.

SOUR. AIGRE – Possessing an acid and piquant taste or smell.

SOURIRE – Term meaning to simmer very gently. For example: 'Le pot-au-feu sourit'.

SOUR-SWEET. AIGRE-DOUX – Having a sweet and sour taste.

SOUS-NAPPE (Under-tablecloth) – The custom of putting a piece of thick flannel under the tablecloth should be normal practice in the home. Utensils make no noise as they are set down.

SOUS-NOIX OF VEAL – Term used in French butchery to describe the under part of silverside of the leg of veal.

SOUTH AMERICA – See INTERNATIONAL COOKERY, American cookery.

Cutting up turtles for the preparation of turtle soup (Wide World)

SOUVAROV – Petit-four for which the recipe is as follows:

Make a paste with 600 g. (1½ lb., 5 cups) sifted cake flour, 400 g. (14 oz., 1½ cups) butter, 200 g. (7 oz., 1 cup) sugar and a little cream. Allow to rest. Roll out thinly. Cut out with a pastry cutter with fluted edges, place on a baking sheet and cook in a fairly hot oven.

Sandwich the pieces of pastry together two by two, spread with thick apricot jam and sprinkle with icing sugar.

SOUVAROV or SOUVOROV (À LA) – Sometimes spelt Souwaroff. The name describes a method of preparing poultry and game birds.

A bird cooked à la Souvarov is done in an earthenware casserole with foie gras and truffles, and sealed with a strip of dough round the lid. (See CHICKEN, Chicken Souvarov; PHEASANT, Pheasant à la Souvarov.)

SOW. TRUEIE – Female pig. See PORK.

SOW-THISTLE (U.S. Milkweed). LAITERON – Plant which has something of the flavour of both lettuce and chicory. It contains a milky substance.

It is somewhat leathery, but after boiling in salt water can be prepared like spinach. When the leaves are tender they can be used in salads.

In winter the roots are eaten, prepared in the same way as black and white salsify.

SOYA BEAN. SOJA – Plant of the Leguminosae family, a native of China, now widely cultivated. This plant has the merit of being free from attack from insect pests, and grows easily in dry country. It is the richest and cheapest source of vegetable protein, has a fairly high fat and low starch content. Soya bean in one form or another is in daily use in the East.

Soya bean curd. FROMAGE DE SOJA – Cook freshly shelled soya beans in water, without salt. When they are almost cooked pour off the greater part of the water. Continue to cook until the skins are very tender. Turn out into an earthenware dish and leave till the next day, when they will have become jellied. Reheat, drain off the liquid, and rub through a fine sieve. Add the drained-off cooking liquor.

This vegetable jelly is rich in legumin, which differs from casein only in the products of its decomposition.

Add a little milk or yeast to produce fermentation and salt to taste. Drain in a sieve. Separate into cheese and leave them to 'take' in the usual way.

Soya meat. VIANDE DE SOJA – This preparation is too complicated to be made in the home, and needs industrial equipment.

The 'vegetarian meat' has the appearance of cooked ham. It is used in sandwiches and for hors-d'œuvre. It may be eaten cold or reheated.

Soya milk. LAIT DE SOJA – Name for the mixture of cooking liquor and purée of soya beans before fermentation.

Soya sauce or extract. SAUCE, EXTRAIT DE SOJA – Eastern peoples use soya in the form of this condiment, which heightens the flavour of various dishes. A few drops of the extract added to a vegetable soup makes it more savoury. It is also used to strengthen sauces and stews, and as an addition to salad dressings.

Soya cheese – See CHEESE.

SPAGHETTI – One of the most popular of Italian pasta products. It is made from wheat, like macaroni, but is solid, not tubular. All methods of preparing macaroni (q.v.) are applicable to spaghetti.

Spaghetti à la napolitaine – Cook the spaghetti in plenty of boiling water, salted in the proportion of 1½ teaspoons to 1 litre (1¼ pints, generous quart).

As soon as the pasta is cooked (9 to 12 minutes) drain it, replace in the saucepan and hold over the heat for a moment to dry off excess moisture. Season with salt and pepper and add, shaking the spaghetti, 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, ½ cup) thick Tomato sauce (see SAUCE), 25 g. (1 oz., ¼ cup) grated Parmesan and Gruyère mixed, and 50 g. (2 oz., ½ cup) butter, for every 150 g. (5 oz., 1 cup) pasta. Shake well to mix and serve, or use to accompany meat or poultry.

SPAIN – See INTERNATIONAL COOKERY.

SPARKLET – Small ampoule containing liquid carbon dioxide, with which effervescent drinks can be made. (See SIPHON.)

SPARKLING. MOUSSEUX – This term described all wines that, after second fermentation, effervesce when poured. The French describe the various degrees of effervescence as perlant, pétillant, crémant and mousseux. Champagne is the only effervescent wine that is never described as mousseux.

Several methods are employed for making sparkling wines:

Méthode rurale – In this case, it is the natural sugar remaining in the wine after first fermentation which, fermenting again in the bottles, causes the effervescence (Gaillac, Blanquette de Limoux, Clairette de Die).

Méthode champenoise – So called because it was perfected in Champagne by Dom Pérignon and his successors. It is the addition to the 'still' wine of sugar-based 'liqueur' that produces the second fermentation in the bottle. This method involves a whole series of subsidiary operations: working of the deposit down towards the cork (remuage), extraction of the sediment-coated cork (dégorgement), etc. (See CHAMPAGNE, The wine of Champagne).

SPATULA

Méthode de la cuve close – Instead of the second fermentation taking place in the bottles, it is carried out in enormous vats. It is illegal in France to employ this method in the production of A.O.C. wines.

There is also méthode de la première fermentation used mainly in Italy for Asti. This single fermentation process is achieved by retaining part of the carbonic gas produced by the fermenting must. With the méthode 'allemande' second fermentation takes place in the bottles but the wine is then decanted into large vats to be processed and filtered (omitting the operations of remuage and dégorgement).

Finally, there are some very inferior commercial 'sparkling' processes involving the use of carbonic gas.

SPATULA. SPATULE – Kitchen utensil made of steel, copper or wood.

SPECULOS (Belgian pastry) – Place on the kitchen table, forming a circle, 500 g. (18 oz., 4½ cups) sifted flour. Place in the centre of the circle a small pinch of salt, 1 teaspoon bicarbonate of soda, 2 teaspoons powdered cinnamon, 3 eggs, 4 finely crushed cloves, 300 g. (11 oz., 1½ cups) brown sugar and 250 g. (9 oz., generous cup) butter. Mix these ingredients well together and, little by little, incorporate the flour. Press the dough together and leave in a cool place until the next day.

Divide the dough into several pieces. Roll out each piece and press into floured wooden moulds. Turn out on to lightly buttered baking sheets. Cook in a moderate oven.

SPETZLI (Alsatian cookery) – Mix together 500 g. (18 oz., 4½ cups) sifted flour, 4 eggs, 2 to 3 tablespoons double cream, salt, pepper and a pinch of grated nutmeg.

Using a spatula, drop pieces of this paste into a pan of salted boiling water, each piece being about the size of a small walnut. Poach. Drain the spetzli, dry them on a cloth and toss them in butter in the frying pan.

Serve in a deep dish, sprinkled with Noisette butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters).

SPICE. ÉPICE – An aromatic substance such as pepper, cloves, etc., used to season culinary preparations. A complete list of spices is given under CONDIMENTS.

It is generally agreed that most spices and condiments used in cookery have the effect of stimulating the gastric juices. However the use of spices, especially in large quantities, in diets for persons suffering from stomach disorders is generally regarded as inadvisable.

The function of tasty substances, which enhance the flavour of food, is not to act directly on the gastric juices, but to stimulate the digestive processes by reflexes following their contact with the taste buds.

In the seventeenth century, says Franklin, spices were not used in excess to quite the same extent as in previous centuries, but the passion for perfumes which poisoned the French court from the sixteenth century up to the middle of the reign of Louis XIV did not even respect stews, pastries, liqueurs, etc. Orris-root, rose water and marjoram were all mixed into them and the chef always had musk and ambergris at hand.

Green walnuts were flavoured with rose water. 'Nulles', a type of cream, was seasoned with amber and musk. Pâtés and pies were flavoured with musk. Eggs were sprinkled with scented waters. Some dishes were even sprinkled with soot!

Fine spices. ÉPICES FINES – Ingredients. 700 g. (1½ lb., 5½ cups) white pepper, 300 g. (11 oz., 2½ cups) allspice, 100 g. (4 oz., scant cup) mace, 50 g. (2 oz., ½ cup) each of nutmeg, cloves, cinnamon, bay leaves, sage, marjoram, and rosemary.

Method. Pound these ingredients in a mortar and mix them thoroughly. Rub through a fine sieve. Keep in tightly-stoppered bottles.

Mixed spices (Carême's recipe). ÉPICES COMPOSÉES – 'Dry in the oven or a hot cupboard: thyme, bay leaves, basil, sage, a little coriander and mace. When these ingredients are perfectly dry, pound in a mortar and sieve them. Add a third of fine pepper. Put them in a box with a tightly fitting lid in a dry place and use as required.'

Mixed spices (commercial). QUATRE ÉPICES, ÉPICES FINES – Most grocers sell mixed spices ready prepared.

Spiced salt. ÉPICE (SEL) – Spiced salt used for flavouring stuffings is made with 100 g. (4 oz., ½ cup) table salt, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) pepper and 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) Fine spices.

SPICY. EXCITANT – Spicy foods are those which are strongly flavoured with condiments or which have a very pronounced flavour. Spicy foods act upon the taste buds in the mouth and stimulate the gastric juices.

Spider crab

SPIDER CRAB. ARAIGNÉE DE MER – Name given in France to various species of shellfish allied to crabs. For culinary preparation see CRAB.

The name of spider crab is also commonly given in many coastal places in France to certain fish belonging to the weever genus.

SPIGOT. FOSSET – Wooden vent-peg inserted into the hole drilled in a wine cask to enable the wine to be tasted.

SPIKENARD. NARD – A spice, very much in favour in ancient times as an ointment, and in the Middle Ages as a condiment. It is still so used in Malaysian cookery.

Indian spikenard (Nardostachys jatamansi) is the root of a Far-Eastern species of valerian, from which the above spice was derived. American spikenard (Aralia racemosa) has a powerful and pleasant fragrance, and a bitter aromatic flavour.

SPINACH. ÉPINARDS – Pot vegetable of Persian origin, cultivated for its leaves. It was unknown to the Romans and transplanted to Europe by the Moors. It has been greatly improved by cultivation. Spinach contains a viscous substance by virtue of which it has laxative properties. It also contains potassium oxalate and a fair amount of iron (though less than sorrel, leek and lettuce).

Before cooking, spinach must be stripped, carefully washed and parboiled as quickly as possible in boiling salted water. Cool under running water, drain thoroughly, squeeze to extract all moisture, and rub through a sieve or chop it. Do not cool under running water if spinach is to be served whole.

If fresh garden spinach is used, strip, wash and place in a saucepan. For 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) spinach add 40 g. (1½ oz., 3 tablespoons) butter, 3 tablespoons (scant ¼ cup) water and a pinch of salt. Cover and cook rapidly. When all the moisture has evaporated, add 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter.

Spinach à l'anglaise. ÉPINARDS À L'ANGLAISE – Parboil the spinach rapidly in boiling salted water. Drain and dry in a cloth. Serve whole in a hot dish, with fresh butter.

Spinach in butter. ÉPINARDS AU BEURRE – Whole. Heat a little butter in a pan. Add the spinach, parboiled, drained and dried in a cloth. Leave on the stove for a few minutes to evaporate all moisture. Season with salt, pepper and a pinch of nutmeg. When the spinach is dry, add the butter, allowing 100 g. (4 oz., ½ cup) butter to 500 g. (generous 1 lb., 2 cups) cooked spinach.

Chopped. Parboil the spinach. Cool under running water. Drain and squeeze out as much moisture as possible. Chop coarsely and proceed as above.

Purée. Parboil the spinach. Cool under running water. Drain and dry in a cloth. Rub through a sieve and proceed as above.

Spinach in noisette butter. ÉPINARDS AU BEURRE NOISETTE – Using whole, chopped or sieved prepared spinach, heat butter in a pan until it is nut brown in colour. Add the spinach. Season with salt, pepper and a pinch of nutmeg. Mix and serve.

Spinach in cream. ÉPINARDS À LA CRÈME – Chop the spinach or rub through a sieve. Cook in butter. When all the moisture has evaporated, add fresh cream. Serve in a deep dish and surround with hot fresh cream.

Spinach can also be served in this way with Cream sauce (see SAUCE, Compound white sauces) instead of fresh cream.

Spinach croquettes. CROQUETTES AUX ÉPINARDS – Make the croquettes in the usual way using the following mixture: two-thirds chopped spinach cooked in butter and one-third Duchess potato mixture (see POTATOES).

Fry the croquettes just before serving. Drain them. Garnish with fried parsley.

Croûtes of spinach au gratin. CROÛTES GRATINÉES AUX ÉPINARDS – Shape sandwich bread into deep hollow cases. Fry them in butter. Fill with spinach heaped up in a dome, prepared as for Spinach au gratin (see below). Sprinkle with grated cheese. Pour on melted butter and brown in a hot oven.

Spinach au gratin. ÉPINARDS AU GRATIN – Parboil and dry thoroughly 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) spinach. Chop or leave whole. Simmer with 100 g. (4 oz., ½ cup) butter. Add 75 g. (3 oz., ¾ cup) grated cheese. Season and place in a buttered ovenware dish, sprinkle generously with grated cheese, pour on melted butter, and brown in the oven.

Spinach can also be prepared in this way by adding a few tablespoons Cream sauce (see SAUCE, Compound white sauces) after cooking in butter.

Spinach in gravy. ÉPINARDS AU JUS – Blanch and drain the spinach. Chop or rub through a sieve. Cook in butter until all moisture has evaporated. Add a few tablespoons of concentrated veal stock, season, serve in a deep dish and surround with concentrated veal gravy.

Spinach pancakes. CRÊPES AUX ÉPINARDS – Blanch and drain the spinach and dry it in a cloth. Chop finely and simmer in butter. Add an equal quantity of Savoury crêpe batter (see CRÊPE). Season with salt, pepper and nutmeg. Mix thoroughly. Make pancakes in the usual way.

Spinach salad. SALADE D'ÉPINARDS – Plunge spinach into boiling water for a few seconds. Cool under running water, drain, dry in a cloth. Put in a salad bowl, sprinkle with chopped hard-boiled eggs, dress with oil, vinegar, salt and pepper.

Spinach soufflé – See SOUFFLÉS, Savoury soufflés.

Spinach subrics. SUBRICS D'ÉPINARDS – Parboil whole spinach quickly in boiling salted water. Drain and dry in a cloth. Cook in butter until all moisture has evaporated. Take the pan off the heat and add, for 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) spinach, 1½ dl. (¼ pint, ¾ cup) thick Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE), 1 whole egg, 3 yolks beaten as for an omelette, and 2 or 3 tablespoons double cream. Season with salt, pepper and nutmeg. Mix.

Heat clarified butter in a frying pan and pour the mixture into it, a spoonful at a time. Fry, taking care that the subrics are separated from one another in the pan to prevent them from sticking together.

Serve with cream.

Spinach with sugar. ÉPINARDS AU SUCRE – Parboil and drain the spinach. Dry in a cloth. Cook in butter until all moisture has evaporated. Sweeten lightly. Shape into a dome in a dish and cover with hot fresh cream. Garnish with fried bread cut into sponge-finger shapes.

SPINACH, GIANT MEXICAN. ÉPINARDS GÉANTS DU MEXIQUE – This vegetable derives from a shrub which is more than 2.25 m. (7 feet) tall. One plant yields from 1 to 1½ kg. (2½ to 3½ lb.) fleshy leaves, each from 18 to 23 cm. (7 to 9 inches) long.

The flavour of these leaves is between that of spinach and sorrel.

SPINACH, NEW ZEALAND. TÉTRAGONE – One of the indigenous vegetables of New Zealand, having been brought back from that country by Captain Cook. It has long, thick, whitish-green leaves with a pleasant taste, which are prepared like ordinary spinach.

SPINACH, WILD. ÉPINARD SAUVAGE – See GOOD KING HENRY.

SPINY LOBSTER. LANGOUSTE – Crustacean with a spiny shell, greenish-brown in colour, with yellow markings on the tail and with two long antennae. Its oblong body, more barrel-shaped than that of the lobster, is divided into 6 shell plates and ends in a fan-shaped tail.

Spiny lobsters have no claws, as lobsters do, and their legs are all the same size and shape. They vary in length from 30 to 50 cm. (12 to 20 inches).

Spiny lobsters are to be found in large numbers in the Atlantic and the Mediterranean. Moroccan lobsters have found their way into the continental market. They are known in France as the Langouste royale. This shellfish is similar in shape to the spiny lobsters caught off the French coast, except that its body is somewhat flatter. It is of excellent quality.

Another variety of spiny lobster, the Martinique lobster, is

To cut open a spiny lobster, begin with the tail. Then split open the head and thorax (Larousse) also sold frozen in French fish shops. These are very prolific in the West Indian Ocean and in the coastal waters of South America.

Spiny lobster à l'américaine. LANGOUSTE À L'AMÉRICAINNE – Proceed as for Lobster à l'américaine (see LOBSTER).

Spiny lobster aspic. ASPIC DE LANGOUSTE – Proceed as for Lobster aspic (see LOBSTER).

Boiled spiny lobster with various sauces. LANGOUSTE BOUILLIE – Boil the spiny lobster in a court-bouillon, as for Boiled lobster (see LOBSTER).

Serve hot, with a sauce suitable for poached or boiled fish or shellfish. Serve cold, with mayonnaise or some other cold sauce.

Spiny lobster à la bordelaise. LANGOUSTE À LA BORDELAISE – Proceed as for Lobster à la bordelaise (see LOBSTER).

Spiny lobster à la bourgeoise (Italian cookery). LANGOUSTE À LA BOURGEOISE – Take a spiny lobster weighing approximately 700 to 800 g. ( $1\frac{1}{2}$  to  $1\frac{3}{4}$  lb.). Scrub it under running cold water. Cut into slices as for Lobster à l'américaine (see LOBSTER). Set aside the coral and the creamy parts of the lobster.

Place 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) peeled, chopped and deseeded tomatoes, 2 medium sliced onions, 1 clove garlic,  $\frac{1}{2}$  a bay leaf, 1 sprig of thyme, and 1 tablespoon chopped parsley in a shallow buttered pan.

Lay the slices of spiny lobster on these vegetables. Season with salt and pepper. Pour on 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) olive oil, a glass of white wine, a small glass of Marsala and a small glass of brandy.

Cover, and bring to the boil. Boil for 20 minutes. Take out the lobster, and arrange it in a dish. Boil down the sauce, if necessary. Thicken it with the chopped coral, add 1 teaspoon chopped parsley and a pinch of cayenne pepper. Bring to the boil and pour over the dish.

Spiny lobster butter. BEURRE DE LANGOUSTE – Made from the shells and trimmings of the spiny lobster which have been cooked in court-bouillon. Pound these thoroughly. Add an equal weight of butter. Rub through a sieve.

Spiny lobster cardinal. LANGOUSTE CARDINAL – Boil the spiny lobster in a court-bouillon. Drain, split in two lengthwise and reserve the shell halves. Remove the flesh from the tail and cut it into 6 to 8 slices. Dice the rest of the spiny lobster flesh and place in a pan. Add diced mushrooms and truffles and bind with Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE) with cream added. Simmer down, blend with Spiny lobster butter (see butter) and strain.

Heat this salpicon without letting it come to the boil. Fill the halves of the shell with it. Decorate the top of each shell with lobster slices alternating with strips of truffle. Cover with béchamel sauce to which spiny lobster butter has been added. Sprinkle with grated cheese. Pour on melted butter.

Place the halves of spiny lobster in a baking tin. Brown in a very hot oven and garnish with parsley.

Collops of spiny lobster à l'andalouse. ESCALOPES DE LANGOUSTE À L'ANDALOUSE – Cook a spiny lobster in court-bouillon and leave to cool. Shell. Cut the tail into 10 thick slices. Coat these with Chaud-froid sauce (see SAUCE) and a purée of red peppers and truffles. Glaze with jelly. Chill on ice.

Make a salad with the rest of the lobster meat, coarsely chopped, diced truffles, peeled, cooked and diced green and red peppers, and diced potatoes. Season with paprika and stir in mayonnaise mixed with thick jelly.

Make a dome of this salad in the centre of a dish. This must be done as soon as the salad is seasoned, otherwise it will set too hard.

Surround the salad with as many Tomato mousselines (see TOMATO) as there are spiny lobster slices. Put a spiny lobster slice on top of each mould. Make a border of chopped jelly. Decorate the top of the salad with lettuce hearts and quartered hard-boiled eggs.

Collops of spiny lobster à la parisienne. ESCALOPES DE LANGOUSTE À LA PARISIENNE – Cook a spiny lobster in court-bouillon. Leave to cool. Shell. Cut the tail into slices. Cover with Jellied mayonnaise (see SAUCE, Mayonnaise sauce, thick). Decorate with truffles and carrots shaped with a small ball-scoop. Glaze with jelly. Chill thoroughly in the refrigerator.

Arrange in a circle round a Parisian salad (see SALAD) seasoned with jelly mayonnaise and made into a dome in the centre of a dish.

Decorate with slices of hard-boiled egg and jelly. In the centre of the dish place a lettuce heart decorated with a hard-boiled egg.

Collops of spiny lobster à l'andalouse

Collops of spiny lobster à la parisienne

Coquilles of spiny lobster (cold). COQUILLES DE LANGOUSTE – Using spiny lobster, proceed as for Lobster in scallop shells (cold) (see LOBSTER).

Coquilles of spiny lobster (hot). COQUILLES DE LANGOUSTE – Prepare with spiny lobsters cooked in a court-bouillon, shelled and diced or cut into small slices. Proceed as for Lobster Mornay in scallop shells (see LOBSTER).

Spiny lobster in court-bouillon. LANGOUSTE AU COURT-BOUILLON. Made with small spiny lobsters. Proceed as for Crayfish à la nage (see CRAYFISH).

Spiny lobsters cooked in this way are usually served hot. A suitable sauce is served separately. They can also be served cold, in which case they are usually called Spiny lobster à la nage (see below).

Spiny lobster in cream. LANGOUSTE À LA CRÈME – Proceed as for Lobster in cream (see LOBSTER).

Croquettes and kromesies of spiny lobster. CROQUETTES, CROMESQUIS DE LANGOUSTE – Proceed as for any other croquettes or kromeskis (see HORS-D'ŒUVRE, Hot hors-d'œuvre).

Curried spiny lobster. ÉTUVÉ DE LANGOUSTE AU CURRIE – Sauté in butter 2 spiny lobsters, cut into slices as for Spiny lobster à l'américaine. Add 100 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) chopped onion. Season with salt, pepper and 1 to 2 teaspoons curry powder.

When the slices are a golden colour, moisten with 3 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint,  $1\frac{1}{4}$  cups) white wine. Add a bouquet garni and 2 peeled and crushed tomatoes. Cover the pan. Simmer until almost all the stock has evaporated.

Drain the spiny lobster slices and keep warm. Remove the bouquet garni from the pan. Stir in 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE) and 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) double cream. Boil for a few seconds. Replace the spiny lobster slices in the sauce. Cover and simmer for 15 minutes. Add 2 teaspoons butter and a squeeze of lemon juice to the sauce.

Serve with Rice à l'indienne (see RICE).

Spiny lobster demi-deuil. LANGOUSTE DEMI-DEUIL – Boil 2 spiny lobsters in a white wine court-bouillon. Drain and leave to cool. Split the spiny lobsters lengthwise and remove the shells. Cut the tails into slices and dice the remaining flesh.

Make a salpicon of truffles and mushrooms blended with a little fish-based Suprême sauce (see SAUCE), with fresh cream and a little Madeira added. Stir in the diced spiny lobster flesh. Put the salpicon in the shells and decorate with the tail slices. Cover with suprême sauce and brown in a very hot oven. Warm strips of truffle in white fish stock jelly, and use these to decorate the tops of the shells.

Spiny lobster au gratin. LANGOUSTE AU GRATIN – Boil the spiny lobster in a court-bouillon. Split it lengthwise, shell it and cut it up as for Spiny lobster cardinal.

Mix the diced flesh with thick Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE) with butter added. Add to the salpicon an equal quantity of diced, cooked mushrooms.

Fill the halves of the shell with the salpicon. Arrange the slices on top. Cover with the remainder of the sauce. Sprinkle with grated cheese, pour on melted butter and brown.

Grilled spiny lobster. LANGOUSTE GRILLÉE – Proceed as for Grilled lobster (see LOBSTER).

Spiny lobster Mornay. LANGOUSTE MORNAY – Another name for Spiny lobster au gratin.

Spiny lobster à la moscovite. LANGOUSTE À LA MOSCOVITE – Boil a large spiny lobster in a court-bouillon. Leave it to cool in the stock and drain. Make 2 incisions 4 cm. ( $1\frac{1}{2}$  inches) apart lengthwise in the shell. Remove the part of the shell between the incisions and cut off the tail, being careful not to break it. Remove all the flesh and the creamy part from the body of the lobster.

Dice the flesh and add to it diced potatoes and diced truffles. Season with thick Mayonnaise sauce (see SAUCE, Cold sauces). Stuff the shell with this salad.

Trim a slice of buttered sandwich bread into the form of a wedge and set the spiny lobster on it. Place on a large oval dish. Garnish the dish with very clear fish aspic jelly. Chill in the refrigerator or on ice.

Slice the tail of the spiny lobster. Coat with white Chaud-froid sauce (see SAUCE) based on Fish fumet (see FUMET). When this sauce has quite set, place a strip of truffle on top of each slice and glaze with jelly. Chill.

Arrange the slices on the spiny lobster shell, starting at the head and overlapping.

Surround with the following garnish:

Very small barquettes of thin Lining paste (see DOUGH), filled with caviare, halved hard boiled eggs decorated with strips of truffle and glazed with jelly, small artichoke hearts filled with vegetable salad dressed with jelly mayonnaise, lettuce hearts.

Run a skewer between the eyes of the spiny lobster. Decorate with chopped jelly and surround the dish with rounds of jelly cut out with a pastry-cutter. Serve with mayonnaise mixed with the sieved roe of the spiny lobster.

Instead of slitting the spiny lobster along the top, it may be slit underneath, and filled with shredded lettuce salad instead of potato salad. Small barquettes of cucumber or beetroot should be filled with the same salad and added to the garnish.

Spiny lobster mousse and mousseline. MOUSSE, MOUSSELINE DE LANGOUSTE – Served hot or cold and prepared in the same way as Lobster mousse and mousselines (see LOBSTER).

Spiny lobster à la nage. LANGOUSTE À LA NAGE – This method of preparation is especially suitable for small spiny lobsters. Proceed as for Lobster à la nage (see LOBSTER).

Spiny lobster à la niçoise (cold). LANGOUSTE FROIDE À LA NIÇOISE – Boil a spiny lobster in a court-bouillon. Leave to cool. Split it lengthwise and shell. Cut part of the flesh into 10 slices and dice the rest.

Add cooked diced potatoes, peas, French beans and diced anchovy fillets to the diced lobster flesh. Mix with jellied mayonnaise. Fill the shells with this salad.

Arrange the shell halves on a dish. Put the slices on top. Cover with jellied mayonnaise and decorate each with rosettes of tarragon leaves.

Decorate the sides of the dish with tomatoes stuffed with the spiny lobster salad, alternating with cooked artichoke hearts filled with shredded lettuce, seasoned with French dressing and garnished with anchovy fillets and capers. At each end of the dish arrange halved hard-boiled eggs and quartered lettuce hearts.

Serve with a sauce made from mayonnaise mixed with Tomato fondue (see TOMATO), cooked in oil and flavoured with anchovy essence.

Spiny lobster à la parisienne. LANGOUSTE À LA PARISIENNE – Proceed as for Spiny lobster à la moscovite, changing the presentation and garnish as follows:

Remove the tail and empty the shell. Fill with coarsely shredded lettuce salad. Place on a buttered wedge of bread. Cut the tail flesh into slices and arrange on top of the shell. Decorate each slice with a strip of truffle and glaze with jelly.

Garnish with artichoke hearts filled with a salad of vegetables and the diced flesh of the spiny lobster dressed with jellied mayonnaise, quartered or halved hard boiled eggs glazed with jelly and quartered lettuce hearts.

Decorate the dish with chopped jelly, and arrange rounds of jelly along the edge. Run a decorated skewer between the eyes of the spiny lobster. Serve with mayonnaise.

Spiny lobster pilaf and risotto. PILAF, RISOTTO DE LANGOUSTE – Proceed as for Lobster pilaf and risotto (see LOBSTER).

Spiny lobster à la russe. LANGOUSTE À LA RUSSE – Proceed as for Spiny lobster à la moscovite, changing the presentation and garnish as follows:

Coat the spiny lobster slices with jellied mayonnaise or a white Chaud-froid sauce (see SAUCE). Decorate with a little of the coral and 2 chervil leaves glazed with jelly. Arrange the slices on top of the spiny lobster, which should be stuffed with a coarsely shredded lettuce salad, and set on a wedge of buttered bread.

Garnish with cylindrical moulds of Russian salad dressed with jellied mayonnaise, halves of hard boiled eggs, decorated with truffles and glazed with jelly and lettuce hearts. Skewer the lobster. Serve with Tartare sauce (see SAUCE, Cold sauces).

Spiny lobster salad. SALADE DE LANGOUSTE – Using spiny lobster, proceed as for Lobster salad (see SALAD).

Spiny lobster with various sauces (cold). LANGOUSTE FROIDE AUX SAUCES DIVERSES – Boil a spiny lobster in a court-bouillon. Leave to cool. Garnish with fresh parsley or lettuce hearts. Serve with mayonnaise or any sauce suitable for cold fish or shellfish.

Spiny lobster on the spit. LANGOUSTE À LA BROCHE – Proceed as for Lobster on the spit (see LOBSTER).

Spiny lobster stew (Catalan and Languedoc cookery). CIVET DE LANGOUSTE – Cut the spiny lobster into slices and proceed as for Spiny lobster à l'américaine, increasing the amount of tomato and flavouring it strongly with garlic.

SPIRIT. EAU-DE-VIE – Strictly, eau-de-vie is the product of distilled wine (brandy), but the term is extended to cover spirits distilled from fruit and even cereals.

The eau-de-vie of Charentes, Cognac, has a reputation equal to that of the greatest wines and is undoubtedly the prime of all spirits. Its incomparable flavour is due to a special vine, the Folle blanche, which also yields a rough, mediocre white wine. Its quality depends to a great extent on the vine growth. The first Cognacs are made from the grapes grown in chalky vineyards known as Champagnes. A distinction is made between Fines Champagnes (liqueur brandies) and Petites Champagnes, and between Fins bois and Bons bois Cognacs, according to the origin of the wine distilled. In former times distillation was carried out in a very primitive still, heated over an open fire. This process was carried out in two stages. The brouillis collected first was distilled afresh over greater heat to arrive at the desired strength. The products were then graded.

Immediately after distilling, Cognac, which is about 70 per cent alcohol, has scarcely any aroma. This develops by slow etherification and by changes which occur while it is stored in casks, which lower its strength and permit some evaporation of alcohol.

The manufacture and preparation of brandy casks demand particular care. After 25 years in a cask, a brandy loses about one third of its volume. It becomes slightly coloured and tart. These incomparable brandies whose aroma lingers for several hours in the glasses into which they have been poured, are not to be found in ordinary wine shops but are used to make commercial products. They are adulterated with younger spirits, after syrup and water have been added to reduce them to the commercial standard of 40 per cent alcohol. Sometimes less orthodox methods are used, the brandy being adulterated with 'sauce' mixtures, for which formulae are to be found in distillers' manuals.

Here are a few sample formulae:

1. Steep for 3 days in 1 litre (1½ pints, generous quart) of brandy: 60 g. (2 oz.) catechu, 10 g. (½ oz.) balsam of tolu, and add 85 g. (3 oz.) ammonia.

2. Steep for 3 days in 1 litre (1½ pints, generous quart) of brandy: 6 g. (1 teaspoon) vanilla, 80 g. (3 oz.) catechu, 8 g. (¼ oz.) tolu, 12 g. (½ oz.) sassafras, 1 drop of bitter almond essence and 100 g. (4 oz.) sugar.

These ingredients are added to 100 litres (22 gallons, 27½ gallons) unmaturing brandy, and rectified spirit, heated together to blend the ingredients, and then cooled slowly.

The brandies of Armagnac are made from the vines of Gers called Picquepoul, which is merely a variety of the Folle

Storehouse for casks of maturing Cognac

Champagne glass (Rouard. Phot. Larousse)

Storehouse for despatch of Cognac (Maison Remy Martin)

blanche of Charentes. Their flavour is a little different from that of Cognac.

The wines of many other regions are distilled, but it is a notable fact that the first growths do not usually yield fine brandies.

The marc of wines is also distilled after a little water has been added to it, as are the lees which remain at the bottom of the vats and casks. Some of the products enjoy a great reputation.

Cider, to which the marc is usually added, is distilled to produce the spirits known as Calvados.

Spirits are also distilled from all fruit which is sufficiently abundant. It is first fermented, as for cider or wine. Thus, spirits are distilled from apricots, cherries, dates, figs, raspberries, mulberries, bilberries, mirabelles, pears, peaches, greengages, plums (quetsch, slivovitz) and many other kinds of fruit.

True rum is distilled from sugar cane juice, but nowadays a distillation of molasses, once known as tafia, is also called rum.

The distilled grain of cereals, especially barley, yields spirits such as Kornschnaps and whisky. Sometimes it is flavoured with juniper berries to produce gin.

The analysis of spirits is concerned with the detection of minerals which should not be present, and with the co-efficient of impurities. This co-efficient should be from 6 to 20 for rectified industrial spirits, 20 to 150 for 'medium taste' spirits. It is always more than 150 and can reach 300 in spirits of wine or fruit. This analysis is completed by the in-

Gas roasting spit (Constructeurs associés de Paris)

Modern spit. Casino d'Enghien (Casino d'Enghien) vestigation of colouring matter, synthetic bouquets, saccharin and dulcin.

SPIT. BROCHE – Utensil on which meat, etc., can be roasted before a fire.

There are various types of spits. There is the variety on which the meat to be roasted is placed vertically, and the kind on which it is placed horizontally. Spits are hand operated or mechanically operated to make the roasts turn slowly.

Many gastronomes do not recognise any roast, as such, except one cooked on a spit before a wood fire. It was in this manner that roasts were done in the olden days. But kitchen equipment is now in line with modern needs. Gas and electric spits are excellent and enable us to produce perfect roasts.

The great Escoffier drew up some general rules for roasting:

'Of the two most usual methods of roasting, the spit is by far the superior, due to the conditions in which the operation is carried out and regardless of what type of heat is employed.

'The explanation is simple: however much care is lavished on an oven roast nothing can prevent vapours building up in the enclosed space: the roasting process takes place in this atmosphere. The effect of these fumes is all the more disastrous when the juices of the meat are rather delicate and more liable to alteration and reduction.

'Roasting on the spit, on the other hand, is done in the open air, in a dry atmosphere which detracts nothing from the quality of the juices sui generis of the meat. This explains why spit-roasted meat is indisputably superior to oven-roasted meat.'

From a technical point of view, spit-roasting is more akin to grilling and is quite different from oven roasting. In fact, whereas the roasting of meat in the oven is due mainly to the Ingredients required for the preparation of sponge fingers (Fasné Desmeuzes)

Work the mixture to a smooth consistency as shown in the picture (Larousse)

Pipe the mixture through a forcing-bag on to greaseproof paper (Fasné Desmeuzes) action of heat contained within it, spit-roasted meat is subjected to the radiation of glowing surfaces. There are two clearly defined stages in the process of spit-roasting:

The first is the application of intense heat upon the surface of the meat. This is intended to seal in the juices and to brown the meat. It has to be a rapid process and must on no account pass the stage of simply colouring the surface. The heat must be reduced before the second stage.

This second stage continues and completes the cooking process. The intention is to cook the inside of the meat as much or as little as individual taste dictates. In this way the chef can satisfy everybody and turn out perfectly roasted meat every time. But it is a task that requires his constant and exclusive attention.

We can see how much the spit has evolved by tracing its development from the spit used by our ancestors to the present day electric or gas ones.

SPLEEN. RATE – Ox spleen is sometimes used in pot-au-feu.

SPONDIAS – Indian tree whose edible fruit is known as a hog apple. The fruit of the spondias, which grows in many tropical regions, makes excellent preserves and a fermented drink.

SPONGE (SANDWICH) CAKES. BISCUITS – See also CAKE, GENOESE.

Almond sandwich cake. BISCUIT AUX AMANDES – Put 300 g. (11 oz., 1½ cups) sugar, 8 egg yolks and a pinch of salt into a bowl and blend well with a wooden spoon.

When the mixture is frothy, incorporate 120 g. (4 oz., ¾ cup) sweet almonds and 4 or 5 bitter almonds, blanched and pounded in a mortar to a smooth paste with egg white. Add a few drops of orange blossom water and mix well. Add 8 egg whites, whisked to a stiff froth and 120 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) sieved flour.

Butter a sponge cake tin, sprinkle it with flour and pour in the cake mixture, filling the tin up to three quarters of its depth. Bake in a moderately hot oven.

Turn out onto a wire cake rack and allow to cool. Cut into three layers of equal thickness. Coat one layer with apricot jam, the second with raspberry jam and sandwich the layers together. Brush with apricot jam, ice with vanilla-flavoured Fondant icing (see ICING) and sprinkle with chopped pistachio nuts.

Sponge fingers. BISCUITS À LA CUILLER – These biscuits are prepared with dough made of flour, sugar, egg yolks and stiffly beaten egg whites.

Cream 250 g. (9 oz., generous cup) castor sugar and 8 egg yolks in a bowl until the mixture forms a ribbon. Flavour with 1 teaspoon orange blossom water, add 190 g. (7 oz., 1¾ cups) sieved flour and incorporate 8 egg whites, whisked until stiff. Blend the mixture, lifting it lightly with a spoon and folding in the egg whites gently.

Pipe through a forcing bag fitted with a wide nozzle onto sheets of greaseproof paper. Sprinkle with castor sugar, lift each sheet of paper by the two ends to shake off surplus sugar. Place on a baking tray and bake in a moderately hot oven (190°C., 375°F., Gas Mark 5) for 12 minutes.

The mixture may be flavoured with grated orange or lemon rind, or with vanilla essence.

Sponge fingers are used in the preparation of many sweet dishes, such as Charlotte russe (see CHARLOTTE).

Italian sandwich cake. BISCUIT À L'ITALIENNE – Ingredients. 500 g. (18 oz., 2¼ cups) castor sugar, 10 eggs, 125 g. (4½ oz., generous cup) sieved flour, 125 g. (4½ oz., 1 cup) sieved potato flour, 2 teaspoons vanilla-flavoured sugar or ¼ teaspoon vanilla essence.

Method. Cream the sugar and add the egg yolks one at a time. Whisk the egg whites and fold them into the mixture.

Add the flour, potato flour, and vanilla-flavoured sugar or vanilla essence, all previously mixed together on a sheet of paper. Blend well.

Pour the mixture into a charlotte mould which has been buttered and dusted with a mixture of icing sugar and potato flour in equal proportions.

Sandwich cake manqué. BISCUIT MANQUÉ – Ingredients. 400 g. (14 oz.,  $3\frac{1}{2}$  cups) sieved flour, 500 g. (18 oz.,  $2\frac{1}{4}$  cups) castor sugar, 18 egg yolks, 300 g. (11 oz.,  $1\frac{1}{3}$  cups) butter, 16 egg whites, whisked to a stiff froth, 3 tablespoons rum.

Method. Cream the sugar and the egg yolks together until the mixture is white and frothy. Add the rum and flour and mix well. Add the stiffly beaten egg whites and pour in the cooled melted butter.

Spoon the mixture into cake tins which have been buttered and dusted with flour. Bake in a moderately hot oven (190°C., 375°F., Gas Mark 5) for 40 to 45 minutes.

Punch sandwich cakes. BISCUITS PUNCH – Ingredients. 375 g. (13 oz.,  $3\frac{1}{4}$  cups) sieved flour, 500 g. (18 oz.,  $2\frac{1}{4}$  cups) sugar, 12 egg yolks, 3 whole eggs, 8 egg whites, whisked to a stiff froth, 300 g. (11 oz.,  $1\frac{1}{3}$  cups) butter,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  teaspoons orange-flavoured sugar,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  teaspoons lemon-flavoured sugar and 3 tablespoons (scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) rum. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  teaspoon orange essence and  $\frac{1}{4}$  teaspoon lemon essence may be used instead of the flavoured sugars).

Method. Cream together the sugar, egg yolks and whole eggs until the mixture becomes very light. Stir in the flavoured sugars, rum, flour, stiffly beaten egg whites and cooled melted butter. Mix well.

Put the mixture into buttered paper cases, buttered flan rings or sandwich tins. Bake in a moderate oven (180°C., 350°F., Gas Mark 4).

Mould for Savoy sponge cake
(Larousse)

Savoy sandwich cake. BISCUIT DE SAVOIE – Ingredients. 185 g. (6 oz.,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cups) sieved flour, 185 g. (6 oz.,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cups) potato flour, 500 g. (18 oz.) castor sugar, 14 eggs, 1 tablespoon vanilla-flavoured sugar or  $\frac{1}{4}$  teaspoon vanilla essence.

Method. Cream the sugar and the egg yolks in a bowl until the mixture forms a ribbon. Add vanilla-flavoured sugar or vanilla essence, flour and potato flour, mixed. Fold in the whisked egg whites.

Put the mixture into Savoy cake tins which have been buttered and dusted with potato flour, filling them only up to two-thirds. Bake in a moderately hot oven (180°C., 350°F., Gas Mark 4).

SPOOMS – See ICE CREAMS AND ICES.

SPOON. CUILLER – Utensil which has an oval or concave spherical form fixed to a handle (see COVER). Spoons used in cooking have various shapes and are made in different materials according to their particular uses: wooden spoons, spoons for sauces, basting spoons, soup ladles, etc.

Sprinkle the sponge fingers with castor sugar (Larousse)

Lift the paper to shake off surplus sugar (Fasné Desmeuzes)

Remove the sponge fingers from the paper when baked (Larousse)

SPRAT – Small sea fish 8 to 12 cm. (3 to 4½ inches) long, a little smaller than the sardine and somewhat resembling the herring. The back is blue-green and the sides silvery with a gold band at spawning time.

Gastronomically it is not held in such high esteem as the sardine. All methods of preparation for sardine are applicable to the sprat. It is also preserved, smoked and salted.

SPRUCE BEER. SAPINETTE – Fermented drink, obtained from branches and cones of spruce, a native of America and Russia, which is also found in the north of France. These branches are boiled and sugar, hops and yeast are added when the beer is put into casks.

'SPURS OF BACCHUS'. ÉPERONS BACHIQUES – Metaphorical expression sometimes used on menus for the ensemble of morsels making up a cold hors-d'œuvre. It is used especially of salty foods such as ham, sausages, saveloy and chitterlings, which, being highly seasoned, cause thirst. It is in this sense that Rabelais used the expression.

SQUAB – See PIGEON.

Varieties of squash

SQUASH. PÂTISSON – Member of the Cucurbitaceae family. The best-known varieties are American white, yellow and orange. These and other squashes can be prepared in any method suitable for marrow and pumpkin.

Squash, hollowed out and blanched, can be used as a container for various dishes. The scooped out pulp is cooked in butter and added to these dishes.

SQUID – See CALAMARY.

SQUILL-FISH. SQUILLE – Crustacean also known as sauterelle de mer (sea-grasshopper) and mante de mer (sea mantis), fished off the coasts of Spain and Italy and in the English Channel. They are prepared like lobsters (q.v.).

SQUIRREL. ÉCUREUIL – Wild rodent. In some countries, it is highly esteemed as game. It is cooked in the same way as rabbit.

STALK. ÉGRAPPER – To remove grapes or berries from their stalks.

STAMPPOT (Dutch cookery) – A national dish in Holland. It is prepared by serving smoked sausages on top of a hash of cabbage, potato and veal fat made into a raised bed on a dish.

STAR ANISE. ANIS ÉTOILÉ – Common name of the badian anise. Also known as Chinese anise.

Stamppot (Dutch cookery) (Claire)

STAR OF BETHLEHEM. ORNYTHOGALE – Plant with edible roots, which are prepared as salsify (q.v.).

STARCH. FÉCULE – In former times, all solids precipitated by juices obtained by extraction were called starches, though they differed widely from one another.

Nowadays, the term is used especially to describe pure starch powder or the white powdery starch deposit which separates out from water in which certain pounded vegetables (such as potatoes, manioc, sago, rice, etc.) have been washed.

In cookery, four main types of starch are used to thicken sauces or make coulis and creams. These are: local starches contained in wheat, potatoes, corn (maize) and rice; exotic starches: salep, arrowroot (manioc), sago, yam, etc.; pulse starches: haricot beans, peas, lentils, etc.; fruit starches, extracted from chestnuts, bananas and sweet nuts.

For thickening soups, stocks and sauces, potato starch and arrowroot (manioc starch) are mainly used. In the U.S.A. cornstarch is widely used.

Foods containing a high proportion of starch are said to be starchy.

STARLING. ÉTOURNEAU, SANSONNET – Bird similar to the blackbird, but smaller. The starling was much prized by the Romans. Nowadays in France it is cooked in the same way as the thrush but its flesh is tough and bitter.

STEARIN. STÉARINE – Neutral fat resulting from the combination of stearic acid with solid glycerine. It is found in varying proportions in edible fats, the quantity varying in relation to the melting point of the fat.

In former times stearin was much used in ornamental sculptures and plinths. Nowadays this usage has been almost completely abandoned, even in culinary exhibitions.

STEEPING. MACÉRATION – Process consisting of soaking various foodstuffs in an aromatic liquid preparation. During steeping, chemical changes occur both in the foodstuff and the liquid. The nature and extent of these changes depend largely on the density of the liquid used and on the soluble elements in the foodstuff.

When meat is steeped in brine, the salt penetrates the muscular tissue and the liquid absorbs a small proportion of the soluble protein in the meat. In the case of a marinade, the spices penetrate the solid in the same way.

When fruit is steeped in sweetened or diluted alcohol, the alcohol penetrates the fruit, which yields some of its juice to the alcohol.

When a solid (e.g. gentian, quassia) is steeped in pure water or water with a little alcohol added, the soluble elements in the solid dissolve in the water.

STERILISE. STÉRILISER – To render sterile, to destroy germs and arrest fermentation in foodstuffs. Heat is the most effective agent of sterilisation.

STERLET – Small sturgeon found in the Caspian Sea.

The sterlet is renowned for the delicacy of its flesh. It is eaten fresh, dried or salted. Its roe produces the finest caviare.

All methods of preparation given for salmon, salmon trout and sturgeon are applicable to the sterlet. It is, however, mostly braised in white wine. An essential condition of its preparation in Russia, and one which gourmets there once insisted should be followed, is that the sterlet shall be brought alive into the kitchen where it is to be cooked.

STICKLEBACK. ÉPINOCHÉ – Small river fish, mediocre in flavour. It is usually deep-fried.

STOCKFISH – Dried Norwegian cod, differing very little in appearance from the more familiar dried salt cod. It is very much liked in Germany, Belgium and Holland.

Stockfish is also eaten a great deal in the South of France, notably in Nice, where it is prepared as in the recipe below after having been soaked for at least 3 days in water.

In Belgium, Holland and Germany it is soaked in lime water and afterwards cooked like dried salt cod.

Stockfish à la niçoise – Scrape the fish well after it has been soaked in cold water; remove the bone and cut the fish into even-sized pieces.

Sauté 3 chopped large onions for every 1 kg. (2½ lb.) stockfish, lightly in olive oil. When they are cooked, add 4 large chopped and deseeded tomatoes, 4 crushed cloves of garlic, a pinch of basil and a large bouquet garni. Season with salt and pepper. Cook for 20 minutes.

Add the pieces of stockfish to these cooked vegetables and sufficient boiling water to cover the fish. Cook, covered, for 50 minutes. Add 400 g. (14 oz.) potatoes, cut into thick slices, and 250 g. (9 oz., 1½ cups) black olives and cook for another 30 minutes.

STOCKS. FONDS DE CUISINE – This term refers to many culinary preparations: fat or lean stock, or meat juices used for sauces, stews or braising.

Only a limited use is made of these fonds in practical everyday cooking. Stocks are mainly used to make sauces, broth and a quick roux for thickening.

For cooking in the grand manner it is good to have on hand stocks and other basic ingredients. These will allow you to work quickly and easily and enable you to obtain sauces with much better flavour.

The necessary stocks are: broth, clear soup, veal stock, white and brown (thin and thick), juice from braised meat, poultry and game stock, fish stock and various jellies.

These stocks, when boiled down and without any addition, are used as flavourings, essence, and glaze.

When a certain quantity of roux or other binding element is added, these stocks become Basic sauces (see SAUCE), from which many other sauces are derived.

White stock is a broth which by definition has no colour. It has white meat and aromatic vegetables as a basis.

Brown stock is made with beef, veal or poultry, which are first half cooked in butter or fat, and always with the usual aromatic vegetables, also half-cooked in butter.

Fish stock is prepared with the bones and trimmings of fish. The liquid usually consists of dry white wine and water in equal quantities, though sometimes just white wine is used. The only aromatics added are sliced onions, parsley, thyme, bay leaf and lemon juice. Stalks and parings of mushrooms could be added to this, if available.

Vegetable stock for vegetarian cooking is obtained by adding water to the following vegetables: carrots, onions and chopped celery slightly cooked in vegetable fat or butter, flavoured with parsley, thyme, bay leaf and sometimes garlic.

Use of stocks. White stock is used as the liquid in white sauces and stews and for poached poultry. Brown stock is used as a liquid in brown sauces, for braising large cuts of meat and for brown stews.

Fish stock is used in the preparation of special fish sauces, such as Normande sauce, White wine sauce or a thin Suprême sauce (see SAUCE) to be served with fish. It can also be used to moisten fish when it is cooked whole or in slices, before it is braised or poached.

Vegetable stock is used as a liquid for all preparations in vegetarian cooking.

Fish stock or concentrate. FONDS DE POISSON, FUMET DE POISSON – Nourishing ingredients. 2½ kg. (5½ lb.) bones and trimmings of fish (sole, whiting, brill, sea perch, haddock, etc.).

Aromatic ingredients. 125 g. (4 oz., ½ cup) grated onion, 150 g. (5 oz., 2½ cups) mushroom parings, 1 small bouquet of parsley, 1 sprig of thyme, ½ bay leaf, 10 drops of lemon juice.

Seasoning. 1½ teaspoons kitchen salt.

Liquid. 2½ litres (4½ pints, 5½ pints) water, ½ litre (scant pint, 2¼ cups) dry white wine.

Method. Place all the aromatics in the bottom of a stock pot. Cover these with the bones and trimmings of the fish. Moisten, season and add the lemon juice. Bring to the boil, skim, cook gently for 30 minutes. Strain through a muslin bag or fine sieve.

Fish stock or concentrate with red wine. FONDS DE POISSON AU VIN ROUGE, FUMET DE POISSON AU VIN ROUGE – Prepare as for ordinary fish stock using as liquid 1½ litres (2¾ pints, 3¼ pints) red wine and the same quantity of water. Strain through a muslin bag or fine sieve and use as directed.

Game stock. FONDES DE GIBIER – For 2½ litres (4½ pints, 5½ pints):

Nourishing ingredients. 1 kg. (2¼ lb.) shoulder, breast or other piece of venison, 1 kg. (2¼ lb.) trimmings of hare or wild rabbit, 1 old partridge, 1 old pheasant, 50 g. (2 oz.) fresh pork rind, 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) dripping or butter.

Aromatic ingredients. 150 g. (5 oz.) carrots, 150 g. (5 oz.) onions, 1 bouquet garni, 1 sprig of sage, 10 juniper berries, 1 clove.

Seasoning. 1 tablespoon salt.

Liquid. 3 litres (5¼ pints, 6½ pints) white stock or water, ½ litre (scant pint, 2¼ cups) white wine.

Method. Tie the meat together and truss the feathered game; brush with dripping or butter and brown in the oven. Slice the vegetables and brown in the stockpot with the rind. Add the meat, moisten with stock obtained by adding white wine to the juice left in the roasting pan. Add another ½ litre (scant pint, 2¼ cups) stock. Bring to the boil, skim, season lightly, add sage, juniper berries and 1 clove. Cook gently for 3 hours. Skim off all fat and strain through a fine sieve.

This stock is used as the liquid in brown game sauces. Alternatively it can be used, without further additions, as a sauce for small pieces of game tossed in butter. Boiled down, the stock becomes game essence, and can be used to flavour different game dishes.

The nourishing ingredients used in the preparation of this stock (venison, hare, partridge, etc.) can be used afterwards for a variety of dishes, such as hash, stews and purées.

Light brown stock or estouffade. FONDS BRUN CLAIR, ESTOUFFADE – For 5 litres (4½ quarts, 5½ quarts):

Nourishing ingredients. 2½ kg. (5½ lb.) lean beef (leg or shoulder), 2½ kg. (5½ lb.) veal knuckle, 1 kg. (2¼ lb.) beef and veal bones, 300 g. (11 oz.) scalded bacon rind, 250 g. (9 oz.) blanched ham knuckle, 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) meat dripping or butter.

Aromatic ingredients. 300 g. (11 oz.) carrots, 300 g. (11 oz.) onions, 1 large bouquet garni, 1 clove garlic.

Seasoning. 1½ tablespoons (2 tablespoons) cooking salt.

Liquid. 7 litres (6 quarts, 7½ quarts) thin white stock or water.

Bone the meat and cut it into large pieces. (After cooking the meat can be used to make a hash.)

Break the bones into small pieces. Slice the carrots and onions. Half cook all ingredients in fat. Add ½ litre (scant pint, 2¼ cups) white stock and boil down to a jelly. Add the same quantity of stock and boil down again. Add the rest of the stock. Bring to the boil and season lightly with salt. Simmer for 8 hours.

Skim off all fat from the stock and strain through a fine sieve.

Light brown stock is used in brown sauces, stews, jellies, and in different methods of braising. Chefs consider it an essential ingredient of savoury sauces.

Stock of veal or other meat. FONDS DE VEAU, DE VIANDE – With meat trimmings prepare a meat stock, which can be used as a gravy for various dishes or as a liquid to dilute the pan juices of small pieces of meat. Cut the meat into small pieces and sauté in butter, allowing 1 carrot and 1 medium onion for 250 g. (9 oz.) meat trimmings.

As soon as the ingredients begin to brown, sprinkle in 1 tablespoon flour. Stir with a wooden spoon until golden. Add 6 tablespoons (scant ½ cup) white wine. Boil down. Add 3 dl. (½ pint, 1¼ cups) meat broth. Cook slowly for 1 hour. Strain through a fine sieve.

Brown veal stock. FONDS BRUN DE VEAU, JUS BRUN DE VEAU – For 5 litres (4½ quarts, 5½ quarts):

Nourishing ingredients. 2½ kg. (5½ lb.) boned veal shoulder, 2½ kg. (5½ lb.) veal knuckle, 1 kg. (2¼ lb.) veal bones, 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) dripping.

Aromatic ingredients. 300 g. (11 oz.) carrots, 300 g. (11 oz.) onions, 1 large bouquet garni.

Seasoning. 1½ tablespoons (2 tablespoons) salt.

Liquid. 7 litres (6 quarts, 7½ quarts) white stock.

Bone the meat, tie it up, brush with dripping, season and brown in the oven. Break the bones into as small pieces as possible. Cover the bottom of a large stock pot with the sliced vegetables. Put the bones on top of the vegetables, then the meat. Add the bouquet garni, cover the pot, simmer over gentle heat for 15 minutes. Moisten with ½ litre (scant pint, 2¼ cups) white stock. Boil down to a jelly. Add the same quantity of stock once more. Boil down again. Add the rest of the stock. Bring to the boil, skim, and season lightly with salt. Simmer for 6 hours. Skim off all fat and strain through a fine sieve.

Boiled down, and with a little butter added, this sauce is used for pieces of roast meat, braised vegetables and other dishes.

As this stock takes a long time to cook, one must add stock or water from time to time as the liquid boils away. This applies to all stocks which need long cooking.

Thick veal stock or thickened veal gravy. FONDS DE VEAU LIÉ, JUS DE VEAU LIÉ – Boil 2 litres (3½ pints, 4½ pints) brown veal stock until reduced by about one quarter. Thicken with 1 tablespoon arrowroot blended with 3 tablespoons clear cold veal stock. Strain through a fine sieve. Keep warm in a bain-marie.

This stock has many uses. It can be added to small pieces of meat or poultry previously tossed in butter, or it can be served as gravy for roasts and pot roasts.

Tomato veal stock. FONDS DE VEAU TOMATÉ – To 2 litres (3½ pints, 4½ pints) brown veal stock add 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) tomato purée. Boil down by one quarter. Strain through a fine sieve.

White stock. FONDS BLANC – Nourishing ingredients. 1½ kg. (3½ lb.) lean veal (shoulder), 2 kg. (4½ lb.) veal knuckle and 2 kg. (4½ lb.) poultry giblets or bones and trimmings.

Aromatic ingredients. 250 g. (9 oz.) carrots, 250 g. (9 oz.) onions, 150 g. (5 oz.) leeks, 1 bouquet garni, 150 g. (5 oz.) celery.

Seasoning. 1½ tablespoons (2 tablespoons) cooking salt.

Liquid. 7 litres (6 quarts, 7½ quarts) water.

These ingredients will give 5 litres (4½ quarts, 5½ quarts) stock.

Bone the meat and tie it up. Break the bones into small pieces. Place the bones, meat and giblets in a stock pot. Add liquid. Bring to the boil, skim and season. Add the vegetables and bouquet garni. Cook slowly for 3½ hours. Remove fat and strain the stock through a fine sieve.

White poultry stock. FONDS BLANC DE VOLAILLE – Proceed as for White stock, but add a chicken or a much larger quantity of giblets or bones and trimmings. After cooking, the chicken meat can be used to make croquettes.

STOLLEN (German pâtisserie) – Ingredients. 1 kg. (2¼ lb., 9 cups) sifted flour, 450 g. (1 lb., 2 cups) sugar, 3 eggs, 500 g. (18 oz., 2¼ cups) butter, 60 g. (2½ oz., 2½ cakes) yeast, 200 g. (7 oz., scant cup) chopped almonds, 200 g. (7 oz., 1¼ cups) currants, 200 g. (7 oz., 1¼ cups) finely chopped candied orange peel, 200 g. (7 oz., 1¼ cups) finely chopped lemon peel, grated rind of ½ lemon, few drops vanilla essence, 3 tablespoons (4 tablespoons) rum, 2½ dl. (scant ½ pint, generous cup) warm milk, 5 or 6 powdered bitter almonds.

Method. Put 750 g. (1½ lb., 6 cups) sifted flour into a bowl, make a hollow in the middle and put in the yeast. Sprinkle the yeast with sugar and pour over the warm milk. When the yeast begins to bubble mix all the ingredients into a paste. Cover this with a cloth and set near the fire. While it is rising, wash the butter in water, squeeze it to extract all moisture, and dry it with a cloth.

Add the sugar and eggs, and work the butter until it becomes frothy. Add the rest of the flour, currants, peel and other flavourings. Blend together the dough and the butter mixture, adding a little milk but not too much, because this paste should be quite firm in consistency. Beat well and set it covered, near the fire to rise.

Turn out on to a floured table and form into a thick loaf. Leave to rise for 15 minutes, then place it on a buttered baking sheet and brush with melted butter. Bake in a low oven. Brush once more with melted butter when baked and sprinkle liberally with sugar.

Modelling a stollen

STOMACH. ESTOMAC – The first swelling of the digestive tube and the one in which digestion begins. Ruminants have four stomachs. (See OFFAL, Tripe.)

Stomach hygiene. All nutritionists agree that food should be well masticated in order not to overburden the stomach. Drinking too much while eating impedes the digestion.

STONECROP. TRIQUE-MADAME – Common plant also called orpine has leaves somewhat resembling those of purslane, rather tasteless but edible as salad, or when cooked like purslane.

Stone-curlew

STONE-CURLEW. OEDICNÈME – Genus of European Gallinago bird comprising a dozen species. They are birds of medium size, similar to plovers. Their meat is tasty. Stone-curlews are prepared like woodcock (q.v.).

STOPPER. BOUCHON – The word 'stopper' describes all objects such as pieces of cork, glass, rubber or any other substance, usually round in shape, used to seal or cover bottles, carafes and other receptacles, made of glass, china, metal or wood.

Nowadays bottles, especially bottles of alcohol, are sealed with aluminium stoppers. These stoppers are also used for wine bottles, although gourmets still consider that cork makes the finest stoppers.

The French word bouchon is derived from the old French word bousche meaning tuft of grass or leaves, formerly used as a plug or stopper.

The advent of the cork stopper probably coincided with that of Champagne when the oil-saturated, hemp stoppers were no longer adequate.

The matter of choosing corks for wine bottles is extremely important as it can affect the taste of wine. In this respect two things can go wrong: the wine may become tainted with the foul smell of bad cork or acquire a musty smell of mildew.

This deficiency in cork very often cannot be detected before manufacture, and its effect on wine cannot be remedied. In cork-producing countries, for some years now it has been customary to cut cork boards into small cubes, and 'corky' wine becomes more rare because olfactive examination of the small pieces of cork enables specialists to sort out and eliminate those which are unfit for use. In the form of separate cubes the cork can be transported in much better ventilated conditions than in the case of boards and big pieces of bark. In the past it happened that cork, being transported in the hold of a ship in stale air, often arrived at the cork factory in a deteriorated condition.

Corks should be made of fine bark, supple to the touch and without any defects.

Before using corks, sort carefully to eliminate any which are not sound. Place in a bucket and pour on boiling water and leave to soak for some time. This operation is intended

Gas stove in school kitchen (Keller) not only to render the corks more flexible, but also to rid them of any impurities.

Drain and place them in a sieve or a riddle, and leave for 1 hour to dry thoroughly. Soak them for 25 minutes either in good alcohol, brandy, or wine of the same nature for which the corks are intended.

In general, when bottling good quality wines, old corks should be avoided, unless they have been washed and scalded as described above, and only used when corking bottles containing wine for immediate consumption.

STOVE, KITCHEN. FOURNEAU DE CUISINE – Apparatus made of masonry, cast iron or sheet metal, utilising the heat of a fire for the cooking of food, either in the oven or on the heated top. Most modern stoves are heated by gas or electricity instead of kerosene, wood or coal.

STRACCHINO – See CHEESE.

Strainers: perforated metal and wire gauze (Larousse)

STRAINER. PASSOIRE – Kitchen utensil used for straining sauces and other liquid preparations. The most practical strainer is the cone-shaped kind called chinois.

Straining of sauces and purées. PASSAGE DES SAUCES, DES PURÉES – Sauces are traditionally strained through a tammy-cloth (fine cheesecloth), by two people, each holding one end of the cloth and twisting in opposite directions.

Two people are also needed to rub purées and other comparatively thick preparations through a tammy-cloth. Each person holds one twisted end of the cloth in the left hand and rubs the purée through, using a stout wooden spatula held in the right hand.

STRAINING BAG

Some thin sauces can be strained through muslin without twisting the material. In household kitchens a hair sieve is almost always used in place of a tammy-cloth, and a fine strainer in place of muslin.

STRAINING BAG. CHAUSSE – Funnel in felt or cloth used to clarify liquids, particularly syrups.

STRAW-CASE. PAILLON – Straw wrapping in which bottles are transported. This straw, after treatment in boiling water, is also used for 'dressing' the bottles.

STRAW. ALLUMETTES – Strips of puff pastry cooked in the oven, with different garnishes. (See also ALLUMETTES.)

Anchovy straws. ALLUMETTES AUX ANCHOIS – Coat the puff pastry with Fish forcemeat (see FORCEMEATS) blended with Anchovy butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters). Garnish each strip with an anchovy fillet, trimmed and desalted. Bake in the oven.

Straws à la chalonnaise. ALLUMETTES À LA CHALONNAISE – Coat the puff pastry with a Chicken forcemeat (see FORCEMEATS) blended with cream and with a very finely chopped mixture of cocks' combs, mushrooms and truffles added to it. Bake in the oven.

Cheese straws. ALLUMETTES AU FROMAGE – Cheese straws, which are served as a cold hors-d'œuvre and as an accompaniment to cheeses, are made of puff pastry with the addition of finely grated cheese during the last rolling out. The straws are then cut, placed on a baking tray, and sprinkled with grated Parmesan.

Crayfish straws. ALLUMETTES AUX CREVETTES – Coat the puff pastry with finely minced Fish forcemeat (see FORCEMEATS) blended with Crayfish butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters) and with a finely chopped mixture of crayfish tails added to it. Bake in the oven.

STRAW POTATOES. PAILLES – Potato cut lengthways into very thin strips, then deep-fried. (See POTATOES.)

STRAW WINES. VIN DE PAILLE – Wines made from grapes which are left to dry on straw mats for some time before being pressed. The vin de paille of Jura (Château-Chalon) is very well known.

STRAWBERRY. FRAISE – Plant of the rose family common throughout Europe. It began to be cultivated in the thirteenth century. Five or six species of strawberries were known. From these a number of varieties have been cultivated.

Strawberries are classified into two groups: small strawberries of which the commonest variety is the ever-bearing strawberry, and large strawberries, which comprise a great many varieties. These are constantly being added to by crossings.

The most popular of the large French strawberries are: Surprise des Halles, Ladette, Madame Moutot, Royal Sovereign, Gauthier, Laxton, Marie-France. French production, which covers a wide area, usually extends from 15 April to 15 July.

The European strawberry comes from the Haubois strawberry: its flesh is firm and fragrant. A closely related species is the Alpine strawberry. The perpetual strawberry is a variety of this.

Large strawberries came from the United States and Canada (Fragaria virginiana), and from Chile (Fragaria chiloensis). They were imported into France by a naval officer named Frézières, and are still cultivated today in the region of Plougastel.

Pine strawberries (also called common garden strawberries) originating from Carolina are really hybrids of that species.

The beautiful Madame Tallien bathed in strawberry water to keep her skin soft and velvety. About 10 kg. (22 lb.) were crushed for each of her baths.

Fontanelle adored strawberries and ate them daily when they were in season.

Some people are allergic to strawberries. Cooking them for a few moments in boiling water can counteract this.

Strawberries must be eaten freshly gathered because they do not keep. They are used to make a soft drink and for the extraction of spirits. They may also be eaten puréed. Strawberries are used for jam-making.

Strawberry Bavarian cream – See BAVARIAN CREAM.

Cardinal strawberries. FRAISES CARDINAL – Arrange well chilled strawberries in a fruit dish. Cover them with a sweetened purée of ripe raspberries. Sprinkle with finely chopped almonds.

Strawberries in champagne. FRAISES AU CHAMPAGNE – Sugared strawberries are arranged in individual dishes or in a fruit dish and sprinkled with Champagne. Chill thoroughly.

Strawberry compote I. COMPOTE DE FRAISES – Remove stems and clean the strawberries. Add several tablespoons boiling sugar syrup. Let the fruit soak in this syrup for some time. Serve hot or cold.

Strawberry compote II. COMPOTE DE FRAISES – Cook 250 g. (9 oz., generous cup) sugar and 1 dl. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  pint,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) water to the third degree (see SUGAR). Add to this syrup 1 kg. (2 $\frac{1}{4}$  lb.) large strawberries. Soak, covered, for 10 minutes.

Strawberry Condé. FRAISES CONDÉ – Sprinkle the fruit with sugar and kirsch. Leave to soak in a cool place.

Arrange in a pyramid in a border of rice which has been cooked in milk with sugar and vanilla and bound with egg yolk. It is then moulded in a ring mould, cooked in a bain-marie, cooled and turned out.

Serve with a sweet purée of strawberries and raspberries.

Strawberries and cream. FRAISES À LA CRÈME – Arrange strawberries in a glass dish or individual dishes. Sprinkle with sugar and cover with thick fresh cream or sweetened whipped cream.

Strawberries Czarina. FRAISES TZARINE – Stand a dish on ice. Cover the bottom with a layer of pineapple ice cream. Arrange large strawberries, soaked in kummel and sugar and chilled, on the ice cream.

Decorate with Chantilly cream (see CREAMS) piped through a forcing bag with a large fluted nozzle. Sprinkle with candied violets.

Strawberry ice mixture. COMPOSITION AUX FRAISES POUR GLACES – Mix  $\frac{1}{2}$  litre (scant pint, 2 $\frac{1}{4}$  cups) strawberry purée

Some varieties of strawberry:

a. Marguerite; b. Reine des quatre-saisons; c. Louis Gauthier; d. Doctor Morère; e. Saint Antoine; f. Viscountess Héricart de Thury with  $\frac{1}{2}$  litre (scant pint,  $2\frac{1}{4}$  cups) sugar syrup prepared cold (see SUGAR). Add the juice of 2 lemons and 1 orange. Add to this as much water as is necessary to obtain a mixture of 16° to 18° density measured by the saccharometer.

Strawberries à l'impératrice. FRAISES À L'IMPÉRATRICE – Prepare a dish of rice as for Apricois à l'impératrice (see APRICOT). Chill. Just before serving cover the rice with 250 g. (9 oz., 2 cups) large strawberries sweetened with vanilla-flavoured or plain sugar.

Strawberry jam – See JAMS AND JELLIES.

Strawberries with liqueurs. FRAISES AUX LIQUEURS – Remove stems, clean strawberries and sugar them in a dessert dish or in individual glasses. Sprinkle with one of the following: kirsch, maraschino, cherry brandy, raspberry brandy, kummel, Fine Champagne (best Cognac) or with some other liqueur. Serve chilled.

Strawberries à la maltaise. FRAISES À LA MALTAISE – Sugar small strawberries, add orange juice and a little Curaçao and cool on ice. Put this mixture into baskets made of the oranges from which the juice has been extracted. Arrange on a dish covered with crushed ice.

Iced strawberry mousse – See ICE CREAMS AND ICES, Iced mousses or mousselines.

Strawberry pulp for ices. PULPE DE FRAISES POUR GLACES – Rub very ripe strawberries through a fine sieve. To  $\frac{1}{2}$  litre (scant pint,  $2\frac{1}{4}$  cups) of this juice add 1 litre ( $1\frac{1}{2}$  pints, generous quart) sugar syrup at 35° measured by the saccharometer (see SUGAR) and the juice of 1 lemon. Mix well. Place in a churn freezer.

Strawberry pulp for ices, bottled. CONSERVE DE PULPE DE FRAISES POUR GLACES – Make a purée of fresh strawberries and pass through a very fine sieve. Add 250 g. (9 oz., generous cup) sugar to each 1 kg. ( $2\frac{1}{4}$  lb.) fruit. Mix thoroughly and put into preserving jars. Close jars and place in a canning kettle. Cover with cold water. Boil for 5 to 6 minutes and leave to cool in the canning kettle. Take the jars out, wipe and seal them. Keep in a cool place in a slanting position.

Strawberry ratafia. RATAFIA DE FRAISES – Proceed as for Raspberry liqueur (see LIQUEUR) using ripe strawberries instead of raspberries.

Strawberry sauce – See SAUCE, Dessert sauces.

Strawberry soufflé – See SOUFFLÉS, Sweet soufflés.

Strawberry tarts and tartlets – See TARTS, TARTLETS.

Strawberries with various dessert wines. FRAISES AUX VINS DE LIQUEURS – Remove stems and clean strawberries. Dredge with sugar. Arrange in individual glass dishes or in a fruit dish. Sprinkle with Frontignan, muscatel, Madeira, sherry, port or Marsala. Serve chilled.

STRAWBERRY TOMATO. ALKÉKENGÉ – Fruit originating in Mexico where it is called Mexican tomato. It is one of several species of physalis. The strawberry tomato plant belongs to the same family as the tomato and the potato.

Strawberry tomato grows very well in France, in the south and around Paris. It is sometimes called husk tomato or winter cherry. The fruit is the size of a cherry, yellow in colour and has a sour-sweet taste. It is surrounded by a parchment-like calyx, yellowish-grey in colour, which does not open. Strawberry tomatoes are used in confectionery.

Strawberry tomato compote. COMPOTE D'ALKÉKENGES – Ingredients. 1 kg. ( $2\frac{1}{4}$  lb.) strawberry tomatoes, 500 g. (18 oz.,  $2\frac{1}{4}$  cups) sugar, 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{3}$  pint, scant cup) water, peel of 1 lemon.

Method. Make a syrup of sugar and water, bring to the boil and add the strawberry tomatoes, having removed their calyxes. Cook for 5 minutes.

Remove the fruit with a perforated spoon, transfer to an earthenware bowl and put the lemon peel in the middle. Boil down the syrup and pour it over the fruit.

It is essential not to allow the lemon peel to boil with the compote as the taste will be entirely different.

Glacé strawberry tomatoes in caramel. ALKÉKENGES GLACÉES AU CARAMEL – Open the fruit and roll in powdered gum arabic. Dip into sugar syrup cooked to crack degree (see SUGAR). Take out with a perforated spoon and place on a slab of marble or on a lightly greased metal sheet.

Glacé strawberry tomatoes in fondant icing. ALKÉKENGES GLACÉES AU FONDANT – Coat with Fondant icing (see ICING) white, pink or yellow, flavoured with kirsch, raspberry or pineapple essence.

Open the calyx and turn back to form a stalk. Hold the fruit by the end of the calyx and dip into hot fondant icing. Drain and place on a tray sprinkled with icing sugar. Put into paper cases.

Strawberry tomato jam. CONFITURE D'ALKÉKENGES –

Ingredients. 1 kg. ( $2\frac{1}{4}$  lb.) strawberry tomatoes, 750 g. ( $1\frac{1}{2}$  lb.,  $5\frac{1}{4}$  cups) loaf sugar, 6 dl. (1 pint,  $2\frac{1}{2}$  cups) water.

Method. Make a syrup of the sugar and water and add the strawberry tomatoes, with their calyxes removed. Bring to the boil. Remove scum as it forms. Boil for about 20 minutes. Draw the pan to the side of the stove and leave the jam to cool a little. Put into jars and seal like any other jam.

Strawberry tomato syrup. SIROP D'ALKÉKENGES –

Ingredients.  $1\frac{1}{2}$  kg. ( $3\frac{1}{2}$  lb.) strawberry tomatoes,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  kg. ( $3\frac{1}{2}$  lb., 7 cups) sugar,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  litres ( $2\frac{1}{2}$  pints,  $3\frac{1}{4}$  pints) water.

Method. Put the sugar and water into a large saucepan. Bring to the boil. Drop the strawberry tomatoes in and boil for 10 minutes. Drain in a fine sieve, or cheesecloth placed over an earthenware bowl. Measure with a saccharometer; it should register 28° (see SUGAR). If the degree is lower, boil down the syrup. If it is above 28°, add a little water. Whisk an egg white with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) water in a basin using an egg whisk. Allow the syrup to clarify, leaving it for 20 minutes at the side of the stove, simmering very gently.

Strain through a muslin bag. Heat the bottles gradually and pour in the boiling syrup. Cork the bottles, securely.

STRIP. EFFEUILLER – To take the leaves or petals off the stalk of a plant. Thus globe artichoke is stripped if the heart only is to be used. Herbs, such as chervil and sorrel, are also stripped before use.

STRITZEL (Austrian cookery) – In Austria the stritzel is the classic Christmas cake.

Ingredients. 1 kg. ( $2\frac{1}{4}$  lb., 9 cups) sifted flour, 250 g. (9 oz., generous cup) butter, 6 eggs, 60 g. ( $2\frac{1}{2}$  oz.,  $\frac{1}{3}$  cup) sugar, 15 g. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cake) fresh yeast,  $\frac{1}{2}$  litre (scant pint,  $2\frac{1}{4}$  cups) warm milk, 125 g. ( $4\frac{1}{2}$  oz.,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) each sultanas and raisins, 2 lemons,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  teaspoons salt, a pinch of grated nutmeg and a pinch of powdered cumin.

Method. Make a dough with a quarter of the flour, a little milk, the yeast, salt, sugar, nutmeg and a little butter. Leave to rise.

Knock back the dough after adding to it the rest of the flour. Add the eggs, the remaining butter, the raisins and sultanas and work in the same way as for Brioche dough (see DOUGH), keeping the mixture fairly firm. Leave to rise again.

Knock back the dough once more. Divide it into pieces – 9 are needed to make a stritzel: 4 large, 3 medium and 2 small. Make all these pieces into 'tails' of the same length and plait the 4 largest. Lay this plait on a buttered baking sheet. Plait the 3 medium-sized tails and place on top of the first. Twist the 2 smallest tails and set on top of the plaits. Stick the ends together neatly. Leave to rise a little.

Brush with egg, sprinkle with a little salt and caraway seeds. Bake in a fairly hot oven.

STROMATEUS (Rudderfish). STROMATÉE – Fish of warm and temperate seas, inhabiting the Mediterranean, where it is called stromatée fiatole, lapuga, in Nice, and lippa, in Sète. Its flesh is very delicate and is prepared in the same way as turbot (q.v.).

STRUDEL (Bavarian cookery) – National cake of Bavaria. It is made of noodle pastry with extra butter and is rolled out as thinly as possible.

Divide the pastry into squares and spread each with a mixture of diced apples, butter, currants and chopped almonds, flavoured with cinnamon and a little brandy.

Moisten the edges of the strudels, roll them, and put into a buttered sauté dish. Sprinkle with melted butter and brown. Pour a little milk into the dish and poach, covered, in the oven. The strudels are cooked when the milk has been absorbed. Sprinkle with sugar when they come out of the oven, and eat hot.

STUFF, TO. FARCIR – To fill with farce or other mixture (purée, salpicon, ragout, etc.) the interior of fish, chicken, game, meat (slitting it to make a pocket), hollowed out vegetables, etc.

STURGEON. ESTURGEON – Large migratory fish, which lives in the sea and goes up rivers to spawn.

This fish was once plentiful in certain French rivers. It is now rarely found except in the Garonne. In Germany, Russia and the Balkans, sturgeons 6 to 7 m. (20 to 23 feet) long are quite often caught.

There are two breeds to be found in European waters, the great sturgeon (called in England the royal sturgeon), and the common sturgeon.

The sterlet, a fish much prized in Russia, is a breed of sturgeon caught in the Volga.

Although rather indigestible, sturgeon is quite tasty. Those caught in fresh water in the spring are the most sought after.

Sturgeons' eggs are made into caviare, a highly prized delicacy, which has always been expensive.

Vésiga is another product of the sturgeon. It is much used in Russian cookery and is obtained by drying the spinal marrow of the sturgeon in a special manner.

In Russia, where the sturgeon is highly esteemed, it is eaten fresh or salted. In France, sturgeon is cut into steaks or thick slices or fricandeau which are braised like fricandeau of veal. It may also be smoked like salmon.

Sturgeon à la Brimont. ESTURGEON À LA BRIMONT – Fillet a medium-sized sturgeon. Trim the fillets. Thread anchovy fillets into them. Place in a baking dish lined with a fondue of carrots, onions and celery, finely sliced and cooked slowly in butter until very tender. Cover with 2 peeled, chopped and deseeded tomatoes mixed with 4 tablespoons coarsely diced mushrooms. Surround with potatoes cut into little balls with a ball-scoop, half cooked in salted water and drained. Moisten with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) dry white wine. Dot with 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) butter, cut into tiny pieces. Bake in a cool oven, basting frequently. Five minutes before taking out of the oven, sprinkle with breadcrumbs and brown lightly.

Sturgeon in Champagne. ESTURGEON AU CHAMPAGNE – Skin a medium-sized sturgeon. Trim it. Stud with truffles. Steep for 1 hour in a marinade of brandy, salt, spices and pepper.

Put the fish in a pan on a buttered grid. Moisten with fish fumet made with dry Champagne, boiled down and enriched with 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) fine mirepoix made of carrots, onions and celery, cooked slowly in butter until very tender.

Bring to the boil on the stove, then cook in a moderate oven, basting frequently.

Drain the sturgeon. Glaze in the oven. Place on a large dish and surround with the garnish indicated.

Moisten the stock with 2  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, generous cup) dry champagne. Boil down. Add 2  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, generous cup) Espagnole sauce (see SAUCE) based on fish stock, carefully skimmed. Boil down. Season. Add 100 g. (4 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) butter. Strain. Pour over the fish.

Sturgeon braised in champagne can be served plain in its own juice, or with various garnishes. Among the most suitable garnishes are the following: Chambord, mushrooms, braised cucumbers, turtle, truffles.

Curried sturgeon. ESTURGEON AU CURRIE – Cook a fillet of sturgeon weighing about 800 g. (1  $\frac{3}{4}$  lb.) in butter, with 2 large sliced onions and a bouquet garni. Season with salt, pepper and 2 teaspoons curry powder. Drain the sturgeon and put it on a serving dish. Keep hot.

Dilute the pan juices with 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) dry white wine. Boil down. Moisten with 3 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint,  $1\frac{1}{4}$  cups) Velouté sauce (see SAUCE) based on fish stock. Season with 2 teaspoons curry powder mixed with 5 tablespoons (6 table-spoons) fresh cream. Boil for a few seconds. Add 3 table-spoons (scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) butter. Strain this sauce and pour over the sturgeon. Serve with Rice à l'indienne (see RICE).

Fillets of sturgeon Boris. FILETS D'ESTURGEON BORIS – Fillet a medium-sized sturgeon. Trim the fillets. Steep for 1 hour in a marinade of oil, lemon juice, salt, paprika and spices. Drain.

Put them in an ovenware dish lined with 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) dry duxelles mixed with chopped chives. Moisten with 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) dry white wine. Bring to the boil on the stove then cover and cook in the oven for 10 minutes. Cover the fillets with coarsely shredded truffles. Pour the marinade over them. Moisten with 3 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint,  $1\frac{1}{4}$  cups) fresh cream. Dot with tiny pieces of butter. Finish cooking in a cool oven, basting frequently with cream. Serve in the ovenware dish.

Fricandeau of sturgeon à la hongroise. FRICANDEAU D'ESTURGEON À LA HONGROISE – Brown a thick slice of sturgeon in butter with finely diced onions. Season with salt, paprika and a bouquet garni. Moisten with 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) white wine. Boil down. Add 3 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint,  $1\frac{1}{4}$  cups) Velouté sauce (see SAUCE) based on fish stock. Finish cooking in a slow oven. Add butter to the sauce and pour it over the fish. Serve with boiled potatoes.

Fricandeau of sturgeon au jus. FRICANDEAU D'ESTURGEON AU

JUS – Cut a slice or fricandeau from a rather thick sturgeon fillet weighing 800 g. to 1 kg. ( $1\frac{3}{4}$  to  $2\frac{1}{4}$  lb.). Thread with thin lardoons. Cook as for Veal fricandeau (see VEAL).

Fricandeau of sturgeon with sorrel. FRICANDEAU D'ESTURGEON À L'OSEILLE – Cook as for Veal fricandeau (see VEAL) and serve with braised sorrel.

Sturgeon steaks in cream. DARNES D'ESTURGEON À LA CRÈME – Skin the sturgeon and cut it into slices or steaks. Season with salt and paprika. Line a baking dish with chopped onion, cooked slowly in butter until very tender. Lay the slices of sturgeon on top. Moisten with 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) white wine. Bring to the boil on the stove. Bake in the oven for 15 minutes. Pour on thick fresh cream. Dot with tiny pieces of butter. Finish cooking in the oven, basting frequently.

SUBRICS – Small preparations served as an hors-d'œuvre, small entrée or garnish.

Subrics are a variety of croquettes, but they are never coated in egg and breadcrumbs. They are cooked in butter in a sauté pan, not in deep fat.

Bind the basic ingredient, cut into dice, with a mixture of Allemande sauce or Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE) and beaten egg. Season.

Using a spoon, divide this mixture into 50 to 60 g. (2 to  $2\frac{1}{2}$  oz.) pieces and cook in a pan in clarified butter or oil.

Keep the subrics apart in the pan so that they can spread without running into each other. Drain the subrics, arrange them in a circle on a dish and garnish with fried parsley. Serve with sauce, or as they are.

Some subric mixtures are bound only with egg, some have flour, cream or cheese added to them.

Beef subrics à la ménagère. SUBRICS DE BOEUF À LA MÉNAGÈRE – Dice 300 g. (11 oz.,  $2\frac{1}{2}$  cups) left-over boiled beef. Put it into a basin and add 2 eggs beaten with 1 tablespoon of flour and 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) grated Gruyère. Season with salt and pepper and mix well.

In a frying pan, heat equal quantities of butter and oil or cooking fat. Put the beef mixture into the pan, spoonful by spoonful. Cook on both sides.

Serve with Tomato sauce or Piquante sauce (see SAUCE).

Subrics may be also made from veal, chicken, pork, sweetbreads, brains, tongue, left-over fish, etc.

Foie gras subrics. SUBRICS DE FOIE GRAS – Dice 200 g. (7 oz., 1 cup) foie gras. Bind with a mixture of 75 g. (3 oz.,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) flour, 1 egg and 4 or 5 tablespoons fresh double cream. Season with salt, pepper and spices.

Cook as for Beef subrics.

Potato subrics. SUBRICS DE POMMES DE TERRE – Break up with a fork the flesh of 6 large potatoes baked in their skins in the oven. Bind with an egg and a little Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE). Some grated cheese may be added if liked. Cook and serve as for Beef subrics.

Semolina subrics – See SEMOLINA.

Spinach subrics – See SPINACH.

SUC – Liquid obtained by squeezing an animal or vegetable substance, or by boiling down some kind of juice.

Suc of meat. SUC DE VIANDE – Name given to much reduced consommé or to the juice which runs from roast meat; also to juice pressed from raw meat.

SUCÉES – A type of petit four made as follows:

Mix together in a basin 250 g. (9 oz., generous cup) sugar, 250 g. (9 oz., generous cup) butter, 150 g. (5 oz.,  $1\frac{1}{4}$  cups) sifted flour and 5 egg yolks. Add 150 g. (5 oz.,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) finely chopped candied fruit. Fold in 5 stiffly beaten egg whites.

Make into round shapes on a buttered and floured baking sheet. Bake in a hot oven.

SUCKER. BARBIER – Name applied to various types of fish which have either a cup-shaped sucker (Lepadogaster de Gouan), or a sharp spine on a fin (perch).

SUCRAGE – French term for the process of adding sugar to grape juice during wine-making. (See WINE.)

SUÉDOISE – A sweet dish made by arranging fruit, cooked in syrup, in layers in an aspic mould, which is then filled with fruit or liqueur-flavoured jelly.

SUGAR. SUCRE – Sweet substance extracted from many plants; its chief sources are sugar cane, sugar beet, sugar

Manufacture of sugar in the 17th century (Centre d'étude pour l'utilisation du sucre)

SUGAR

maple and various species of palm. There are many types of sugar with various molecular structures. The most important are sucrose (cane sugar), levulose (fruit sugar), maltose (malt sugar) and lactose (milk sugar).

History – In ancient times, honey and fruit took the place of sugar all over Europe. Sugar cane was probably first grown in India, in the Ganges basin, and then in China. The word sugar seems to have been derived from the Sanskrit word sarkara.

Greece and Rome imported sugar as a luxury commodity or as a medicament. In the fifth century the Persians discovered a way of refining syrup. The Arabs took sugar to Egypt, Rhodes, Cyprus, North Africa, Spain and Syria. By the tenth century the sugar trade was established in the Mediterranean, centred on Venice. In the fifteenth century Lisbon took over from Venice as the centre for sugar refining.

With the coming of coffee and cocoa, the consumption of sugar increased in Europe and refineries were set up in Germany, France, Holland and England. By the eve of the French revolution, Bordeaux had 26 refineries producing a fifth of the sugar for the European market, from raw sugar cane imported from the Antilles, Maurice, and Réunion Islands. It was not until the time of Napoleon that sugar beet plantations were developed in France.

Cane sugar – Sugar cane, originating in India, then the West Indies and America, is like a reed with a spongy marrow and grows chiefly in tropical and sub-tropical areas. It is the source of about half the sugar produced commercially. The juice is pressed from the canes and is then subjected to a series of treatments to free it from impurities. The molasses is taken from the sugar, leaving a yellow sugar, known in Great Britain as Demerara sugar. This sugar is crushed fine and is known as brown sugar. Further processes of refinement remove the colour and produce granulated, castor, icing (confectioner's) and lump sugar.

Beet sugar – In 1747 a German chemist, Margraf, discovered sugar in beet juice. One of his followers, a French refugee named Achard, set up an experimental factory but had no financial success. His business failed but was started again in France at the instigation of Napoleon at the time of the Continental blockade. Manufacture of sugar by this method developed from that time until it became a big industry.

At first, beet sugar was said to have a bad taste and to be less sweetening than cane sugar. It was alleged to have various defects and it was necessary to show, by experiment, an absolute chemical identity between the sugar from beet and sugar from cane before consumption of beet sugar became generally accepted. It is now almost as large a source of sugar as sugar cane.

Different sorts of refined sugar – Granulated sugar is obtained by purifying the sugar obtained from beet or cane. The sugar is dissolved in water and treated for impurities. The solution is then evaporated and crystallised to give crystals of the required size.

Castor sugar is produced in the same way but the process is altered to yield smaller crystals. It can also be produced by grinding down granulated sugar.

Icing sugar results from crushing granulated sugar to produce a fine powder.

Loaf or cube sugar is made by pressing damp granulated sugar into moulds and then drying it to make the crystals stick together.

Brown sugar is sugar with the molasses removed but it is otherwise unrefined. It is obtained by crystallising from the syrup remaining at the end of the refining process. There is an even less-refined type of sugar called vergeoise in France.

Sugar candy is manufactured by the slow crystallisation of Sugar model of the Merchandise Mart in Chicago, made by an American cook sugar syrup. This contains a certain proportion of invert sugar. It is used in the manufacture of Champagne wines. When heated to the crack degree, lightly coloured and acidulated, it becomes barley sugar, or apple sugar if it is left transparent. If this sugar is pulled it takes on a silky appearance. True barley sugar used to be manufactured from a concoction from barley, but this is rarely done these days.

Properties of sugar – Sugar melts at 160°C. (320°F.) and, on cooling, takes on a glossy appearance (barley sugar, candy sugar) but tends after a while to resume its crystalline structure. If it is heated further, it becomes a straw-colour, then brown, forming caramel at 180°C. (356°F.), becoming dark caramel at 190°C. (374°F.), black jack at 210°C. (410°F.): finally it decomposes.

Sugar is easily soluble in water which, when cold, can dissolve double its own weight of sugar. Solubility increases with rising temperature and saturated solutions would contain:

	C.	F.
64.18 per cent of sugar at	0°	(32°)
64.87 per cent of sugar at	5°	(41°)
65.56 per cent of sugar at	10°	(50°)
66.33 per cent of sugar at	15°	(59°)
67.09 per cent of sugar at	20°	(68°)
67.89 per cent of sugar at	25°	(77°)
68.70 per cent of sugar at	30°	(86°)
69.55 per cent of sugar at	35°	(95°)
70.42 per cent of sugar at	40°	(104°)
71.32 per cent of sugar at	45°	(113°)
72.25 per cent of sugar at	50°	(122°)
73.20 per cent of sugar at	55°	(131°)
74.18 per cent of sugar at	60°	(140°)
75.18 per cent of sugar at	65°	(149°)
76.12 per cent of sugar at	70°	(158°)
77.27 per cent of sugar at	75°	(167°)
78.38 per cent of sugar at	80°	(176°)
79.46 per cent of sugar at	85°	(185°)
80.61 per cent of sugar at	90°	(194°)
81.77 per cent of sugar at	95°	(203°)
82.97 per cent of sugar at	100°	(212°)

As the quantity of sugar dissolved in a given volume of water is increased so the density of the solution increases and the boiling point is raised. These factors provide a means of classifying sugar solutions and syrups.

Food value of sugar – Sugar is a reasonably pure carbohydrate food. It has a high calorific value: 100 g. (3½ oz.) of sugar yields 393 calories. It is therefore a very concentrated energy foodstuff which is readily absorbed and leaves practically no residue. Thanks to its rapid assimilation, sugar restores energy very quickly, though only for a limited time, in subjects exhausted by fatigue. This has been shown by tests carried out on different armies.

It is necessary therefore to consider sugar as a condiment, an energy food and something which is eaten frequently. For culinary purposes, sugar is used for sweet dishes, confectionery and for making sauces, ragoûts, etc. Sugar boiled to the caramel degree is used as a colouring agent for soups, stocks and sauces.

Sugar boiling – Only good quality sugar should be used for cooking. A heavy-based saucepan is the most suitable cooking utensil.

Before proceeding with sugar boiling it is necessary to prepare a syrup by dissolving a certain quantity of sugar in one third of its weight of water. The mixture is put over heat and the sugar should be thoroughly dissolved before the solution is brought to the boil. It is skimmed carefully to remove the impurities of the sugar which rise to the surface. The sides of the pan should be cleaned occasionally with a clean, damp pastry brush to remove any scum which has collected. Do not stir the syrup while it is boiling otherwise crystals will form in the solution and cause graining.

A further method of preventing sugar graining is to add 125 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) glucose for every 500 g. (18 oz., 2½ cups) sugar.

When the boiling produces small bubbles close together, the sugar has begun to cook. From then on it is important to watch the syrup carefully in order to stop the cooking at the required degree.

Before arriving at the caramel degree, the sugar passes through six different stages, which are designated by the following terms: small thread, large thread, small ball, large ball, small crack, hard crack. Beyond this degree the sugar becomes caramel.

The various sugar degrees can be determined by the following indications which after careful practice can easily be recognised.

First degree: small gloss or small thread. Using a teaspoon, take a little of the sugar solution and place it in a cup of cold water. Hold the cooled sugar between the thumb and forefinger and pull gently apart. The formation of short threads indicates that the sugar is at the small thread degree.

Second degree: large gloss or large thread. Continue boiling for a short while, then carry out the preceding test again. When the sugar is pulled between the thumb and forefinger it should form longer, stronger threads. This shows that the sugar is at the large thread stage.

Third degree: small ball. Boil the syrup for a little longer before testing for this stage. Place ½ teaspoon of the syrup in a cup of cold water. The sugar should form a small ball when rolled between the thumb and fingers. This indicates that the sugar has reached the small ball degree.

Fourth degree: large ball. Boil the syrup for a short while then repeat the previous test. The ball which is formed between the fingers should be firmer but still malleable. This indicates that the large ball degree has been reached.

Fifth degree: small crack. Continue boiling the syrup for a little longer, then dip a teaspoon into the syrup and immediately into cold water. The cooled sugar from the spoon will harden immediately to form a brittle thread. This thread will bend and then break if pressure is applied, indicating that the sugar is at the small crack stage.

Sixth degree: hard crack. Once the sugar has arrived at the previous stage it must be watched very carefully for it will pass rapidly through the last stage and turn into caramel. The above test is repeated. The sugar should form very brittle strands which break without bending if it has reached the hard crack degree.

Caramel: When the sugar has arrived at the hard crack degree it takes only a few seconds for it to become caramel. It is comparatively easy to recognise when sugar has turned into caramel. The sugar becomes light golden then the colour deepens to give a dark brown syrup. When cooled the sugar is very brittle and breaks easily.

As soon as the desired degree is obtained, the saucepan must be taken away from the heat and the sugar kept at the same temperature on the edge of the stove.

Some writers use the term à la nappe to designate a degree which precedes small thread. Others distinguish certain intermediate degrees between the thread degree and the ball degree, these being called small pearl, large pearl, little soufflé and large soufflé. At the small pearl degree the sugar boils, forming itself into small balls, like pearls. At the large pearl degree the pearls are better formed and more separated. At the soufflé degree small balls detach themselves from the skimmer when one blows across its holes after having dipped it in the syrup. In the large soufflé degree the bubbles are like snow-flakes.

To identify these various degrees or density one can use a saccharometer or Baumé sugar weight-scale which is graduated from 0° to 44°. The degrees usually registered on the Baumé thermometer or saccharometer, and their equivalents on Fahrenheit and Centigrade scales are as follows:

Names	Density degrees	°C	°F
Small thread or small gloss	30°	101°	214°
Large thread or large gloss	30°	103°	217°
Small pearl	33°	103°–105°	217°–221°
Large pearl	35°	107°	224°
Soufflé (blow)	37°	110°	230°
Large soufflé (feather)	37°	111°	232°
Small ball	38°	116°	241°
Large ball	39°	121°	250°
Crack	40°	149°–150°	300°–302°
Light caramel		150°	302°
Dark caramel

The crack degree cannot be registered on the Baumé thermometer but various other degrees can be recognised on a special thermometer, graduated from 100°C. to 175°C. (212°F. to 347°F.) With this apparatus, which is used in the manufacture of confectionery, it is easy to distinguish one degree from another up to a point very close to caramel.

	°C.	°F.
Light crack	129°	264°
Medium crack	133°	271°
Hard crack	143°	289°
Extra hard crack	168°	334°
Caramel	180°	356°

The instructions given for the boiling of sugar must be observed carefully. The intervals between the various stages in the cooking are very short. The sugar used to obtain a perfect boiling must be first grade.

Sugar syrup prepared cold – When sugar syrup prepared in advance is used, it is necessary to check the exact quantity of sugar and water that it contains. Here are two small tables which enable one to recognise both the quantity of sugar and the quantity of water corresponding to the Baumé scale.

SULTAN-HEN

For 1 litre (1½ pints, generous quart) sugar solution:

Degrees Baumé	Weight of sugar
1°	20 g. (¾ oz.)
2°	40 g. (1½ oz.)
3°	60 g. (2 oz.)
5°	120 g. (4½ oz.)
10°	250 g. (9 oz.)
15°	500 g. (18 oz.)
21°	750 g. (25 oz.)
25°	875 g. (31 oz.)
27°	1000 g. (35 oz.)
29°	1225 g. (41 oz.)
31°	1250 g. (42 oz.)

For 1 kg. (2¼ lb., 2½ cups) sugar:

Degrees Baumé	Weight of water
32°	50 g. (1¾ oz.)
30°	70 g. (2 oz.)
25°	100 g. (4½ oz.)
22°	130 g. (3½ oz.)
20°	150 g. (5½ oz.)
19°	170 g. (6 oz.)
18°	200 g. (7 oz.)

There are two other methods of classifying syrups, one of which is to note the temperature at boiling point. The other is to determine the density of the syrup with a hygrometer which gives the density based on the water content. There is also a special syrup measuring instrument from which a simple reading of the strength of the sugar solution can be taken.

The following points can also prove useful: 2 kg. (4½ lb., 9 cups) sugar dissolved in 1 litre (1½ pints, generous quart) cold water measures 34°. The same quantity of sugar dissolved in hot water would only measure 32°.

FLAVOURED SUGARS USED IN CONFECTIONERY, PÂTISSERIE. SUCRES EMPLOYÉS EN PÂTISSERIE, EN CONFISERIE

Anise sugar. SUCRE D'ANIS – Dry 50 g. (2 oz.) anise, wrapped in paper, in a warm oven. Pound finely in a mortar with 500 g. (18 oz., 2¼ cups) sugar. Sift through a fine sieve. Keep in a well-stoppered jar in a dry place.

Anise sugar is used to make petits fours, as are all flavoured sugars.

Cinnamon sugar. SUCRE À LA CANNELLE – Proceed as for Vanilla sugar (see below), replacing the vanilla with 1 thin stick of cinnamon. Chop the cinnamon, mix with 1 tablespoon castor sugar then pound with another tablespoon castor sugar. Sift through a fine sieve. Pound the cinnamon remaining in the sieve with another tablespoon of sugar and sift.

Clove sugar. SUCRE DE GIROFLE – Proceed as for Anise sugar with 20 g. (¾ oz.) cloves and 500 g. (18 oz., 2¼ cups) sugar.

Ginger sugar. SUCRE DE GINGEMBRE – Proceed as for Anise sugar with 30 g. (1 oz.) ginger and 500 g. (18 oz., 2¼ cups) sugar.

Icing sugars and pastillage – See ICING, PASTILLAGE.

Lemon peel sugar. SUCRE AU ZESTE DE CITRON – Pare enough lemons to yield 60 g. (2 oz.) lemon peel. Dry this peel in the shade and chop it. Put into a mortar with 500 g. (18 oz., 4 cups) lump sugar. Pound. Press through a fine sieve.

Orange sugar (Carême's recipe). SUCRE D'ORANGE – 'Take some sweet Maltese oranges with very fine skins. Grate the peel with a lump of sugar, but lightly, so as not to reach the white pith which is immediately under the peel, because this is very bitter and spoils the fruit flavour.

'As the surface of the sugar becomes coloured, scrape it with a knife to remove the peel which becomes stuck to it by repeated rubbing. Recommence the operation with the same care. Dry the sugar in a low oven, or at the open door of a warm oven. Crush it and press through a fine sieve.

'For Seville orange, lemon, citron or mandarine sugar, proceed in the same way.'

Orange flower sugar. SUCRE DE FLEURS D'ORANGER – Proceed as for Anise sugar with 250 g. (9 oz.) orange flower petals which have been dried, and 500 g. (18 oz., 2¼ cups) sugar.

Orange peel sugar. SUCRE AU ZESTE D'ORANGE – Prepare with orange peel in the same way as for Lemon peel sugar.

Perfumed sugar (Carême's recipe). SUCRE ODORÉS – 'The pastrycooks in the shops use distilled essences such as that of lemon, bergamot, rosewater, orange flower water and powdered orris. These are used to flavour their sweet cakes and biscuits.

'The true pastrycook in the home rejects these perfumes and flavours his sweets with the pleasant natural tastes of orange, Seville orange, lemon, orange flowers, coffee, vanilla, green anise or saffron.

Vanilla sugar. SUCRE VANILLÉ – Split 60 g. (2 oz.) vanilla pods and chop them finely. Put into a mortar with 500 g. (18 oz., 4 cups) lump sugar and pound finely. Press through a fine sieve.

SULTAN-HEN. POULE SULTAN – Web-footed aquatic bird, prepared for the table in the same way as the coot.

SULTANE – Large pastry set in the middle of a pattern of lattice-work sugar, surmounted by spun sugar plumes.

SULTANE (À LA) – Name applied to various preparations. Velouté de volaille à la sultane is a soup finished off with pistachio butter. All dishes called à la sultane are characterised by the inclusion of pistachios, generally in the form of pistachio butter.

The name à la sultane is also used for sweets and pastries, for example apricots à la sultane, and bavarois à la sultane.

SUMMER SNIPE or SEA-LARK. ALOUETTE DE MER – Plover of the order of waders, which hunters call sandpipers. Its flesh is quite delicate. All recipes given for woodcock are applicable to summer snipe.

SUMPTUOUS. SOMPTEUX – That which is magnificent and which costs a great deal. In gastronomy, sumptuousness is not always synonymous with culinary perfection.

SUNDAES (ICED COUPES). COUPES GLACÉES – Composite sweet with ice cream as the main ingredient, served in glass or silver ice-cups; for this reason they are called coupes in France.

The glasses are usually filled with one or more kinds of ice cream and decorated with fresh or crystallised fruit, or with Chantilly cream (see CREAMS).

Sundaes may be presented in a great many ways. The coupe Jaques is regarded as the classic sundae. Recipes for this and other iced coupes are given in the section on ICE CREAMS AND ICES.

Sundaes à la cévenole. COUPES GLACÉES À LA CÉVENOLE – Make ½ litre (scant pint, 2¼ cups) Vanilla ice cream (see ICE CREAMS AND ICES). Whisk enough cream with sugar to make 3 dl. (½ pint, 1¼ cups) Chantilly cream (see CREAMS). Break 250 g. (9 oz.) marrons glacés into tiny fragments and steep them for 30 minutes in a glass of kirsch.

To serve; line the bottom of the ice cream glasses with marrons glacés. Top with a smooth layer of vanilla ice cream.

Raspberry sundae

Decorate with marrons glacés and Chantilly cream piped through a forcing bag.

SUNDEW. ROSSOLIS – Aromatic plant whose leaves can be eaten as salad, or cooked.

SUNFLOWER. TOURNESOL – This plant, Helianthus annuus, originally from Mexico and Peru, was introduced into Europe by the Spaniards. Nowadays it is cultivated mainly in southern Russia, Poland and Italy.

From a nutritional point of view one must differentiate between certain edible species and others which are only valuable for their oil.

Sunflower oil is rich in essential fatty acids and seems to bring about the lowering of the blood cholesterol level. It is a valuable aid in the diets of sufferers from atherosclerosis.

Sunflower seeds are especially popular in Russia and Poland, where they are nibbled like almonds. They are an excellent energy food.

SUPERSTITIONS OF THE TABLE. SUPERSTITIONS DE TABLE – There have always been superstitions connected with eating. Some have an explanation; others remain a mystery. We have chosen only a few, well known and not so well known, to give a general idea of the form these superstitions took, but have not included the superstitions linked with old wives' tales concerning the care and curing of the sick, nor those connected with witchcraft. These are outside the subject dealt with here.

Unlucky thirteen – You have invited some friends to dine. There ought to have been fifteen, but two were unable to attend. You are appalled to find that you have thirteen guests. Make haste and find a fourteenth person or ask the thirteenth not to come; for, among these thirteen, one is sure to die before the year is out.

It was thirteen apostles who celebrated Easter. One of them betrayed his master and hanged himself. The number thirteen is therefore unlucky; among thirteen persons there is one who is a traitor and a potential hanged man.

The number thirteen is only dangerous at table, for it was there that the treachery of Judas was discovered. There is no need to worry if numbers total thirteen elsewhere.

Misplaced fork and spoon – Your young son having no idea of the misfortunes the misplacing of a fork and spoon may engender, places his fork and spoon crosswise on his plate. Destroy this fatal sign immediately, for it is possible that the food you serve him will poison and eventually kill him. The crossed fork and spoon, in the form of a Saint Andrew's cross, presaged no good to our forebears.

Spilt salt – Your host has served you with a slice of tender beef, thick and juicy. You decide to whet the gravy with a little salt. You grasp the salt cellar but inadvertently capsize it. The salt spills on to the table and suddenly there is disquiet all round. Quickly collect a few of the scattered grains and fling them over your shoulder to keep away evil. Salt was the symbol of friendship, each person offering it to the other at the beginning of the meal. It was essential not to capsize the salt cellar, which would have been a sign of disagreement. Likewise, one took great care not to give a knife as a present, for it would break the friendship.

Egg shell – Ought one to break the shell of an egg after eating the contents? This custom has its roots in the past. It is referred to by ancient and modern writers.

The Romans attached great importance to it. The egg was regarded as an emblem of nature, a substance that was both mysterious and sacred. People were convinced that magicians used eggs in their incantations, emptying them and drawing magic characters from inside the shell. These had the power to cause much harm. One crushed the shell to destroy the evil spell. Occasionally it was enough to pierce it with a knife, or to rap it three times.

Eggs are also used as an augury. Julia, daughter of Augustus, being pregnant by Tiberius, ardently desired a son. To make sure that her desires would be realised, she placed an egg in her bosom and warmed it carefully. When she was obliged to remove it, she gave it to a wet nurse who continued to impart the precious warmth. The omen was a fortunate one, according to Pliny, and did not disappoint the desires of the princess: she had a young cock from the egg and a male child from her husband.

Upside-down bread – If bread, the staff of life, is turned upside down it signifies death. Respect due to bread demands that it should never be in such a position on the table, otherwise misfortune will result.

The last drop of wine in the bottle – If you drink it there is the chance that you will marry within the year or, if you are already married, you will have a daughter. No one knows why. The reason has been long forgotten. Perhaps it is the symbol of poverty. Marriage, like daughters, it is said, costs man dearly.

Spilt wine – In Rome, a little wine used to be spilt on the table before a repast in honour of the gods. It is therefore a lucky gesture, an expression of gratitude which one hopes will be rewarded.

Blossoming of the vine (taken from an 1830 manual) – 'Does it cause the wines to ferment in their casks? And what about other fruit? Does it make liqueurs and jams ferment?'

'You assure me, mademoiselle, that your redcurrant, blackcurrant jellies, your cherry, plum and apricot jams ferment in their jars whenever the redcurrant and blackcurrant bushes, cherry trees, etc., in your garden begin to flower. Your butler attests that the same phenomenon takes place in your casks when the vine is in blossom. You conclude from this that there is an evident connection between wine and the blossoming of the vine; between preserves and the blossoming fruit trees and bushes; that these flowers send out corpuscles which mix with the wine and jams and make them ferment.'

'Allow me to amend your views. By a law of nature, a single cause reacts identically on two bodies which have the same dispositions. Thus two strings of an instrument that are in unison need only a single vibration to reverberate together. During the blossoming period of trees and vines, the air is at exactly the right temperature to ferment whatever substances are prone to fermentation; its action may extend to the wine, even though it is enclosed in casks, and to your berries although they are in pots. The phenomenon you refer to occurs in America and Asia as it does in Europe and at precisely the same moment despite the different seasons in those latitudes. Now, would you have it that the vines of France, of the Canaries, of Spain send corpuscles to Asia and America to make the wine ferment? Would you have it that these swarms of corpuscles leave our shores, cross the seas, searching in thousands of places until they find the precise cask of wine analogous to them? The famous Sir Digby supported this paradox, but he only wished to make fun of us. In the end, it is we who have made fun of him.'

Saint Stephen's cabbage – It is said that St. Stephen hid in a field of cabbages to escape martyrdom. For this reason it is inadvisable to eat this excellent vegetable on St. Stephen's day.

Does melon make one feverish? (from a book of the nineteenth century) – 'The origin of the melon is rather obscure. Was it brought to us by world conquerors like so many other fruits that enrich our gardens and decorate our tables? Was it perhaps discovered during the conquest of Africa by the Scipios and Metellus? It was not raised here in our temperate zones, under our cold and cloudy skies. Its delicate temperament, the attentive care it demands, the precautions it calls for, all proclaim it a foreigner who has not yet acquired his right of naturalisation.

'Under a thick outer skin it hides valuable and distinguished qualities; and as a man of great wit declared: "Like a rough diamond, the more rough and rugged its outward appearance, the better it is."

'Pliny acknowledged that its flesh is fine, delicate and sweet but also pointed out that it was difficult to digest, and made its effect felt next morning. However, he attests that there is nothing harmful in the melon despite the fact that at least two emperors have died as a result of eating too much of it.

'Blame must not be laid on the melon for the autumnal fevers that crop up at the end of September, but on certain atmospheric conditions that remain something of a mystery. It would be dangerous to eat it when perspiring heavily, just as it would be dangerous to drink cold water under such circumstances. If the melon were responsible for producing autumnal fevers then the rich would suffer most, since it is they who eat most melons; but such fevers are more common among those who eat very few melons and among country people who hardly ever see one.'

SUPPORT or PRESENTATION BASE. SUPPORT OU FOND DE DRESSAGE – Piece of food used in the presentation of hot or cold dishes. The base or mount for hot dishes is usually a croûton of a sandwich loaf cut to the shape and size of the piece of food that is to be placed upon it. These croûtons are fixed in position with a mixture of egg white and flour on the heated serving dish. Their rôle is to raise the principal item of food sufficiently to allow the garnishes to be arranged around it attractively.

Formerly the mounts were made of pounded, cooked rice which was moulded to the desired shape and decoratively trimmed.

Bread croûtons are also used for the presentation of cold foods that are slightly raised in order to accommodate the garnish. They are trimmed to a decorative shape and spread with half-melted butter. The recognised procedure was to pipe the croûtons supporting cold foods with coloured butter.

The above bases and mounts should only be used if the recipe specifically requires them. The simplest arrangements are the most attractive.

SUPRÊMES – See CHICKEN, Suprêmes of chicken. All the methods of preparation given in that section are also applicable to suprêmes of partridge and other game birds.

SURESNES – The vineyards of Suresnes were planted in 918 by the priests of the abbey of Saint-Germain-des-Près, squires of Suresnes by the grace of Charles III.

The principal vineyard, called 'des Seigneurs', covers 18 arpents (59,000 square metres). Others followed, and at the census of 1789, there were 42 arpents and 11 perch planted with vines.

Between the end of the nineteenth century and the beginning of the twentieth century, this light, bitter, slightly laxative wine had lost the qualities that had made its reputation in the past.

There is constant mention of the petit vin de Suresnes of which Henri IV was so fond. King Henry had a delicate palate and the acid wine of the Seine at the foot of Mont Valerien could not begin to compare with the delicate wines served at Court. There seems to have been some confusion over the place of origin. It was definitely not the wine of Suresnes that the 'Vert-Galant' loved so well but that of Surène, from the name of a vineyard situated near Vendôme, which still exists today.

SWALLOW. HIRONDELLE – In spite of the fact that swallows are protected birds in France they are still sometimes eaten in the guise of spit-roasted 'small birds'.

The nests of the salangane or Far-Eastern sea-swallow, which these birds make by regurgitating a gelatinous substance contained in their crops, are highly prized as food by the Chinese. (The jelly produced by the birds comes from the seaweed on which they feed.) So-called 'swallows nests' are sold in Europe, but these are sometimes made from agar-agar.

Salangane swallows' nests are not used in China solely for the preparation of the celebrated birds' nest soup. They are also used as garnishes for various dishes, taking the place of cocks' combs and cocks' kidneys, mushrooms and truffles in composite ragoûts (see NESTS, Swallows' nests).

Swallows' nest soup CONSOMMÉ AUX NIDS D'HIRONDELLES – Make a Chicken consommé (see SOUPS AND BROTHS), rich in nourishing ingredients, and very clear.

Meanwhile, soak the nests for 2 hours in cold water in order to swell the sticky substance of which they are made. After it has been soaked, this substance should be transparent. Clean the filaments of the nests very carefully, removing all debris such as feathers, shells and other impurities.

Blanch the nests in boiling water for 5 to 6 minutes. Bring the consommé to the boil and put in the nests. Simmer gently for 45 minutes. During cooking, the nests disintegrate into thin gelatinous filaments. The sticky substance which held them together gives the soup its characteristic viscous texture.

In China, this soup is made with duck stock. It is usually served in tiny porcelain cups.

SWAN. CYGNE – Graceful web-footed lamellirostrum, tame or wild. In the Middle Ages it ranked with the peacock in providing a sumptuous roast at state banquets. It was carefully plucked before being impaled on the spit. After cooking, it was dressed in its feathers and brought cer-emoniously to the table with a piece of blazing camphor or wick in its beak.

Nowadays swan is regarded as too oily and leathery for the connoisseur.

SWED. CHOUX-NAVETS – A root vegetable, also known as the Swedish turnip. All methods of preparation for turnip (q.v.) are applicable to swede.

SWEETBREAD. RIS – Name of the thymus of calf and lamb. This organ, situated at the top of the chest, is in two parts, of which one, round in shape, is called in French the noix, and the other, more elongated and less regular, is the throat sweetbread or gorge. The flesh of the sweetbread is white and rather soft. Chemical analysis of this substance shows that it contains 3 times more albumen and 4 to 5 times more gelatine than beef and only half as much fibre.

Calves' and lambs' sweetbreads are considered to be the most delicate products of butchery. (See OFFAL or VARIETY MEATS.)

SWEETEN. ADOUCIR – To reduce the acidity of a dish by prolonged cooking. This term also applies to diminishing the degree of saltiness in a dish by diluting it with water, milk or light stock.

SWEET POTATO. PATATE – Hardy plant with edible tubers resembling the potato. A native of India, it has now adapted to grow in all warm countries. Its taste is sweet and resembles slightly the taste of artichoke.

There are many varieties of sweet potatoes; the best are Virginian, with tasty yellow flesh, White Spanish, Algerian, West Indian, which is very large and floury, and the Malaga Pink. Other species of sweet potatoes cultivated in France are also very good.

Sweet potatoes, particularly Malaga Pink, are made into jam. They can also be preserved in syrup, when they resemble marrons glacés.

In the areas where sweet potatoes are cultivated, the young leaves are eaten like spinach.

Baked sweet potatoes, or sweet potatoes in jackets. PATATES EN CHEMISE, EN ROBE DE CHAMBRE – Bake the sweet potatoes in their jackets in the oven. Serve with butter.

Boiled sweet potatoes with honey (Créole cookery). PATATES AU NATURAL AVEC MIEL – Boil the sweet potatoes in water, place in the oven just long enough to dry them, and serve with honey.

Sweet potatoes à la crème. PATATES À LA CRÈME – Proceed as described in the recipe for Potatoes à la crème (see POTATOES).

Sweet potato croquettes. PATATES EN CROQUETTES – Prepare like Potato croquettes (see POTATOES).

Fried sweet potatoes. PATATES FRITES – Prepare like Fried potatoes (see POTATOES).

Fried sweet potatoes (Créole recipe). PATATES FRITES – Choose round, even-sized sweet potatoes. Boil them without salt. While still warm, cut into thick slices. Fry in very hot fat and serve sprinkled with vanilla-flavoured sugar.

Sweet potatoes au gratin. PATATES AU GRATIN – Proceed as described in the recipe for Potatoes au gratin (see POTATOES).

Sweet potatoes à l'impériale, or Henri (American cookery). PATATES À L'IMPÉRIALE – Butter a gratin dish or a shallow metal timbale and put in sliced sweet potatoes, cooking apples and bananas, well mixed and seasoned with salt and paprika. Scatter small pieces of butter on top. Bake in a slow oven. Take out of the oven and cover with apricot or redcurrant pulp.

This dish is served as an accompaniment to meat, poultry or game.

Sweet potato purée. PURÉE DE PATATES – Prepare like Potato purée (see POTATOES).

Sweet potato salad. SALADE DE PATATES – Prepare as for Potato salad (see SALAD).

Stewed sweet potatoes. PATATES À L'ÉTUVÉE – Cut 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) sweet potatoes into slices. Put into a sauté pan with 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter, 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, ½ cup) water and a pinch of salt. Bring to the boil, cover, and simmer for 30 minutes. Serve piled in a vegetable dish.

SWEET POTATO DESSERTS. PATATES ENTREMETS –

Sweet potato pudding (Créole cookery). GÂTEAU DE PATATES DOUCES – Boil 5 sweet potatoes in their skins in unsalted water. When they are cooked, drain, peel, and mash them to a fine paste. Add some vanilla-flavoured sugar or vanilla essence and 1 tablespoon of flour, stirring vigorously. Stir in a little milk. Break in 4 eggs, one at a time, reserving 1 egg white. Whisk the egg white to a stiff froth, and fold into the mixture to make it smooth and light.

Add 150 g. (5 oz., 1 cup) seedless raisins which have been steeped in rum. Pour the mixture into a buttered charlotte mould. Cook for a few minutes in a bain-marie, then in the oven. Serve cold, plain or with custard.

Sweet potato soufflé. SOUFFLÉ AUX PATATES – Using sweet potato bound with egg yolks and mixed with stiffly beaten whites, prepare a soufflé, which can be served as a small entrée or as a sweet soufflé.

SWIFT. MARTINET – Type of swallow. Its flesh is edible though rather tasteless.

SWISS CHARD, WHITE BEET or STRAWBERRY SPINACH. BETTE, BLETTE, POIRÉE À CARDE – Also known under the name of chard or seakale beet, this is a vegetable of the same type as beetroot, cultivated for its spinach-like leaves with broad white petioles and midribs. It is widely cultivated in France, particularly in the Lyons district, where this vegetable is greatly appreciated. It is found in the markets from July to the first frosts.

Preparation of chard. Trim the chard (white ribs) keeping the green parts for another dish. Scrape them and remove all stringy parts. Cut into 6 to 8-cm. (2½ to 3-inch) pieces. Cook in a court-bouillon for vegetables. Drain and prepare as indicated in the recipe.

The chard can also be boiled in salted water. Drain, immerse in cold water to cool, dry in a cloth, chop and prepare like spinach.

Swiss chard à la béchamel. BETTES À LA BÉCHAMEL – Cook 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) chard in a court-bouillon. Drain and put into a sauté pan with 3 dl. (½ pint, 1¼ cups) of not too thick Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE). Simmer, covered, for 5 minutes. Put into a vegetable dish. Add 80 g. (3 oz., ⅓ cup) butter to the sauce and pour it over the chards.

Swiss chard au blanc. BETTES AU BLANC – This is another name for Swiss chard à la béchamel.

Buttered Swiss chard I. BETTES AU BEURRE – Cook 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) chard in court-bouillon, drain, and put into a sauté pan with 100 g. (4 oz., ½ cup) butter. Simmer, covered, over low heat for 15 to 20 minutes. Serve in a vegetable dish, sprinkled with the butter in which it was cooked.

Buttered Swiss chard II. BETTES AU BEURRE – Trim the chard and cut into chunks. Blanch slightly in salted water, drain and immerse in cold water to cool. Drain again, then simmer in a sauté pan with 2 dl. (⅓ pint, scant cup) water and 100 g. (4 oz., ½ cup) butter for 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) vegetables. Transfer to a vegetable dish and sprinkle with butter.

Swiss chard in cream. BETTES À LA CRÈME – Cook 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) chard in court-bouillon; drain. Simmer for 5 minutes with 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) butter. Add 4 dl. (¾ pint, scant

SWISS ROLL

2 cups) hot fresh cream and boil to reduce by half. Transfer to a vegetable dish. Add 60 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) butter to the pan liquor then pour the sauce over the chards.

Swiss chard au gratin. BETTES AU GRATIN – Prepare Swiss chard à la béchamel. Put into an ovenproof dish on a layer of béchamel sauce and cover with the same sauce.

Sprinkle with grated cheese and melted butter and brown in a hot oven.

Swiss chard in gravy. BETTES AU JUS – Cook 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) chard in court-bouillon. Drain and put into a sauté pan with 3 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint,  $1\frac{1}{4}$  cups) brown veal gravy. Leave to simmer, covered, for 10 minutes. Transfer to a vegetable dish. Add 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) butter to the gravy and pour it over the chard.

Swiss chard à la hollandaise. BETTES À LA HOLLANDAISE – Trim and cut the chard into long strips. Tie into bundles as you would asparagus, and cook in boiling salted water. Drain, put on a serving dish for asparagus (with perforations to allow drainage) or on a napkin. Serve with Hollandaise sauce (see SAUCE).

Chard prepared this way can also be served with various other sauces, such as melted butter, Cream sauce, Maitre d'hôtel sauce, Mousseline, Vinaigrette, (see SAUCE).

Swiss chard à l'italienne. BETTES À L'ITALIENNE – Prepare like Swiss chard in gravy, replacing the veal gravy with Italian sauce (see SAUCE).

Swiss chard à la lyonnaise. BETTES À LA LYONNAISE – Prepare like Swiss chard in gravy, replacing the gravy with Lyonnaise sauce (see SAUCE).

Swiss chard à la milanaise. BETTES À LA MILANAISE – Cook the chard in salted water. Drain, dry, and prepare like Asparagus à la milanaise (see ASPARAGUS).

Swiss chard à la moelle. BETTES À LA MOELLE – Drain the chards, dry them and prepare like Cardoons with marrow (see CARDOON).

Swiss chard Mornay. BETTES MORNAY – Another name for Swiss chard au gratin.

Swiss chard à la polonaise. BETTES À LA POLONAISE – Cook the chards in salted water, drain, dry, and prepare like Asparagus à la polonaise (see ASPARAGUS).

SWISS ROLL. BÛCHE – Thin sponge cake baked in a special tin, then covered with jam or cream and rolled up like the French Bûche de Noël.

Chocolate-flavoured Swiss roll

SWIZZLE STICK. MOUSSOIR – Little wooden or metal implement used to whisk chocolate and Champagne.

SWORDFISH. ESPADON – Fish which is found in the North Sea, the Baltic and off the coast of Sicily. It can reach 7 m. (23 feet). Its flesh is white, fine and quite delicate. Recipes for tunny (fresh tuna fish) can be used for swordfish.

Decorating pâtisserie with a butter syringe

SYRINGE. SERINGUE – Instrument used in pâtisserie instead of a forcing bag and pipe when it is necessary to make decorations with a substance that is rather firm in consistency.

SYRUP. SIROP – Solution of sugar and water or sugar and fruit juice, concentrated to a sticky consistency. It can be hot or cold.

Almond syrup. SIROP D'AMANDE, SIROP D'ORGEAT –

Ingredients. 500 g. (18 oz.,  $3\frac{3}{4}$  cups) sweet almonds, 150 g. (5 oz., 1 cup) bitter almonds, 3 kg. (6 $\frac{1}{2}$  lb.) sugar,  $1\frac{3}{4}$  litres (3 pints, 4 pints) distilled water, 2 $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, generous cup) orange flower water.

Method. Blanch the almonds, pound them to a paste in a mortar with 75 g. (3 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) sugar and  $1\frac{1}{2}$  dl. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  pint,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) water. Dilute, little by little, with the rest of the water. Squeeze through a cloth, straining a little water through the residue so as to obtain 2 $\frac{1}{4}$  kg. (5 lb.) of liquor. Dissolve the remaining sugar in this in a bain-marie. Add the orange flower water when the syrup is cold.

Blackcurrant syrup. SIROP DE CASSIS – Strip the blackcurrants from their stalks, crush them and press out the juice through a muslin bag. Weigh the juice and add sugar in the ratio of 900 g. (2 lb., 4 cups) sugar to 500 g. (18 oz.) juice. Stir this in a pan over low heat, stirring all the time to encourage the sugar to dissolve and prevent it from sticking to the bottom.

Skim carefully and verify the degree of concentration, which should be 31° (at boiling point). Decant into bottles, cork, seal, and keep in a cool, dry place.

Cherry, raspberry, gooseberry or mulberry syrup. SIROP DE CERISE, DE FRAMBOISE, DE GROSEILLE, DE MÛRE – Dissolve the sugar in the filtered fruit juice, using, if possible, a copper pan (not tinned). Place over heat and strain as soon as the mixture begins to boil. The amount of sugar required depends on the sweetness of the fruit juice.

Citric acid syrup. SIROP D'ACIDE CITRIQUE, SIROP DE LIMON – Dissolve, by shaking, 10 g. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  oz.) citric acid in 990 g. (2 $\frac{1}{4}$  lb.) plain syrup. Add 20 g. ( $\frac{3}{4}$  oz.) of alcoholic tincture of lemon.

Coffee syrup. SIROP DE CAFÉ – Make a very strong infusion with 500 g. (generous 1 lb.) fresh finely ground coffee. Strain 2 litres (3½ pints, 4½ pints) boiling water twice through the ground coffee to give about 1½ litres (2½ pints, 2¾ pints) well-flavoured coffee.

Put 2½ kg. (5½ lb., 11 cups) sugar into a copper pan. Pour in the coffee infusion and melt over low heat. As soon as the syrup begins to boil it should be removed.

Gum syrup. SIROP DE GOMME – Ingredients. 100 g. (4 oz.) washed white gum, 300 g. (11 oz., 1½ cups) white sugar, 3½ dl. (generous ½ pint, 1½ cups) distilled water.

Method. Dissolve the gum, then the sugar, in the water. Heat to boiling point. Remove when the first bubbles appear, and strain.

Orange syrup I. SIROP D'ORANGE – Make a cold sugar syrup, melting 1½ kg. (4 lb., 8 cups) sugar in 1 litre (1¾ pints, generous quart) water. It takes 24 hours for the sugar to melt completely. Filter through wet flannel.

Dissolve 100 g. (4 oz.) citric acid in a little water and flavour it with orange extract which is obtained by soaking finely cut orange peel in alcohol. To double the strength of the extract, reinfuse with fresh orange peel after it has stood for 1 month. It is important to use only the coloured part of the skin, the white pith imparts a bitter taste.

Orange syrup can be prepared for immediate use by rubbing the outsides of the oranges with sugar lumps until there is no more juice left in the skins. For 6 oranges allow 2 kg. (4½ lb. 9 cups) sugar, taking from this sufficient quantity for rubbing the skins. Melt all the sugar in 1½ litres (2¾ pints, 3½ pints) cold water. Add 250 g. (9 oz.) citric acid.

Orange syrup II. SIROP D'ORANGE – Choose fine ripe oranges. Pare the rind off 2 or 3 of these, very finely and keep on one side to flavour the syrup. Crush the pulp of the oranges and squeeze out the juice in a damp cloth. Weigh the juice. Allow 800 g. (1¾ lb., 3½ cups) sugar for every 500 g. (18 oz.) juice. Set over heat in a copper pan.

Spread a damp cloth over a wooden frame. Put the orange peel on this. As soon as the syrup boils pour it over the peel. Cool before bottling.

Lemon syrup can be made in the same way, but since lemon juice is much more acid than orange juice it is necessary to add an equal quantity of water and to use additional sugar.

Orgeat syrup. SIROP D'ORGEAT – Mix sweet and bitter almonds in the proportion of 750 g. (1¾ lb., 5 cups) sweet almonds to 150 g. (5 oz., 1 cup) bitter almonds.

Blanch them for a few moments in boiling water. The skins are easily removed by rubbing them between thumb and forefinger.

Rinse the almonds in cold water, drain, and toss them in a cloth so as to remove all traces of moisture. Pound the almonds, little by little, in a marble mortar. Allow 1½ litres (2½ pints, 2¾ pints) water and 2¼ kg. (5 lb.) loaf sugar for 900 g. (2 lb., 6 cups) almonds. Add 100 g. (4 oz., ½ cup) sugar little by little to the almonds being pounded in the mortar, and, from time to time, a few drops of water. This prevents the almonds turning to oil.

When they are completely pounded, dilute the almonds to a paste by adding a little more than half of the total amount of water. Strain the diluted paste through a damp cloth, wringing out the cloth thoroughly to extract all the almond milk.

Put back the residue in the mortar, pound it afresh with about 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) sugar, then add the rest of the water. Strain this also through the cloth, squeezing out every drop of liquid. Mix together the first and second pressings of almond milk, and dissolve the rest of the sugar in it.

Pour into a pan and heat, stirring frequently. Remove as soon as the first bubbles appear; the syrup must not be allowed to boil. Away from the heat add half a glass of orange flower water.

If the chosen flavouring is lemon, cut the lemon in slices and leave them in the syrup for 15 minutes.

Orgeat syrup can also be made by putting the almond milk in a china bowl with the lump sugar broken up into small pieces. Set in a bain-marie and stir from time to time. As soon as the sugar is completely dissolved and the liquid is near boiling point, remove from the heat. When the syrup is cold, flavour it with orange flower water poured on to the surface of the syrup. After a few moments, stir, then strain through a white cloth and pour into bottles.

Plain syrup. SIROP DE SUCRE – To prepare cold, dissolve (4 lb., 8 cups) sugar in 1 litre (1¾ pints, generous quart) water. This syrup does not keep as well as syrup prepared hot, which is made by adding 1650 g. (3½ lb., 7 cups) sugar to 1 litre (1¾ pints, generous quart) water heated to boiling point. Strain and filter.

TABLECLOTH. NAPPE – Piece of linen used to cover the table for meals. It has a long history and goes back to the early Middle Ages. Up to the fifteenth century the tablecloth was very wide and was folded in two so that it could be turned over. It was then known as the 'double cloth'. From this period, fashion decreed that tablecloths should be of single width instead of double. They were often damascened or embroidered.

The tablecloth played an important role in feudal ceremonial. It was acceptable for persons of different rank to dine at the same table, but the host's place alone had the distinction of being covered with a cloth, which set him apart from those present. If the table was entirely covered with a cloth, the host's place was singled out from the rest in being covered with a special napkin.

Until the end of the fourteenth century, when the individual napkin had not yet come into use, the tablecloth was covered with a 'runner', a long narrow strip of linen laid along the edge of the cloth, which was used by the guests to wipe their fingers and mouths.

Table linen came into general use in the sixteenth century, when each diner had his own napkin. At this period, luxury was carried so far that napkins were changed several times during a meal. They were tied round the neck to protect the fine muslin collars worn at that period. As the operation of knotting the two ends of the napkin was not an easy one for the diner to undertake himself, it was necessary to seek assistance from a fellow-guest, from which came the expression 'making both ends meet.'

Table napkins also began to be folded in different ways. This custom, however, was soon abandoned, but was to return three hundred years later. In the sixteenth century it was fashionable to fold napkins in the shapes of fruits and birds. It was also customary to perfume napkins and table cloths with rose water and other essences.

Table linen was now woven (by craftsmen known as telliers and tisserands) in such a way as to incorporate designs in the weave of the fabric itself.

Damascene cloths and napkins began to be woven in France at Rheims and in Normandy, especially in the Caen area. These were as beautiful as those which had hitherto been made in Flanders and Venice. A man called Graindorge had the idea of weaving chequered patterns and flowers into table linen. His son, Richard, made damascene cloth with designs of human figures, animals and other designs. Michel, Richard's son, founded several factories for the production of damask table linen and its use spread throughout the kingdom.

TABLE DECORATIONS – Table decorations should not impede the service or make it difficult for people to speak or to see one another. The fashion for complicated decorations went out long ago; nowadays one or two low baskets or bowls of flowers make an elegant and practical décor. Centrepieces, mirrors with Japanese gardens arranged on them, are suitable for formal occasions. Chemins de fleurs in little crystal jardinières, long and narrow, arranged end to end to make a border of roses, violets or nasturtiums, look charming, as do sprays of autumn flowers and leaves on the tablecloth.

Bowls or baskets of fruit can replace floral decorations. A table setting with brightly coloured linen and dishes makes an informal meal very cheerful; glazed earthenware jugs, plates and dishes lend themselves to many decorative ideas.

Place settings should be at least 30 cm. (12 inches) apart. A thick flannel padding or heat-resistant mats should be placed under the tablecloth. The fork is placed at the left-hand side of the plate, the spoon and knife at the right; the cutting edge of the latter should be turned inwards towards the plate. Glasses for water, wine, Madeira and Champagne are arranged either in a group or in a line, in order of size. Carafes of water and vin ordinaire are grouped along the table alternately with the salt cellars and pepper pots.

TACAUD – Name for a variety of cod, also called officier and morue borgne. The flesh is quite pleasant to eat but full of bones. All recipes given for cod (q.v.) can be applied to this fish.

TACON – Young salmon (see SALMON).

TAILLEVENT – Famous cook who was the author of one of the oldest books on cookery.

Guillaume Tirel, called Taillevent, was born in 1326. From 1346 to 1350 he was head cook to Philippe VI de Valois, from 1355 to 1368 head cook and master of the kitchen to the Dauphin, the Duke of Normandy, and from 1368 to 1371 head cook to Charles VI: 'premier écuyer de cuisine et maître des garnisons de cuisine' (first master of the kitchen and master of the art of garnishing).

Taillevent died in 1395 and probably wrote his Viandier between 1373 and 1380.

TAILLOIR or TRANCHOIR – Special slices of bread which in olden days took the place of plates. They were placed in turn on pieces of coloured or plain wood and on slices of bread on which the food was served. After each service the bread was gathered up in baskets and distributed among the poor.

Talleyrand (1754–1838)

Nowadays the word tailloir describes a wooden platter on which meat is cut up.

TALLEYRAND – Charles Maurice de Talleyrand-Périgord, celebrated statesman and diplomat, was born in Paris on 13 February 1754, and died in the same city on 17 May 1838. He was one of the greatest French gastronomes.

At the age of 21 he became Abbot of Saint-Denis and in 1788 Bishop of Autun, but high ecclesiastical office did not prevent him from leading a brilliant and dissipated worldly life. His lack of moral scruples and an aptitude for diplomacy and intrigue enabled him to retain a high position throughout the Revolution, the Directory, the Empire and the Restoration, with only short periods of reversal of fortune.

While he was an important personage at Court, the luxury of his table and the splendour of his entertaining were celebrated. At the time of the First Empire he had as his cook the illustrious Carême.

The extravagance of Talleyrand's table was not entirely for the sake of pure gastronomical satisfaction; he believed that the pleasure he offered his guests at these receptions was an important element in the success of his diplomacy and intrigues.

He never let religious or moral scruples interfere with the pursuit of his career and personal pleasures. Part of a letter written in 1791 to his friend the Duc de Lauzun demonstrates this side of his character. A bill of excommunication had been issued against several members of the clergy. Talleyrand, whose name was included, wrote ironically, 'You have heard the news; excommunicated. Come and dine to console me. Everyone refuses me fire and water, so we will eat nothing but glazed cold meats and drink only chilled wines.'

TALMOUSE – Cheese tartlet, served as hors-d'œuvre (see HORS-D'ŒUVRE).

TAMARIND, TAMARIN – Fruit of the tamarind tree, a leguminous plant of the West Indies. The pods are filled with an acid juicy pulp which is used to prepare a limonade and can replace vinegar. Medicinally it has laxative properties.

TAMMY CLOTH, ÉTAMINE – Piece of woollen material through which purées are rubbed by means of a spatula. It is also used for straining sauces and stocks.

TANGERINE, MANDARINE – Fruit of a species of orange-tree, originally from China. It is cultivated in the south-east of France, and in southern U.S.A. The tangerines of Nice and Algeria are renowned.

The tangerine is a delicious fruit. It is usually eaten raw. Like the orange, it can be treated in various ways in confectionery, in the preparation of cold sweets and in cooking.

Many recipes for oranges are suitable for tangerines. (See ORANGE.)

Tangerine tart or flan – See TART, FLAN.

Iced tangerines, MANDARINES GLACÉES – Remove the pulp from tangerines without tearing the skin. Make an ice cream mixture with the pulp (see ICE CREAMS AND ICES) and fill the skins with it.

Tangerines en surprise, MANDARINES EN SURPRISE – Empty the tangerines as indicated in the previous recipe. Fill with a heaped tablespoon of tangerine ice cream or Neapolitan ice cream flavoured with tangerine. Spread a layer of tangerine soufflé mixture on top. Sprinkle with icing sugar. Put in a very hot oven for a few seconds to brown.

Tangerines in syrup, COMPOTE DE MANDARINES – Prepare in the same way as Orange compote (see ORANGE).

TANKARD or BEER GLASS, BOCK – Receptacle in glass or stoneware of  $\frac{1}{2}$  litre (scant pint,  $2\frac{1}{2}$  cups) capacity which is used for drinking beer.

Beer glasses generally have a handle. Those made of stoneware are often ornamented with designs in relief, generally representing carousing scenes.

TAPIOCA – Farinaceous food extracted from the roots of cassava or manioc plant. It is very digestible and is used to thicken soups and broths, and make milk puddings.

Tapioca pudding, POUDING AU TAPIOCA – See PUDDING.

TAPIR – Large mammiferous South American animal, rather resembling a pig. The flesh is highly thought of, and can be prepared like that of boar (see WILD BOAR).

Branch of tarragon

TARRAGON, ESTRAGON – Pot-herb used with chervil and chives to flavour green salads. Tarragon is also used to flavour some sauces. A liqueur is made from it.

Bottled tarragon, CONSERVE D'ESTRAGON – Press down well in clean, dry small bottles some young sprigs of fresh tarragon which have been stripped, washed and dried in a cloth. Cork the bottles and cover with paper caps. Tie string round the necks of the bottles. Put them, in straw wrappers, in a large pan lined with straw, or place them on a canning rack. Cover with cold water. Boil continuously for 40 minutes. Leave the bottles to cool in the pan. Drain and dry them. Keep in a cool place.

Treated in this way, tarragon can be kept for a very long time without losing any of its aroma. It is used in the same way as fresh tarragon.

Tarragon cream, CRÈME D'ESTRAGON – Boil, until almost completely dry, 100 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) fresh crushed tarragon leaves, moistened with  $1\frac{1}{2}$  dl. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  pint,  $\frac{2}{3}$  cup) dry white wine.

TARTARE

Add  $3\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (generous  $\frac{1}{2}$  pint,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cups) very thick Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE). Season. Boil for a few seconds. Rub through muslin. Heat and add a little fresh butter.

This purée is used as a filling for small vol-au-vent, barquettes or canapés, and for stuffing certain vegetables such as artichoke hearts, mushrooms, etc.

Dried tarragon. ESTRAGON SÈCHÉ – Strip and wash fresh branches of tarragon, recently picked, and dry thoroughly in a cloth. Tie them into bunches of 6 to 8 with string. Hang these in a cool dry place and leave until they are completely dry.

Dried tarragon is used in the same way as fresh or bottled tarragon but as the flavour is more concentrated use slightly less.

Pickled tarragon. CONSERVE D'ESTRAGON AU VINAIGRE – Strip branches of fresh tarragon and break into little sprigs. Wash in cold water and dry thoroughly in a cloth. Put the sprigs in small bottles, fill with very strong vinegar, cork the bottles tightly, tie with string, and keep in a cool place.

Tarragon purée. PURÉE D'ESTRAGON – Hot. Made with tarragon and very thick béchamel sauce as indicated for Tarragon cream. It can also be made by adding a purée of tarragon leaves, blanched, cooled under running water, drained, pounded in a mortar, rubbed through muslin, to twice its volume of mashed potatoes. This purée is used as a filling for small vol-au-vent, canapés or similar preparations; and to stuff artichoke hearts, small tomatoes, etc.

Cold. Pound together in a mortar 100 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) blanched, cooled and drained tarragon leaves, with 6 hard boiled egg yolks. Add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) fresh butter. Rub through a fine sieve.

This purée is used in the preparation of various cold hors-d'œuvre or to decorate cold fish.

Tarragon vinegar. VINAIGRE À L'ESTRAGON – Ordinary vinegar in which small tarragon shoots are steeped. It is used to moisten sauces and in salad dressing.

TARTARE – Name given chiefly to a cold sauce; mayonnaise prepared with crushed hard boiled egg yolks and oil, with chopped chives added.

À la tartare is the name given to minced beef steak seasoned with salt and pepper, reshaped into a steak and served uncooked with a raw egg on top, and, on the side, capers, chopped onion and parsley.

TART (FLAN). TARTE – The words tarte or 'tart' and 'flan' are often used interchangeably in England and France to designate a pastry filled with fruit, jam, custard or some other filling. The American term most often used is open or single crusted 'pie'. Almost all such dishes are cooked and served in the United States in a pie dish, whereas in England or France a metal flan or pastry ring, placed on a metal baking sheet, is used. (For tarts and flans with savoury fillings, see FLANS.)

Recipes for sweet fillings suitable for desserts are given below. All recipes are suitable for baking in either an American pie dish or a flan ring.

In England the tart is often a two-crust, fruit-filled dessert baked in a dish. This would be called a pie in U.S.A., whereas a tart would designate a small single-crust pie which the French call tartelette.

Tart (flan) cases baked blind (unfilled). CROÛTES À FLAN CUITES À BLANC – Made with Short pastry (see DOUGH). Roll out 225 g. (8 oz.) pastry to a circle 25 cm. (10 inches) in diameter. Transfer this to a circular, buttered flan ring, pressing it round the inside of the tin. Cut off the excess pastry.

Make the rim of the tart out of the band of pastry rising up the sides of the tin. Lift it away from the edge and pinch it with finger and thumb or pastry pinchers.

Prick the bottom of the tart to prevent the pastry from bubbling up during baking. Line the edge and bottom of the pastry with greaseproof paper. Fill it with dried beans or rice. Bake in a moderately hot oven for about 25 minutes.

Remove the paper and temporary filling. Brush the tart with egg. Dry it for a few moments in the oven. Fill with whatever is indicated in the recipe.

Alsatian tart. TARTE ALSACIENNE – Ingredients. 125 g. (4 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) butter, 250 g. (9 oz., 2 cups) castor sugar, 1 egg, 250 g. (9 oz., 2 cups) sifted flour, 250 g. (9 oz., 2 cups) ground almonds.

Method. Cream together the butter, sugar and egg. Add the flour and the almonds. Mix well. Roll out three-quarters of the dough into a round piece about 1 cm. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  inch) thick. Roll out the rest of the pastry and cut it into thin strips. Surround the round piece of pastry with one of these strips and arrange the others criss-cross on top, sealing them together with cold water.

Fill each space with a different kind of jam or marmalade. Bake in a moderately hot oven.

Apple tart

Apple tart. TARTE AUX POMMES – Sprinkle a flan case made of Fine lining paste or pastry dough 1, Short pastry 1 or Flaky pastry (see DOUGH) with fine sugar, and fill with peeled eating apples cut into quarters or thin slices.

Lining a circular tart tin with pastry
('A l'Alsacienne', Maison Morand. Phot. Larousse)

Bake in a hot oven. Coat the fruit with apple jelly or sieved apricot jam, flavoured with liqueur.

Apple tart à l'alsacienne. FLAN DE POMMES À L'ALSACIENNE – Fill a flan case with quartered small tart apples. Proceed as for Apricot tart à l'alsacienne (see below), flavouring the custard with cinnamon.

Apple tart with lattice-work decoration. FLAN AUX POMMES GRILLÉ – Line a flan ring with Short pastry 1 (see DOUGH). Fill with rather thick apple purée. Decorate the top with a latticed design made with thin strips of pastry. Press down well at the edges. Brush with egg and bake in a hot oven.

Messina apple tart. TARTE AUX POMMES À LA MESSINE – Prepare a flan case in the usual way. Fill with thin slices of sugared eating apples and seeded raisins. Sprinkle with sugar and bake in a hot oven.

Apricot tart. TARTE AUX ABRICOTS – Line a flan with Fine lining paste 1 or Flaky pastry (see DOUGH) 1 cm. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  inch) thick. Flute the edges. Prick the paste and place on a baking dish. Sprinkle with fine sugar and fill with halves of apricots.

Bake in a moderately hot oven for about 30 minutes. Remove the flan ring and brush the tart with beaten egg. Put back in the oven for 5 minutes to finish cooking. Put the tart on a cooling rack and coat the fruit with a thin covering of sieved apricot jam or apricot purée. Place a few sweet almonds or apricot kernels on top.

The tart may be sprinkled with vanilla-flavoured sugar instead of using jam, but the latter gives a better appearance. The tart must not be left to cool on the baking sheet because the steam will escape too slowly and the pastry will lose its crispness.

Apricot tart à l'alsacienne. FLAN AUX ABRICOTS À L'ALSACIENNE – Fill a flan case with halved apricots which have been steeped in kirsch and sugar. Before putting the flan in the oven, pour in a custard mixture thickened with a teaspoon of potato flour or arrowroot.

Cherry tart

Cherry tart. TARTE AUX CERISES – Proceed as for Apricot tart, filling the pastry with stoned cherries.

When the tart is baked, cover with a film of redcurrant jelly flavoured with sieved raspberry or cherry jam to which a little kirsch or cherry brandy has been added.

Cherry tart à l'alsacienne. FLAN AUX CERISES À L'ALSACIENNE – Proceed as for Apricot tart à l'alsacienne. Preserved cherries can be used for this flan.

Tart of Demoiselles Tatin. TARTE DES DEMOISELLES TATIN –

Cherry tart à l'alsacienne

Butter a baking dish 6 cm. ( $2\frac{1}{2}$  inches) deep. Put in a layer of fine sugar about 5 mm. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  inch) thick. Fill with peeled and quartered apples, and put small pieces of butter and some more sugar on top.

Cover with a paper-thin sheet of Fine lining paste (see DOUGH).

Bake in a moderately hot oven for about 20 to 25 minutes. The sugar should be well caramelised. Turn it out on to a serving dish so that the pastry is on top. Serve hot.

Fig tart. TARTE AUX FIGUES – Make with fresh figs, peeled and soaked in liqueur in the same way as Strawberry tart (see below). Coat the fruit with apricot jam, sieved and flavoured with liqueur.

Fruit tart l'allemande. TARTE AUX FRUITS DIVERS À L'ALLEMANDE – Under this heading comes a series of good tarts of deservedly high reputation. Each has a special name according to the fruit used.

Apfelkuchen or apple tart. Made like Cherry tart.

Aprikosenkuchen or apricot tart. Made like Cherry tart.

Erdbeerkuchen or strawberry tart. Differs from the preceding tarts in that the fruit is not cooked with the pastry. The tart shell is baked first and, when cold, filled with the strawberries, thickly sprinkled with sugar and coated with a thick layer of whipped cream, sweetened and flavoured with vanilla.

Himbeerkuchen or raspberry tart. Prepared in the same way as the above, substituting raspberries for strawberries.

Johannisbeerkuchen or redcurrant tart. Prepared like Stachelbeerkuchen or gooseberry tart (see below).

Kirschenkuchen or German cherry tart. Roll out and turn some Flaky pastry (see DOUGH) six times, and roll it into a round sheet of the desired size about  $2\frac{1}{2}$  mm. ( $\frac{1}{8}$  inch) thick. Set in a pie dish lightly moistened in the middle. Damp the edges of the pastry and pinch them to make a border. Prick with a fork to keep it from blistering during cooking. Sprinkle over a little fine sugar and powdered cinnamon.

Arrange the stoned cherries, either fresh or preserved, on the pastry, bake in a moderate oven. Prepare a thick cherry syrup by cooking cherries and sugar together. Strain, and when the tart is cold pour a good layer over the fruit.

To finish off, bake fine breadcrumbs a pale golden colour and sprinkle over the tart.

Pflaumenkuchen or greengage tart. Made like Kirschenkuchen.

Stachelbeerkuchen or gooseberry tart. Bake the pastry shell in the oven. Add the picked-over fruit to the same weight of sugar cooked to crack degree (see SUGAR). When the sugar is melted, strain out the fruit with a skimmer and boil down the juice until it begins to jell. Remove from the heat and put back the fruit. Boil together for a moment then pour all together into a basin. When this mixture is quite cold, make a thick layer in the tart, and coat with sweetened, vanilla-flavoured whipped cream.

Fruit tart à l'alsacienne. TARTE AUX FRUITS DIVERS À L'ALSACIENNE – Made with quetsch and mirabelle plums, apples or cherries, like an ordinary fruit tart. Pour custard or light French pastry cream (see CREAMS) over the fruit after it has been set in the pastry.

English fruit tart (pie). TARTE AUX FRUITS DIVERS À L'ANGLAIS – Fill a pie dish with cut up apples or other fruit, cover with white or brown sugar mixed with a little chopped lemon peel. Place an egg cup or a saucer upside down in the centre of the dish.

Moisten with half a glass of water. Cover the tart with Ordinary lining paste or pastry dough II (see DOUGH) made with an egg yolk. Put a band of pastry round the edge of the dish and press down the edges. Brush the surface of the tart with water and sprinkle over fine sugar. Bake in a moderately hot oven for 40 to 50 minutes.

These tarts can also be flavoured with cinnamon or cloves. The top may be decorated with cut-out pieces of pastry and brushed with egg.

Linzertorte (Austrian tart). TARTE À L'AUTRICHIENNE – Viennese pastry which takes its name from the town of Linz in Austria.

It is a tart of Lining paste (see DOUGH) strongly flavoured with cinnamon, filled with strawberry jam and covered with criss-cross strips of pastry. Linzertorte is generally made from a special rich pastry which includes ground almonds, cinnamon, lemon juice and egg yolks in its composition.

Me'gin tart (Messina pastry). TARTE AU ME'GIN – Made like quiche lorraine with a mixture of eggs, a white cheese called Fremgin, well drained, and fresh cream.

Nectarine tart. FLAN AUX BRUGNONS – Using halved nectarines, proceed as for Apricot tart.

Peach tart. FLAN AUX PÊCHES – Proceed as for Apricot tart using halved or quartered peaches.

Pear tart. TARTE AUX POIRES – Made with small ripe pears cut into small pieces, like Apple tart.

Pineapple tart I. TARTE À L'ANANAS – Prepare the crust with Short pastry I or II or Flaky pastry (see DOUGH). Bake the pastry case empty. Fill, when cooked, with half-slices of pineapple cooked in syrup. Cover with sieved apricot jam flavoured with kirsch or rum.

Pineapple tart II. TARTE À L'ANANAS – Roll out a round or square of Flaky pastry (see DOUGH). Incise this lightly 3 cm. (1½ inches) from the edge. Set in the middle thin slices of cooked or raw pineapple. Sprinkle with fine sugar. Brush the edges of the pastry with egg and bake in a hot oven. When cooked, coat the pineapple with sieved apricot jam.

Plum tart. TARTE AUX PRUNES – Made with greengages, mirabelles or quetsches like Apricot tart.

Plum tart à l'alsacienne. TARTE AUX PRUNES À L'ALSACIENNE – Made with quetsches in the same way as Apple tart à l'alsacienne.

Raspberry tart. TARTE AUX FRAMBOISES – Made with raw raspberries as described in the recipe for Strawberry tart.

English rhubarb tart. TARTE À LA RHUBARBE À L'ANGLAISE – Use a special English pie dish or a fireproof dish.

Cut 750 g. (1½ lb.) of rhubarb from the pale pink stalks in the middle of the plant. Wash, dry, peel and cut them into chunks 5 cm. (2 inches) long. Arrange these in layers in the dish, and sprinkle with a mixture of white and brown sugar, allowing 125 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) of each. Pour in 3 tablespoons (4 tablespoons) water.

Roll out Flaky pastry or Ordinary lining paste or pastry dough II (see DOUGH) into an oval shape ¾ cm. (¾ inch) thick, a little bigger than the top of the dish. Fix a strip of pastry 3½ cm. (1½ inches) wide to the edge of the pie dish with water. Moisten lightly, place the pastry sheet on top, cut off the surplus paste, and press the edges well.

Brush lightly with egg. Make a hole in the middle of the pastry lid to allow steam to escape, and bake in a moderately hot oven for about 30 to 40 minutes.

This tart is eaten cold and is usually served with sweetened whipped cream.

Strawberry tart. TARTE AUX FRAISES – Line a flan ring with Lining paste (Pastry dough I or II) or Short pastry (see DOUGH). Bake empty, and fill with strawberries, hulled and rolled in sugar. Coat with currant jelly flavoured with raspberry, or with sieved cherry jam flavoured with kirsch.

Tangerine flan. GÂTEAU (TARTE) À LA MANDARINE – Ingredients. 125 g. (4 oz., ¾ cup) blanched almonds, 125 g. (4 oz., ½ cup) fine sugar, 4 eggs, 2 candied tangerine peels, 2 drops essence of bitter almond, 1 to 2 drops vanilla essence, 1 tablespoon thick apricot purée.

Method. Pound the almonds finely in a mortar, adding the eggs one by one. Add the tangerine peel, very finely chopped, the sugar, vanilla and almond essence and the purée. Mix well.

Line a flan ring with Short pastry II (see DOUGH). Spread Linzertorte (Claire)

Quetsch plum tart ('A l'Alsacienne'. Phot. Larousse)

a layer of tangerine purée on the bottom. Fill with the mixture prepared in the mortar, and bake in a moderate oven. When the flan is cold, spread with apricot jam and sprinkle with chopped almonds. Put in the oven for a few seconds to brown the almonds.

TARTARIC ACID. TARTRIQUE – Acid found in a large number of fruits and which is extracted from the lees (dregs or sediment) of wine.

It is used to prepare mineral drinks, a syrup, and effervescent powders, and is also added to a 'must' which lacks acidity (its use is tolerated in this case, but not for wines which have to be acidulated, if necessary, with citric acid). It is also used as a raising agent.

Garnished tartlets and other little hot pastry hors-d'œuvre

TARTLET. TARTELETTE – This small cake is of ancient origin, and was already known in the sixteenth century when it was called a flannet, a word which is a diminutive of flan.

Tartlets are made in the same way as large tarts and are filled in the same way, either with fruits of different kinds, creams, or other mixtures.

Tartlets with savoury fillings are served as hors-d'œuvre or small entrées. (See HORS-D'ŒUVRE, Hot hors-d'œuvre.)

Filling tartlet cases baked blind

Tartlet cases or shells. CROÛTES DE TARTELETTES – Cases or shells made in round pastry tins, either fluted or plain, and of various diameters, according to the nature of the preparation.

The tins are lined with Short pastry, Semi-flaky or Flaky pastry (see DOUGH).

Apricot tartlets. TARTELETTES AUX ABRICOTS – Made in various shapes, round, oval, boat-shaped (barquettes), in moulds and rings, which are buttered and lined with very thin Lining paste (pastry dough 1) or Flaky pastry (see DOUGH). The fillings and the baking are the same as for tarts.

Cherry tartlets. TARTELETTES AUX CERISES – Line tartlet moulds with Lining paste (pastry dough 1) or Flaky pastry (see DOUGH). Prick the bottoms lightly with a fork. Fill with stoned cherries. Bake in a fairly hot oven.

Turn out the tartlets and coat the fruit with melted redcurrant jelly. These tartlets may be made with cherries preserved in syrup.

Strawberry, raspberry, pear, apple, plum tartlets. TARTELETTES AUX FRAISES, FRAMBOISES, POIRES, POMMES, PRUNES – Made in the same way as the previous tartlets.

TARTINE – Slice of bread spread with butter, jam or any other substance of the right consistency. It is also another name for a small tart.

Swiss tartines. TARTINES SUISSES – Roll out Flaky pastry (see DOUGH), about 2½ mm. (¼ inch) thick after it has been turned 7 times. Cut into rectangles 10 cm. (4 inches) long and 5 cm. (2 inches) wide. Set these on a baking sheet, brush with egg, and bake in a fairly hot oven. Sprinkle with fine sugar and return to the oven to glaze. Cool on a cake rack.

Split the tartines on one side and fill with the following cream:

Mix together in a saucepan 100 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) sugar, 50 g. (2 oz., ½ cup) sifted flour and 4 egg yolks. Add a pinch of vanilla sugar or a few drops of vanilla essence. Stir in 4 dl. (¾ pint, scant 2 cups) milk and mix. Cool, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and add 25 g. (1 oz., 2 tablespoons) butter and 3 stiffly beaten egg whites.

TASTE, FLAVOUR. SAVEUR – Sensation excited in certain organs of the mouth by contact with various substances.

A classification of flavours has often been attempted, but as there is no standard of measurement such classifications remain vague and uncertain. It is possible to distinguish tastes that are sweet, acid, salty, sour and bitter but the difficulty lies in establishing the demarcation between one type and another. These are far from being precise; the flavour of each substance comes from the combination of a number of basic flavours.

Sweet, salty and sour tastes are generally better perceived when cold than when hot. Some flavours, apparently opposed, may actually reinforce each other if they are combined in certain proportions; a sweet solution appears sweeter if a salty or sour solution, diluted just to the point where it has no more taste of its own, is added to it. A little salt is sometimes added to sweet dishes.

TASTING – See SAVOURING.

TÂTE-VIN – Silver or silver-plated cup, often decorated, used for examining and tasting wine.

TAVEL – A very popular, full-bodied dry rosé wine from the département of Gard. It has an appellation d'origine contrôlée and is usually placed in the category of Côtes du Rhône méridionales.

TEA. THÉ – Tea, the most universally consumed of all beverages, is made from the leaves of Camellia sinensis, a tree that in its wild state can reach the height of 10 metres (30 feet).

Tâte-vin

It is native to Assam, China and Japan. Tea was brought to Europe by the Dutch in 1610 and to England in 1644. It arrived in the U.S.A. in the early eighteenth century.

Tea-growing in China and Japan dates back to prehistoric times, but it was not started in India and Ceylon (now called Sri Lanka) until 1865.

India and Ceylon are now the largest tea exporters in the world. The largest tea import to the United States comes from Japan and Formosa; England and Russia import enormous quantities from India and China respectively. China is the largest producer of tea but does not lead in the export trade.

Tea is grown both on open fields and on terraced hillsides. It requires a warm climate with a very heavy rainfall 225–500 cm (90 to 200 inches). For fine tea, the first one or two tiny leaves which appear at the end of each twig, during 'flushes' or growing periods, are plucked. The third and fourth leaves are used only in coarse teas. These pickings occur 10 to 25 times a year in Formosa and every 10 to 12 days in Ceylon.

The principal difference in teas lies in the treatment of the leaves. Black tea comes from leaves that, partly dried, are piled up to ferment before being toasted. Green tea comes from leaves that have been fired immediately after harvesting, and is unfermented. Oolong tea is semi-fermented.

The following are the best known grades of tea: Pekoe, orange Pekoe, Souchong, Lapsang, Congou and Oolong.

Infusions of tea contain aromatic ingredients, caffeine and tannin. It is a pleasant, stimulating drink which, taken in Harvesting tea (from a Chinese painting) moderate quantities, aids the digestion and in hot countries constitutes one of the best ways to drink water, since this must necessarily be boiled before it is used.

To make tea. Tea is very delicate and must be kept in air-tight containers in a dry place, well away from any food whose odours might contaminate it. The teapot, for the same reason, must be kept exclusively for making tea. Only pure water must be used to make it, and that as free from lime as possible.

It is very important to rinse the teapot first by rinsing it out with boiling water. When this has been done, the tea is put in, one teaspoon for each person plus one 'for the pot'. The water must be absolutely boiling. The infusion is ready at the end of 5 or 6 minutes. After this time it becomes too strong, charged with tannin. That is why teapots which cut off contact between the tea-leaves and the infusion are to be recommended, as are tea-balls and tea-spoons. Certain brands of tea are sold in small muslin or paper sachets, each containing enough tea for one, two or more cups. These sachets are

Branch of tea with fruitsTea caddy of Queen Marie-Antoinette, soft-paste Sèvres porcelain, enamel work by Cotteau (1784–1785)

Tea: teapots and cup (Nicolas) practical because they allow the tea to be made always to the same strength and check infusion at the right moment.

The name 'tea' is sometimes given to other infusions such as Jesuit's tea, Paraguay tea (see MATÉ), thé St.-Germain, thé de santé (health tea), a purgative, or Swiss tea, a healing lotion. In the same way the name beef tea is given to a preparation made from minced meat.

Tea ice – See ICE CREAMS AND ICES.

TEAL. SARCELLE – Wild palmiped, bird of passage with a light brown breast marked with black, white-bellied, with grey wings, white at the tip. Its flesh is oily, and generally little regarded. Teal is cooked like wild duck (see DUCK).

TEAPOT. THÉIÈRE – Receptacle made of pottery, porcelain or metal used to infuse and serve tea.

TENCH. TANCHE – Small, scaled freshwater fish of a deep olive green colour. Its flesh is rather delicate if it is fished directly from streams and rivers, otherwise it can be rather tough and should be soaked in water before cooking.

Lémery claimed that it is capable of jumping out of the frying pan even after having been cut up and partially fried!

Tench is used mainly as an ingredient of matelote (q.v.). It may also be fried or prepared à la meunière (see MEUNIÈRE, À LA).

TENDON – Roped fibres, round or flat in form and varying in length, which finish off the muscular mass and constitute its means of attachment to the bone. Tendon fibres cannot be digested by the human intestines. In cooking they exude a certain amount of gelatine.

TERFEZIA – Large white African truffle, which is almost tasteless. It can be used like black truffle, but is most often eaten raw in salad. (See TRUFFLE.)

TERRAPIN. TERRAPÈNE – Small turtle originating in North America. It is greatly prized by some Americans, who, because of the shape of the faceted scales that cover its shell, call it diamond-back.

Red spotted Mongolian tench

Common tench

TERRINE

To cook terrapin. Put the turtle in a large bowl of fresh water and leave it there for a time, changing the water every half hour. Wash and scald it by plunging it into a saucepan of boiling water. Leave it in this water until the white skin which covers the head and feet can be taken off by rubbing with a cloth.

Cook the terrapin in boiling water without salt, or steam it. This cooking, which varies in time with the size of the animal, should not exceed 45 minutes. If the flesh on the feet 'gives' under gentle pressure of the fingers, the terrapin is ready.

Allow to cool. Remove the hard scales, and with a knife detach the flat part, or pastron, from under the shell. Also remove the feet; cut these into pieces about 4 cm. (1½ inches) in size.

Remove the liver, taking care not to puncture the gall bladder; remove this from the liver and cut off all parts of the liver adjoining it. The heart, entrails and internal white muscles must be discarded.

Remove the eggs very carefully. Put these in a heat-proof dish with the feet, the sliced liver and the shell cut into pieces the same size as the feet. Season with salt, pepper and cayenne. Barely cover with water, bring to the boil, and finish cooking in a cool oven for 25 to 30 minutes.

TERRINE – Earthenware dish in which meat, game and fish are cooked. The word terrine is also used to designate the food itself; for example, terrine of foie gras, of chicken, etc.

Terrines of meat, fish, etc. must be completely cold before they are eaten. They can be kept for some days in perfect condition if they are put in a cool place.

Terrine of duckling. TERRINE DE CANETON – Bone a duckling completely and reserve the skin. Remove all the flesh from the legs and breast. Cut the breast into large dice. Put into a bowl with 100 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) diced lean ham and 100 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) diced bacon fat. Season with salt, pepper and spices. Sprinkle with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) brandy. Marinate for 2 hours.

Chop finely the flesh of the legs and add to it 150 g. (5 oz., 1¼ cups) lean pork meat, 150 g. (5 oz., 1¼ cups) veal and 250 g. (9 oz., 2¼ cups) fresh pork fat, all finely chopped. Pound together in a mortar and season with spiced salt. Bind with 2 whole eggs. Add 2 liqueur glasses brandy. Rub through a sieve.

Put this mixture into the bowl where the duckling has been marinating. Add the liver cut into small pieces and fried in very hot butter. Mix well. Re-fill the skin of the duckling with this mixture and shape into a roll. Press into an oval terrine lined with thin pieces of bacon fat.

Put the terrine in a baking tin half-filled with warm water. Cook, covered, in a moderately hot oven, for about 1½ hours. (The cooking time of terrines of poultry and other meats can be judged by the appearance of the fat that rises to the surface; if this fat is clear, the terrine is cooked. It can also be tested by inserting a long trussing needle into the meat. If the needle is hot when it is withdrawn the meat is cooked.)

Cool the terrine under pressure (a weight set on a cover cut to the shape of the terrine). The next day remove the fat which has risen to the surface and replace it with a layer of jelly made from a knuckle, a calf's foot and the duckling giblets. Cool the terrine once more. Turn out before serving.

If the terrine is to be kept for several days, the jelly should be replaced by half-melted lard.

TÊTE D'ALOYAU – In French butchery, the part of beef found at the end of the rump.

TÊTE DE CUVÉE – Choice wine obtained from crushing the grape (vin de goutte) before the wine-press is used.

TÊTE DE MORT – See CHEESE.

TÉTON DE VÉNUS – A variety of peach.

THAO – Japanese name for the agar-agar or gelose. (See AGAR-AGAR.)

THICKENING. LIAISON – Process designed to give body to a liquid food, sauce or broth. Thickening with flour or starch consists of making a stable paste by heating. Thickening with egg yolk or blood, which forms emulsions, must be effected at a temperature below 80°C. (175°F.) since the proteins curdle at a higher temperature.

Thickening with arrowroot. LIAISON À L'ARROW-ROOT – Pour 3 to 4 g. (1 teaspoon) arrowroot mixed with a few tablespoons of cold stock into ½ litre (scant pint, 2¼ cups) boiling stock or juice. Leave it on heat for a few seconds. Mix and strain.

Thickening with kneaded butter. LIAISON AU BEURRE MANIÉ – A very quick method of thickening, mainly used to give the desired consistency to the sauces of stewed fish or matelotes.

To thicken 1 litre (1½ pints, generous quart) of liquid, mix thoroughly 75 g. (3 oz., ¾ cup) flour with 100 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) butter.

Thickening à la meunière. LIAISON À LA MEUNIERE – A smooth mixture of flour and water. This is added to stocks and sauces to give them the desired consistency.

Thickening with a roux. LIAISON AU ROUX – A roux can be white, golden or brown. Usually it is made from butter and flour, but other fat may be used instead of butter. (See ROUX.)

Thickening with tapioca for soups. LIAISON AU TAPIOCA POUR POTAGE – Bring to the boil 1 litre (1½ pints, generous quart) clear soup (consommé). Sprinkle 3 tablespoons (scant ¼ cup) of tapioca into it. Boil for 18 minutes. Strain through muslin or fine sieve.

THIRTEEN AT TABLE. TREIZE À TABLE – See SUPERSTITIONS OF THE TABLE.

THISTLE. CHARDON – Wild plant from which artichokes and cardoons derive. Different kinds of wild thistle are eaten, some for their flower head like the artichoke, some for their stems and leaves, like the cardoon, and some for their roots.

THONINE – Species of tunny (tuna fish) found only in the Mediterranean. (See TUNNY.)

THONNE – A way of cooking veal. The meat is marinated for a long time with oil, lemon juice, thyme, bay leaf and spices before being cooked, and is cooked with tuna fish.

THORINS – Wine harvested in the département of Saône-et-Loire, classed among the best Burgundies.

THOURINS or TOURIN – Onion-based soup much favoured in the south of France and other parts of the country.

It should not, however, be confused with soupe à l'oignon also called soupe au fromage, eaten under the name of gratinée.

Cook in butter, without allowing them to brown, 300 g. (11 oz., 3 cups) finely chopped onions. Sprinkle them with 25 g. (1 oz., ¼ cup) flour, stirring all the time with a wooden spoon. Stir in 2 litres (3½ pints, 4½ pints) boiled milk. Season with salt and freshly ground pepper. Cook very slowly for 25 minutes.

A few minutes before serving thicken the soup with 4 egg yolks beaten with 3 dl. (½ pint, 1¼ cups) fresh cream, and add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) butter.

Serve with thin slices of French bread dried in the oven.

Thourins à la provençale – Prepare the soup as above. Before thickening it with egg yolks and cream, add 75 g. (3 oz., ½ cup) coarse vermicelli and poach in the soup. Serve with grated cheese.

THRUSH. GRIVE – Bird of medium size whose plumage is speckled with black or reddish spots. There are various types of thrush. The song thrush makes excellent eating, it grows fat on a diet of grapes! The missal thrush, also called the great thrush, has less delicate flesh than the song thrush. The redwing is excellent game but the fieldfare, a native of Northern Europe, is insipid in flavour.

Thrushes can be cooked in various ways. They are best roasted, and should be served on a slice of bread fried in the cooking fat. Although common in England and U.S.A., thrushes are rarely, if ever, eaten in these countries. In England they are protected birds and not allowed to be killed.

Thrushes à l'ardennaise. GRIVES EN CROÛTE À L'ARDENNAISE – Bone 8 thrushes along the back. Season with Spiced salt (see SALT). Stuff each with a little fine stuffing the size of a walnut, enriched with chopped thrush's livers, diced foie gras and truffles, well seasoned, with a few crushed juniper berries added. Fold the birds back into shape. Wrap each in a piece of pig's caul or salt pork. Place them, closely packed, in a pan containing the bones and trimmings of the birds, a chopped carrot and onion, all browned in butter.

Sprinkle with melted butter. Braise in the oven for 12 minutes. Drain the thrushes and remove wrapping, and put them in a large bread crust which has been scooped out, buttered inside and browned in the oven. Line the crust with the following gratin stuffing: chicken livers browned in grated bacon fat, well seasoned mushrooms pounded in a mortar, and mixed with sieved egg yolks.

Put this 'pie' into the oven for a few minutes. Just before serving pour the following sauce over the thrushes. Moisten the boiled-down braising stock with 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) sherry. Boil down. Add 3 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cups) Demi-glace sauce (see SAUCE). Boil for a moment or two, strain, and add thick slices of truffle tossed in very hot butter.

Thrush à la bonne femme. GRIVES À LA BONNE-FEMME – Truss and cook the birds in butter in a heat-proof casserole with small pieces of larding bacon and diced fried bread. Sprinkle with a little brandy and pour on some game gravy. Serve in the casserole in which the birds were cooked.

All birds cooked à la bonne femme should be garnished with potatoes, cut in to olive shapes, small onions and larding bacon, cooked with the poultry or game.

For small birds (quails, thrushes, larks etc.) the bonne femme garnish consists only of small pieces of larding bacon and diced bread fried in the butter in which the bird has been cooked.

Thrush en caisses. GRIVES EN CAISSES – Bone and season the thrushes. Fill each with a little à gratin game stuffing (see FORCEMEAT) the size of a walnut containing a small piece of foie gras and a square of truffle. Remake the birds into their original shape and wrap in pieces of buttered greaseproof paper. Put them, closely packed, in a buttered heat-proof casserole. Cover the thrushes with their carcasses and trimmings, first tossed in butter with an onion and a finely sliced carrot. Pour over the dish  $1\frac{1}{2}$  dl. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  pint,  $\frac{2}{3}$  cup) Madeira. Cover and simmer for 10 minutes. Moisten with a few tablespoons of game stock and braise in the oven for 12–15 minutes until tender.

Drain the thrushes and remove the paper wrapping. Brown the birds. Serve them in buttered paper cases on a layer of sliced mushrooms and truffles tossed in butter. Pour the braising stock, strained and boiled down, over the birds.

Casserole of thrush or thrush en cocotte. GRIVES EN CASSEROLE, OU EN COCOTTE – Proceed as for Casserole of quail (see QUAIL).

Chaud-froid of thrush. GRIVES EN CHAUD-FROID – Made from thrushes boned and stuffed with foie gras and truffles, as for Chaud-froid of quail (see QUAIL).

Thrushes with grapes. GRIVES AUX RAISINS – Cook in a casserole as Casserole of quails with grapes (see QUAIL).

Thrushes au gratin. GRIVES AU GRATIN – Put inside each bird a piece of à gratin game stuffing (see FORCEMEAT) the size of a walnut, with the chopped giblets of the thrushes added. Flavour with a few crushed juniper berries.

Truss the birds and brown them quickly in butter. Spread on a buttered heat-proof dish a layer of à gratin game stuffing (see FORCEMEAT) 1 cm ( $\frac{1}{2}$  inch) thick. Press the thrushes gently into the stuffing. Coat them with thick Duxelles sauce (see SAUCE). Sprinkle with breadcrumbs, pour melted butter over them, and brown in a very hot oven.

Thrushes à la liégeoise. GRIVES À LA LIÉGEOISE – Put inside each bird a piece of butter the size of a walnut, with a few crushed juniper berries added. Brown them in a heat-proof casserole in which a little butter has been melted. Sprinkle the birds with crushed juniper berries, about 2 berries for each. Cover, and cook in a moderately hot oven for 30–40 minutes or until tender. Two minutes before taking the casserole out of the oven, cover each bird with a piece of bread fried in butter. Sprinkle with a few drops of gin.

Cold thrush pâté. PÂTÉ FROID DE GRIVES – Proceed as for Cold woodcock pâté (see WOODCOCK).

Hot thrush pâté. PÂTÉ CHAUD DE GRIVES – Bone the thrushes and stuff them with foie gras and truffles. Proceed as for Hot woodcock pâté (see WOODCOCK).

Thrush pie. TOURTE DE GRIVES À LA PÉRIGOURDINE – Bone the thrushes. Stuff each with a little à gratin game stuffing (see FORCEMEAT) the size of a walnut, containing a small piece of foie gras with a piece of truffle embedded in it. Partly braise the thrushes in Madeira-flavoured stock. Allow to cool.

Put the thrushes in a thin pie-crust lined with a little more stuffing, covered with strips of truffle. Cover the birds with a thin layer of à gratin game stuffing. Cover with a piece of Short pastry I (see DOUGH) and seal the edges.

Decorate the top of the pie with little motifs of thin pastry. Brush with beaten egg. Bake in a moderately hot oven for 40 to 45 minutes. After the pie has been taken out of the oven, pour in a few tablespoons of Salmis sauce (see SAUCE).

Potted thrush. TERRINE DE GRIVES – Made from boned birds stuffed with foie gras and truffles like other types of potted game. (See TERRINE.)

Roast thrushes. GRIVES RÔTIES – Wrap each bird in a thin strip of larding bacon. Roast them in a hot oven for 20 to 30 minutes. Serve each bird on a canapé of bread fried in butter. Dilute the gravy and serve separately.

THYME. THYM – Plant with small, grey-green leaves and a pleasant, pungent smell, much used as a flavouring. Wild thyme is a variety of the garden thyme.

THYMUS – A ductless gland situated in the upper part of the thorax in children and young vertebrates, which becomes atrophied in puberty.

In butchered animals it is called the sweetbread (calf, lamb) and constitutes a very delicate food. It should be eaten only in moderation, or not at all, by sufferers from gout. For culinary preparation see OFFAL or VARIETY MEATS.

TIERED PLINTH. GRADINS – In former times, carved wooden stands were used for the presentation of cold dishes, especially set pieces of confectionery. These stands were made in tiers. They were decorated with pâte d'office, almond paste, sugar motifs or icing sugar.

Nowadays, such plinths are made from sandwich bread, as, for example, for poultry chaud-froids (see CHAUD-FROID).

Carême tells us how tiered plinths were decorated in his day: 'Let us suppose, for example, that you wish to decorate a Tiered plinth made from sandwich bread

plinth with laurel leaves. You first cut out a laurel wreath in paper. Next you give the base of the plinth a light coating of icing, and stick the paper wreath to it. Now you cover the rest of the plinth with a medium grade of coarse sugar. When this is done, you remove the paper, after which you sprinkle the imprint of the leaves with pistachio-green sugar. Now, you have a laurel crown surrounding the base of the plinth.

'For a large, three-tiered set piece, each tier can be individually decorated. This creates a graceful and elegant effect.

'I have also sometimes embellished my tiers with laurel crowns made from biscuit pastry shaped like laurel leaves and coloured green, or with garlands of spun sugar. This last decoration has both brilliance and elegance.

'I have also created tiered plinths out of almond paste, moulded in basket moulds.'

But although he favoured the presentation of set pieces on plinths, Carême maintained that 'young practitioners' should not forget 'that plinths of German or Italian waffles, of nougat, of glazed duchesse cakes, of puff pastry, baked without filling or in the shape of fish scales, or in round or oval rings, of Genoese cake, or of nut toffee, are immensely effective and properly belong in the realm of the great pastry-making establishments.'

TIGER. TIGRE – The flesh of the tiger is sometimes eaten in some countries.

TIMBALE – By definition this word (which comes from the Arab thabal meaning drum) means a small metal receptacle, round in shape and intended to hold a beverage.

Timbales are chiefly made of silver, sometimes of gold or silver plate, some simple, others ornamented.

The word timbale, which in early days was only applied to individual drinking cups, has taken on a much wider meaning, and is used to describe all kinds of bowls, of metal, earthenware, and china. The same word is still used in the phrase dresser en timbale to describe the serving of some preparation in a large bowl, which may be a vegetable dish or légumier, although used for many other foodstuffs than vegetables. Thus in these timbales-légumiers are served scrambled eggs, food in sauce, purées, custards and other preparations, all to some extent semi-liquid. Dresser en timbale also means to heap the food on a platter in a pyramid shape, usually garnished.

Timbale generally means a preparation of any kind cooked or served in a pie crust, which, instead of being made in a hinged mould is made in a plain round mould with high sides, often decorated with motifs.

Timbales are filled before cooking with forcemeat and meats of various kinds. Below will be found instructions for the various stages of preparation of a timbale in a mould with goffered sides. This is the true classic form of the timbale, of which a typical example is the timbale de macaroni or timbale milanaise.

There are many other kinds of timbale which are not filled until after the crust has been cooked. In this case the crust is baked empty. Among these are timbale of sole à la Grimaldi, timbale de volaille à la royale, timbale of lamb's sweetbreads à la pèrigourdine, timbale of truffles à l'impériale, and in the case of sweet timbales, timbale of apricots à la frangipane, timbale of fruit à l'ancienne, timbale of cherries à la Chantilly, etc.

Timbale cases are made in fireproof porcelain in the same shape and colour of the real pie-crusts. But the true gourmand is not satisfied with a timbale whose crust is not edible; when served with a real timbale, he enjoys not only the contents but the container, too.

Large timbale case or crust (mixed entrée). CROÛTE DE GRANDE TIMBALE – Butter the interior of a large charlotte mould, and decorate the sides with little shapes of noodle paste.

Roll short pastry into a round 20 cm. (8 inches) in diameter. Sprinkle lightly with flour and fold in half. Fold again and roll it out to make an even thickness of about  $\frac{3}{4}$  cm. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  inch). Press it in the mould, without disturbing the noodle paste decorations.

Insert a fine buttered paper and fill it up with dried raw beans as for a flan case or tart (see TART). Put a dome-shaped piece of paper on top of the dry filling, and a thin sheet of pastry on top of this, joining the edges together by gently pressing. Make the rim of the pie by pinching this border with pastry pincers. Moisten lightly with water the part forming the lid, and decorate with leaves, roses, etc., cut from a thin sheet of pastry.

Put on top of the lid 3 or 4 circles of pastry, with the middles cut out to make circles. Stick these circles together and make an opening in the pastry to allow for the escape of steam during the cooking. Brush the outside of the pie with egg and bake in the oven at a moderate heat for 30 to 35 minutes.

Remove the lid. Take out the paper and dried beans, brush the inside with egg, and let it dry in the oven for a few minutes. Fill the timbale as desired.

Timbale cases cooked in this way are used as containers for a variety of mixed entrées. They can be filled with ragoûts, with garnishes such as Financière, Godard, Joinville, Milanaise, Toulouse and others of a similar nature (see GARNISHES).

They are frequently filled with macaroni arranged in alternate layers with a ragoût bound with brown or white sauce. See below.

Small timbales Agnes Sorel (old recipe). PETITES TIMBALES AGNÈS SOREL – 'Butter a dozen dariole moulds. Sprinkle in one-half truffles and one-half scarlet tongue, both finely chopped.

'Prepare 500 g. (1 lb., 4 cups) chicken forcemeat with cream. Add a few tablespoons Onion soubis (see PURÉE). Fill the moulds with this forcemeat, taking care to leave a hole in the middle and to keep the forcemeat rather thick on the bottom and round the sides. Fill the hole in the middle with a salpicon of chicken and truffles bound with Espagnole sauce (see SAUCE) made with Madeira.

'Close the tops of the moulds with a layer of raw forcemeat. Set the moulds in a saucpan and pour in hot water to half way up the sides. Poach the timbales in a moderately hot oven for 12 to 15 minutes. Turn out of the moulds and set them on a thin layer of poached forcemeat. Spoon over a little

Making a timbale case ('A l'Alsacienne', Maison Morand. Phot. Larousse)

Shape the dough into a ball

Roll out to a round

Fold the rolled out round of pastry in half

Shape to form an inverted dome

Sprinkle with flour and roll out again to an even thickness of about  $\frac{3}{4}$  cm. ( $\frac{1}{3}$  inch)

Press the pastry into the mould, right to the base, with the edges overlapping

Trim the pastry edges to the rim of the mould

Cover with a decorated lid of pastry and 'chimney'

TIMBALE

espagnole sauce cooked with the trimmings and liquor of the truffles.

'Serve with the rest of the sauce.'

Timbale Brillat-Savarin – Hollow out a Brioche mousseline (see BRIOCHE) cooked in a charlotte mould, to make a pie crust. Brush with apricot purée flavoured with kirsch, and heat in the oven. Fill it with alternate layers of quartered pears cooked in vanilla syrup and well drained, and French pastry cream (see CREAMS) mixed with finely crushed macaroons. Finish off by covering the top with pears mounted in a dome. Decorate with candied fruits. Heat again in a low oven.

Serve with apricot purée flavoured with kirsch.

Timbale Elysée – First prepare 8 pastry cups from crisp, biscuit-type pastry made by thoroughly blending 100 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) flour, 100 g. (4 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) sugar, 1 egg, 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) rather soft butter. Flavour with vanilla.

Spoon this pastry (1 heaped tablespoon for each pastry cup) onto a buttered and floured baking tray. Bake in a moderately hot oven until crisp and lightly browned.

While the pastry rounds are still hot, mould each of them over some object with a flattened dome shape (e.g. bottom of an upturned bowl or ladle) to produce a cup shape.

Place a small slice of sponge soaked in a kirsch-flavoured syrup at the bottom of each pastry cup. Add a spoonful of vanilla ice cream and cover with sliced fresh fruit; strawberries, raspberries, etc.

Coat this with a spoonful of kirsch-flavoured redcurrant jelly, then pipe a ribbon of Chantilly cream (see CREAMS) round the inside edge of the cup.

Finally, cover each of the garnished cups with a cage of spun sugar made by cooking sugar to a hard crack using 200 g. (7 oz., 1 cup) sugar, 40 g. (1½ oz., 1 heaped tablespoon) glucose (for 8 spun sugar cages) then threading this sugar in as delicate a lattice as possible over the bowl of a suitably-sized ladle. (Recipe from the restaurant Lasserre.)

Macaroni timbale à l'américaine. TIMBALE DE MACARONI À L'AMÉRICAIN – Prepare a timbale crust of Fine lining paste (see DOUGH) and bake it empty. Fill with alternate layers of macaroni cooked in water, drained and bound with Parmesan cheese and butter, and a salpicon of Lobster à l'américaine (see LOBSTER).

Finish off by placing on top a row of sliced lobster, and coat with Américaine sauce (see SAUCE). Cover the timbale, heat for a few moments in the oven, and serve.

Macaroni timbales à la milanaise. TIMBALES DE MACARONI À LA MILANAISE – Place slices of truffle in well buttered dariole moulds, and fill with thick macaroni, cooked in salted water and drained well. Arrange the macaroni in spirals in the moulds. Add a thin layer of Quenelle forcemeat (see FORCEMEAT) and fill with macaroni cut into small dice prepared à la milanaise (see MACARONI). Add a garnish of scarlet tongue, cooked ham, truffles and mushrooms, all cut in julienne. Cover the timbales with a layer of quenelle forcemeat. Put into a bain-marie and poach in a moderately hot oven for 18 to 20 minutes. Turn out the timbales on to a dish. Pour in a few tablespoons of Demi-glace sauce flavoured with a little tomato and Madeira (see SAUCE).

Timbale of sole à l'américaine, or Timbale Monselet. TIMBALE DE SOLES À L'AMÉRICAIN – Prepare a timbale crust of Fine lining paste (see DOUGH) and bake it empty.

Fill with Paupiettes of sole (see SOLE) cooked in white wine, cooked macaroni bound with butter and Parmesan, and a salpicon of lobster prepared à l'américaine. Coat with Américaine sauce (see SAUCE).

Timbale of filets of sole Grimaldi. TIMBALE DE SOLE GRIMALDI – see SOLE, Filets of sole.

Small timbales of vegetables. PETITES TIMBALES DE LÉGUMES

– To garnish cold meats, etc. Coat small dariole moulds with jelly based on fish or meat stock, according to the food that is to be garnished. Decorate the moulds with pieces of truffle, hard boiled egg whites, scarlet tongue and tarragon leaves. Fill with vegetable salad bound with mayonnaise thickened with jelly. Pour a layer of jelly over the salad. Chill the timbales on ice or in the refrigerator.

Timbales of vegetables to garnish cold dishes (which can also be served as hors-d'œuvre or small entrée) can be filled with a single vegetable, asparagus tips, French beans, little carrot balls, diced artichoke bottoms, etc., dressed with vinaigrette or mayonnaise.

Tinamou

TINAMOU – Partridge-like bird native to South America. It has been acclimatised in France.

All the recipes given for pheasant (q.v.) are applicable to tinamou.

TIN, ÉTAIN – A metal often used in the form of 'silver' paper or foil to wrap foods (confectionery, chocolate, cheese, saucisson, etc.) Tinware and tin measures were widely used in the past; pewter, in particular, is very beautiful. Both are back in fashion again but much more for their aesthetic value than for their usefulness. Wine combines very well with tin or pewter, so does English beer.

TINNING, ÉTAMAGE – The process of covering a metal with a layer of tin.

The tinning or retinning of vessels or utensils used in food preparation must be done in a bath containing a minimum of 97 per cent pure tin and a maximum of 0.50 per cent lead and  $\frac{1}{10}$  ml. arsenic.

TINPLATE, FER-BLANC – Tinplate is pressed iron covered with tin. A great many utensils used in cooking and confectionery used to be made from it, but pots and pans made of aluminium, nickel, fireproof porcelain, heat-resisting glass, cast-iron, stainless steel, etc. are replacing them.

TIRETTE – French butchery term describing a broad, flat tendon.

TISANE – This word comes from the Latin ptisana, barley water.

The tisane of Hippocrates was barley water; today the name tisane is applied to drinks for invalids prepared by soaking or infusion.

Digestive tisanes. TISANES DIGESTIVES – The habit of drinking these after a meal is to be discouraged. Tisanes are virtually medicines and ought to be treated as such.

However, some of them have well-proven digestive properties and may be safely drunk after the meal by those suffering from digestive troubles.

Boldo. A bush that grows in Chile and has not been successfully grown in Europe. Its leaves are therefore only to be obtained from herbalists and chemists. They resemble those of the periwinkle and contain two active constituents, boldine and boldoglucline, which have a stimulating and tonic effect on the liver. It is used in the infusion of 10 g. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  oz., 1 tablespoon) leaves per litre ( $1\frac{3}{4}$  pints, generous quart) of water, one cupful to be drunk after each main meal. An elixir can also be made from it: steep 25 g. (1 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) leaves in 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) alcohol and  $\frac{1}{2}$  litre (scant pint,  $2\frac{1}{4}$  cups). Madeira wine for 8 days; strain, then add 300 g. (12 oz.,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cups) sugar; filter after 3 or 4 days. Take one liqueur glass daily.

Centauray (Lesser). CENTAURÉE (PETITE) – Do not confuse the lesser centauray of the gentian family with the common centauray which is related to the blueberry. The stem of the lesser centauray is 20 to 40 cm. (8 to 16 inches) high divided at the top into branches which bear small clusters of pink flowers. It is found in woods, pastures and on sandy ground. The whole plant is used and contains constituents that stimulate the salivary and gastric juices, aid digestion and allay stomach pains. It is used in infusion: 25 g. (1 oz.,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) stalk and dried flowering tops per litre ( $1\frac{3}{4}$  pints, generous quart) of boiling water. Drink a cupful before or after meals.

Gentian (Yellow). GENTIANE – This plant grows in the mountains and is well anchored in the soil by a root which can be over 1 m. (approximately 3 feet) long and weigh up to 10 kg. (22 lb.). The yellow flowers rise in tiers up the stem which can be up to 1 m. (3 feet) high. The root is used in the preparation of bitter alcohol-based apéritifs of a beautiful golden hue. The bitter constituents of this root (gentiarmarine and gentisine) increase the salivary secretions and stimulate the digestive juices making this plant the most precious of all tonics. It is used in a tisane: 100 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) finely chopped root per litre ( $1\frac{3}{4}$  pints, generous quart) of water; boil for 2 to 3 minutes then allow to infuse. Take one cupful before and after each meal. It is also macerated: 3 g. (about 1 teaspoon) chopped root per cupful of boiling water; leave to steep for 4 hours; take 1 cupful before and after each meal. Finally, there is a gentian wine: steep 25 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) chopped root in 1 litre ( $1\frac{3}{4}$  pints, generous quart) white wine for 1 week. Take half a wine glassful after each meal. Alternatively, the gentian root may be steeped in  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (3 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) alcohol and 1 litre ( $1\frac{3}{4}$  pints, generous quart) red wine.

Melissa. MÉLISSE – A plant from the South with a stem about 60 cm. (2 feet) high and oval serrated leaves. The pleasantly lemon-scented flower is usually white but can have a reddish hue. Melissa is used in infusion: 10 g. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  oz., 2 tablespoons) leaves per litre ( $1\frac{3}{4}$  pints, generous quart) water. Take 1 cupful before main meals. There is also a melissa wine: steep 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) leaves in 1 litre ( $1\frac{3}{4}$  pints, generous quart) white wine for 48 hours. Take 1 or 2 tablespoons at each meal. Finally here is a recipe for Melissa water which is well known for its stimulative and anti-spasmodic properties. Ingredients. 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) melissa, 5 g. ( $1\frac{1}{4}$  teaspoons) cinnamon, 15 g. (2 tablespoons) fresh lemon zest, 10 g. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  oz., 1 tablespoon) angelica, 15 g. ( $1\frac{1}{2}$  teaspoons) coriander, 10 g. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  oz., 2 teaspoons) cloves, 15 g. ( $1\frac{1}{2}$  teaspoons) nutmeg.

Method. Macerate for 15 days in 1 litre ( $1\frac{3}{4}$  pints, generous quart) white eau-de-vie. Filter, squeezing the juice out of the residue as you do so. Bottle. Take  $1\frac{1}{4}$  teaspoons in sweetened water for as long as disturbances last.

TISANE DE CHAMPAGNE – Name for a Champagne that is rather lighter than some.

TOAST – Slice of bread, thick or thin, square or rectangular in shape, put under the grill or in an electric toaster and 'toasted' on both sides. It is sometimes served in a special holder called a toast-rack.

TOASTER. GRILLE-PAIN – Special small grille for toasting slices of bread. They are usually electric.

TOBACCO. TABAC – Solanaceous plant, originating on the island of Tobago, the leaves of which are prepared in various ways and either smoked, taken as snuff or chewed.

Smoking before a meal dulls the sense of taste. Professional tasters are obliged to renounce it. Smoking during a meal is simply barbaric; tobacco smoke completely prevents one from savouring the dishes and annoys other people in those restaurants where this habit is allowed. Tobacco has its rightful place after a meal, when its aroma blends agreeably with that of coffee.

TOCANE – New Champagne made from the first pressing.

TODDY PALM. ARBRE À LIQUEUR – Species of palm tree, also known as milk tree. It grows in great numbers in the Moluccas and is none other than sago palm, which produces sap during a part of the year, fermented into a very strong alcoholic beverage much appreciated by the local inhabitants.

TOKAY – White wine originally harvested in Tokaj, Hungary. The name Tokai is also used for a variety of wine cultivated chiefly in Alsace.

Fresh tomatoes despatched in a box

TOMATO. TOMATE – Herbaceous plant of South American origin, of which there are many varieties, with red or yellow, round or oval fruit. In olden days these fruits were called pommes d'amour – 'love apples'.

The tomato is rich in Vitamins A, B, C and E; it is an aperient, a diuretic and a detoxicant. The abundance of salts it contains (citrates, tartrates, oxalates) give it its acid taste. Sufferers from skin troubles, arthritis, etc., should not eat too many tomatoes.

The principal French varieties are: (among the earliest) Marmande, of which there are a number of varieties, Pierrette, Ronde hâtive; seasonal varieties including Saint-Pierre, Casaque rouge, Joffre, Marglobe.

French production is concentrated mostly in the south-east and in the Garonne valley. The season is at its height between June and October, but the markets are well stocked the whole year round with tomatoes from North Africa, the Canaries, Spain; hothouse tomatoes are available both in France and Holland.

Tomato fondue. FONDUE DE TOMATES – Tomatoes peeled, pressed, chopped and cooked till soft in butter, seasoned in various ways, usually with chopped garlic included. Tomato fondue is used as a garnish with various dishes, eggs, fish, meat, poultry, etc. and to fill bouchées, tartlets and croustades.

TOMATO

Tomato fondue à la grecque. FONDUE DE TOMATES À LA GRECQUE – Put into a saucepan 12 g. (1 tablespoon) chopped onions and cook till soft in 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) oil. Add 6 peeled and roughly chopped tomatoes, and 2 sweet pimientos, peeled and cut in very small dice. Season with salt and paprika and a little chopped garlic. Cook gently until the liquid from the tomatoes is well concentrated.

Tomato fondue à la niçoise. FONDUE DE TOMATES À LA NIÇOISE – Prepare the fondue as above. Season with extra garlic and add a teaspoon chopped tarragon.

Tomato fondue à la portugaise. FONDUE DE TOMATES À LA PORTUGAISE – Like Tomato fondue à la niçoise but without the tarragon.

Tomato fondue à la turque. FONDUE DE TOMATES À LA TURQUE – Like Tomato fondue à la grecque but without the pimiento.

Fried tomatoes. TOMATES FRITES – Heat and peel tomatoes of medium size. Cut them in slices 1 cm. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  inch) thick. Season with salt and pepper, dip in a light batter and drop them into smoking hot fat or oil.

Drain the tomatoes and garnish with fried parsley. Serve immediately, as they will quickly become limp.

Concentrated tomato glaze. SUC DE TOMATES CONCENTRÉ, GLACE DE TOMATES – Rub through a fine sieve 1 kg. (2½ lb.) tomatoes without removing seeds or juice. Cook over strong heat. When the pulp is boiled down by half, strain through a very fine strainer.

Cook once more. Strain again when it is well concentrated. Cook the pulp again until it is of a syrupy consistency.

This glaze, when it has been reduced to the desired point, can be kept for a long time. It should be put in small glass or china pots. It is used to heighten the flavour of certain sauces and preparations such as stuffings, salpicons, salads, etc.

Gratin of tomato and aubergine. GRATIN DE TOMATES ET D'AUBERGINES – Arrange in layers in an oiled or buttered gratin dish tomatoes and aubergines previously fried in butter or oil. Sprinkle with breadcrumbs, then with oil or melted butter. Brown in a moderate oven.

Grilled tomatoes. TOMATES GRILLÉS – Cut a circle off the top of the tomatoes on the stalk side and through this opening carefully remove the seeds. Season and brush with oil or melted butter. Grill at a low heat.

The tomatoes may be halved before being grilled.

Tomato jam – See JAM.

Tomato ketchup or catsup – English condiment, very highly spiced, found ready-made in grocers' and other foodshops. It is used in English cookery to season certain sauces and it accompanies cold meats. For recipe see KETCHUP.

Tomato loaf. PAIN DE TOMATES – Boil down some Tomato sauce (see SAUCE), and when it is well thickened add 6 beaten eggs for every 500 g. (18 oz., 1 cup) of the sauce. Season with salt, pepper and a pinch of spice.

Fill a well-buttered mould with the mixture. Poach in a bain-marie in a cool oven.

Leave for a few moments before turning out of the mould. Coat with Tomato sauce with added butter (see SAUCE).

Tomato loaf is chiefly used as an accompaniment to meat and served in small dariole moulds.

Cold tomato mousse. MOUSSE FROIDE DE TOMATES – Peel, press out seeds and juice and chop 500 g. (18 oz., 1 cup) tomato flesh.

When the pulp has well dried out, add 1 dl. (6 tablespoons,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) Velouté sauce (see SAUCE) to which 1½ tablespoons (2 tablespoons) powdered gelatine, softened in cold water, have been added.

Strain the mixture through a sieve. Put into a bowl, whisk until smooth, cool, and add half its volume of whipped cream. Season, and add a little cayenne and a few drops lemon juice. Mix well.

Pour into a glass dish or, when the tomato mousse is to be used as an accompaniment to cold dishes, into small dariole moulds lined with a layer of jelly.

Chill on ice or in the refrigerator.

Cold tomato mousselines. MOUSSELINES FROIDES DE TOMATES – Prepared with the same mixture as the above, but served in cassolettes of metal, china, glass or goffered paper, or moulded in small moulds lined with jelly.

These mousselines are served as cold hors-d'œuvre, or used as part of the garnish for a cold dish.

Fresh tomato pulp. PULPE DE TOMATES FRAÎCHES – This pulp should not be confused with tomato sauce or tomato purée. It is an ingredient of a number of made-up dishes, and, cold, is used to dress some salads. It is also used to make tomato jam (see JAM).

Wash 2½ kg. (5½ lb.) ripe, sound tomatoes, cut in slices, and rub them through a sieve. Put the pulp into a saucepan (or into a preserving pan if the pulp is to be used for jam) and boil for a few moments.

Strain through a cloth to get rid of the water completely. The thick pulp which remains in the cloth is used according to the instructions in the recipe.

Tomato purée. PURÉE DE TOMATES – See SAUCE, Tomato sauce.

Tomato salad. SALADE DE TOMATES – Scald the tomatoes, peel them and remove the pips. Cut in slices, not too thick. Lay on a folded cloth, season with salt and leave for 30 minutes to yield their liquid.

Arrange in an hors-d'œuvre or salad dish. Season with oil, vinegar, pepper and chopped parsley. This salad can also be made with the tomatoes cut in quarters.

Tomato salad (which is normally served as an hors-d'œuvre) may be sprinkled with various aromatic herbs, such as tarragon, fresh fennel, fresh basil, etc.

When served in hors-d'œuvre dishes, the tomatoes may also be covered with thin slices of new onions.

Tomato sauce. SAUCE TOMATE – See SAUCE.

Tomatoes sauté aux fines herbes. TOMATES SAUTÉES AUX FINES HERBES – Cut the tomatoes in half. Press the halves to extract the seeds, and season with salt and pepper. Fry lightly in butter. Set on a dish and sprinkle with parsley and the cooking butter, very hot, in which a small quantity of freshly made breadcrumbs have been fried.

Tomatoes sauté à la lyonnaise. TOMATES SAUTÉES À LA LYONNAISE – Fry halved tomatoes as above. Set on a dish on a layer of chopped onions cooked in butter. Sprinkle with chopped parsley. Pour over the cooking butter, to which 3 tablespoons (4 tablespoons) chopped onion, previously cooked in butter, have been added.

Tomatoes sauté à la provençale. TOMATES SAUTÉES À LA PROVENÇALE – Prepared in oil like Tomatoes sauté aux fines herbes, adding a little chopped garlic.

Tomato soufflé. SOUFFLÉ DE TOMATES – Prepare 6 dl. (1 pint, 2½ cups) very thick tomato purée (see SAUCE, Tomato sauce). Add to this  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup thick béchamel sauce and 6 egg yolks. Season with salt, pepper and grated nutmeg. Add 6 stiffly beaten egg whites. Mix quickly.

Turn into a buttered soufflé dish, filling only to within 1 cm. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  inch) of the top. Smooth over the surface of the soufflé. Cook in the oven like an ordinary soufflé.

Soufflé tomatoes. TOMATES SOUFFLÉES – Empty some firm, regular-shaped tomatoes into a baking dish without breaking. Sprinkle them with oil or melted butter and cook in the oven for 5 minutes. Allow to cool, and fill them with tomato soufflé mixture made according to the recipe for Tomato soufflé.

Fill the tomatoes to the top, smooth the surface, sprinkle with grated Parmesan cheese and cook in a slow oven for about 10 minutes.

Grated Parmesan may be added to the mixture.

Stuffed tomatoes. TOMATES FARCIES – Choose medium-sized tomatoes. Cut a circle round the stalk and open them. Press lightly to remove the juice and seeds and season with salt and pepper.

Set in rows on an oiled baking tin. Pour a few drops of oil into each tomato and put into a very hot oven for 5 minutes.

Drain the tomatoes and stuff them with thickened duxelles seasoned with a little garlic, and with the addition of diced lean ham and freshly made breadcrumbs. Pile the stuffing in a dome. Set the tomatoes on an oiled baking tin, put breadcrumbs on top, sprinkle with oil, and cook in the oven for 12 to 15 minutes.

Cold stuffed tomatoes. TOMATES FROIDES – Served as hors-d'œuvre or used as garnish with various cold dishes.

Empty firm tomatoes without breaking the skin. Season with salt and pepper. Sprinkle with oil and a few drops of vinegar or lemon juice. Leave upside down to drain for 1 hour.

Mix the scooped-out insides with a little garlic, diced ham and a few white breadcrumbs. Use to fill the tomatoes. Garnish with truffles, hard boiled egg whites, tarragon or chervil leaves.

Stuffed tomatoes à la bonne femme. TOMATES FARCIES À LA BONNE FEMME – Halve large tomatoes, remove the seeds and season with salt and pepper. Fry them in very hot oil. Stuff with sausage meat to which chopped onion cooked until soft in butter, freshly made breadcrumbs and chopped parsley and garlic, have been added. Cover with breadcrumbs and sprinkle with oil. Cook in a moderately hot oven.

Stuffed tomatoes à la languedocienne. TOMATES FARCIES À LA LANGUEDOCIENNE – Sauté halves of tomatoes, seasoned with salt and pepper, in hot oil. Stuff them with a mixture of sausage meat, chopped hard boiled egg yolks, chopped onion, lightly cooked in oil, and chopped parsley and garlic.

Place in a buttered ovenproof dish. Cover with breadcrumbs and sprinkle with oil. Cook in a moderately hot oven until the breadcrumbs are golden brown.

Stuffed tomatoes à la niçoise. TOMATES FARCIES À LA NIÇOISE – Stuff halves of tomatoes prepared as in the preceding recipe with a mixture of rice cooked in a meat stock, aubergine cooked in oil and chopped, breadcrumbs, chopped parsley and chopped garlic, the whole well seasoned and mixed.

Put the tomatoes in a buttered ovenproof dish, cover them with breadcrumbs and sprinkle with oil. Cook in a moderately hot oven until the breadcrumbs are golden brown.

Stuffed tomatoes à la parisienne. TOMATES FARCIES À LA PARISIENNE – Cook whole tomatoes lightly in oil. Take out the seeds and fill them with a fine forcemeat mixed with a salpicon of truffles and mushrooms cooked in butter (see FORCEMEAT). Put into a buttered ovenproof dish. Cover with breadcrumbs and sprinkle with melted butter. Cook in a moderately hot oven until the breadcrumbs are golden brown.

Stuffed tomatoes (Robert Carrier)

Stuffed tomatoes à la piémontaise or à l'italienne. TOMATES FARCIES À LA PIÉMONTAISE, À L'ITALIENNE – Slice off the tops of medium-sized tomatoes and press them to remove the juice and seeds, taking care not to break the skin. Season the inside. Stuff them, before cooking, with Risotto (see RICE) to which concentrated tomato purée has been added. Put the tomatoes on a buttered baking tin, sprinkle with melted butter and cook gently in a moderately hot oven for about 15 minutes. Set them on a dish, surround with Tomato sauce (not too thick – see SAUCE) and sprinkle with chopped parsley.

Stuffed tomatoes à la reine. TOMATES FARCIES AU SALPICON DE VOLAILLE, DITES À LA REINE – Fill medium-sized seeded tomatoes, lightly cooked in butter, with a salpicon of poultry mixed with diced truffles and mushrooms bound with thick Velouté sauce (see SAUCE).

Put the tomatoes on a buttered baking tin. Cover them with breadcrumbs, sprinkle with melted butter and cook in a moderately hot oven until the breadcrumbs are golden brown.

Tomatoes à la vinaigrette. TOMATES À LA VINAIGRETTE – Plunge tomatoes into boiling water, cool in cold water, and dry them.

Peel them completely and remove the seeds and juice without breaking them. Cut into thin slices or quarters.

Lay these on a napkin folded in four. Season with salt and leave them for 10 minutes.

Serve the tomatoes in an hors-d'œuvre dish and sprinkle with a few tablespoons of Vinaigrette (see SAUCE). Sprinkle with chopped parsley and, if liked, chervil and tarragon. Serve very cold.

TOMBER – This old French cookery term (literally 'to fall'), describes a way of cooking meat in a saucepan without any other liquid than that produced by the meat itself. The moisture must, after cooking is complete, be tombé (that is to say must fall or go down), to a syrupy consistency.

Tomber à glace – Phrase used when some substance, such as onion or shallot, is moistened during cooking with liquid which is then completely boiled down.

TONGS. PINCE – Name of various instruments of different shapes, according to the use for which they are intended. The following types of tongs are used at table: asparagus tongs, escargot tongs, sugar tongs, etc.

TONGUE (OX, CALF, SHEEP, PIG). LANGUES DE BŒUF, DE MOUTON, DE PORC – See OFFAL or VARIETY MEATS.

TONKA BEAN. FÈVE TONKA – Fruit of a leguminous plant rich in coumarin. The latter is used in the manufacture of certain liqueurs.

TORPEDO. TORPILLE – Large fish, somewhat resembling the skate, which is common in the Mediterranean. The flesh of the torpedo-fish is edible but mediocre. It is prepared like skate (q.v.).

TOT. BOUJARON – A small measure of 6 cl. (1 dram) which was used for distributing rum to sailors.

TÔT-FAIT (Pastry) – Mix 250 g. (9 oz., 2 cups) sifted flour, 250 g. (9 oz., 2 cups) sugar, a small pinch of salt, a little grated lemon rind and 3 whole eggs in a basin. When smooth add 250 g. (9 oz., 2 cups) melted butter. Blend. Fill a buttered manque mould with the mixture.

Cook in a moderately hot oven for about 45 minutes. Turn out and allow it to cool before serving.

TOUFFE – Stalks tied together in a bunch. Thus parsley arranged in a bunch is called a touffe de persil.

TOULOUSAIN (À LA) – Name given to various different preparations. It is mostly used for a ragoût bound with a white sauce, an accompaniment to poached or roast poultry; or as a filling for croustades, tarts and vol-au-vent.

TOUR D'ARGENT – See RESTAURANTS OF BYGONE DAYS.

TOUR DE FEUILLETAGE – French term for treatment (turns) given to pastry to make it flaky (see DOUGH).

Gastronomic map of Touraine

TOURAINÉ – The Touraine, cradle of Gargantua, is the home of famous cooks.

Its meadows and fields, woods and its waters provide food of the highest quality: shad from the Loire, pike from the Cher, carp from the Indre, chicken, butter, veal, and pork. Its vegetables include delicious mushrooms, and the fruit is plentiful. Chasselas grapes from the slopes above the Loire, William pears, plums from Sainte-Catherine and Rochecorbon, eating apples from Azay-le-Rideau; and a whole range of delicious wines.

Culinary specialities – Touraine cookery is French cookery par excellence – wholesome, simple and admirably prepared. It contains few regional specialities, but old-fashioned dishes like sang de poulet aux oignons (chicken blood with onions), rôtie au vin rouge (roast meat with red wine) are still prepared in Touraine; and there are fricassées of chicken and fritures of fish, cerneaux; which are green walnuts, served as hors-d'œuvre. Hare à la chinonaise is a speciality.

The charcuterie is renowned, notably rillettes and rillons, andouilles and andouillettes of Tours, Vouvray and Chinon. Richelieu has its pâtés and its jambons of game and poultry.

The sweetmeats of this district are barley-sugar and biscuits from Tours, macaroons from Cormery and Ligeuil, cakes called le Lochois and le Tourangeau. Worthy of praise are the stuffed prunes of Tours and dried prunes of Preuilly and Huismes, the dried pears of Rivarennes and the traditional pastries: the cordés, russerolles, fouaces, and cassemuse.

Touraine kitchen, Plessis-les-Tours
(French Government Tourist Office)

Wines – Touraine produces delightful dry wines, at once strong and smooth, which have an extremely agreeable aroma. The best among the white wines are made from the Pineau grape of Vouvray, then Mont-Louis, Saint-Avertin, Rochecorbon, Candes and Sacher; among red wines the Bourgueil with its aroma of strawberries and the Breton de Chinon which smells of raspberries.

Several pleasant fruity red wines, good rosés and aromatic dry wines are produced under the general name of 'Touraine'. These wines can also be pétillant or mousseux (see SPARKLING).

Certain communes have the right to add their own name to that of Touraine. They are Touraine-Amboise (white, red and rosés), Touraine-Azay-le-Rideau (white), Touraine-Mesland (white, red and rosés).

TOURNE-BRIDE – Old word for a country inn established near a château where visitors' servants used to be lodged.

Nowadays this is the name given to certain inns where guests may retire for a siesta after the meal.

TOURNEDOS – Small slices taken from the heart of the fillet of beef. This cut is sautéed or grilled and garnished in various ways (see BEEF, Tournedos).

TOURNÉE – Old name for Allemande sauce (see SAUCE).

TOURNER – Literally to turn, and describing the action of rounding off, while peeling, certain vegetables. Thus potatoes are 'turned' into the shape of olives, coconuts, etc. Carrots, turnips and other pot-herbs are 'turned', and so are cultivated mushrooms, to peel and trim them to the right shape. Olives are also 'turned' when they are used as a garnish.

TOURTE – The word tourte, say some culinary writers, is derived from the Latin tortus, which means 'making round' thus indicating in a general way that the tourte should be round in shape.

There are sweet tourtes, but these are really tarts, which also are usually round in shape (see also TART).

Tourtes as entrées. TOURTE D'ENTRÉE – 'The tourte served as an entrée,' said Carême in his treatise Entrées chaudes de pâtisserie, 'is no longer sufficiently sumptuous to appear on our opulent tables because its shape is too common; even the bourgeois classes disdain it and eat only hot pâtés and vol-au- vent, where formerly the rich merchants and their families used to regale themselves with the humble tourte.

'But then these merchants did not pride themselves on being gastronomes. How times have changed! Our great cooks in the old days used to serve tourte at the tables of princes . . . !'

Since Carême wrote these observations on the discredit suffered by the tourte in his days, this excellent hot entrée has come back into fashion, and now it is not only 'merchants' who regale themselves with it, but also the most fastidious gastronomes.

The recipe that Carême gave for making the tourte is as follows:

Tourte d'entrée à l'ancienne – 'Make and roll out pastry as for a timbale. Cut out a round about 20 cm. (8 inches) in diameter; place this on a metal baking tin. Make 36 to 40 boulettes (quenelles of godiveau, about the size of a pigeon's egg). Place half of these in the bottom of the tourte, keeping them 2½ cm. (1 inch) away from the edge. Set on top some slices of lamb's or calf's sweetbreads (cooked aux fines herbes), some mushrooms and some artichoke bottoms cut into eighths; then put on the rest of the boulettes, and, on top, the shelled claws and tails of 4 good crayfish, mushrooms and artichoke bottoms, to make the top into a perfect dome.

'Next roll out some more pastry in the same way as for the bottom of the tourte and cut it into a round 22 cm. (9 inches) in diameter; it should be about 5 mm. (¼ inch) thick. Lightly moisten the edges of the first piece of pastry; over this and its garnish with the piece of pastry and press the edges together all round almost as far as the boulettes. Make a small hole so that the steam can escape.

'Raise and press the edges of the lower piece of pastry over the edges of the second, so as to seal them as perfectly as possible. Moisten the upper edge lightly and set on it a strip of puff pastry not more than 5 mm. (¼ inch) thick, then fix and press down this strip.

'Brush the upper pastry lightly with egg, place in the middle of a pretty rosette, at least 15 cm. (6 inches) in diameter, made of rolled strips of the same pastry as the tourte, or a little top of puff pastry trimmings.

'Brush with egg, surround the edges with a band of strong, buttered paper, and put into a brisk oven; allow 1½ hours baking time.

'Cut a little lid 7½ cm. (3 inches) wide out of the top, pour in a good Espagnole sauce (see SAUCE), and recover.'

Tourte of truffles à la périgourdine. TOURTE DE TRUFFES À LA PÉRIGOURDINE – See TRUFFLES.

SWEET TOURTES. TOURTES D'ENTREMETS – To make pastry use Puff pastry (see DOUGH) 'turned' 6 times. When the last turn has been given it should be 80 cm. (about 2½ feet) long. Make a band by cutting 1 cm. (½ inch) off the edge of the pastry, then roll the band 2½ cm. (1 inch) wide.

Give one more turn to the rest of the pastry and from it cut out a base 20 cm. (8 inches) in diameter. Set the base on a baking tin. Moisten lightly round the edges. Set the band of pastry on the moistened edge, join the two ends of the band by pressing them together, and brush with egg.

Fill the inside of the tourte with a cream or fruit (see below). Bake in a hot oven. Sprinkle with icing sugar and glaze in the oven.

Tourtes can be filled with all kinds of preparations, such as French pastry cream, Frangipane (see CREAMS), jam, raw or cooked fruit.

Apricot tourte I. TOURTE AUX ABRICOTS – Prepare a tourte crust with puff pastry rolled and turned 6 times as described above. Prepare a tourte crust. Sprinkle fine sugar over the base, avoiding the band surrounding it. Fill the tourte with halves of well-ripened apricots. Brush the band with egg and bake in a hot oven. Coat the apricots lightly with apricot jam diluted with a little syrup and strained.

TOURTEAU

Apricot tourte II (for home cooking). TOURTE AUX ABRICOTS – 'Roll out some fine pastry; set it on a tourtière (pie dish) lightly moistened in the middle. Cut it to the desired size, well rounded in shape. Prick the middle and moisten the edges, fixing on them a band of puff pastry 2½ cm. (1 inch) wide and 1 cm. (½ inch) thick.

'Fill the tourte like a tart, but do not let the fruit touch the band of pastry, because this would prevent it from rising evenly during cooking. Brush the upper surface of the band with egg and mark it lightly with the edge of a knife.

'Bake for 45 minutes in a moderate oven. Five minutes before it is completely cooked, powder it lightly with icing sugar so that when it is put back in the oven the sugar glazes.' (Montbry.)

Tourte à la mode béarnaise – 'Melt 500 g. (18 oz., 2 cups) butter and pour it over 100 g. (4 oz., 4 cakes compressed) yeast in a bowl. Mix together.

'Add 500 g. (18 oz., 2½ cups) sifted sugar, 12 eggs, a small glass of rum, a little grated lemon peel, a pinch of salt, and enough flour to obtain a firm mixture. Allow to rise for 24 hours.

'Divide into small pieces and put them into buttered moulds. Bake in the oven.'

Corsican tourte. TOURTE CORSE – Bouillie of chestnut flour prepared like polenta with the addition of pine kernels and dried fruits flavoured with anise, poured into a tourtière and baked in the oven.

Tourte with various fruits. TOURTE AUX FRUITS DIVERS – Made like Apricot tourte with any kind of fruit, raw or cooked, whole or in halves, quarters or slices.

Tourtes made with strawberries or raspberries are filled with the fruit after the pastry is cooked.

TOURTEAU – Name for the large edible crab.

TOURTIÈRE – Pie dish in which to make tourtes, made of earthenware or metal. There are tourtières with plain sides and others with goffered edges.

TRAGACANTH (gum dragon). ADRAGANTE – Gum provided by several species of plants. Tragacanth gum is mentioned in ancient writings.

Perfume-makers, confectioners and pastry-cooks use tragacanth gum to bind their oils or to give body to their pastes.

TRAIT – Term used by barmen preparing cocktails to describe a fixed quantity of liquor, usually about a spoonful.

To pour out with precision these small quantities the bottle is usually stoppered with a special metal cork. Turned rapidly upside down a bottle fitted with this cork allows only a little liquid to pour at a time.

The bottle is turned sharply up and down once for every trait required.

TRAITEUR – Traiter means to treat, to receive or welcome one to the table.

A traiteur is someone who provides meals for payment.

The traiteur was, in fact, the predecessor of the restaurateur. During the eighteenth century people dined out at the traiteurs. By the middle of the nineteenth century, the term had acquired a slightly derogatory sense, and was scarcely applied except to restaurateurs of the lowest class and wine merchants who provided meals. There still exist in Paris, in some of the populous districts, establishments whose signs carry the words: Marchand des vins – Traiteur.

In the eighteenth century, before the institution of restaurants, not only were people obliged to buy whole joints, fowls, etc. from the traiteurs, but were even unable, when the latter were only food merchants, to eat on the premises. It was in this epoch, says Brillat-Savarin (about 1770), that 'strangers had as yet very few resources in the way of good cheer . . . they were forced to have recourse to the innkeepers who were generally bad. . . . It was possible to go to the traiteurs but they could only sell whole pieces; and he who wished to entertain some friends had to order in advance, so that those who had not the good luck to be invited to some wealthy house left the great city without knowing the resources and delights of Parisian cuisine.' (Physiologie du goût – Meditation XXVII.)

A certain number of the traiteurs did, in fact, provide meals in their establishments and were restaurateurs of an early kind, long before the first restaurant, founded in 1765 by one Boulanger, was opened in the Rue des Poulies. This was not a 'restaurant' in the accepted sense of the word. Boulanger was still only a traiteur, and there existed in Paris at that time a number of establishments similar to his.

TRANCHANT (Equerry) – Officer in charge of cutting meat at table in the great houses.

TRANCHE GRASSE (Top rump) – The part of the leg of beef which extends the whole length of the tende de tranche (topside) as far as the rump.

Tranche au petit os is the middle of the silverside.

TRANCHEUR – Waiter in a restaurant in charge of cutting meat.

TRANCHOIR, TRENCHER – Wooden dish on which meat is sliced. A slice of bread served as a plate in the Middle Ages. These were also called tailloirs.

TRAPPISTES – See CHEESE.

TRAVAILLER – To 'beat'. It is much used in cookery and pastry-making. To beat or travailler a sauce is to stir it with a spatula or wooden spoon to make it smooth, or mix it with a whisk to incorporate other substances.

A forcemeat or other similar mixture is also beaten, or travaillé, to render it homogenous. A paste or batter is beaten to ensure perfect blending.

Travailler is also used to indicate a change in the nature of something. Thus in speaking of wine it means to ferment. It is used also to describe a dough that rises.

TREFOIL (TRIFOLIUM). TRÈFLE – Type of leguminous plant of which one species is eaten as a vegetable in Iceland. Another, the marsh trefoil, has large smooth dark green leaves resembling those of the broad bean. These leaves are bitter and are sometimes used instead of hops. The farinaceous root is edible and it is eaten like carrot.

Trefoil tea stimulates the appetite; it is an excellent remedy for troubles of the digestive tract because its bitter constituents blend instantly with the gastric juices and activate the digestion.

TREMPER – Term used in the expressions tremper la soupe which means to soak slices of bread in soup, and tremper le vin, to mix wine with water.

TREMPETTE – A word derived from tremper, to soak, meaning a small slice of bread which has been dipped in a liquid.

TRÉPIED – A three-legged kitchen utensil for supporting cauldrons and soup pots over an open fire.

TRESS. TRESSE – Design in which some pastries are made, called a plait or 'braid'. It is also called natte in French.

TRICLINIUM – The special room in which the ancient Romans took their meals.

This is how, according to Mazois (Palais de Scaurus), the triclinium or dining room of the Romans was arranged:

‘... As we were about to pass through the door of the ante-room which precedes the triclinium, a child, posted there for the purpose, warned us to enter with the right foot, so as not to bring in evil portents.

‘... As soon as we had been announced slaves relieved us of our bracae (breeches) and our striped Gaulish sagi (military coats), and re-clothed us in fine robes to be worn only at the table.

‘... We entered the triclinium and were scarcely seated before Egyptian slaves came and poured cold water over our hands while others, having taken off our sandals, washed our feet and cleaned our toenails, even though the same service had already been performed for us in the bath. The triclinium or dining room is twice as long as it is wide and is divided into two. The upper part is occupied by the table and couches; the lower is kept free for the service and for entertainment. Around the former part the walls are ornamented up to a certain height with costly paintings. The decoration of the rest of the room is noble, and, at the same time, in keeping with its character; the pillars, festooned with ivy and vines, divide the walls into sections, each of which is bordered with fanciful ornaments. In the centre of each panel there have been painted with admirable grace young fauns or bacchantes bearing thyrsi, vases, cups and all the paraphernalia of the feast. Above these columns runs a great frieze divided into twelve tableaux, each of which is surmounted by one of the signs of the Zodiac and represents the foodstuffs which are most sought after in the month to which the sign belongs; so that underneath Sagittarius have been painted shrimps, shellfish and birds of passage, under Capricorn, lobsters, sea-fish, a wild boar and game birds; under Aquarius duck, plover, pigeons and water-rails, etc.

‘Bronze lamps, suspended from chains of the same metal or supported by candelabras of rare workmanship, shed a bright light; slaves detailed to look after them were careful to cut the wicks from time to time and see that they did not lack oil.

‘The table, made of cedar wood brought from the heart of Mauretania and prized above gold, rested on feet of ivory. It was covered with a massive tray of silver weighing five hundred pounds, ornamented with chasing and anaglyphs. The dining couches, enough for thirty persons, were of bronze, enriched with ornament in silver, gold and tortoiseshell; the mattresses of purple-dyed wool from Gaul and the rich feather-filled cushions were covered with brilliantly coloured materials, woven and embroidered with silk mixed with gold thread. Chrysippus told us that they had been made at Babylon and that they cost four million sesterces.

‘The mosaic floor represented, by a curious caprice of the artist, all sorts of scraps of food, as though they had fallen naturally to the ground, so that at first glance it seemed not to have been swept since the last meal. . . . At the end of the room there had been set up some Corinthian brass vases. This triclinium, the largest of four that Scaurus had in his palace, could easily hold a table with sixty couches, but it was seldom that so many guests met there, and when, on great occasions, there were five or six hundred people invited, they were received in the atrium. This dining room was reserved for autumn, winter and spring; the Romans made a study of the enjoyment of changing seasons.

‘The service was regulated so that for each triclinium there were a great number of tables of different kinds, each with its own vases, dishes and servants.’

TRIGGERFISH. BALISTE – Genus of fish distinguishable by their dorsal fin armed with a spine which is projected into an erect position when the fish is threatened with any danger.

Triggerfish

This genus includes several species, all remarkable for their brilliant metallic colouring and thick granulous skin, which has the texture of armour.

Only one species of the genus is found on the French Mediterranean coast. These, when caught, are heard to make a grunting sound, resembling that of pigs. In U.S.A. the so-called pigfish is very abundant on the South Atlantic coast and averages about 225 g. (8 oz.) in weight.

The flesh is quite delicate and they are prepared like sturgeon or tunny (tuna fish).

TRIGLE. GURNARD – Species of fish, of which several varieties exist (see GURNET).

TRIM. PARER – To remove all parts which spoil the correct appearance of food.

Parer la marchandise ('to trim the goods') means to make a display of goods, featuring the best and concealing the others – those which are to be delivered to the customer.

TRIMMINGS. PARURES – This term applies to all the parts of meat, such as sinews, skin, etc., which are removed before the meat is cooked.

Fresh meat trimmings, especially veal, beef and pork trimmings, are used for making stocks, used in preparing sauces (see STOCKS).

Mutton and lamb trimmings should only be used for stocks intended for sauces to accompany these same meats.

TRIPE. TRIPES – The stomach of ruminants used as food. Only tripe from certain butchered animals, such as pigs and sheep, are considered edible. The latter are used in Provence for the preparation of pieds-paquets à la marseillaise, and in the southwest of France to make a dish known as pétérām.

Pig's intestines are used to enclose large and small sausages, boudins and saveloy, and to make andouilles and andouillettes.

Tripe, rich in gelatine and tasty as it may be, is nonetheless like most offal heavy and indigestible. It should therefore be eaten in moderation even by those who enjoy good health.

It is not recommended for those who suffer from dyspepsia, gout or uricaemia. For the preparation of tripe see OFFAL or VARIETY MEATS.

The first stomach of oxen (beef) is used for the famous tripes à la mode de Caen and gras-double à la lyonnaise.

The origin of these dishes goes back far into the past. Athenaeus praised this dish. Homer noted the excellence of tripe. William the Conqueror enjoyed tripe accompanied by Neustrian apple juice, but history has neglected to mention that a question of tripe was the cause of the quarrel between William the Bastard and Phillip I, King of France, which provoked a pleasantry by the latter. William replied by a promise as historic as it is threatening: "That he would come and be churchd at Notre-Dame de Paris with ten thousand lances instead of candles."

'And thus, in the eleventh century, a gastronomic quarrel led to the invasion of the Norman Vexin. However, at this time the dreary cuisine of the Middle Ages had not known how to prepare tripe. It was only three centuries later that the great Benoît had the intelligence to add to the tastelessness of the original dish that which is at the heart of all good cooking, to wit, well-judged seasoning. This was the cook who immortalised his district gastronomically.

TRIPERIE

'On the tables of famous restaurants tripe comes on a fixed day, steaming in brown terrines fixed in silver heaters. At the wine merchants' and at the door of the dairy, a placard announces that the menu of the day includes tripe. There it is eaten from thick china plates.

'It cannot be denied that the preparation is long and laborious, and that a large quantity must be made in order to achieve the greatest succulence.

'But the perfect succulence is there, so long as the squares of mesentery bathe in the golden juices, whose perfume whets the appetite, and a few bottles of the pure juice of Neustrian apples, the true Norman cider, father of golden drunkenness, make their appearance at the same time!' (Philéas Gilbert.)

The detailed recipe for tripes à la mode de Caen will be found under OFFAL or VARIETY MEATS.

TRIPERIE – The sale of tripe, or the place in which it is sold.

As well as tripe of the ordinary kind, the triperie sells other kinds of offal (variety meats): calf's and sheep's head, brains, sweetbreads, udder, feet, tongue, hearts, liver, spleen and kidneys.

Mould to make Trois Frères

TROIS FRÈRES (Pastry) – Pastry created by the three Julien brothers, celebrated pastry-cooks of the nineteenth century, for which a special mould called the moule à trois frères was created.

Ingredients. 500 g. (18 oz., 3 cups) rice flour, 376 g. (13 oz., 2¾ cups) sugar, 400 g. (14 oz., 1½ cups) butter, 15 eggs, 1 liqueur glass maraschino, pinch of salt, 50 g. (2 oz., ½ cup) candied angelica cut in small dice.

Method. Put the sugar, eggs and salt in a copper pan, placing it in a bain-marie, which is placed in turn in a sauté pan filled with hot water. Whisk until it becomes thick and frothy.

Add the rice flour, melted butter and maraschino. Fill buttered and floured moulds with the mixture. Bake in a fairly hot oven. Set the cakes on a base of sweet pastry. Cover with apricot syrup and sprinkle with chopped almonds and the diced angelica.

TROGNON – Edible heart of a vegetable or fruit. Trognons of certain vegetables, notably those of chicory and cabbage, can be prepared in various ways (see CHICORY).

TRONÇON (CHUNK) – Term for a piece of food which is cut so that it is longer than it is wide. Used to describe pieces cut from the middle of a large fish.

TROPIQUE – The hottest part of the oven.

TROU DU MILIEU or COUP DU MILIEU – Glass of eau-de-vie or other liqueur which used to be drunk in the middle of a large and elaborate meal.

The coup du milieu was replaced by sorbets which are served between the entrée and the roast.

Certain peoples of the North of Europe, notably the Swedes, drink eau-de-vie (aquavit) between courses.

The trou normande is the same as the trou du milieu, but the former must always be eau-de-vie distilled from apples.

TROUSSE – Sheath that holds the butcher's or cook's implements. The trousse is suspended from the apron string.

Rainbow trout (Baufle)

TROUT, TRUITE – Species of fish of the same group as the salmon, whose flesh, very delicate, is white, pinkish or 'salmon' coloured, according to the waters it inhabits.

In French fresh waters two kinds of trout are found: common trout (truite commune, truite de rivière, de ruisseau or de torrent) which live in running water. They correspond to the American mountain trout, dolly varden, brook or speckled trout. The salmon trout (truite saumonée, truite de mer or truite de Dieppe) are fish whose flesh is pink and which, like the salmon, go up the rivers and correspond to the American brown or river trout. Another variety of trout, called the rainbow trout, also an anadromous species, is a native of California. It was imported into Europe some years ago, has now become acclimatised and is increasing rapidly. It is robust and does well in waters less fresh than those demanded by the common trout.

There are also lake trout which, living in very deep water, grow to a very large size, but their flesh is less delicate than that of river trout.

All methods of preparation given for fillets of sole or whiting (see SOLE, WHITING) are applicable to trout.

RIVER TROUT. TRUITES DE RIVIÈRE –

Blue trout. TRUITE AU BLEU – The trout must be absolutely fresh. Ten minutes before serving take the fish out of the water, kill them with a hard blow on the head, gut and clean them, sprinkle with vinegar, and plunge into a court-bouillon containing a high proportion of vinegar. Cook as rapidly as possible, allowing 7 to 8 minutes for fish weighing about 150 g. (5 oz.) each.

Drain the trout and garnish with fresh parsley. Serve with melted butter or Hollandaise sauce (see SAUCE).

Blue trout (cold). TRUITES AU BLEU FROIDES – Prepared as above. Allow to cool in the court-bouillon. Garnish with fresh parsley. Serve with Ravigote sauce (see SAUCE).

Boiled river trout with various sauces. TRUITES DE RIVIÈRE BOUILLIES – Cook the fish in court-bouillon, drain and serve with Hollandaise sauce or any other sauce suitable for boiled fish (see SAUCE).

River trout à la bourguignonne. TRUITES DE RIVIÈRE À LA BOURGUIGNONNE – Prepare like River trout in red wine (see below), using red Burgundy. Garnish with mushrooms and small glazed onions. Coat with sauce prepared as in the recipe for River trout in red wine.

River trout Colbert. TRUITES DE RIVIÈRE COLBERT – Open the fish down the back and remove the central bone. Coat the trout with egg and breadcrumbs, and fry in hot deep fat or oil. When crisp and golden-brown, drain and set on a dish. Put in the middle of each trout a tablespoon of Colbert butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters). Garnish with a bunch of fried parsley at each end of the dish.

River trout, cold. TRUITES DE RIVIÈRE FROIDES – All the methods of preparing cold salmon trout are applicable to river trout. See below.

Fillets of river trout en papillotes à l'ancienne. FILETS DE TRUITES DE RIVIÈRE EN PAPILOTES À L'ANCIENNE – Fillet the trout, season, and half cook them in butter. Put them, two by two, on greaseproof paper or aluminium foil, cut into the shape of hearts and oiled, on a layer of duxelles mixed with chopped truffles and bound with concentrated Velouté sauce (see SAUCE) based on fish stock. Cover the fillets with the same mixture. Close the papillotes, folding over the edges carefully. Cook in the oven.

Fried trout

Fried trout. TRUITES DE RIVIÈRE FRITES – Small trout are prepared in this way. Proceed as for Fried bass (see BASS).

Grilled river trout. TRUITES DE RIVIÈRE GRILLÉES – Make shallow cuts on the back of the trout. Season, flour lightly, brush with oil or melted butter, and cook under the grill at a gentle heat. Serve with Maitre d'hôtel butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters) or any other sauce suitable for grilled fish (see SAUCE).

River trout à l'hôtelière. TRUITES DE RIVIÈRE À L'HÔTELIÈRE – Coat the trout with egg and breadcrumbs and fry. Set on a dish on a mixture of duxelles and Maitre d'hôtel butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters) in the ratio of 1 tablespoon of duxelles to 100 g. (4 oz., 6 tablespoons) butter. Put half slices of lemon with fluted edges along the sides of the dish.

River trout à la husarde. TRUITES DE RIVIÈRE À LA HUSSARDE – Stuff 10 river trout with Fish forcemeat (see FORCEMEAT) mixed with chopped onion cooked till tender in butter, allowing 100 g. (4 oz., ½ cup) onion, 500 g. (18 oz., generous 2 cups) forcemeat. Season.

Put the trout in a baking tin lined with 100 g. (4 oz., ½ cup) finely chopped onions lightly cooked in butter, without colouring. Add a small bouquet garni. Pour over 2 dl. (½ pint, 1 cup) dry white wine. Dot small pieces of butter over the top. Cook in the oven, basting frequently.

Drain the trout, set on a serving dish, coat with the cooking liquor thickened with a little Velouté sauce (see SAUCE) based on fish stock, enriched with butter and strained. Glaze in a very hot oven.

Jellied river trout in red wine. TRUITES DE RIVIÈRE À LA GELÉE AU VIN ROUGE – Prepared like Glazed salmon au chambertin (see SALMON).

Jellied trout can be prepared in the same way using various wines: Barsac, Chambertin, Champagne, Chinon, Madeira and others.

Trout en matelote à la bourguignonne. TRUITES EN MATELOTE À LA BOURGUIGNONNE – Cut the trout into chunks, put them in a sauté pan lined with chopped onions and carrots lightly cooked in butter. Add a bouquet garni. Pour over enough red

Grilled trout garnished with duchess potatoes

Burgundy to cover the fish. Season, and cook, covered, for 10 minutes. Drain the trout and replace in the pan. Add small glazed onions and small mushrooms sautéed in butter. Pour over the cooking liquor thickened with Kneaded butter and strained (see BUTTER, Compound butters).

Simmer for 15 minutes. Serve the trout in a deep dish, garnished with croûtons fried in butter.

Trout en matelote à la normande. TRUITES EN MATELOTE À LA NORMANDE – Cook the trout as above, using white wine. Drain and put in a sauté pan with small mushrooms cooked in a flour and water court-bouillon, and shelled crayfish. Pour over a Normande sauce (see SAUCE) made with the cooking liquor. Simmer gently. Serve the trout in a deep dish garnished with fried croûtons and crayfish cooked in court-bouillon.

River trout en matelote à la tourangelles. TRUITES DE RIVIÈRE EN MATELOTE À LA TOURANGELLE – Cut the trout in half or in pieces, according to their size. Cook them in red wine (see MATELOTE). Set on a dish and garnish with small glazed onions, mushrooms and lardons cooked with the fish, crayfish cooked in court-bouillon and heart-shaped croûtons fried in butter.

Trout à la meunière. TRUITES À LA MEUNIÈRE – Cook the trout in butter with a pinch of salt. Arrange them on a platter. Add the juice of a lemon and a little fresh cream to the butter in the pan. Warm it slightly and pour over the trout. Serve immediately.

River trout à la vauclusienne. TRUITES DE RIVIÈRE À LA VAUCLUSIENNE – Prepared like Trout à la meunière, replacing the butter with olive oil.

River trout au vert. TRUITES DE RIVIÈRE AU VERT – This recipe is mainly suitable for small trout. Prepare as for Eels au vert (see EEL).

River trout in red wine I. TRUITES DE RIVIÈRE AU VIN ROUGE – Season the trout inside and out with salt and pepper. Put in a heat-proof dish, lined, for every 4 trout, 1 onion and 1 carrot, chopped and lightly cooked in butter. Pour over enough red wine to almost cover the trout. Start cooking on top, then cover and cook in a hot oven for 10 minutes.

Drain the trout, wipe and set on a serving dish. Coat with a red wine sauce prepared as follows:

Strain the fish cooking liquor, thicken it with 1 tablespoon of Kneaded butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters) and cook for a minute. Add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) butter. Strain.

River trout in red wine II. TRUITES DE RIVIÈRE AU VIN ROUGE – Put the trout, seasoned with salt and pepper in a buttered baking dish. Pour over fish fumet made with red wine. Cook in the oven. Drain the trout. Set on a dish and coat with the cooking liquor thickened with 3 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint,  $1\frac{1}{4}$  cups) Espagnole sauce based on fish stock, enriched with butter and strained (see SAUCE).

TROUT

River trout in white wine. TRUITES DE RIVIÈRE AU VIN BLANC – Prepare as for Brill in white wine (see BRILL).

SALMON TROUT. TRUITE SAUMONÉE – This trout usually has pink flesh, like salmon, hence its name. Trout with very pale flesh, sometimes even completely white, are also found, and are no less excellent in quality.

All the methods of preparation given for salmon (q.v.) are equally applicable to salmon trout. In addition we give the following recipes, which are also applicable to salmon.

Salmon trout Beauharnais. TRUITE SAUMONÉE BEAUHARNAIS – Stuff a medium-sized salmon trout with Fish forcemeat (see FORCEMEAT) mixed with 4 tablespoons ( $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) mirepoix of diced carrots, celery, onions cooked until soft in butter for every 250 g. (9 oz., 1 cup) of forcemeat.

Put the trout on the grid of a buttered fish-kettle. Pour in fish fumet, made with white wine, to reach half-way up the fish. Cook in the oven, basting frequently.

Set the trout on a dish and garnish each end with Noisette potatoes (see POTATOES) cooked in butter, and the sides with very small artichoke bottoms cooked in butter and filled with Beauharnais sauce (see SAUCE).

Salmon trout Berchoux. TRUITE SAUMONÉE BERCHOUX – Stuff a salmon trout weighing about 2 kg. (4 lb.) with Pike forcemeat à la crème (see FORCEMEAT) to which chopped truffles have been added.

Put the trout on the buttered grid of a fish kettle, the bottom of which is lined with chopped carrot and onion cooked until soft in butter, a good handful of mushroom peelings and a bouquet garni.

Pour in fish fumet made with white wine to reach half-way up the trout. Season and start cooking on top of the stove, then cover the fish kettle and cook in a slow oven for about 40 minutes, basting the fish often during cooking.

Drain the trout, set it on a dish, remove the central part of the skin so that the black parts of the flesh are seen. Sprinkle the fish with a few tablespoons of its cooking liquor, previously strained, and glaze lightly in the oven.

Surround the trout with the following garnish, the various elements of which should be grouped separately: 8 barquettes filled with carp roes and coated with Normande sauce (see SAUCE), 8 small croquettes made with salpicon of crayfish, mushrooms and truffles bound with Velouté sauce (see SAUCE) and fried, and 8 very small artichoke bottoms, half cooked in a flour-and-water court-bouillon, simmered in butter, filled with a large-diced salpicon of truffles bound with cream, sprinkled with grated Parmesan and browned under the grill.

Strain the cooking liquor. Add to this 3 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint,  $1\frac{1}{4}$  cups) velouté sauce based on fish stock. Boil down over strong heat, adding to the sauce, little by little, 3 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint,  $1\frac{1}{4}$  cups) thick fresh cream. Add butter to the sauce and strain. Pour a few tablespoons of sauce into the bottom of the dish and serve the rest in a sauceboat.

Cold salmon trout with various sauces. TRUITE SAUMONÉE FROIDE – Cook the trout in a court-bouillon as for salmon. Allow to cool in its cooking liquor. Drain and wipe. Garnish with sprigs of parsley. Serve with mayonnaise or any cold sauce suitable for cold fish (see SAUCE).

Salmon trout en douillette. TRUITE SAUMONÉE EN DOUILLETTE – Fillet a medium-sized trout, season with salt and pepper, and cook quickly in butter to seal them. Allow to cool.

Roll out some ordinary Brioche dough (see DOUGH) made without sugar and kept rather firm.

Put a thin layer of Pike forcemeat à la crème (see FORCEMEAT) in the middle of the dough. Place a fillet on this forcemeat. Cover the fillet with more forcemeat, to which some diced crayfish and truffles have been added. Put the second fillet on top of this and cover with another thin layer of forcemeat. Put a rolled-out piece of brioche dough on top of the fish. Press edges together. Make an opening in the middle to allow steam to escape. Put in a warm place to rise. Brush over the surface with melted butter and sprinkle with fine breadcrumbs. Bake in a moderate oven for about 45 minutes. Set on a dish. Pour over a few tablespoons of melted butter. Serve with Nantua sauce (see SAUCE).

Cold salmon trout

Glazed salmon trout au chambertin. TRUITE SAUMONÉE FROIDE AU CHAMBERTIN – Prepare like Glazed salmon au chambertin (see SALMON).

TROYES – See CHEESE.

TRUELLE. TROWEL – Spatula with a curved handle similar to a mason's trowel, used to serve fish and pastries.

TRUFFLE – Term for adding pieces of truffle to chicken or game.

TRUFFLE. TRUFFE – Subterranean fungus of which a number of varieties exist. The black truffle of Périgord and that of the Lot are the most highly esteemed. Truffles are also gathered in Dauphiné, Burgundy and Normandy and in various other regions of France, but all these are inferior in quality and have a less delicate aroma.

The truffle that grows at the base of 'truffle' oaks is gathered with the assistance of pigs and (more commonly nowadays) by specially trained dogs.

The white truffle of Piémont has a slight flavour of garlic which goes well with some dishes. It is most often eaten raw, cut in very thin slices.

To prepare truffles for use with poultry and game – Peel the truffles and cut them in quarters, or if they are small, leave them whole. Season with salt, pepper, thyme, and powdered bay leaf. Cook for 8 to 10 minutes in pork fat, which may be mixed with foie gras, prepared in the following way:

Pound 1 kg. (2 $\frac{1}{4}$  lb.) of fresh pork fat in a mortar with the trimmings of the truffles being used. If a more delicate mixture is desired add 250 g. (9 oz.) foie gras, both fat and foie gras cut in large dice. Season with salt, pepper and a pinch of spice. Melt gently over low heat and put through a fine strainer.

The truffles, having been cooked in this truffled fat, should be cooled before being used to 'truffle' the bird.

Tinned (canned) truffles. CONSERVE DE TRUFFES – Wash the truffles, soak them in warm water, and scrub them under fresh water. Peel them, taking care to remove all earth deposited in holes and folds.

Season the truffles with very fine salt mixed with spice and pepper, and leave them in this seasoning for 2 hours.

Glazed salmon trout au chambertin

Boil some Madeira wine, and add to it the truffle peelings and a pinch of salt. Cover and leave to cool. Strain.

Put the truffles in 1 litre (1 $\frac{3}{4}$  pints, generous quart) tins. Pour over 3 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, 1 $\frac{1}{4}$  cups) Madeira. Seal the tins. Put them in a pot and cover completely with cold water. Set a weight on top to keep them covered with the water and bring to a high boiling point, which should continue without interruption for 2 $\frac{1}{4}$  to 2 $\frac{1}{2}$  hours. Add more boiling water when necessary.

Remove from the heat and allow to cool completely.

Any tin (can) which, after boiling, is 'blown', should be considered doubtful and put under observation.

Boiling point can be raised by adding a good handful of salt to the water. For  $\frac{1}{2}$  litre (scant pint, 2 $\frac{1}{4}$  cups) tins, allow one and a half hours. For glass jars with special closures the cooking time is the same. Jars or bottles must not be taken from the water until quite cold.

They are then wrapped in straw and set on a thick layer of straw placed in the bottom of the pan.

Truffles preserved in goose fat are also excellent. Freezing in no way affects the flavour of truffles.

Truffles with Champagne. TRUFFES AU CHAMPAGNE – Put well-cleaned large truffles in a deep saucepan with, for every 450 g. (1 lb.) truffles, 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) mirepoix of vegetables cooked in butter until soft. Add 3 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, 1 $\frac{1}{4}$  cups) Champagne. Season. Cook, covered, for 15 minutes. Put the truffles into a deep dish. Sprinkle them with the pan juices boiled down almost to nothing and mixed with a few tablespoons of thick brown veal stock. Cover the dish and keep hot, without allowing the liquid to boil, for 8 to 10 minutes.

It is customary to prepare truffles cooked in Champagne or in any other wine without peeling them, but many people prefer to peel the truffles before they are cooked.

Truffles en chaussons (in turnovers). TRUFFES EN CHAUSSONS – Peel medium-sized truffles and season with spiced salt. Wrap each in a thin rasher of fat bacon and place on a circle of puff pastry. Moisten the edges of the pastry with water and fold over. Put on a baking sheet, brush with egg, make a little opening in the centre and bake in a hot oven for 18 to 20 minutes.

Truffles à la crème. TRUFFES À LA CRÈME – Stew 450 g. (1 lb.) truffles peeled and cut into thin slices gently taking care not to let them dry out.

Season with salt and pepper. Sprinkle with a little brandy.

Truffle, whole and cut open (J. Boyer)

Truffles (Fauchon. Phot. Larousse)

Cover with boiling cream and boil for a moment. Drain and put them in a deep dish. Boil down the cream and add to it 2 or 3 tablespoons (3 tablespoons or  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE). Add butter, season, strain through a cloth, then pour, boiling hot, over the truffles.

Truffles cooked in embers. TRUFFES SOUS LA CENDRE – Season large, cleaned truffles with salt, pepper and spices, and sprinkle with a little brandy. Wrap each in a very thin bard of fat bacon, then in greaseproof paper, sealing them into the paper by sticking the edges together with repère (a mixture of flour and egg white).

Put the wrapped truffles into a tourtière (metal pie dish or tin plate) on hot ashes mixed with glowing embers. Cover with cinders and embers.

Cook the truffles in the cinders for 40 to 45 minutes. Remove from the paper and serve as they are.

It is difficult nowadays to find houses, in towns at least, where there are wood fires and where, consequently, truffles could be cooked in this way. We have nevertheless included this rather archaic recipe because it might possibly be used in country places.

The title truffles sous la cendre is also given to truffles cooked in a pie.

Truffle fritters. BEIGNETS DE TRUFFES – Cut peeled truffles in thick slices. Soak them for an hour in brandy, salt, pepper, thyme and powdered bay leaf.

Dip the slices in light batter and fry in clarified butter.

Truffles for garnish. TRUFFES POUR GARNITURE – According to the type of dish to be garnished, the truffles are cut, after being peeled, into slices, dice, quarters, or oval shapes to look like olives.

Cook them gently in butter for a few minutes only, until they are just cooked and no more. Truffles, especially when cut into small pieces or slices, must not be dried out in cooking.

Moisten with a few tablespoons of wine appropriate to the dish to be garnished and keep hot without boiling.

In principle, truffles used for garnish should cook with the food they are to accompany, and should be put into the saucepan with it towards the end of the cooking time.

Instead of fresh truffles, whose season only lasts for a few months in winter, tinned truffles may be used. When using these truffles, which have usually been cooked twice already, it is not necessary to do more than heat them with the food they are to accompany.

Truffles with Madeira or other liqueur. TRUFFES AU MADÈRE – Proceed as for Truffles with Champagne, replacing the latter with Madeira or other wine.

Truffles à la maréchale. TRUFFES À LA MARÉCHALE – Remove the skins from 1 kg. ( $2\frac{1}{4}$  lb.) of scrubbed truffles. Cut them in thick round slices.

Melt in a saucepan a quarter of butter and a piece of chicken glaze the size of an egg with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) of Madeira. Boil a little but without letting it catch. Sauté the truffles in it, and afterwards let them steam for 10 to 12 minutes. Sauté them in a second time and leave them again, well covered. Above all, do not let them fry, but glaze lightly. Add 4 tablespoons ( $\frac{1}{3}$  cup) fresh butter, a drop of lemon juice and some small bread croûtons amounting to half the quantity of the truffles and cut to the same size, fried in butter. Mix them well with the truffles and serve.' (Plumeray's recipe.)

Truffles in pastry à la périgourdine. TRUFFES EN PÂTE À LA PÉRIGOURDINE – Prepare as for Truffles en chaussons, putting under the truffles small slices of foie gras seasoned with salt and pepper. Cook in the oven for 18 to 20 minutes.

Truffle purée. PURÉE DE TRUFFES – Rub 250 g. (9 oz.) raw truffles through a fine sieve and add to 3 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint,  $1\frac{1}{4}$  cup) thick Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE) which has been diluted with a few tablespoons fresh cream. Season, strain through a cloth, heat the purée and add butter.

Truffle purée is used to fill bouchées (patties), tartlets and other small preparations of the same kind, or to stuff vegetables, artichoke bottoms, mushrooms, etc.

Truffle rissoles à l'ancienne. RISSOLES DE TRUFFES À L'ANCIENNE – Cut large peeled truffles in very thick slices. Season with salt, pepper and spices and sprinkle with brandy. Leave to soak for an hour.

Fold each truffle slice in a piece of ordinary Brioche dough (see DOUGH). Fry in deep fat or oil. Drain and serve.

Truffle rissoles à la Valromey. RISSOLES DE TRUFFES À LA VALROMEY – Sandwich together, two by two, thick slices of truffle with a slice of foie gras in between. Season with salt, pepper and spices and sprinkle with a little brandy.

Set on rounds of puff pastry cut out with a fluted cutter, a little larger in diameter than the truffles. Cover with rounds of pastry. Press the edges together.

Cleaning truffles
(French Government Tourist Office)

Fry, arrange in a mould and garnish with fried parsley. Serve with Périgueux sauce (see SAUCE).

Truffle salad. SALADE DE TRUFFES – Made with raw truffles, chopped or cut in a julienne, when truffles are in season, but usually made with preserved truffles.

They are usually mixed either with sliced boiled potatoes, or chopped artichoke bottoms (impératrice salad).

Truffle salad is seasoned with oil, lemon juice, salt and pepper, and should not be flavoured with the aromatic herbs often used with other salads.

Truffle sauce. SAUCE AUX TRUFFES – Simmer a very black fresh truffle in half Madeira wine, half rich beef stock for about 10 minutes. Remove the truffle and dice it. Cover the pan tightly and reduce the liquid to a few teaspoonsful. Add 2 yolks of egg and the diced truffle. Thicken with 200 g. (7 oz., generous  $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) clarified butter as for a Béarnaise sauce (see SAUCE). Add salt and freshly ground pepper. This sauce makes an excellent accompaniment to poached fish, white meats and Lauris asparagus. (Recipe given by chef Denis of 'Chez Denis', Paris.).

Sauté of truffles Brillat-Savarin. SAUTÉ DE TRUFFES BRILLAT-SAVARIN – Peel 12 perfectly ripe, black, firm large truffles. Cut each into thick slices. Season with salt, freshly ground pepper and spice.

A few minutes before serving, sauté them in quail fat, taking care not to fry them. Drain, and set them in a low crust of puff pastry.

Dilute the cooking juices with Madeira, add a little concentrated veal stock, boil down, and pour over the truffles.

Sauté of truffles à la provençale. TRUFFES SAUTÉES À LA PROVENÇALE – Peel the truffles and cut them in thick slices. Season with salt and pepper.

Sauté for a few moments in a few tablespoons of hot olive oil with an unpeeled clove of garlic. Avoid over-cooking, which makes truffles tough.

Truffles à la serviette. TRUFFES À LA SERVIETTE – This dish is so called because it is served in a napkin folded either in the 'artichoke' or 'portfolio' style.

Cook in Madeira, set in a deep dish or in cassolettes, and present on or under a folded napkin.

Truffles à la serviette (Larousse)

Truffles à la serviette cooked in Champagne. TRUFFES À LA SERVIETTE AU VIN DE CHAMPAGNE – 'Take three pounds of truffles, the biggest you can find, round, smooth, firm and very black. Scrub them in two or three waters. When they are well drained, place them in a saucepan lined with bards of fat bacon and cover them in the same way.

'Cut in large dice a pound of ham which has been desalted and the same quantity of fillet of veal and fresh bacon fat, and heat in butter in a saucepan, adding chopped carrots and onions, sprigs of parsley and little pieces of thyme, bay leaf, basil, half a clove of garlic and two cloves. Season with very little salt, white pepper, grated nutmeg and a pinch of spice. When these ingredients begin to colour lightly, pour in two bottles of sparkling Champagne. Bring to the boil, skim and simmer gently on the stove, without boiling down; then strain, using pressure, over the truffles. Cook the truffles for an hour before serving. Allow to boil gently for three quarters of an hour, then take off the fire and keep very hot, but without boiling. At the moment of serving, drain the truffles and arrange them in a folded napkin on a silver dish, covering them in order to send them to the table very hot.' (Plumerey's recipe.)

Small truffle soufflés. PETITS SOUFFLÉS DE TRUFFES – These soufflés, served as a hot hors-d'œuvre, are made like ordinary soufflés (q.v.), using purée of truffles bound with egg yolks, to which stiffly beaten egg whites are added. Put into cassolettes and cook in the oven in the ordinary way.

Timbale of truffles. TIMBALE DE TRUFFES – Line a shallow buttered timbale mould with Ordinary lining paste (see DOUGH). Cover the bottom and sides with thin strips of bacon fat. Fill to within 10 mm. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  inch) of the top with peeled raw truffles seasoned with salt, pepper and spices and sprinkled with brandy.

Moisten with a glass of Madeira and 3 tablespoons (4 tablespoons) very concentrated brown veal stock. Cover the truffles with a bard of bacon fat and the timbale with pastry.

Brush with egg. Cook in a hot oven 50 to 55 minutes. Turn out the timbale and serve.

Truffle tourte à la périgourdine. TOURTE DE TRUFFES À LA PÉRIGOURDINE – Spread a layer of foie gras cut in large dice on a round of Lining paste (see DOUGH) set on a baking tray, covering the pastry to within 10 mm. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  inch) of the edge. Season with salt, pepper and spices, and sprinkle with brandy.

Top with scrubbed and peeled truffles. Season with salt, pepper and spices, and sprinkle with brandy. Place small slices of seasoned foie gras on the truffles.

Cover with a round of pastry and seal the edges. Decorate the top with cut-out shapes of pastry. Make a small opening in the middle to allow steam to escape. Brush with egg. Cook in a hot oven 40 to 45 minutes. Pour in a few tablespoons Demi-glace sauce (see SAUCE) boiled down with Madeira and Truffle essence (see ESSENCE).

Tourte aux truffes is served hot or cold.

WHITE TRUFFLES. TRUFFES BLANCHES – White truffles come from the North of Italy, principally from Piedmont, and are called Piedmont truffles. They are also found in North Africa and in some regions of France, but these are unlike those which come from Italy, either in aroma or texture.

The white truffle, which has a slight taste of garlic, is eaten raw, cut in thin slices. When it is used as a garnish for hot dishes it is added at the very end of the cooking, and is not cooked itself other than by the heat of the food it accompanies. It is used in this way with risotto aux truffes blanches, when cooking is completely finished.

White truffles cut in dice or thin slices are used to garnish egg dishes, notably omelettes and scrambled eggs, being added after the scrambled eggs are cooked; they are put, raw, into the beaten egg before making the omelettes.

The white truffle is most often used in salad, seasoned with olive oil, lemon juice, salt and pepper.

White truffle risotto. TRUFFES BLANCHES AU RISOTTO – Cover a Parmesan risotto, set in a deep dish with white truffles, peeled, cut into thin slivers and seasoned. Keep hot for 5 minutes on a corner of the stove, covered.

TRUFFLE

Sauté of Piedmont truffles. SAUTÉ DE TRUFFES DU PIÉMONT – 'Take a dozen Piedmont truffles, well scrubbed; remove the skin carefully and cut them into very thin rounds. Dissolve chicken glaze the size of an egg in 4 tablespoons ( $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) hot oil on low heat. Put in the truffles and season with a white pepper, salt and grated nutmeg. Cover, and cook over good heat for 10 minutes, tossing them often (they need no more cooking). Add a few pieces of fresh butter, the juice of half a lemon, and serve.

'In Paris the oil is replaced by butter, but oil is the true stamp of the Italian manner.

'Some noblemen like to cook Piedmont truffles themselves. This is how they are prepared: Chop the truffles with a cucumber slicer. Put in a silver casserole a few spoonfuls olive oil or butter, according to taste, and some good glaze the size of an egg cut into small pieces. Place the truffles on top with some salt, white pepper and grated nutmeg. Sprinkle a few drops of oil over the truffles, or set a few pieces of fine butter on top.

'The casserole, its lid in place, is set on top of a spirit heater, set alight, set in front of the host, who with the aid of a spoon turns the truffles frequently, replacing the lid of the casserole each time.

'Seven to eight minutes are enough for the cooking. The seigneur adds the juice of a lemon and serves his guests.' (Plumerey's recipe).

TRUFFLE (To). TRUFFER – To garnish or stuff with truffles. Used also to describe the action of studding a foodstuff with small pieces of truffle.

TRUE DE MER – A French name generally given to a fish called rascasse.

TRUMPET FISH. BÉCASSE DE MER – This fish is also called voilier porte-glaive (sword-bearer sailfish) because of its lance-like jaw.

The trumpet fish attains 2 to 3 metres (6 to 9 feet) in length. Its flesh is mediocre. Prepare as for tunny fish (see TUNNY).

TRUSS. BRIDER – To thread a string to secure the legs and wings of poultry and game, with the aid of a strong needle called a trussing needle.

The trussing of poultry and game is done in different ways, depending on the nature of the finished dish. For roasting, the legs are left outside; for braising, poaching or pot-roasting the end bones are worked under the skin.

Trumpet fish

Before being trussed, poultry and game should be dressed – that is, plucked, cleaned and singed.

TUFTED LARK. HUPPE – A kind of lark whose flesh sometimes has a musky flavour. It is cooked in the same way as lark.

TUILES (PETITS FOURS) – Cream together in a bowl 250 g. (8 oz., 1 cup) butter and 250 g. (8 oz., 1 cup) fine sugar. Add 5 eggs, one by one, 250 g. (8 oz., 2 cups) sifted flour. Pipe the mixture on to a baking tin in rounds with the aid of a forcing bag. Bake in the oven.

When ready, bend each one over a rolling pin to give the shape of curved tiles (tuiles).

Tuiles with almonds. TUILES AUX AMANDES – Mix together in a bowl 250 g. (8 oz., 1 cup) ground almonds, 250 g. (8 oz., 1 cup) sugar and 4 egg whites. Flavour with vanilla essence or any other flavouring. Pipe on to a baking tin and bake in the oven. Finish off as above.

TULIP. TULIPE – There are a great many different kinds of tulip but only one, the 'wild tulip', a plant growing in the South of France, is edible. The root is eaten, and may be prepared like Jerusalem artichoke or sweet potato.

TUN. FÛT – Cask large enough to hold several hogs heads.

TUNNY (TUNA FISH). THON – A large, strong, spindle-shaped fish found in warm and temperate seas.

It lives in the warm parts of the Atlantic and the Mediterranean, and is scarcely ever found beyond the Bay of Biscay. Many species of tunny, all related to the mackerel family, are found off both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts of the United States. The white tunny or germon is found as high

Removing tuiles from the baking tray (Desmeuzes)

Bending the tuiles over a rolling pin
(Larousse)

as the coast of Brittany. This is similar to the albacore of the Pacific. The thonine, which is called the thouna at Nice and the thounina at Sète, is found only in the Mediterranean. It never grows to more than 1 metre (3 feet) in length and is fished in the region of Nice from May to October. Its flesh is firm, oily and savoury and has some resemblance to veal. Tunny is eaten fresh, salted, smoked or canned in oil.

Tunny (tuna) à la provençale. THON À LA PROVENÇALE – Stud a round cut of tunny with anchovy filets. Marinate it in oil, lemon juice, salt and pepper for an hour. Colour the fish on both sides in hot oil in a sauté pan. Add a chopped onion lightly cooked in butter (or oil), 2 peeled, seeded and crushed large tomatoes, a small clove of garlic, also crushed, and a bouquet garni. Pour over 1½ dl. (¼ pint, ¾ cup) white wine. Finish cooking in the oven, basting often.

Drain the fish and set on a dish. Cover with the concentrated cooking liquor to which a little Espagnole sauce (see SAUCE) and some capers have been added. Instead of thickening the sauce with espagnole, a spoonful of Kneaded butter may be used (see BUTTER, Compound butters).

TURBAN – Word much used in French cookery to describe the way some foods are arranged on a dish in a circle.

The same word is used to describe certain preparations, mostly forcemeat, which are cooked in border moulds. Turbans of fish, various kinds of poultry, game, etc., can be made in this way.

Turbot, white side

TURBOT – Large European flat fish, one of the most delicate of its kind.

The turbot has a lozenge-shaped body, and has such minute scales they need not be removed. Its eyes are on the left side of its body, which is yellowish-grey or brown, dotted with black and white marks. The other side is white. On the grey or brown side the conical tubercles which gives the turbot its name of turbot piquant are to be found. Turbot double is a species which has coloured skin on both sides. Its flesh is mediocre.

The normal size of the turbot is from 41 cm. to 1 m. (16 to 32 inches). Its flesh is white, firm, flaky and savoury.

The brill, sometimes called turbot lisse in French, belongs to the same family.

Small-sized turbot, known as chicken turbot in English, are turbotins in French. They are cooked in the same way as ordinary turbot.

Turbot à l'américaine – Prepare as for Brill à l'américaine (see BRILL).

Turbot à l'amiral – Prepare as for Brill à l'amiral (see BRILL).

Turbot à la Bercy – Prepare as for Brill à la Bercy (see BRILL).

Boiled turbot with various sauces. TURBOT BOUILLI – Large turbot, whole, or cut into chunks or darnes (like salmon) are cooked in a court-bouillon of salted milk and water, with slices of lemon. Allow to each litre (1¼ pints, generous quart) of water: 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) milk, 15 g. (2½ teaspoons) salt and one slice of peeled lemon.

To prevent damage during cooking, the head of the turbot can be tied. It is put into the turbotière (a fish kettle specially shaped to cook turbot), using the grid so that it can more easily be removed when cooked. Pour over enough cold court-bouillon to cover the fish. As soon as the liquid begins to boil, remove the turbotière to a corner of the stove and leave to poach, allowing 12 minutes per kg. (6 minutes to every lb).

Drain and wipe the fish, set on a large dish, and garnish with fresh parsley in bunches. Serve with boiled potatoes and one or other of the sauces suitable for boiled fish.

Turbot à la bonne femme – Prepare as for Brill à la bonne femme (see BRILL).

Braised turbot with various garnishes and sauces. TURBOT BRAISÉ – Turbot left whole, cut in pieces or filleted, is braised in white or red wine, in any of the ways given for Braised brill (see BRILL).

Turbot à la cancalaise – Turbot left whole, cut in pieces or filleted, cooked in white wine. Drain the fish, set it on a serving dish, garnish with poached, drained and de-bearded oysters and shelled crayfish. Coat with Normande sauce (see SAUCE) to which the strained oyster liquor has been added.

Cold turbot. TURBOT FROID – Whole turbot or turbot cut in chunks or darnes may be served cold.

It is accompanied by one of the cold sauces suitable for cold fish, such as Mayonnaise, Tartare, Rémoulade, Verte, Gribiche, etc. (see SAUCE).

Served garnished with fresh parsley, or surrounded with one of the garnishes recommended for cold fish (see GARNISHES).

Creamed turbot au gratin. TURBOT À LA CRÈME AU GRATIN – Prepare with sliced left-over turbot like Creamed cod au gratin (see COD).

Turbot Dugléré

Turbot Dugléré – Prepare as for Bass Dugléré (see BASS).

Filets of turbot. FILETS DE TURBOT – Turbot is filleted raw, and medium-sized fish should be chosen.

All methods of preparation given for filets of brill or sole are applicable to fillet of turbot.

TURBOTIÈRE

Fried turbot. TURBOT FRIT – Only very small turbots, fillets or darnes are fried (see BRILL, Fried brill).

However, Brillat-Savarin, who in his Twelfth Meditation devoted a long study to frying, assures his readers that it is possible to fry very large turbots.

Turbot fried in batter. FRITOT DE TURBOT – Cut filleted turbot into 'matchsticks'. Soak these for 30 minutes in oil, lemon juice, chopped parsley, salt and pepper.

Before serving, dip them one by one, into light batter and fry them in hot deep fat or oil. Drain, wipe, and season with fine dry salt. Serve heaped on a dish and garnish with fried parsley and lemon. Serve with Tomato sauce (see SAUCE).

Turbot au gratin – Prepared whole if they are small fish, or cut in pieces if large. Prepare as for Sole au gratin.

Grilled turbot. TURBOT GRILLÉ – Chicken turbot or turbots are prepared in this way. Large turbots can also be grilled, cut into thickish darnes or filleted.

Grilled turbot is accompanied either by Maître d'hôtel butter, or by one of the sauces usually served with grilled fish (see BUTTER, Compound butters; SAUCE).

Cook the turbot in the same way as Grilled brill (see BRILL).

Turbot kedgeree. CADGERY DE TURBOT – Cut 450 g. (1 lb.) cooked turbot in small slices. Heat in butter. Set in a deep dish in layers, alternating with 450 g. (1 lb.) Rice pilaf (see PILAF) prepared in the usual way but not too much cooked, and bound with 5 dl. (scant pint, 2¼ cups) thin Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE) seasoned with curry. Sprinkle diced hard boiled eggs over each layer of turbot. Coat the last layer of rice with the same sauce.

Turbot or chicken turbot en matelote – Cut the turbot into regular pieces. Prepare as Sole en matelote à la normande (see SOLE).

Set on a dish and garnish with crayfish, fried smelts and croûtons.

Turbot à la pèlerine – Season the turbot with salt and pepper. Put it on a baking tin lined, for a fish of 2 kg. (4 lb.) with 150 g. (5 oz., generous cup) chopped onion cooked until tender in butter without colouring.

Sprinkle with melted butter. Cook gently in the oven. Place in an ovenproof dish. Dilute the pan juices with white wine, add thick fresh cream, boil down, add butter, strain and pour over the fish. Glaze well in the oven. Garnish with fried scallops set in a mound at each end of the dish.

Turbot à la Saint Malo – This method is suitable for small fish.

Make shallow cuts on both sides, season with salt and pepper, brush with oil and grill gently. Put on a serving dish. Surround with boiled potatoes cut into thick slices and fried in butter. Garnish with fresh parsley. Serve with Saint-Malo sauce (see SAUCE).

Scalloped turbot. COQUILLES DE TURBOT – Prepared with left-over turbot like Brill in scallop shells (see BRILL).

Turbot à la venitienne – Prepare as for Fillets of sole à la venitienne (see SOLE).

Turbot Victoria – Prepare as for Brill à la Victoria (see BRILL).

Turbot in white wine. TURBOT AU VIN BLANC – Prepare with the turbot left whole, in chunks or in fillets, like Brill in white wine (see BRILL).

Turbotière (Dehillerin.
Phot. Larousse)

TURBOTIÈRE – Square-shaped fish kettle, provided with a removable grid called turbotière, chiefly used for cooking turbot and other flat fish.

TUREEN. SOUPIÈRE – Broad, deep dish in which soup is served.

Soup tureens:
Above, left to right: 18th century silver tureens and Empire style
tureen

Side, left to right: porcelain tureen of Tientsin (Rouard) and Rouen faience tureen (Rouard)

It was not until the eighteenth century that the tureen made its appearance on the French table. Before that soup had been poured out of the kitchen marmite directly into covered bowls which were carried, filled, to the guests. In the reign of Louis XV, the goldsmith Thomas Germain (see SILVERWARE) made magnificent tureens. The most beautiful were made at Sèvres, Strasbourg, Moustiers, Rouen, etc. In the nineteenth and twentieth century the tureen continued to make part of the dinner service, and to follow the evolution of fashion and style.

Plucked turkey (Pietrement.
Phot. Larousse)

TURKEY. DINDE, DINDON, DINDONNEAU – There are two main varieties of turkey: the wild turkey, native of North America, and the farmyard turkey, bred in poultry runs. The origin of this bird is uncertain. Some authorities believe that it comes from Bermuda, others that its original habitat was North America.

It seems likely that the first home of the turkey was that immense tract of land which stretches from the extreme northwestern boundary of the United States to the isthmus of Panama.

In Canada and other parts of North America, wild turkeys were once very plentiful, but they are now mainly found towards the centre of the continent, which to this day is more sparsely settled.

Brülat-Savarin, who devoted a long paragraph of his Sixth Meditation to turkeys and turkey-lovers, says 'The turkey is one of the finest gifts made by the New World to the Old.' and adds: 'The name of the bird is in France dinde or d'Inde, meaning from India since in the past America was known as the West Indies.

'The turkey appeared in Europe towards the end of the seventeenth century. It was imported by the Jesuits, who reared these birds in large numbers, especially on a farm which they owned in the region of Bourges. From there they spread all over France, which is why in popular speech in many parts of the country people refer to a turkey as a "Jesuit". America is the only place in which wild turkeys have been found in a natural state, and on the farms of North America, where turkeys are very common, they are bred either from wild eggs hatched by a tame hen or from young poults caught in the woods and tamed, with the result that the flocks are closer to nature and retain more of their natural plumage.'

In French the word dindon (turkey-cock) is scarcely ever used in the language of cookery. On menus the bird is called dindonneau (young turkey) or sometimes, with reference to a hen bird, dinde (turkey hen), which implies a young, tender hen-bird of about 2½ to 4 kg. (5 to 8 lb).

All recipes for chicken are suitable for hen turkeys and young turkey-cocks.

Turkey à l'anglaise. DINDONNEAU À L'ANGLAISE – Truss the turkey with the legs pressed tightly against the breast. Poach in a poultry stock (see CHICKEN, Boiled chicken à l'anglaise).

Ballottine of turkey à la toulousaine. BALLOTTINE DE DINDONNEAU À LA TOULOUSAINE – Bone a young turkey: stuff it with Quenelle forcemeat II (see FORCEMEAT) mixed with a salpicon of lambs' sweetbreads, mushrooms and truffles. Roll the bird into a long tight bundle (ballottine). Wrap in a fine cloth and poach in a very little concentrated poultry stock.

Drain the ballottine. Put it on a serving dish, either directly on the dish or on a slice of fried bread. Surround with Toulouse garnish (see GARNISHES). Coat with Suprême sauce (see SAUCE) with the concentrated cooking stock added to it.

Ballottine of turkey can be served brown instead of white by cooking it in braising stock as indicated for braised chicken (see CHICKEN). Serve with various garnishes such as chipolata, financière, godard, turtle, etc., or with braised vegetables or pasta prepared à l'italienne, à la milanaise or à la napolitaine, or with risotto.

Ballottine of turkey to be served cold is prepared in the same way. It is poached, like galantine of chicken, in a jelly stock. After cooling under a weight, it is served, coated with its own jelly (clarified), or served in a bowl completely covered in jelly.

Braised turkey (with various garnishes). DINDONNEAU BRAISÉ AVEC GARNITURES DIVERSES – Cook a trussed turkey in braising stock. When it is ready, drain and untruss it. Put it on a serving dish surrounded with the garnish. Skim all fat off the braising stock. Boil down, strain and pour over the turkey.

Braised turkey-hens or cocks can be garnished with different vegetables, some of which should be cooked with the bird, others separately. Among the garnishes are: alsacienne, braised sauerkraut, smoked belly of pork, Strasbourg sausages, bourguignonne (the bird being braised in red wine with mushrooms and glazed onions), belly of pork lardoons, braised celery, mushrooms, chipolatas, fermière, financière, languedocienne, napolitaine, milanaise, piémontaise, strasbourgeoise (see GARNISHES).

Braised stuffed turkey. DINDONNEAU FARCI BRAISÉ – Stuff the turkey with fine stuffing or some other mixture, and proceed as for Stuffed chicken (see CHICKEN).

All garnishes indicated for chicken may be used.

Casserole or cocotte of turkey. DINDONNEAU EN CASSEROLE, EN COCOTTE – Prepare as for Chicken casserole (see CHICKEN).

Turkeys cooked en casserole or en cocotte can be served with various garnishes such as artichokes, mushrooms, aubergines, small marrows (zucchini, courgettes), small onions, potatoes, truffles, etc.

Turkey à la chipolata. DINDONNEAU À LA CHIPOLATA – Truss a turkey with the legs tightly pressed against the breast. Bard it. Pot-roast in butter.

Serve it on a serving dish raised on a large piece of bread, fried in butter.

Surround with a garnish of chipolatas arranged in little clumps with spaces between (see GARNISHES). Pour on the cooking stock diluted with Madeira and thickened brown veal stock, or chicken stock boiled down and strained.

TURKEY

Cold turkey. DINDONNEAU FROID – All recipes for cold chicken are suitable for turkey.

Daube of turkey à la bourgeoise. DINDONNEAU EN DAUBE À LA BOURGEOISE – For this dish a tender turkey hen  $2\frac{1}{4}$  to  $3\frac{1}{2}$  kg. (5 to 7 lb.) must be used and not a young turkey cock. Braise the bird in a brown stock as indicated for braised chicken (see CHICKEN). When it is three parts cooked, drain. Strain the braising stock. Put the bird back in the braising pan. Surround with a bourgeoise garnish made of carrots cut into pear shapes, three parts cooked as for glazed carrots, small glazed onions and pieces of blanched and fried belly of pork. Pour the strained braising stock over. Cover the pan and finish cooking in a moderate oven.

Fricassée of turkey. FRICASSÉE DE DINDONNEAU – Using a young and tender turkey, prepare as for Fricassée of chicken (see CHICKEN).

Galantine of hen-turkey en bellevue. DINDE EN GALANTINE EN BELLEVEUE – Prepare with a young hen-turkey  $2\frac{1}{4}$  to  $3\frac{1}{2}$  kg. (5 to 7 lb.) as indicated for Galantine of chicken (see CHICKEN). Cook the turkey in a jelly stock containing calves' feet, knuckle of veal, poultry carcasses, fresh pork skin.

Drain the galantine. Unwrap it and cool under a weight. Mask the galantine with White chaud-froid sauce flavoured with Madeira and made with some of the poultry stock, the remainder of this being used to make a poultry jelly (see JELLY, SAUCE).

Garnish the galantine with truffles, pickled tongue and the white of hard boiled egg. Add the jelly, cut into pieces.

This galantine can also be served on a dish or a plinth.

Turkey giblets. ABATIS DE DINDONNEAU – Prepare as for giblets of chicken and other poultry (see GIBLETS).

Grilled turkey. DINDONNEAU GRILLÉ – Only very small turkeys are prepared in this way. Prepare as for Grilled chicken (see CHICKEN).

Braised turkey legs with various garnishes. CUISSES DE DINDONNEAU BRAISÉES – The legs of large turkeys, whose wings or breasts have been used in some other way, are prepared thus:

Bone the legs. Fill with a suitable forcemeat (see FORCEMEAT). Roll them into little long, tight bundles (ballottines). Braise in white or brown stock. Glaze in the oven. Arrange on a serving dish and garnish according to the recipe selected. Mask with the cooking sauce.

Legs of turkey prepared in this way are often called turkey hams.

Turkey liver. FOIE DE DINDONNEAU – All recipes for chicken liver are suitable for turkey liver. They can be served with pilaf or risotto, or sautéed with various garnishes, etc. (see GARNISHES). Turkey livers can be used as an ingredient of various stuffings.

They are also served sliced and sautéed and as a garnish for eggs cooked in different ways, especially omelettes and scrambled eggs.

Hot turkey pâté. PÂTE CHAUD DE DINDONNEAU – Using boned turkey, prepare as for Hot chicken pâté (see PÂTÉ).

Turkey pâté can also be served cold, when a few table-spoons of concentrated poultry jelly are poured into the pâté through a hole made to allow steam to escape during cooking.

Turkey pinions. AILERONS DE DINDONNEAU – These are usually stuffed and braised, and served with various garnishes (see PINIONS).

Poupeton of turkey Brillat-Savarin. POUPETON DE DINDONNEAU BRILLAT-SAVARIN – Bone a small turkey as for a galantine. Stuff with a mixture of fine veal stuffing and à gratin stuffing (see FORCEMEAT) enriched with lambs' sweetbreads braised in white stock, diced foie gras and coarsely diced truffles.

Roll the turkey into a long tight bundle. Wrap it in pigs' caul, then in muslin or cheesecloth. Tie it securely.

Put this poupeton in a buttered daube pan lined with raw ham, onion rings and carrots. Cover and cook gently for 15 minutes. Pour over it a glass of Madeira. Boil down. Moisten with poultry stock and finish cooking in the oven, covered. Strain, boil down the cooking stock, and serve as sauce with the turkey.

Turkey poupeton can also be served cold. After cooking, it is left to cool under a weight and served masked with poultry jelly.

Ragoût of turkey. RAGOÛT DE DINDONNEAU – Using turkey cut into pieces, prepare as for Goose ragoût (see GOOSE). Various garnishes can be served with turkey ragoût. Among the most suitable are the following: Bourgeoise, new carrots, celeriac, mushrooms, chipolata, artichoke hearts, chestnuts, potatoes (see GARNISHES).

Roast turkey. DINDONNEAU RÔTI – Truss a small turkey and bard the breast with pork fat. Roast on the spit, allowing 20 minutes per 500 g. (1 lb.), or in the oven for 25 minutes per 500 g. (1 lb.).

Before the turkey is fully cooked, remove the barding and brown the breast evenly. Serve with the diluted cooking stock and with watercress.

Roast turkey à l'anglaise (John Cowderoy)

Roast turkey à l'anglaise. DINDONNEAU RÔTI À L'ANGLAISE – Stuff the turkey with a sage and onion stuffing prepared as follows: Bake the onions in their skins in the oven. Peel and chop them. Toss in butter. Season with a pinch of chopped sage. Mix with an equal quantity of breadcrumbs, dipped in milk and squeezed, and half their quantity of chopped veal fat.

Roast the turkey in the usual way (see ROASTING). Put it on a serving dish surrounded with slices of bacon or grilled sausages. Serve with the cooking gravy and Bread sauce (see SAUCE).

Turkey with chestnut stuffing. DINDONNEAU FARCI AUX MARRONS – Stuff a medium-sized turkey  $2\frac{1}{4}$  kg. (5 lb.) with best sausage meat, allowing 575 to 750 g. ( $1\frac{1}{4}$  to  $1\frac{1}{2}$  lb.), according to the size of the bird, mixed with chestnuts and two-thirds cooked in clear chicken or veal stock flavoured with celery.

Remove the breast bone. Truss the turkey and bard it. Roast on the spit or in the oven, basting frequently during cooking. Serve with its own gravy.

Stuffed hen-turkey grand-duc. DINDE ÉTOUFFÉE GRAND-DUC – Slit open a hen-turkey (about  $2\frac{1}{2}$  kg., 6 lb.), along the back and stuff with the following mixture:

\*500 g. (1 lb.) chicken rubbed through a fine sieve,  $\frac{1}{2}$  litre

(scant pint,  $2\frac{1}{4}$  cups) double cream, 250 g. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  lb.) foie gras, poached in port wine and rubbed through a sieve. Mix all these ingredients thoroughly and season.

'Add 12 truffles, peeled and cooked for 10 minutes in a little liqueur brandy, and 24 chicken hearts which have been soaked in water, the veins removed, steeped in white Malaga wine, drained, dried in a cloth, stuffed with a purée of York ham, and poached for 15 minutes in Truffle essence (see ESSENCE).

'Fold the stuffed turkey carefully into shape. Wrap in slices of raw ham or bacon. Encase it in a large layer of Lining paste (see DOUGH), taking care to keep the shape of the bird as far as possible. Bake in the oven for  $2\frac{1}{2}$  hours.

'During cooking, which must be slow, cover the turkey with greaseproof paper folded in 4, so that it will cook all through without browning too soon.

'To serve, present the turkey as it comes out of the oven, and serve with it a sauce-boat of Demi-glace sauce (see SAUCE) flavoured with truffle essence.' (Recipe of M. Valmy-Joyeuse, who created this dish in 1906 while he was in charge of the kitchens of the Marquise of Mazenda.)

Truffled turkey. DINDONNEAU TRUFFÉ – Discriminating gourmets believe that to achieve the best results a truffled bird should be stuffed with truffles 4 or 5 days before cooking. After the truffles have fulfilled their function of flavouring the bird, they are removed and discarded, and the bird is stuffed afresh with more truffles mixed with pork fat or raw foie gras, and then cooked.

The following method of preparing truffled turkey or any other poultry or winged game is more practical:

Prepare a Forcemeat for truffled poultry (see FORCEMEAT).

Draw the turkey, leaving the skin of the neck very long so as to be able to close the opening in the bird securely when trussing. (This can be done by your poultry dealer.)

Under the skin of the turkey, insert a dozen large slices of truffle, seasoned and sprinkled with a few drops of brandy. Stuff and truss the turkey and wrap it in a sheet of buttered greaseproof paper. Leave to stand in a cool place for 24 hours.

Bard the turkey. Wrap it in buttered paper. Roast on the spit in front of a hot fire, allowing 30 minutes per 500 g. (1 lb.) or roast in the oven uncovered, allowing 25 to 30 minutes per 500 g. (1 lb.).

Unwrap and untruss the turkey. Brown it. Put it on a serving dish and serve with its own diluted gravy, enriched, if desired, with Périgueux sauce (see SAUCE).

The truffled pork fat stuffing can be made without foie gras, but this ingredient greatly improves the flavour.

TURKEY – See INTERNATIONAL COOKERY.

TURNIP. NAVET – Pot vegetable of European origin with a fleshy and sweetish root. It was cultivated in India before the Aryan invasion.

Young, tender turnips are usually easy to digest but large turnips are somewhat indigestible. Turnips have the property of absorbing large quantities of fat (like haricot beans), and for this reason they are traditionally served with fatty meat (mutton, duck, etc.).

Turnips, which are sold in French markets all the year round, are mainly used, like carrots, parsnips, leeks and onions, as pot vegetables. In France, the best turnips for this purpose come from Meaux.

Spring turnips are used in navarins, and especially as a garnish for duckling. Turnips are also used in the preparation of thick and cream soups. They are less commonly eaten as a vegetable on their own.

Turnips can be put in two main classes, the long-rooted and the flat-rooted. The latter is superior for flavour and sweetness.

Boiled turnips. NAVETS À LA CRÈME – Prepare as for Glazed carrots (see CARROT).

Turnips to be further cooked in the sauce of the main dish are prepared in this way: Trim the turnips to look like olives (or if they are small, leave them whole). Sauté in butter. Season with salt and sprinkle with castor sugar. Sauté for a few seconds over a very high flame to brown them slightly. Finish cooking with the main dish.

Turnips au gratin or Mornay. NAVETS AU GRATIN DITS MORNAY – Cut the turnips into thick slices and parboil. Cool under running water. Drain. Cook slowly in butter. Put them in an ovenware dish lined with Mornay sauce (see SAUCE) and cover with more sauce. Sprinkle with grated cheese, pour on melted butter and brown slowly.

Turnip mould. PAIN DE NAVETS – Prepare, using purée of turnips, as for Carrot timbale (see CARROT).

Turnips with chopped parsley. NAVETS AUX FINES HERBES – Trim the turnips to look like olives or cut into slices. Parboil them in salt water until they are fairly tender. Cool under running water and drain. Sauté in butter. Season with salt and a large pinch of castor sugar. Cook slowly, tossing frequently. To serve, sprinkle with chopped parsley.

Turnip purée. PURÉE DE NAVETS – Prepare, using turnips, as indicated in the recipe for Cardoon purée (see CARDOON).

Purée of turnip soup – See SOUPS AND BROTHS.

Turnip soufflé. SOUFFLÉ AUX NAVETS – Proceed, using purée of turnips, as indicated for Carrot soufflé (see CARROT).

Stuffed turnips. NAVETS FARCIS – Peel round turnips of equal size. Cut round the base of the stalks and scoop out. Parboil the scooped-out turnips until they are fairly tender. Make a purée of the scooped-out pulp. Add to it half its weight of mashed potatoes. Mix well, season and add butter. Stuff the turnips with this mixture, smoothing it into the shape of a dome. Put the turnips in a buttered baking dish, pour on melted butter, and finish cooking in the oven, basting frequently.

Stuffed turnips (garnish). NAVETS FARCIS – Peel large turnips. Press a corer into each one, starting at the base of the stalks, but do not drive it through to the other side.

Parboil the turnips until they are fairly tender. Cool them under running water, drain, and remove the cores. Rub the cores through a sieve. Add an equal quantity of dry duxelles. Fill the turnips with this stuffing and smooth the surface into a dome. Put the turnips in a buttered baking dish, pour on melted butter, and bake in the oven, basting frequently.

As soon as the turnips are cooked, sprinkle with breadcrumbs and brown quickly.

Stuffed turnips à la duxelles. NAVETS FARCIS À LA DUXELLES – Prepare as for Stuffed turnips, filling the scooped-out turnips with a duxelles mixture to which the pulp of the turnips has been added after having been stewed and rubbed through a sieve.

Put the turnips in a buttered baking dish. Moisten with a few tablespoons of clear soup or clear veal stock. Sprinkle with breadcrumbs, pour on melted butter, and bake in a slow oven.

Stuffed turnips à la piémontaise. NAVETS FARCIS À LA PIÉMONTAISE – Prepare as for Stuffed turnips, filling the turnips with Risotto (see RICE) mixed with the finely diced pulp stewed in butter. Sprinkle with grated Parmesan. Pour on melted butter and brown in a slow oven.

Turnips in sugar. NAVETS AU SUCRE – Peel and quarter the turnips. Trim to look like olives. Parboil them if they are old. Sauté in butter, seasoning with salt and a little sugar. When they are browned, put them in a stew-pan. Moisten with veal stock, cover, and stew until all the moisture has evaporated.

To make an apple turnover:
Fill half the round of pastry with the apple preparation. Fold over the pastry and join the edges
(Larousse)

Serve in a vegetable dish, or use as a garnish.

Turnip tops. FEUILLES DE NAVET – Turnip tops are prepared like spinach or cabbage.

TURNOVER. CHAUSSON – This name applies particularly to a preparation made with a circle of flaky pastry filled with a mixture, folded over and baked in the oven.

Although included primarily in the domain of sweet pastries, the name is extended to cover small preparations served as an hors-d'œuvre or as a small entrée. These are made with a forcemeat filling or with a salpicon of various fishes; there are foie gras and truffle turnovers, turnovers filled with purée, or with a salpicon of various meats, of fowl, game, etc.

Apple turnover. CHAUSSON AUX POMMES – Fill the centre of a circle of Flaky pastry (see DOUGH) with a few tablespoons of apples prepared as for a charlotte, sliced, cooked in a sauté pan with butter and sugar, and flavoured with vanilla, cinnamon, or other flavouring (see CHARLOTTE, Apple charlotte). Add when cold, and fold over the pastry into a turnover. Join the edges. Set on a buttered baking tin. Mark the top with a few incisions, brush with egg and bake for about 15 minutes at 230°C. (450°F.).

Turnovers filled with various fruits can be made in the same way: apricots, pineapples, cherries, peaches, pears, plums, etc. These can be put on the pastry uncooked or cooked in syrup. When using raw fruits it is best to soak them first in sugar and liqueur.

Sweet turnovers can also be made with a preparation of fruit soaked in sugar and liqueurs and combined either with French pastry cream (see CREAMS), thick fresh cream, or apricot jam.

Sweet turnovers of this kind are served warm or cold.

Turnovers à la Cussy. CHAUSSONS À LA CUSSY – These turnovers and the following are served as hors-d'œuvre or as a small entrée.

Fill circles of Flaky pastry (see DOUGH) with a forcemeat of creamed whiting or other white fish to which anchovy fillets, cut into small strips, and chopped truffles are added. Fold the pastry over into turnovers. Set them on a buttered baking-tin, brush with beaten egg and bake in a 230°C. (450°F.) oven until golden brown.

Turnovers à la lyonnaise. CHAUSSONS À LA LYONNAISE – Fill circles of Flaky pastry (see DOUGH) with a good spoonful of creamed pike or other white fish finished with Crayfish butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters) mixed with a preparation of crayfish tails and truffles, flavoured with a little Cognac.

Fold over the pastry in a turnover, seal the edges, put them on a buttered baking sheet, brush with egg, and bake in a hot oven (230°C., 450°F.) until golden.

Turnovers à la Nantua. CHAUSSONS À LA NANTUA – Prepare in the same way as Turnovers à la lyonnaise, with a Crayfish tail ragoût à la Nantua (see CRAYFISH) in place of the pike mixture.

Turnovers à la périgourdine. CHAUSSONS À LA PÉRIGOURDINE – Fill circles of Flaky pastry (see DOUGH) with a preparation of foie gras and truffles seasoned with salt and pepper and sprinkled with Cognac. Fold over into turnovers. Put them on a buttered baking sheet, and bake in a hot oven (230°C., 450°F.). Serve very hot.

Turnovers à la reine. CHAUSSONS À LA REINE – Prepare in the same way as Turnovers à la périgourdine, but replace the preparation of foie gras and truffles with a purée of creamed chicken mixed with chopped truffles and mushrooms.

The rissoles for which recipes will be found under HORS-D'ŒUVRE, Hot hors-d'œuvre are, in fact, turnovers when they are prepared with circles of pastry and folded over, but this type of turnover is deep-fried instead of being baked in the oven.

TURNSPIT. TOURNEBROCHE – Old-fashioned turnspits were of various kinds. Some worked mechanically by clockwork, others by a dog shut in a cage who turned the spit. Others were turned by a galopin, a young apprentice hasteur, who often burned his face in front of the immense brazier.

Later, spits operated by heat rising from the fire, turned a winged wheel. They still exist in great numbers today. Power-driven spits, on which a whole side of beef or several chickens at a time can be roasted, are found in some establishments. But nowadays meat and poultry are generally roasted by spit-appliances operated by electricity or gas.

TURNSTONE. TOURNE-PIERRE OU VIRE-PIERRE – Small edible bird of the wader family which is prepared like snipe (q.v.).

TURRON (Confectionery). TOURON – Turron, which originated in Spain, is a kind of almond paste, flavoured often with pistachio nuts, hazel nuts or candied fruits.

Baked apple turnover (Larousse)

In France the name touron is used for a petit four made in the following way:

Ingredients: 225 g. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  lb., 2 cups) blanched almonds, 400 g. (14 oz., scant 2 cups) sugar, 4 egg whites, 100 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) pounded pistachio nuts, 100 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) Royal icing (see ICING), icing or confectioner's sugar, orange peel.

Pound the almonds with 2 egg whites. Add half the powdered sugar and knead together on marble. Sprinkle with sugar and roll out 1 cm. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  inch) thick.

Chop finely blanched pistachios with the rest of the sugar, mixed with orange peel. Put in a bowl with Royal icing and the rest of the egg whites and mix well with a wooden spoon. Spread in a uniform layer on the rolled-out sheet of Almond paste (see ALMOND). Cut out with a round cutter, and with another cutter of lesser diameter cut out the middles, turning them into rings. Set these on a buttered, floured baking-tin and dry them in a very low oven.

TURTLE. TORTUE – General term for reptiles with bodies encased in a bony carapace (shell).

There are land turtles (see TERRAPIN) and water turtles.

Water turtle (green turtle)

The flesh of both kinds can be eaten, but it is the water turtle that is made into the famous turtle soup.

'Turtle soup is a soup that the English hold in high esteem, and this is fully justified, because, in the opinion of connoisseurs, it does combine the qualities of succulence and nourishment for which it is universally reputed. It is the aristocratic soup par excellence, often served at the great diplomatic dinners and ceremonial repasts.

'Turtles are imported from South America, Africa and Australia. The best and the most highly priced on the market come from the West Indies.' (A. Suzanne, La Cuisine Anglaise.)

Turtle flesh that has been dried in the sun is also imported from these countries, but does not make good soup. Connoisseurs of turtle cookery particularly prize the flippers.

Turtle flippers. NAGEOIRES DE TORTUE – Cook the flippers in the soup until two-thirds done. Then cook in one of the following ways:

Turtle flippers à l'américaine. NAGEOIRES DE TORTUE À L'AMÉRICAIN – Braise in white wine. Cover with highly seasoned Américaine sauce (see SAUCE). Simmer for a few minutes.

Turtle flippers à la financière. NAGEOIRES DE TORTUE À LA FINANCIÈRE – Braise in Madeira. Set on a dish and surround with a Financière garnish (see GARNISHES). Boil down the braising liquor and pour over the flippers.

Turtle flippers à l'indienne. NAGEOIRES DE TORTUE À L'INDIENNE – Braise in white wine. Cover with Curry sauce (see SAUCE). Simmer for a few moments. Serve with Rice à l'indienne (see RICE).

Turtle soup – See SOUPS AND BROTHS.

TURTLE HERBS. HERBES À TORTUE – Mixture of aromatic herbs used to season soups or sauces called à la tortue. These herbs, which are sold commercially ready-prepared, are basil, thyme, bay and marjoram.

TURTLE-DOVE. TOURTERELLE – One of the pigeon family found in all Europe, Asia and Africa. The flesh of the turtle-dove is edible. All the methods of preparing pigeon (q.v.) are applicable.

TWAROGUE (Russian cookery) – Pressed cream cheese mixed with softened butter, bound with eggs then seasoned with salt and pepper. Used to fill patties à la russe (see PATTIES, Little Russian patties).

UDDER. TETINE – Calf's and cow's udder can be braised in the same way as noix de veau. It can be eaten fresh, salted or smoked.

It should first be soaked in cold water, blanched, cooled in cold water and flattened under pressure. It may also be studded with small pieces of bacon fat.

Braised calf's udder is accompanied by one or other of the garnishes given for Noix de veau (see VEAL).

UGLI. AEGLE – Common tree of East Indies which generally grows to a great height. Its numerous cylindrical branches are armed with long twin thorns between the leaves. The fruit is globular, about the size of an orange, with a thick hard skin. This fruit is commonly called bilva or mahura by the Indians and is much prized, in spite of its rather strong smell and insipid taste. The English who live in the West Indies eat it baked in the cinders and sprinkled with sugar. It is exported to a certain extent to England and also in the form of jam. It is extremely nourishing although slightly laxative.

The skin of the ugli provides scent which is highly valued.

UKHA (Russian cookery) – This is Russian for a fish soup and there is an enormous variety of them. The stock can be prepared from any sea or river fish: small perch, bass, ling, pike-perch, pike, tench, cod, eel, salmon, trout and carp, as well as the traditional sturgeon and sterlet.

Boil 1 sliced onion, 1 parsnip, a sprig of parsley, bay leaf and 6 peppercorns in 2 litres (3½ pints, 4½ pints) of water for ½ hour. Cool the stock, then add the fish in large portions if it is to be served separately, whole if it is to be used for stock only. Season with salt and simmer slowly for 25 to 30 minutes. Remove the main portions. Heads, tails and bones from filleted fish can be left to simmer another 15 to 20 minutes. Strain before use.

For a really good, clear ukha, you need an assortment of fish to give it taste, strength, sweetness and a certain viscosity. Perch and bass can be recommended for their flavour and gelatinous qualities, ling and allied fish for sweetness and delicacy.

The best ukha is made of the freshest fish. The more fish used, the richer the soup. Small perch used for stock only are washed and gutted; the scales need not be scraped off, as this adds to the texture. Perch for stock is boiled until the fish disintegrates, then it is strained.

To give ukha a perfect translucency, Russian cooks clarify it with caviare. Pound 50 g. (2 oz.) caviare, either pressed or soft, in a mortar. Add 3 or 4 tablespoons cold water, a little at a time, and mix well. Dilute with a good cupful of very hot, strained fish stock. Pour half this mixture into the hot soup, stirring all the time, and bring to the boil. Add the second half of the caviare 'clarifier', bring to the boil once again, simmer on the lowest heat for a few minutes, remove from heat and leave to stand for 15 minutes for the caviar to settle. Strain, re-heat and serve either with a good portion of boiled fish, or with fish coulbiac.

The following are the most famous of traditional ukhas: sterlet with ling roes, burbot with pike quenelles, salmon and Champagne soup, sturgeon and pearl barley, eel and peas, whitebait and sauerkraut, carp and sorrel soup.

ULLUCUS or ULLUCO. ULLUCO OU ULLUQUE – There is only one species of this plant, Ullucus tuberosus. It is widely cultivated in Bolivia and Peru for the culinary value of its small tubers. Attempts to cultivate it in Europe as a substitute for the potato have not been very successful.

ULMARIA. ULMAIRE – Herbaceous plant more commonly known as meadow-sweet or goat's beard. The flowering heads are used in infusion as a diuretic. Added to wine, they give it a muscat flavour.

ULVA. ULVE – Seaweed eaten in certain countries, notably Japan, but has little nutritional value.

Umbra

UMBRA, MUD-MINNOW. UMBRE – European fish found in fresh water but not commonly marketed.

UMBRINE or UMBRA. OMBRINE, OMBRE DE MER – Mediterranean fish which is sometimes sold for bass. It resembles the perch and its weight reaches about 14 kg. (32 lb.). The flesh is very delicate and was greatly prized by the Romans. It is prepared like bass (q.v.).

UNCORKING. DÉBOUCHER – The uncorking of a wine bottle must be done without shaking the bottle. Wine-waiters generally use a drill for this purpose, but, unless one has the knack of operating this tool, it is wiser to use a corkscrew.

UNFERMENTED WINE. MOÛT – Grape juice which has not yet been fermented. The term is more loosely applied to all fruit juices or cereal decoctions intended for fermentation.

It is also used of certain vegetable juices from which alcoholic drinks are made.

UNITED STATES. – See INTERNATIONAL COOKERY.

UNTRUSSING. DÉBRIDER – To untie the string used to truss poultry or winged game.

UNUSUAL FOODS. METS INSOLITES – One may well ask what constitutes an unusual food. Was it Marie-Laure de Noailles who said, 'No food is unusual as long as it tastes good'? While Joseph Delteil, co-operating in an investigation carried out by Robert J. Courtine, considered nothing more delicious than a peach plucked afresh from the tree and gave Peach Melba as an example of an unusual dish!

Unusual means any type of cooking or any variety of ingredient that is not in common use; olive oil, for example, is unusual to the people of Normandy as they always use butter. But with the ever-increasing speed of transport bringing faraway places closer and closer, so the unexpected food makes a more frequent appearance on our tables. The shift of populations during and after the Second World War, added to popular tourism, has made dishes that were once rare at least shorn of their former mystique. The Parisian boy of today speaks of the pizza as though it were his own native dish; and since the mushrooming of Sino-Vietnamese restaurants throughout the city, birds' nest soup has become just another speciality of French gourmandise. Moreover, travelers returning from distant places are beginning to incorporate international dishes into their culinary repertoire.

Every year the Société nationale d'acclimatation de France offers a reunion lunch to its members. None of them are astonished at the menu. Here is a list of the dishes offered on 7 June, 1958:

Vietnamese banh cuon (mushroom-stuffed rice galettes)

Threadfin (perch from the great lake of Tchad)

African elephant trunk

Fonio couscous (graminaceae from the Ivory Coast), served with water chestnuts

Cascaval (Bulgarian ewes' milk cheese)

Fruit from Guinea

One importer of exotic produce, M. Paul Corcellet, prepares and freezes unusual dishes to ensure a regular supply for his Parisian customers. Here is the list he offers: West Indian buffalo, antelope or venison, crocodiles' tails with American sauce, hippopotamus ragoût with green peppers, jugged monkey, boa matelote, elephant's trunk, fricassée of sea turtle (cooked in white wine), bear pâté, braised reindeer's tongue, sauté of whale.

Paul Corcellet's recipes are adapted to modern methods of food preparation, but there are some much older recipes which still retain some of the mystique that befits such rare meats:

Boiled ostrich. AUTRICHE BOULLIE – Place the following ingredients in an earthenware cooking pot: pepper, mint, toasted cumin, wild celery seeds, ordinary or caryota dates, honey, vinegar, raisin wine, garum, and a little oil. Bring this mixture to the boil then bind with cornflour or arrowroot. Arrange the pieces of boiled ostrich on a serving dish; coat with the sauce and sprinkle with pepper. Serve.

Buffalo. BUFFLE – Purge, blanch and thoroughly rinse a buffalo's muzzle, then scrape and singe it to remove all trace of hair. Simmer in a good stock for 3 hours. Check from time to time to see if it is cooked, then drain and place on a serving dish. Coat with a good, highly-seasoned Hachée sauce (see SAUCE). Serve.

Colman-Belgique grapes for a grape cure (Fauchon. Phot. Nicolas.)

URANOSCOPUS

Elephants' feet. ÉLÉPHANTS (PIEDS D') – Take the feet of one or several young elephants and purge them in warm water for 4 hours. Remove the skin and bones, then cut each foot lengthwise into four pieces; cut each of these in half. Blanch for 15 minutes, rinse in cold water, and drain.

Place the following in a tightly covered stewpan: 2 slices Bayonne ham, the portioned feet, 4 onions, 1 head of garlic, some spices,  $\frac{1}{2}$  bottle Madeira wine, 3 tablespoons (4 table-spoons) concentrated stock. Cover and simmer gently over a low heat for 10 hours. Thoroughly skim the cooking liquor, strain it and add 1 glass of port and 50 small green peppers.

See that the sauce is well seasoned.

Fillets of sautéed kangaroo. KANGAROU SAUTÉS (FILETS DE) – Remove the two fillets of a kangaroo, trim, season, and arrange in a flat pan coated with melted butter. Prepare a little gravy stock using the bones and scraps of the animal. Strain it, skim off the fat, and add 4 tablespoons ( $\frac{1}{3}$  cup) vinegar into a saucepan and add a bouquet garni. Boil down as for a Demi-glaze sauce (see SAUCE) until a light sauce is obtained. Cook rapidly for a few minutes then reduce the heat and add 2 tablespoons (3 table-spoons) redcurrant jelly and a sliver of lemon rind. Ten minutes later add a handful of small currants previously soaked in warm water. Cook for about an hour. At the last minute add the fillets and poach gently. Drain them, and serve coated with the sauce.

This is a rare and excellent dish.

Parrot. PERROQUET – Roast the bird. Pound some peppercorns, lovage, wild celery seeds, roasted sesame seeds, parsley, mint, dried onion and caryota dates with honey, oil and cooked wine. Blend these ingredients thoroughly together. Serve with the roast parrot.

URANOSCOPUS. URANOSCOPE – Species of fish found in warm and temperate seas. The only type of uranoscopus found on the coasts of France, very rare in the Atlantic Ocean but common in the Mediterranean, is the uranoscoperrat or white hogfish. Its flesh, mediocre in quality, is used in making bouillabaisse.

URTICARIA. URTICAIRE – Skin eruption accompanied by itching, similar to that caused by a stinging nettle. It affects certain people without any apparent cause but usually after they have eaten such foods as strawberries, fish and shellfish.

Treatment consists of desensitizing the person by giving him a small portion of the offending food one hour before it is to be served at the meal. If the food that causes the ill effects is not known, consult the doctor.

UVAL – French word meaning 'pertaining to grapes'. More particularly the word is used in the phrase cure uvale, grape cure, a health treatment consisting of raw grapes and fresh grape juice. At the season when grapes are ripe, counters where fresh grapes and grape juice are sold may be seen in certain places, such as the big railway stations in Paris and the grape producing centres. They are called stations uvales.

VACHERIN – Sweet (dessert) made with meringue ‘crowns’ mounted one on top of the other on a sweet pastry base, decorated with meringue piped through a forcing bag and dried out in a very low oven; or with circles of almond paste similarly mounted on top of each other. These are filled either with Chantilly cream (see CREAMS), ice cream flavoured with vanilla, or with some other flavouring, or with a bombe mixture.

Vacherin with almond paste crown. VACHERIN AVEC COURONNE EN PÂTE D’AMANDES –

Almond paste. Pound finely in a mortar 500 g. (18 oz., 4 cups) sweet almonds including a few bitter almonds about 25 g. (1 oz., ¼ cup). Moisten while pounding with the juice of half a lemon. Put the almonds in a copper pan with 500 g. (18 oz., 4 cups) icing (confectioners’ sugar) and an egg white. Mix well.

Dry out over heat, stirring with the spatula. Cook the almonds, stirring all the time, until the paste no longer sticks to the finger when pressed. Remove the pan from the heat, spread out the paste on marble, turn with the spatula so that it cools equally. Add to it 5 g. (1½ teaspoons) gum tragacanth dissolved in water.

To make the vacherin. Roll out some of the paste into a circle 20 cm. (8 inches) in diameter and 5 mm. (¼ inch) thick. With the remaining paste make another circle 15 cm. (6 inches) wide and 5 cm. (2 inches) thick. Dry both in a low oven.

Vacherin with strawberries
(Nezard-Debillot. Phot. Larousse)

Place the larger circle on paper sprinkled with sugar. Fix the smaller circle on top of this with rather stiff Royal icing (see ICING), and put into the oven to colour. Cool completely and place on a serving plate. Fill with firm Chantilly cream (see CREAMS), flavoured with vanilla or other flavouring.

Vacherin with crown of meringue. VACHERIN AVEC COURONNE DE MERINGUE – With a forcing bag make circles of plain meringue (q.v.) on buttered and floured baking sheets, the diameter of the rings varying according to the size of the sweet to be prepared. Sprinkle with fine sugar and cook in the oven at low heat until the meringue is well dried.

Put on a baking sheet, one on top of the other. Coat them with meringue. Using a pipe, decorate this ‘box’ with more meringue, sprinkle it with sugar and dry it again in the oven. Fill the box with sugar cooked to the crack stage (see SUGAR), added to a base of Chou pastry I (see DOUGH). When the vacherin is quite cold, fill with stiffly beaten, vanilla-flavoured cream, rounded into a dome.

VACHERIN – See CHEESE.

VACHETTE (Café) – See RESTAURANTS OF BYGONE DAYS.

VAISSELLE – French collective term (literally ‘vessel’) for all the plates and dishes used for the table, the kitchen and the house. Vaisselle plate is plate, i.e. dishes, etc., of silver (cf. Spanish plata, silver). (See SILVERWARE, PORCELAIN, FAÏENCE.)

VALENÇAY – See CHEESE.

VALENCIA. VALENCE – Describes Spanish oranges. In Paris, by extension, it is used to describe all oranges.

VALENCIENNES (À LA) – Method of cooking, applied in particular to chicken, which includes a rice garnish.

VALESNIKI – Preparation made with cream cheese in the style of kromeski. (See HORS-D’ŒUVRE, Hot hors-d’œuvre.)

VALOIS (À LA) – Name for various dishes and pastries. Jules Gouffé described a béarnaise sauce finished off with meat glaze as Valois sauce.

VALOIS (Café de) – See RESTAURANTS OF BYGONE DAYS.

VANILLA. VANILLE – Pod of a climbing plant, a native of Mexico, and cultivated in various tropical regions. The pods are gathered before they are completely ripe, plunged into Branch of vanilla with flowers and pods boiling water, then, before they are quite dry, shut in tins, where their aroma develops. The best quality pods, very smooth in flavour, are covered with a frost of vanilline crystals. Three kinds of vanilla are sold commercially:

1. Fine vanilla, the pod 20 to 30 cm. (8 to 12 inches) long, the surface black, smooth and frosted.

2. Woody vanilla, the pods 12 to 20 cm. (5 to 8 inches) long, reddish-brown, the surface dry and dull and not much frosted.

3. Vanillons, 10 to 12 cm. (4 to 5 inches) long, the pods thicker, flat and soft, almost always opened and rarely frosted, the scent stronger and a little bitter.

Yet another sort of vanilla exists which comes from the Indies, yellowish in colour and almost scentless.

The Mexican vanilla is the most highly esteemed; after it come those of Guiana, Guadaloupe and of Réunion.

Vanilla is much used as an aromatic flavouring, either in its original form, in powder form, or as an extract.

It is sometimes falsified, either by emptying the pods and filling them with a neutral paste or by brushing ordinary vanilla with Peruvian balsam to frost them artificially with benzoic acid crystals.

Always use the vanilla pod in preference to powder or essence.

VANILLA SUGAR – Sugar flavoured with vanilla.

VANNER – Culinary term for stirring a sauce with a spoon to make it smooth and keep a skin from forming.

VARENIKI – See HORS-D'ŒUVRE, Hot hors-d'œuvre.

VARIÉTÉS (Café des) – See RESTAURANTS OF BYGONE DAYS.

VARIETY MEATS – See OFFAL.

VASQUE – Shallow bowl, generally round in shape, made of crystal, moulded glass, china, silver, used for serving cold foods, chaud-froids, mousses, foie gras en gelée, etc.

Fresh fruit, cooked fruit, liquid custards and other cold sweets are also served in vasques.

VATEL – Celebrated maître d'hôtel, born in 1635 of Swiss parentage, who died in 1671.

'A legend, three centuries old, presents Vatel to us as the great master-cook of the Louis XIV era. Let us speak solely and briefly of Vatel, and ask ourselves whether the echo of Vatel's culinary genius would have come down to us without the witty gossip of Madame de Sévigné.

'Nothing has come down to us from him, and yet in all periods the great cooks have handed on their professional work in writing.

'But even if Vatel was only a maître d'hôtel, he was part of the structure.

'Oh, you who by profession preside at meals

Spare him some regrets, but do not imitate him.'

(Philéas Gilbert.)

(Vatel committed suicide.)

VATRUSHKI (Russian cookery) – Small open tarts made with Brioche dough (see DOUGH), filled with cream cheese or other compositions.

Vatrushki with cream cheese. VATRUSHKI AU FROMAGE BLANC – Make and roll out some ordinary unsweetened Brioche dough (see DOUGH). Cut with a fluted-edged pastry-cutter into pieces 10 cm. (4 inches) in diameter. Fill with cream cheese.

Crimp up the edges of the dough, put on a baking tray, brush over with egg, and bake in a slow oven for 15 to 18 minutes.

Vatrushki can also be made with Lining paste (see DOUGH) or with Coulbiac dough (see COULIBIAC).

Vatrushki with onion. VATRUSHKI À L'OIGNON – Prepare as Vatrushki with cream cheese, replacing the cheese with onion purée blended with a thick Velouté sauce (see SAUCE).

V.D.Q.S. (Vins délimités de qualité supérieure) – See WINE.

VEAL. VEAU – Flesh of calf, i.e. young of the cow. The best meat comes from animals aged 2½ to 3 months, fed on milk and eggs. It must be white with a slight greenish tinge (reddish coloration shows that the animal has been given solid food). It is not greasy to the touch like pork: its fat is white and satiny and smells of milk. Veal killed too young is more gelatinous and of less nutritional value.

Veal is divided into three categories so far as market value is concerned. Since veal butchering differs in France, England and the U.S.A., the joints or cuts designated are the nearest approximations rather than equivalents.

1. Cul or Quasi (English, chump end of loin; U.S.A., standing rump. Noix (English, topside; U.S.A., rump). Rouelle (English, fillet end of leg; U.S.A., round roast). Longe (English and U.S.A., loin with or without kidney. Carré (English, best end of neck; U.S.A., rib roast).

2. Épaule (English and U.S.A., shoulder). Basses-côtes (English, end chops; U.S.A., shoulder chops). Poitrine (English and U.S.A., breast). Ventre (English, belly; U.S.A., flank).

3. Collet (English and U.S.A., neck). Jarret (English, knuckle; U.S.A., shank).

Amourettes of veal. AMOURETTES DE VEAU – In French cookery the spinal marrow of veal is known as amourettes. The substance of this marrow has a great resemblance to calf's brains, and all the methods of preparing the latter are applicable to amourettes. It may, like the brains, be prepared as a dish by itself; more often, however, it is used as an ingredient of a garnish. (See OFFAL or VARIETY MEATS.)

Veal blanquette. BLANQUETTE DE VEAU – Cut into pieces 750 g. (1½ lb.) veal taken from the shoulder, the breast, or end chops (shoulder chops). Put into a shallow saucepan with enough white stock, light broth or plain water to cover the meat. Add salt and bring to the boil, removing all scum.

Add a carrot, an onion stuck with a clove, a leek and a bouquet garni composed of parsley, thyme, bay leaf and celery. Cook very slowly for 1½ hours.

Thicken three-quarters of the cooking liquor with 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) each of butter and flour roux. Use this sauce or a Velouté sauce (see SAUCE), and add to it a handful of French cuts of veal mushroom trimmings (from the mushrooms to be used in the blanquette). Cook for 15 minutes, stirring from time to time.

Remove the pieces of veal from the liquid. Remove any little bones which have become loose. Put the meat in a sauté pan with 12 small onions previously cooked in a flour-and-water court-bouillon, and 12 peeled mushrooms. Strain the sauce through a muslin bag, thicken with 3 egg yolks and  $1\frac{1}{2}$  dl. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  pint,  $\frac{2}{3}$  cup) cream, and pour over the veal.

Season with a little grated nutmeg and a squeeze of lemon juice. Keep warm on a corner of the stove, covered, taking care that it does not boil. Serve with croûtons of bread fried in butter.

Veal blanquette with various garnishes. BLANQUETTE DE VEAU AVEC GARNITURES DIVERSES - Prepare the blanquette as in the preceding recipe. After the first cooking, and after the pieces of veal have been drained, put them back in the sauté pan with the prescribed vegetables. Pour over the strained sauce and finish cooking in the usual way.

Veal blanquette may also be prepared with celeriac cut in quarters, half-cooked in butter, or halved celery hearts; cucumbers cut into chunks and blanched for 3 minutes in boiling salted water; braised lettuce hearts cut in half; matignon; carrots, turnips, celery or leeks, sliced and stewed in butter.

Veal blanquette à l'ancienne. BLANQUETTE DE VEAU À L'ANCIENNE - Like Blanquette of lamb à l'ancienne (see LAMB).

Breast of veal. POITRINE DE VEAU - This cut is usually boned, stuffed and braised. It may also be used to make ragoûts. Stuff with the following forcemeat:

Add 1 kg. ( $2\frac{1}{4}$  lb.) Fine pork forcemeat (see FORCEMEAT), 175 g. (6 oz.,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cups) chopped onion cooked until tender in butter and 1 tablespoon of chopped parsley, and bind with a whole egg. Season with salt, pepper and spices and mix well.

The boned breast may also be stuffed with quenelle

English cuts of veal forcemeat, fine pork forcemeat mixed with chopped spinach lightly cooked in butter, sausage meat mixed with dry duxelles, etc.

The cooking time for a stuffed breast of veal weighing 5 kg. (11 lb.) is 3½ to 4 hours. For the method of braising see CULINARY METHODS.

Breast of veal à l'allemande. POITRINE DE VEAU À L'ALLEMANDE – Poach in light stock a breast of veal stuffed as above. Serve surrounded by carrots, leeks, etc., that have been cooked with it; serve with hot Horseradish sauce (see SAUCE).

Breast of veal à l'alsacienne. POITRINE DE VEAU À L'ALSACIENNE – Braise the breast until it is half cooked, then finish off in the braising pan with blanched sauerkraut.

Breast of veal à l'anglaise. POITRINE DE VEAU À L'ANGLAISE – Stuff the breast with the forcemeat described below, and poach it gently in a light stock or salted water. Serve with boiled bacon.

Stuffing for breast of veal. Add to chopped beef or veal kidney the same quantity of chopped veal udder and breadcrumbs soaked in milk and pressed. Bind this forcemeat with 2 eggs to every 1 kg. (2¼ lb.), and season.

Brochettes of veal. BROCHETTES DE VEAU – Cut some fillet of veal into pieces about 7½ cm. (3 inches) thick. Put them on skewers alternately with blanched pieces of bacon. Season the meat on the skewers, dip in melted butter, cover them with breadcrumbs, sprinkle with more melted butter and cook under the grill.

Carré de veau – See Rib of veal below.

Veal chops. CÔTES DE VEAU – These cuts, taken from the best end of loin, must not be too thin.

Veal chops are usually sprinkled with their boiled down juices and sautéed in butter. They may be garnished in various ways, but should always be sprinkled first with their own cooking juices.

Veal chops may also be grilled. They are served with American cuts of veal

Maître d'hôtel butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters) or any other sauce usually served with grilled meat.

Veal chops à l'ancienne. CÔTES DE VEAU À L'ANCIENNE – Cook 6 chops in butter without browning. Surround with a garnish composed of cocks' combs and kidneys, lambs' sweetbreads, truffles and mushrooms, heated in Madeira and bound with chicken Velouté sauce (see SAUCE) diluted with cream.

Dilute the pan juices with Madeira, add equal quantities of concentrated and thickened brown veal stock and cream. Simmer down, add butter, strain, and pour over the chops.

Veal chops with basil. CÔTES DE VEAU AU BASILIC – Season chops with salt and pepper and sauté in butter. Drain. Sprinkle with a sauce made by diluting the pan juices with white wine and adding a few tablespoons veal stock,  $\frac{1}{2}$  teaspoon chopped basil, and butter.

Veal chops Bellevue (cold). CÔTES DE VEAU BELLEVUE – Braise chops, cut rather thick; let cool in the liquor.

Put into an hors-d'œuvre dish or deep dish lined with jelly and decorated with mixed vegetables (carrots and turnips in little balls, peas, diced French beans, etc.). Cover the chops with their cooking liquor. Fill the dish with half melted jelly. Chill well on ice.

Turn out the chops on to a dish and garnish with chopped jelly.

Veal chops à la bonne femme. CÔTES DE VEAU À LA BONNE FEMME – Cook seasoned chops lightly in an earthenware casserole, browning them on both sides. Add, for each chop, 6 small lardoons of lean bacon, blanched and fried lightly in butter, 6 small fried onions and 12 new potatoes (or an equal quantity of old potatoes cut to look like olives), partly cooked in butter. Cook gently in the oven. Add 6 tablespoons ( $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) thickened brown gravy and serve in the casserole in which they were cooked.

Veal chop bouchère. CÔTE DE VEAU BOUCHÈRE – Name for a chop taken from the collar end of the neck and not trimmed.

loin

breast/ribs topside

1. knuckle 2. kidneys

This cut is generally grilled, but it can also be sautéed in butter. It is served as it is, accompanied by vegetables to taste.

Veal chops bourguignonne. CÔTES DE VEAU BOURGUIGNONNE – Sauté chops in butter. When half cooked add for each chop 6 small glazed onions, 4 small mushrooms and 6 lardoons of lean, blanched bacon. Cook all together. Set the chops on a serving dish. Dilute the pan juices with red wine, thicken with a tablespoon Kneaded butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters), add a teaspoon meat jelly, boil down, add butter, and pour over the chops.

Braised veal chops. CÔTES DE VEAU BRAISÉES – Cut the chops rather thick and season with salt and pepper. Put them in a buttered sauté dish lined with strips of bacon rind, chopped onions and carrots. Cook gently in the oven, covered, for 10 minutes.

Pour in, for each chop,  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (3 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) white wine and boil down. Add clear brown stock to halfway up the meat. Add a small bouquet garni. Bring to the boil on top of the stove then cook in the oven, covered, for 45 minutes to 1 hour, according to size.

Drain the chops, set them on a dish and coat with a sauce made by straining the braising liquor, removing all grease and boiling down.

Braised veal chops can be accompanied by various garnishes. All those indicated elsewhere for sautéed veal chops are applicable.

Veal chops en casserole. CÔTES DE VEAU EN CASSEROLE – Season the chops with salt and pepper. Cook gently in butter in an earthenware casserole. Sprinkle with thickened veal gravy and serve in the same casserole.

Veal chops en casserole with various garnishes. CÔTES DE VEAU EN CASSEROLE, AVEC GARNITURES DIVERSES – Cook the chops in a casserole, remove, and replace with some of the following garnishes by cooking all together:

Aubergines cut in pieces, sautéed in butter or oil; glazed carrots (either small new carrots or large carrots cut into oval pieces); celeriac cut in oval pieces and simmered in butter; cèpes or cultivated mushrooms, sautéed in butter; cucumbers cut into large olive-shaped pieces, cooked in butter; artichoke bottoms in quarters; French beans cooked in water and tossed in butter; glazed turnips (also cut into olive-shaped pieces); salsify, cooked in a flour and water court-bouillon and sautéed in butter; Jerusalem artichokes cooked in butter.

The following may also be used, but should be added only when the meat is completely cooked: braised chicory; Brussels sprouts, lightly fried in butter; cauliflower flowerets sautéed in butter; braised endive; leaf spinach chopped with butter or cream; new broad beans with butter; stewed gumbos (okra or ladies' fingers) with tomato; hop shoots in butter; flageolet beans in butter; French beans in butter or cream; braised lettuce; braised chestnuts; noodles in butter; purée of sorrel; peas in butter or à la française; quartered tomatoes, stewed in butter.

Veal chops chasseur. CÔTES DE VEAU CHASSEUR – Prepare like Mutton chops chasseur (see MUTTON).

Veal chops chaud-froid. CÔTES DE VEAU EN CHAUD-FROID – In white sauce. Cook chops in butter without letting them colour. Allow to cool. Coat with Chaud-froid sauce (see SAUCE), to which the pan juices diluted with Madeira or any other wine have been added.

Garnish the top of each chop with truffles, pickled tongue, lean ham, tarragon leaves, etc. Glaze with jelly. Chill well. Set on a dish and garnish with chopped jelly.

In brown sauce. Braise the chops, browning them. Allow them to cool in the braising liquor. Drain them and coat with Brown chaud-froid sauce to which the braising liquor has been added. Garnish and glaze with jelly.

Veal chops en chaud-froid may be accompanied by vegetable salad bound with mayonnaise, halves of hard boiled eggs or lettuce hearts.

Veal chops en cocotte. CÔTES DE VEAU EN COCOTTE – Alternative name for Veal chops en casserole. Veal chops à la bonne femme are also sometimes known by the same name.

Veal chops en cocotte with various garnishes. CÔTES DE VEAU EN COCOTTE, AVEC GARNITURES DIVERSES – Can be accompanied by any of the garnishes given for Veal chops en casserole with various garnishes.

Veal chops à la crème. CÔTES DE VEAU À LA CRÈME – Sauté the chops in butter. Drain and set on a dish. Coat with the cooking juices diluted with white wine or Madeira and fresh cream, boiled down and strained.

Add a tablespoon Velouté sauce (see SAUCE) to the cream to thicken the sauce.

Veal chops à l'indienne. CÔTES DE VEAU À L'INDIENNE – Sauté chops in butter. When browned on both sides, put them into the pan with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) chopped onion. Season with 1 teaspoon curry powder. Cook gently, covered. Set the chops on a dish and coat with the following sauce. Dilute the cooking juices with  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (3 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) dry white wine. Add 4 tablespoons ( $\frac{3}{4}$  cup) thick cream. Boil down to a good consistency. Add a squeeze of lemon juice.

Serve with Rice à l'indienne (see RICE).

Veal chops Cussy. CÔTES DE VEAU CUSSY – Cut a pocket in thick veal chops taken from the middle of the best end of the neck (U.S.A. rib). Fill with a salpicon composed of mushrooms, carrots and lean ham, bound with Béchamel sauce (see SAUCE) and well seasoned. Coat with egg and breadcrumbs. Cook in clarified butter, browning on both sides.

Prepare a creamy risotto (see RICE), bind with cheese and add a salpicon of truffles. Set the chop on a dish. Garnish with the truffle risotto. Pour around a few tablespoons tomato-flavoured brown gravy and sprinkle with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) Noisette butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters).

Veal chops à la Custine. CÔTES DE VEAU À LA CUSTINE – 'Braise the veal chops, coat each one with a good tablespoon of duxelles (q.v.). Dip in the sauce, then in breadcrumbs, then in beaten eggs and in breadcrumbs a second time. Fry until golden in butter and serve with a light tomato sauce.' (Carême's recipe.)

Veal chops à la Dreux (old style). CÔTES DE VEAU À LA DREUX – 'Stud 12 veal chops, cut rather thick and lightly flattened, with pickled tongue and truffles. Tie them with string.

'Line a shallow casserole with the trimmings from the chops, 2 carrots, 2 onions and a bouquet garni, cover with thin pieces of bacon fat and place the chops on top. Pour over some consommé and a wineglass of Madeira and cook for a good three-quarters of an hour.

'Drain on a plafond (an old-fashioned copper baking tin) with a cover on top to keep them under pressure until they are cold. Strain the pan juices and remove all grease. Boil down to a light glaze.

'When the chops are cold, trim them carefully so that the tongue and truffles can be seen distinctly. Put them in a sauté dish with their glaze and allow to simmer for 15 minutes before serving. Garnish the middle with a Ragoût à la

Veal blanquette

Veal ragoût

financière (see RAGOÛT) and use the glaze as sauce.' (Plumerey's recipe.)

Veal chops à la Dreux (modern style). CÔTES DE VEAU À LA DREUX – Stud the chops, cut rather thick, with pickled tongue and truffles. Cook gently in butter. Trim the flat surfaces slightly so that the tongue and truffles show more clearly.

Set on a dish and surround with a Financière garnish (see GARNISHES). For sauce use the pan juices diluted with Madeira and mixed with thickened brown veal stock.

Veal chops à la duxelles. CÔTES DE VEAU À LA DUXELLES – Sauté the chops in butter. When almost cooked put into the pan 4 tablespoons ( $\frac{1}{3}$  cup) dry duxelles (q.v.). Cook all together over a gentle heat for a few moments. Set the chops on a dish and sprinkle with the pan juices to which white wine and tomato-flavoured Demi-glaze sauce (see SAUCE) have been added. Sprinkle with chopped parsley.

Veal chops à la fermière. CÔTES DE VEAU À LA FERMIÈRE – Cooked in a cocotte like Veal chops à la paysanne (see below), but without potatoes.

Veal chops aux fines herbes. CÔTES DE VEAU AUX FINES HERBES – Sauté 4 chops in butter. Drain and arrange on a dish. Dilute the pan juices with  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (3 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup) white wine to which a teaspoon of chopped shallot has been added. Add Demi-glaze sauce (see SAUCE). Boil for a few moments, then add 1 tablespoon chopped parsley, chervil and tarragon. Pour the sauce over the chops.

Veal chops à la gelée (Carême's recipe). CÔTES DE VEAU À LA GELÉE – Trim the veal chops and stud them with ham and bacon fat or pickled tongue. Put them in a pan lined with bards of bacon fat and put more bards of bacon fat on top. Over these place the trimmings of the chops, 2 carrots, 2 onions, 2 cloves and a good bouquet of thyme, bay leaf and basil. Add salt, a glass of white wine, 1 tablespoon brandy and 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) consommé. Cover with buttered paper and place the pan on the fire.

'When it has come right to the boil, cook over a gentle heat, in such a way that the chops boil only lightly for 2 hours. This cooking time is for thick chops weighing about 225 g. (8 oz.) each.

'Drain them. When they are almost cold, press them between 2 plafonds (baking tins), putting a weight on top. When they are quite cold trim them, glaze them with their braising liquor boiled down and strained, and set them on a dish garnished with chopped jelly. Garnish the top of each chop lightly with jelly, and surround with a border of jelly croûtons.'

Grilled veal chops. CÔTES DE VEAU GRILLÉES – Season the chops with salt and pepper, sprinkle with melted butter or oil and cook under a moderate grill. Set on a dish, put a paper frill on the bone and garnish with watercress.

Grilled veal chops are generally served as they are, but can be accompanied by a Compound butter (see BUTTER) or some kind of garnish, the most usual being potatoes.

Veal chops à la hongroise. CÔTES DE VEAU À LA HONGROISE – Season the chops with salt and paprika and sauté them in butter. When they are well browned on both sides put into the pan a good tablespoon chopped onion, cooked till tender in butter and seasoned with paprika. Cook gently, covered.

Drain the chops and set them on a dish. Coat with a sauce made by diluting the pan juices with white wine, adding cream, boiling down and adding butter.

Veal chops à la languedocienne. CÔTES DE VEAU À LA LANGUEDOCIENNE – Sauté 4 chops in goose fat. When they are browned on both sides put into the pan 1 tablespoon chopped onion and 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) diced raw ham. Cook gently all together. Add 12 stoned and blanched green olives and a little chopped garlic. Set the chops on a dish and surround with potatoes cut to look like olives and fried. Pour the sauce and the potatoes over the chops.

Veal chops à la lyonnaise. CÔTES DE VEAU À LA LYONNAISE – Sauté 4 chops in butter. Put into the pan 4 tablespoons ( $\frac{1}{3}$  cup) chopped onions gently cooked in butter. Finish cooking together. Set the chops on a dish. Add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) vinegar, 1 tablespoon chopped parsley and a little meat glaze to the onions, and pour over the chops.

Veal chops Maintenon. CÔTES DE VEAU MAINTENON – Prepare like Mutton chops Maintenon (see MUTTON).

Veal chops à la maraîchère. CÔTES DE VEAU À LA MARAÎCHÈRE – Sauté in butter. Garnish with chunks of salsify cooked in a flour and water court-bouillon and fried in butter, Brussels sprouts sautéed in butter, and potatoes cut to look like olives and cooked in butter.

For sauce use the pan juices diluted with white wine and with veal stock added.

Veal chops à la maréchale. CÔTES DE VEAU À LA MARÉCHALE – Flatten the chops lightly, season with salt and pepper, and coat with egg and breadcrumbs. Cook in clarified butter.

Garnish with asparagus tips in butter and slices of truffles, placed on top of the chops. Pour veal gravy around and sprinkle with Noisette butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters).

Veal chops à la milanaise. CÔTES DE VEAU À LA MILANAISE – Flatten the veal chops and season with salt and pepper. Coat with egg and breadcrumbs mixed with grated Parmesan. Cook in clarified butter. Set on a dish and surround with Macaroni à la milanaise (see MACARONI). Top each chop with a slice of peeled lemon and sprinkle with Noisette butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters).

This is how veal chops à la milanaise are prepared in Paris restaurants. In Italy they are generally served with sautéed potatoes but without the macaroni.

Minced veal chops Grimo de la Reynière. CÔTES DE VEAU HACHÉES GRIMOD DE LA REYNIÈRE – Chop the veal chops finely, adding to each one-third of its weight of breadcrumbs soaked in milk and pressed, and a teaspoon chopped truffles. Season with salt, pepper and a little grated nutmeg.

Put this forcemeat back on to the bone of the chop and re-form it to its original shape. Coat with egg and breadcrumbs and cook in clarified butter. Garnish with buttered asparagus tips and surround with concentrated veal stock. Sprinkle with Noisette butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters).

Minced veal chops with various vegetables. CÔTES DE VEAU HACHÉES AVEC LÉGUMES DIVERS – Chop the meat of the chops finely as for minced veal chops Grimo de la Reynière, but without adding truffles. Re-form the chop. Sauté in clarified butter. Garnish with vegetables. Surround with thickened brown veal stock. Sprinkle with Noisette butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters).

Veal chops à la Morland (Carême's recipe). CÔTES DE VEAU À LA MORLAND – Dip veal chops in beaten egg and coat them with finely chopped truffles. Sauté in clarified butter. Set them on a serving dish and a mushroom purée in the middle. Use Demi-glace sauce (see SAUCE).

Veal chops with mushrooms. CÔTES DE VEAU AUX CHAMPIGNONS – Season chops with salt and pepper. Brown both sides in butter in a sauté pan.

When half cooked add peeled raw mushroom heads and finish cooking. Garnish with the mushrooms.

Sprinkle over the cooking juices diluted with Madeira and Demi-glace sauce (see SAUCE).

Veal chops with mushrooms à la crème. CÔTES DE VEAU AUX CHAMPIGNONS À LA CRÈME – Prepare as above. After having set the chops on a dish, dilute the cooking juices with Madeira and fresh cream and boil down. Coat the chops and mushrooms with this sauce.

Veal chops en papillote

Veal chops en papillote. CÔTES DE VEAU EN PAPILLOTE – Sauté the chops in butter. Set on a sheet of oiled paper cut in the shape of a heart, placing the chop on one half of the heart on a slice of cooked ham covered with 1 tablespoon thick Duxelles sauce (see SAUCE). Put another tablespoon of the sauce on top of the chop and cover with another slice of ham.

Close the papillote, folding over the edges. Cook in the oven long enough to puff up the paper and colour it a little.

Veal chops Parmentier. CÔTES DE VEAU PARMENTIER – Season 4 chops with salt and pepper. Fry in butter on both sides. When they are half cooked, put in the pan 225 g. (8 oz.) potatoes cut in pieces 2 cm. ( $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch) square. Finish cooking together.

Set the chops on a dish and surround with the potatoes. Pour over the pan juices diluted with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) veal stock. Sprinkle with chopped parsley.

Veal chops à la paysanne. CÔTES DE VEAU À LA PAYSANNE – Cook 4 chops in butter. When they are almost ready, add 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) vegetable fondue, with the addition of 6 tablespoons chopped bacon, fried in butter, and 175 g. (6 oz.,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cups) diced potatoes, cooked in butter. Finish cooking all together. Sprinkle over 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) of veal stock.

Veal chops à la paysanne can be cooked and served in an earthenware casserole, as can all dishes cooked à la paysanne.

Veal chops à la piémontaise. CÔTES DE VEAU À LA PIÉMONTAISE – Season the chops with salt and pepper, and coat with egg and breadcrumbs mixed with grated cheese. Sauté in clarified butter. Garnish with Risotto à la piémontaise (see RICE). Pour round Demi-glace sauce (see SAUCE) flavoured with tomato.

Veal chops Pojarski. CÔTES DE VEAU POJARSKI – Chop finely

the meat of the chops and mix with a quarter of its weight of butter and an equal quantity of breadcrumbs soaked in milk and pressed. Season this forcemeat with salt, pepper and a little grated nutmeg. Put it back on the bone and reshape the chops. Flour and cook in clarified butter. Garnish with the chosen vegetable, and put a slice of peeled lemon on top of each chop. Sprinkle with Noisette butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters).

Veal chops en portefeuille (grilled). CÔTES DE VEAU EN PORTEFEUILLE – Cut open the lean meat of a thick veal chop. Season inside and out with salt and pepper, and fill this pocket with a forcemeat. Wrap the chop in a piece of pig's caul or pork fat, previously soaked in cold water. Cook under the grill at a gentle heat.

Serve with a garnish of vegetables. Pour round some veal gravy with butter added.

Veal chops en portefeuille (sautéed). CÔTES DE VEAU EN PORTEFEUILLE – Prepare the chops as above. Cook in butter in a sauté pan. Garnish with the prescribed vegetables. Dilute the pan juices with white wine and thickened veal gravy.

Veal chops à la portugaise. CÔTES DE VEAU À LA PORTUGAISE – Sauté the chops in oil, set on a dish. Add to the pan juices for each chop 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) Tomato fondue (see FONDUE). Add 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) white wine, season with a little garlic, boil down, add 2 teaspoons chopped parsley and pour over the chops.

Veal chops à la provençale. CÔTES DE VEAU À LA PROVENÇALE – Sauté the chops in a mixture of butter and oil. Garnish with tomatoes stuffed with duxelles (q.v.), covered with grated cheese and browned. Dilute the pan juices with white wine, add Tomato sauce (see SAUCE), and a little garlic for seasoning. Pour over chops. Sprinkle with chopped parsley.

Sautéed veal chops with various garnishes. CÔTES DE VEAU SAUTÉE AVEC GARNITURES DIVERSES – Sauté the chops in butter, and garnish with some of the following vegetables.

Dilute the pan juices with white wine, add brown veal gravy and pour over the chops.

Garnishes. Quartered artichokes or artichoke bottoms; asparagus tips in butter; diced aubergines, sautéed in butter or oil; carrots, à la crème, glazed or Vichy; celery, braised or simmered in butter; cèpes or other edible fungi sautéed in butter or oil; braised chicory (U.S.A. endive); Brussels sprouts, sautéed in butter; cauliflower, sautéed in butter; sliced or diced Italian marrows or courgettes sautéed in butter or oil; braised endive (U.S.A. chicory); leaf spinach stewed in butter, or chopped or sieved in butter, cream or gravy; hop shoots in butter or cream; kidney beans in butter or à la bretonne; sweet corn in butter or cream; braised sorrel; peas in butter or à la française; potatoes, prepared in various ways; pilaf rice or risotto; salsify in cream, in stock or sautéed in butter; halved tomatoes sautéed in butter, grilled, or cooked slowly in butter or oil.

Veal chops with truffles. CÔTES DE VEAU AUX TRUFFES – Season the chops with salt and pepper. Sauté in butter. When almost cooked, put into the pan for each chop, 6 rather thick slices of truffles. Set the chops on a dish and cover with the truffles. Sprinkle with the cooking juices diluted with Madeira and Demi-glace sauce (see SAUCE), flavoured with truffle essence.

Veal chops vert-pré. CÔTES DE VEAU VERT-PRÉ – Grill the chops and garnish as for Entrecôte au vert-pré (see BEEF, Entrecôte).

Veal chops Vichy. CÔTES DE VEAU VICHY – Sauté the chops in butter. Put into the pan for each chop, 5 tablespoons (6 tablespoons) carrots prepared as for à la Vichy (see CARROT). Sprinkle with the diluted pan juices.

Veal chops à la viennoise. CÔTES DE VEAU À LA VIENNOISE – Prepare as for Escalopes of veal à la viennoise.

Veal chops Zingara. CÔTES DE VEAU ZINGARA – Season with salt and paprika. Sauté in butter. Set the chops on a dish and put on top of each a slice of ham sautéed in butter. Coat with Zingara sauce (see SAUCE).

Escalopes of veal. ESCALOPES DE VEAU – Escalopes of veal are usually cut from the fillet end of the leg. They can also be taken from the topside or silverside.

These pieces, which average about 100 g. (4 oz.) should be oval, round or heart-shaped. They are lightly flattened and sautéed in butter.

All the recipes given for veal chops are applicable to escalopes. Those given below for escalopes can equally well be used for veal chops. The recipes given for tournedos (see BEEF) and for noisettes of lamb or mutton (see LAMB, MUTTON), can be applied to veal chops and escalopes.

Escalopes of veal à l'anglaise. ESCALOPES DE VEAU À L'ANGLAISE – Flatten the escalopes lightly and coat them with egg and breadcrumbs. Cook in clarified butter. Set them in a 'crown' on a serving dish and sprinkle with Noisette butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters).

Escalopes of veal à l'anversoise. ESCALOPES DE VEAU À L'ANVERSOISE – Sauté the escalopes in butter. Set them on croûtons of bread fried in butter. Garnish with hop shoots in cream and small potatoes, fried in butter. For sauce use the cooking juices diluted with white wine and thick brown gravy.

Escalopes of veal with French (string) beans or other green vegetables. ESCALOPES DE VEAU AUX HARICOTS VERTS – The escalopes can be coated in egg and breadcrumbs or left plain. Sauté them in butter. Garnish with French beans sautéed in butter and surround with veal stock. Sprinkle with the cooking butter.

Escalopes prepared in this way can be garnished with flageolet beans, broad beans, asparagus tips, peas, etc., cooked in salted water, drained and mixed with butter.

Escalopes of veal Brancas. ESCALOPES DE VEAU BRANCAS – Cover the seasoned escalopes with a thin layer of mirepoix of vegetables cooked in butter until very tender. Coat in egg and breadcrumbs and sauté in clarified butter.

Set on a base of Annette potatoes (see POTATOES). Put a Chiffonnade of lettuce (see LETTUCE) mixed with a rather thick cream sauce on top of each escalope.

Pour round a few tablespoons Demi-glaze sauce (see SAUCE) with Madeira and butter.

Escalopes of veal Casimir. ESCALOPES DE VEAU CASIMIR – Season escalopes taken from the fillet with salt and paprika and sauté them in butter. Set each on an artichoke bottom cooked gently in butter. Put on top a julienne of carrot, cut short and thick, stewed in butter with a julienne of truffles, cut to the same size and added when the carrots are cooked.

Coat with the cooking juices diluted with cream and seasoned with paprika.

Escalopes of veal with courgettes or aubergines. ESCALOPES DE VEAU AUX COURGETTES, AUX AUBERGINES – Season 4 escalopes taken from the best end of the neck, trimmed and flattened, with salt and pepper. Sauté them in butter.

Fry 2 peeled, sliced courgettes or aubergines in oil.

Garnish the escalopes with the courgettes or aubergines, and sprinkle with the cooking juices from the escalopes, diluted with a little white wine and concentrated meat juice seasoned with a little grated garlic. Sprinkle with chopped parsley.

Escalopes of veal à la jardinière. ESCALOPES DE VEAU À LA JARDINIÈRE – Coat the escalopes in egg and breadcrumbs and sauté in butter. Garnish with a jardinière (see GARNISHES) of vegetables bound with butter or cream. Surround with veal stock and sprinkle with the cooking butter.

Escalopes of veal with rosemary (Italian cookery).

ESCALOPES DE VEAU AU ROMARIN – Cut from a piece of boned loin of veal 6 slices about 2½ cm (1 inch) thick. Season with salt and pepper and coat them with flour. Fry in hot butter in a sauté pan.

When they are a good colour on both sides, pour in a glass of white wine. Add a small sprig of fresh rosemary. Cover the pan, and cook slowly, without boiling, for 18 to 20 minutes.

Place the escalopes on a dish and sprinkle with their juice.

Escalopes of veal à la viennoise. ESCALOPES DE VEAU À LA VIENNOISE – Flatten the escalopes well, season, coat with egg and breadcrumbs, and cook them in butter. Arrange on a layer of Anchovy butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters). On top of each escalope put a slice of peeled lemon and a stoned olive surrounded by a fillet of anchovy.

Set the whites and yolks of hard boiled eggs, chopped separately, round the escalopes, together with capers and chopped parsley.

Feuilleton of veal 'l'Échelle'. FEUILLETON DE VEAU 'L'ÉCHELLE' – Seal quickly in very hot butter a boned and seasoned fillet of veal. Allow to cool. Cut it at regular intervals, lengthways, so as to make 'leaves', attached only at the base.

Fill the spaces with a mixture of dry duxelles, (q.v.) chopped lean ham, diced truffles and an equal quantity of a fine mirepoix (q.v.) of vegetables, bound with beaten egg.

Re-form the fillet, cover it with mirepoix and wrap it in pigs' caul or paper-thin salt pork previously soaked in cold water. Spread with a little butter, place in a casserole, cover and cook in the oven.

Garnish the fillet with braised lettuce and potatoes fried in butter. For sauce use the cooking juices diluted with Madeira and brown veal stock.

Feuilleton of cold veal in jelly. FEUILLETON DE VEAU FROID À LA GELÉE – See FEUILLETON.

Fillet of veal. FILET DE VEAU – Loin of veal, boned or unboned, a part which includes not only the fillet (U.S.A. sirloin), but also the part which corresponds to what would be called the eye of the sirloin (U.S.A. tenderloin) in beef.

The true fillet of veal is a very delicate cut and can be prepared alone. From it may be cut escalopes, noisettes or médallions, the two last being treated in the same way as the escalopes.

Fillet of veal, cut in square pieces, may also be used to make sautées à la minute, skewered to make brochettes, or lightly flattened and grilled.

Veal forcemeat or godiveau – See FORCEMEATS.

Fricadelles of veal. FRICADELLES DE VEAU – Prepared with raw or cooked veal as for Fricadelles of beef (see BEEF).

Veal fricandeau. FRICANDEAU – This name is given mainly to a dish made of loin of veal (noix de veau) larded, braised or roasted (see Noix of veal below).

Fricassée of veal. FRICASSÉE DE VEAU – Prepare with veal cut into pieces of regular shape and size like Fricassée of chicken (see FRICASSÉE).

Grenadins of veal. GRENADINS DE VEAU – Name which describes pieces cut from the fillet end of leg, like escalopes, but smaller and thicker. They are studded with bacon fat and braised like Noix of veal below. All the garnishes given for Noix of veal are applicable to grenadins.

Knuckle of veal à l'italienne or Osso-bucco. JARRET DE VEAU À L'ITALIENNE – Rounds of knuckle of veal braised in a stock which includes tomato purée.

Saw 750 g. (1½ lb.) knuckle of veal into rounds 5 cm. (2 inches) thick. Season with salt and pepper, sprinkle with flour and brown in 2 to 3 tablespoons lard. Add 4 tablespoons (½ cup) chopped onion, cook until pale golden, add 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) white wine, boil down, add 4 large peeled, seeded and pressed tomatoes and pour in 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) white stock or broth. Add a crushed clove of garlic and a bouquet garni and cook, covered, in the oven for 1½ hours.

Set the pieces of knuckle on a dish and coat them with the concentrated cooking liquor. Sprinkle a little lemon juice and some chopped parsley over.

Knuckle of veal à la provençale. JARRET DE VEAU À LA PROVENÇALE – Saw the knuckle into rounds of the same thickness. Season with salt and pepper. Cook lightly in oil. Add (for one whole knuckle) 150 g. (5 oz. 1¼ cups) finely chopped onion. When the onion is partly cooked, add 4 large peeled, seeded and pressed tomatoes. Season with garlic, pour in 1½ dl. (¼ pint, ¾ cup) white wine and a few tablespoons brown veal gravy. Add a bouquet garni and cook covered, for 1½ hours.

Veal loaf. PAIN DE VEAU – Prepare with Fine panada forcemeat I (see FORCEMEAT) using veal.

Loin of veal. LONGE DE VEAU – This is the part of the carcass which extends from the point of the haunch to the first ribs.

Loin of veal (Larousse.)

Loin of veal, which is served as an entrée, can be braised, cooked, covered in the oven, or roasted. When it is roasted it is usually boned first, leaving a strip of skin long enough to wrap round the fillet. The kidney is usually included in this joint, part of the fat surrounding it having been removed.

The loin thus prepared is sometimes called a rognonnade de veau. It can also be braised, and is usually accompanied by any of the garnishes prescribed for Noix of veal (see below).

Matebote of veal. MATELOTE DE VEAU – This is sautéed veal, the cooking juices diluted with red wine, small onions and mushrooms added, and the sauce thickened with Kneaded butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters).

Médallions of veal. MÉDAILLONS DE VEAU – Small round pieces cut from the fillet end of the leg. They are prepared like Escalopes of veal.

Neck of veal, best end of neck – See Rib below.

Noisettes of veal. NOISETTES DE VEAU – Small round pieces, usually cut from the fillet. Prepare like Escalopes of veal.

Noisettes à la Bénévnt. NOISETTES À LA BÉNÉVENT – ‘The noisette of veal,’ says Plumerey, ‘is that fat part, oblong in shape, found in the shoulder of veal to the left of the blade bone. In the middle is found an extremely delicate piece of meat about the size of a walnut.’

‘Procure 16 of these noisettes, which should be soaked in water on a corner of the stove for 2 hours and then blanched. Cool in cold water and when nearly cold drain and wipe on a cloth and put them under pressure.

‘The noisettes should then be cooked in a braising stock with a mirepoix and Madeira. They are served garnished with a macédoine of vegetables, a purée of sorrel or braised chicory.’

Noix, sous-noix and fricandeau of veal. NOIX, SOUS-NOIX, FRICANDEAU DE VEAU – The noix of veal is like the topside of beef, the fleshy upper part of the leg, cut lengthwise.

Below this piece is found another fleshy part which is called in French the sous-noix or noix pâtissière, also cut lengthwise.

The noix is always studded with fine bacon fat, but only the parts next to the bone of the chump end. This part is mostly used for braising.

The sous-noix is also studded with bacon fat and cooked in the same way as the noix.

The fricandeau is cut from the noix. This is a slice cut along the grain of the meat and should not be more than 3½ cm. (1½ inches) thick. It is studded with fine bacon fat and usually braised, like noix and sous-noix.

Garnishes applicable to the noix, sous-noix and fricandeau of veal are bouquetière, bourgeoise, endive, mushrooms, Clamart, braised chicory, spinach, jardinière, various vegetables, braised; celery, lettuce, macédoine, milanaise, sorrel, piémontaise, risotto.

Noix, sous-noix and fricandeau, cold. NOIX, SOUS-NOIX, FRICANDEAU, FROIDS – These pieces may be served cold. Braise and allow to cool in the strained braising liquor. Coat with the same liquor, jellied, and garnish with chopped jelly.

Serve with any of the garnishes used to garnish cold meat and poultry.

Veal offal or variety meats. ABATS DE VEAU – Veal offal or variety meat is delicate in flavour and lends itself to a considerable number of treatments. (See OFFAL or VARIETY MEATS.)

Paupiettes of veal. PAUPIETTES DE VEAU – The paupiettes are made with escalopes of veal flattened well, rolled up and spread with Quenelle forcemeat (see FORCEMEAT) mixed with duxelles (q.v.) or chopped truffes.

Braise very slowly, coat with the braising liquor, and serve with one of the garnishes given for veal chops or escalopes.

Paupiettes of veal braised à blanc. PAUPIETTES DE VEAU BRAISÉES À BLANC – Proceed, using paupiettes, in the same way as for Calf's sweetbreads braised in white stock (see OFFAL or VARIETY MEATS).

Paupiettes of veal braised à brun. PAUPIETTES DE VEAU BRAISÉES À BRUN – Spread the paupiettes with Pork forcemeat (see FORCEMEAT) mixed with dry duxelles (q.v.) and chopped parsley and bound with egg. Roll them up, bard with bacon and tie them. Put them into a buttered sauté pan, lined with strips of pork skin or bacon rinds and chopped onions and carrots, lightly cooked in butter. Put a bouquet garni in the middle. Season with salt and pepper. Cover and cook gently on the stove for 10 minutes. Pour in 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) white wine or Madeira for every 10 paupiettes. Boil down this liquid to almost nothing. Pour in, to three-quarters of the depth of the paupiettes, thickened veal gravy. Cook, covered, in the oven, basting often, for 45 minutes to 1 hour.

Drain the paupiettes, untie them and remove the bards. Glaze them. Set on a serving-dish and coat with the braising liquor, boiled down and strained.

Paupiettes braised à brun are accompanied by vegetables mixed with butter or braised. These may be cooked with the veal, as in Paupiettes of veal à la bourgeoise, à la bourguignonne, à la chipolata, etc.

When the paupiettes are accompanied by buttered vegetables or purée of vegetables, the vegetables are served separately.

Paupiettes of veal à la grecque – See PAUPIETTES.

Hot fillet of veal pâté – See PÂTÉS.

Leg of veal, from which the topside is cut

Quasi and rouelle of veal (English chump end of loin, U.S.A. standing rump and heel of round). QUASI ET ROUELLE DE VEAU – The quasi is a piece taken from the leg. It is cooked in a covered pan in butter, or braised.

Rib (carré) of veal. CARRÉ DE VEAU – Best end of neck (U.S.A. rib) is scarcely ever cooked in one piece. This joint is nevertheless excellent, baked, roasted or braised.

Cut down the top of the joint, and remove the spinal bone (this makes the joint easier to carve). Season and wrap in thin bards of bacon fat.

Roast in the oven, allowing 30 minutes to the pound at 160°C. (325°F., Gas Mark 3) or pot-roast or braise it.

Remove the bacon fat and string. Garnish with watercress and serve with its cooking juices, diluted if the meat has been roasted. If it has been braised or cooked covered, surround it with the garnish.

Any of the garnishes indicated elsewhere for loin or noix of veal are applicable to the carré, whether roasted, pot-roasted or braised.

Cold rib of veal. CARRÉ DE VEAU FROID – Roast the rib of veal, trim, coat with jelly, set on a serving dish and garnish with cress.

Cold rib of veal may be prepared as described in any of the recipes given elsewhere for loin or noix of veal.

Saddle of veal. SELLE DE VEAU – This cut consists of the

How to cut ribs of veal entire back of the animal. It is braised, pot-roasted or roasted, and accompanied by any of the garnishes normally served with meat, especially those given for Noix of veal.

Sautéed veal. SAUTÉS DE VEAU – Made from the same cuts as ragoûts. After the meat has been lightly fried, the juices in the pan are diluted with white wine, and stock or sauce of some kind, varying according to the recipe, is added.

Cut the veal into pieces of regular size and shape. Season and cook lightly in butter, oil or fat, according to the nature of the preparation. Drain off the fat, dilute the remaining juices with white wine and add veal gravy or Demi-glace sauce (see SAUCE).

Cook covered for 1 or 1½ hours.

Drain the pieces of meat. Trim them and put into another saucepan. Add the garnish, pour over the strained sauce from which all grease has been removed, and simmer together for 15 to 20 minutes over a low heat.

Serve in a deep dish, with a border of rice.

When thick veal gravy or demi-glace sauce is not available, the veal may be moistened with stock or water and thickened with Kneaded butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters). It may also be treated in the way suggested for ragoûts, and sprinkled with flour and moistened with the prescribed liquid.

Sautéed veal with aubergines. SAUTÉ DE VEAU AUX AUBERGINES – Like Sautéed lamb with aubergines made with shoulder chops or end chops of veal, boned and cut into square pieces.

Sautéed veal with cèpes, morels or St. George's agarics. SAUTÉ DE VEAU AVEC CÈPES, MORILLES, MOUSSERONS – Prepare as for Sautéed lamb with cèpes (see LAMB).

Sautéed veal chasseur. SAUTÉ DE VEAU CHASSEUR – Cook 750 g. (1½ lb.) veal lightly in a mixture of butter and oil. Dilute with a little dry white wine, add 4 chopped shallots and stir in veal stock and Tomato sauce (see SAUCE). Add a bouquet garni. Cook for 1½ hours.

Sautéed veal Clamart. SAUTÉ DE VEAU CLAMART – Prepare the sautéed veal as in the first recipe. When the pieces of veal are almost cooked, drain them and put them in the sauté pan. Cover them with peas cooked à la française, but not completely cooked. Pour over strained liquor from the sauté. Finish cooking, covered, in the oven.

Sautéed veal à la crème. SAUTÉ DE VEAU À LA CRÈME – Prepare like Sautéed lamb à la crème (see LAMB), using boned veal cut into small squares.

Sautéed veal aux fines herbes. SAUTÉ DE VEAU AUX FINES HERBES – Prepare like Sautéed lamb aux fines herbes (see LAMB).

Sautéed veal à la hongroise. SAUTÉ DE VEAU À LA HONGROISE – Cook 750 g. (1½ lb.) veal, cut in pieces, lightly in butter. When it is half cooked add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) chopped onion and sprinkle with paprika. Dilute the pan juices with white wine, stir in 8 dl. (1½ pints, 1¾ pints) light Velouté sauce (see SAUCE) and add a bouquet garni. Cook for 1½ hours.

Drain the pieces, trim and put into another sauté pan. Pour over the sauce, strained and diluted with a few tablespoons cream. Simmer for 15 minutes. Serve in a deep dish.

Sautéed veal à l'indienne. SAUTÉ DE VEAU À L'INDIENNE – Cook the veal lightly in butter. When it is half cooked add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) chopped onion. Cook together for 5 minutes.

Drain off the fat, sprinkle with a teaspoon curry powder and a tablespoon flour. Cook till golden. Stir in 8 dl. (1½ pints, 1¾ pints) white stock and add a bouquet garni. Cook for 1½ hours.

Serve with Rice à l'indienne (see RICE).

Sautéed veal Marengo. SAUTÉ DE VEAU MARENGO – Cook 750 g. (1½ lb.) veal lightly in oil. When it is half cooked add 2

How to turn out a rice border for a sauté of veal tablespoons (3 tablespoons) chopped onion and a crushed clove of garlic.

Dilute the pan juices with white wine. Stir in 6 dl. (1 pint, 2½ cups) thickened veal stock and 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) Tomato sauce (see SAUCE). Add a bouquet garni. Cook for 1½ hours.

Drain the pieces, trim them and put them back in a sauté pan with 12 small glacé onions and 12 mushrooms sautéed in oil. Pour over them the sauce, strained and with all grease removed, and simmer for 15 minutes.

Set in a deep dish, sprinkle with chopped parsley and garnish with heart-shaped croûtons fried in butter or oil.

Although a preparation à la Marengo, a style chiefly applied to chicken (see CHICKEN, Sautéed chicken à la Marengo) normally includes truffles, crayfish and fried egg yolks, this veal sauté is garnished only with onions and mushrooms.

Sautéed veal à la minute. SAUTÉ DE VEAU À LA MINUTE – Cut boned shoulder chops or end chops of veal into small squares. Season them with salt and pepper and sauté quickly in hot butter. Finish cooking in the oven.

Arrange in a deep dish and pour over a sauce made by diluting the pan juices with 1½ dl. (¼ pint, ¾ cup) white wine, boiling down, adding a tablespoon dissolved meat glaze, 3 tablespoons (scant ¼ cup) butter and the juice of half a lemon and stir well. Sprinkle with chopped parsley.

Sautéed veal with mushrooms. SAUTÉ DE VEAU AUX CHAMPIGNONS – Fry 750 g. (1½ lb.) veal, cut as for a ragoût and seasoned with salt and pepper, lightly in butter.

Drain off all fat, dilute the pan juices with white wine and add 8 dl. (1½ pints, 1¾ pints) stock or thickened veal stock or a light Demi-glaze sauce (see SAUCE).

Add a bouquet garni, and cook very slowly for 1½ hours.

Drain the pieces of meat, trim and put them into another sauté pan with 250 g. (9 oz., 3 cups) mushrooms previously sautéed in butter, whole if they are small, sliced if they are large.

Pour over the strained sauce from which all grease has been removed. Boil down, if necessary. Simmer all together for 15 minutes.

Sautéed veal à la portugaise. SAUTÉ DE VEAU À LA PORTUGAISE – Cook the veal lightly in oil with 1 tablespoon chopped onion and a crushed clove of garlic.

Dilute the pan juices with white wine. Stir in 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) concentrated and thickened veal gravy and 4 dl. (¾ pint, scant 2 cups) Tomato sauce (see SAUCE). Season, add a bouquet garni and cook for 1½ hours.

Drain the pieces, trim them, put into another sauté pan with 6 or 8 peeled, seeded, pressed tomatoes, cooked lightly in oil. Add a tablespoon chopped parsley, pour over the sauce, strained and boiled down, and simmer together for 15 minutes.

Sautéed veal à la printanière. SAUTÉ DE VEAU À LA PRINTANIÈRE – Prepare as for Sautéed veal with mushrooms. Garnish with 4 or 5 small new carrots, 2 small new turnips cut to look like olives, 12 small glazed onions and 100 g. (4 oz., ¾ cup) peas.

Small new potatoes may also be added to the garnish.

Sautéed veal with red wine I, or matelote of veal. SAUTÉ DE VEAU AU VIN ROUGE, MATELOTE DE VEAU – Cook 750 g. (1½ lb.) veal lightly in butter with a large onion cut into quarters. Pour in 6 dl. (1 pint, 2½ cups) red wine and 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) white stock. Add a crushed clove of garlic and a bouquet garni. Cook for 1½ hours.

Drain the pieces, trim and put into another sauté pan with 12 small glazed onions and 100 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) sliced mushrooms, sautéed in butter.

Pour in the cooking liquor boiled down by one-third, thickened with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) Kneaded butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters) and strained. Simmer, covered, for 15 minutes.

Sautéed veal with red wine II. SAUTÉ DE VEAU AU VIN ROUGE – Brown the pieces of veal, and sprinkle them with 1 tablespoon flour. Cook until the flour colours lightly. Stir in red wine and white stock and finish off in the same way as for Ragoûts à brun (see RAGOÛT, Method of cooking brown ragoûts).

Shoulder of veal. ÉPAULE DE VEAU – This large cut is generally boned before being cooked.

The meat must be well beaten, seasoned with salt and pepper, rolled and tied. Thus prepared, it can be pot-roasted, roasted or braised. Braised shoulder is prepared in the same way as Noix of veal and is served with the same garnishes.

The shoulder can also be stuffed with forcemeat. Boned, it is used to make ragoûts, fricassées, blanquettes and sautés, and different kinds of forcemeat (see FORCEMEAT).

Shoulder of veal à la boulangère. ÉPAULE DE VEAU À LA BOULANGÈRE – Proceed with a boned and rolled shoulder of veal as for Shoulder of mutton à la boulangère (see MUTTON).

Shoulder of veal à la bourgeoise. ÉPAULE DE VEAU À LA BOURGEOISE – Rolled, stuffing optional. Braise the shoulder in the usual way (see CULINARY METHODS, Braising white meat). Serve with a Bourgeoise garnish (see GARNISHES).

Stuffed shoulder of veal. ÉPAULE DE VEAU FARCIE – Bone a medium-sized shoulder of veal and beat the inside surface well. Season with salt, pepper and a pinch of spice. Spread with a thick layer of fine forcemeat or sausage meat mixed with chopped herbs and well seasoned. Roll up the shoulder and tie it to keep a good shape. Braise in the usual way.

Drain and remove the strings. Glaze the shoulder and set on a serving dish. Pour over a little of the braising liquor boiled down and strained, and serve either as it is or accompanied by a garnish.

Shoulder of veal stuffed à l'anglaise. ÉPAULE DE VEAU FARCIE À L'ANGLAISE – Stuff the boned shoulder with a forcemeat made of one-third calf's or ox kidney, one-third udder or veal fat (both these ingredients finely chopped), one-third bread-crumbs soaked in milk and pressed, and 2 eggs. Season and mix well.

Roll and tie the shoulder. Braise or roast as preferred. Serve accompanied by boiled bacon and sprinkled with some of the concentrated braising liquor or, if the shoulder is roasted, with its own juices.

Tendrons (breast) of veal. TENDRONS DE VEAU – These pieces are cut from the extremities of the ribs, from the point at which the chops are generally cut, to the sternum.

To qualify for the name tendron these pieces must include the full width of the breast. Cut across, they are not tendrons. Cut in square pieces they are sautéed or used to make ragoûts.

Tendrons are braised with very little liquid and can be accompanied by one of the garnishes given either for the Noix of veal or Fricandeau, or for the rib or loin. They may also be cooked in butter, without moisture, in a covered pan.

Tendrons à la bourgeoise. TENDRONS DE VEAU À LA BOURGEOISE – Braise 4 tendrons. When half-cooked add 12 small glazed onions, 12 carrots cut to look like olives and glazed, and 50 g. (2 oz.) diced streaky bacon, blanched and fried. Finish cooking together. Glaze the meat, set on a serving dish with the garnish and sprinkle with the cooking juices.

Tendrons chasseur. TENDRONS DE VEAU CHASSEUR – Cover the tendrons with butter and bake. In the same casserole cook lightly 150 g. (5 oz., 1¼ cups) chopped mushrooms. Dilute the cooking juices with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) white wine, add 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) Demi-glace sauce and ½ dl. (3 tablespoons, scant ¼ cup) Tomato sauce (see SAUCE).

Boil for a few moments, pour over the tendrons and sprinkle with chopped parsley, chervil and tarragon.

Tendrons à la jardinière. TENDRONS DE VEAU À LA JARDINIÈRE – Braise the tendrons or pot-roast them, covered with butter. Set them on a serving dish with a Jardinière garnish (see GARNISHES). Sprinkle with cooking juices.

Tendrons with mushrooms. TENDRONS DE VEAU AUX CHAMPIGNONS – Prepare as for Tendrons à la jardinière. Garnish with 150 g. (5 oz., 1¼ cups) peeled mushrooms.

Tendrons with noodles or risotto. TENDRONS DE VEAU AUX NOUILLES, AU RISOTTO – Braised or pot-roasted tendrons accompanied by noodles or a risotto. Sprinkle with their cooking juices.

Tendrons à la provençale. TENDRONS DE VEAU À LA PROVENÇALE – Prepare in the same way as Knuckle of veal à la provençale.

Tendrons with risotto. TENDRONS DE VEAU AU RISOTTO – Braise the tendrons with as little liquid as possible. Set them on a dish and garnish with a risotto to which diced mushrooms and truffles has been added.

Tendrons with spinach or sorrel. TENDRONS DE VEAU AUX ÉPINARDS, À L'OSEILLE – Braise the tendrons and serve sprinkled with their cooking juices accompanied by spinach in butter or sorrel, braised separately.

VÉFOUR – See RESTAURANTS OF BYGONE DAYS.

VEGETABLE. LÉGUME – A vegetable is any kitchen-garden plant used for food. Vegetables are very important in our diet. The great variety of dishes available to us is due to the plants, vegetables, and condiments which provide a rich range of flavours. Vegetables have been fundamental to the art of cooking since that remote time in antiquity when one of our ancestors first hit upon the idea of cooking a piece of meat and a few roots in the same pot.

All the essentials of a balanced diet are present in vegetables: protein, fats, carbohydrates, mineral salts and vitamins. Though the amount of each of these elements varies in different vegetables, in no other type of food are they more readily assimilable.

A vast number of plants, edible in their wild state, have been greatly improved by cultivation and selective breeding. In some vegetables one part is edible, in others, another. Roots, bulbs or tubers are eaten such as potatoes, sweet potatoes, yams, root chervil, various kinds of Jerusalem artichoke, carrots, various kinds of turnips, black radishes, radishes, kohlrabi, celeriac, beetroot, black and white salsify, Chinese artichoke, onions, sorrel, etc. We eat the young shoots of asparagus, hops, bramble, etc., and the stems of leeks, edible thistle, celery, beet and rhubarb, etc. We eat the leaves of spinach, orach, tetragonia, purslane, sorrel, all kinds of cabbage, lettuce, chicory, endive, watercress, dandelion, corn-salad, etc. In the case of cauliflowers and artichokes, etc., we eat the 'flowers'.

Tomatoes, cucumbers, small and large marrows (squashes), melons, ladies' fingers (okra), sweet peppers and pumpkins are all fruits. We also eat ripe seeds, such as cereals and pulses, and other seeds before they are fully ripe, such as green peas, sugar-peas and beans, green corn, etc. If we add fungi and truffles to this list, it will be obvious that strict vegetarians need not want for a varied diet.

Green vegetables have a particularly important part to play in nutritional equilibrium for they contain alkaline substances which neutralise the acids produced by protein foods. Some contain minerals, such as calcium, iron, sulphur, sodium, magnesium, potassium and iodine, also some of the vitamins A, the B group, and C, which play an active part in balancing the nerve cells. Their nutritional value is not very high (an average of 20 calories per 100 g.) so it is wise to alternate them with starchy and dried vegetables.

Most vegetables lose some of their water in cooking (this is true even of boiled vegetables) and, in consequence, suffer a loss of weight. This loss is much more substantial in the case of green vegetables than roots or tubers. Cereals and pulses generally increase in weight in cooking. This is especially true of dried vegetables. Dried vegetables are often soaked in water before cooking. It is always advisable to cook them in the water in which they have been soaking.

Modern methods of preserving vegetables, especially freezing, keep their nutritive values although they may never replace garden-fresh vegetables. However, preserved vegetables provide great variety to the menu. (See PRESERVATION OF FOOD.)

Vegetable fumet. FUMET DE LÉGUMES – This fumet is made by boiling down to make a very strong stock of different vegetables, such as carrots, onions, leeks and celery.

Vegetable julienne à la bretonne. JULIENNE DE LÉGUMES À LA BRETONNE – Shred finely the white part of 2 leeks, 4 sticks of white celery and 1 small onion. Cook them slowly in 3 tablespoons (scant ¼ cup) butter. Season. When the vegetables are almost cooked, add 50 g. (2 oz., 1 cup) shredded raw mushrooms.

According to the main dish with which it is to be served, blend either with meat or vegetable Velouté sauce (see SAUCE) and a few tablespoons cream, or serve plain.

Vegetable loaves. PAIN DE LÉGUMES - These loaves are usually made of braised vegetables, mixed with eggs beaten as for an omelette, poured into a buttered plain mould and cooked in a bain-marie.

By following the recipe given for Endive loaf (see ENDIVE), various other vegetable loaves can be made: artichoke, aubergine, carrot, cauliflower, spinach, lettuce, turnip, etc.

This type of loaf, made in large moulds, is served as a small entrée. It usually has a cream sauce, poured over.

Small vegetable loaves are used as a garnish for meat and broiled, braised or poached poultry. They can also be used for garnishing fish dishes or poached or soft-boiled eggs.

Vegetable pickles (achards) (commercial product) - A mixture of different vegetables and fruit spiced with vinegar and mustard. Achards can be bought ready-made but here is a recipe to prepare it in the home. Divide into quarters, or pieces: asparagus tips, very small maize (corn), new carrots, white and red radishes, celeriac, turnips and artichoke hearts. Add flowers of cauliflower, whole almonds still green and hardly formed, a few blanched almonds, small green walnuts, cumquats, very small apricots, green apples in quarters, green and red pimentos, mushrooms and gherkins.

Blanch all these ingredients for 1 minute in boiling salt water, drain, and marinate them for 24 hours in vinegar. Drain, mix together and put them in a jar. Cover with the following marinade: To make 4 litres (3½ quarts, 4½ quarts) in all; boil 3 litres (5¼ pints, 6½ pints) strong vinegar, remove from heat and add 25 g. (1 oz., ½ cup) coriander, 100 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) powdered ginger, 50 g. (2 oz., ½ cup) peppercorns, 4 tablespoons (½ cup) mustard, 4 teaspoons paprika pepper, 4 teaspoons saffron and 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) salt.

Cover the marinade and let it stand for 10 minutes. Strain through a cloth and filter. Add 1 litre (1½ pints, generous quart) oil and mix well. Put the vegetables and fruit in jars and cover with the marinade. Seal firmly and expose to the sun for 8 to 10 days.

Vegetable stalks and stumps. MOELLES VÉGÉTALES - The French word moelle derives from molle (soft) and is applied in cookery to certain tender vegetable stalks and the tender parts of vegetable stumps.

VEGETABLE CALENDAR. CALENDRIER DES LÉGUMES -

January - White or common garlic, Provençal artichokes (early variety usually eaten raw, often in oil), forced asparagus (early, very scarce and very expensive), asparagus, beetroot, cardoons, medium-length carrots, celery and celeriac, chervil, bulbous chervil, mushrooms (cultivated), endive (chicory) and escarole, improved wild chicory (smaller rosettes) and wild chicory (barbe-de-capucin), Belgian endive. Round-headed white cabbages and curly Savoy cabbages, Brussels sprouts, cauliflowers from Brittany and the Midi, swedes and flat-rooted turnips, watercress, Japanese artichokes. Shallots. Haricot beans (early, imported), dried haricot beans. Chinese yams (roots similar in taste to the potato). Lettuces (early, forced), cos lettuces from the Midi (early), dried lentils. Corn salad. Flat-rooted turnips and tankard turnips. Yellow onions, sorrel. Parsnips, round and long, common parsley and large-rooted parsley (rare), white dandelions (improved cultivated variety), Parisian long leeks, very large leeks from Rouen and Carentan, Swiss chard, green peas from Algeria (early), yellow and red pumpkins. Radishes, round and medium-length (early, forced), black winter radishes, wild horseradish (roots). White salsify and black salsify (scorzonera), Spanish scolyme (a kind of rare salsify). Tomatoes (early, imported), truffles.

February - White or common garlic, Provençal artichokes (early variety, usually eaten raw, often in oil, forced asparagus (early, very scarce and very expensive). Red salad beetroot (sold cooked). Celery, celeriac, chervil, bulbous chervil, mushrooms (cultivated), endive (chicory) and escarole, improved wild chicory (smaller rosettes), wild chicory (barbe-de-capucin) Belgian chicory, round-headed white cabbages and curly Savoy cabbages, red cabbages, Brussels sprouts, cauliflowers (from Brittany and the Midi), swedes and kohlrabi, watercress, Japanese artichokes. Shallots, spinach. String beans (imported, early). Chinese yams (roots similar in taste to the potato). Lettuces (forced), cos lettuces from the Midi (early), bay laurel. Lambs-lettuce. Flat-rooted turnips and tankard turnips. Yellow onions, sorrel (expensive). Parsnips, long and round, common parsley, dandelions (improved cultivated white variety, forced), Swiss chard, green peas (imported), split peas, long leeks from Rouen and Carentan, old potatoes, new potatoes from Algeria (early), winter gourds (U.S. winter squash). Round and medium-length radishes (early), black winter radishes, wild horseradish (roots). White salsify, scorzonera or black salsify. Tomatoes (imported, early), Jerusalem artichokes.

March - White or common garlic, Midi artichokes (for eating raw, and cooking), asparagus (branched or petits pois variety, expensive), forced asparagus (less expensive than the preceding month). Red salad beetroot (sold cooked). Red carrots, globular type (early), celery, celeriac, chervil, mushrooms (cultivated), endive (chicory) and escarole, wild chicory (mignonnette variety), wild chicory, improved wild chicory (rosettes), Belgian chicory, round-headed white cabbage and Savoy cabbage (late), red cabbages, Brussels sprouts, cauliflowers, swedes, cucumbers, green and white varieties. Japanese artichokes. Shallots, spinach. String beans (imported, early). dried haricot beans. Cabbage and cos lettuces (forced). Lambs-lettuce, melons (imported and forced, very expensive). Flat-rooted and long-rooted turnips. Yellow onions, sorrel. Parsnips, round and long, common parsley, green dandelions (field variety), white dandelions (forced), long leeks from Rouen and Carentan, green peas (early), old potatoes, new potatoes from Algeria (early), yellow and red gourds, squashes and pumpkins. Radishes, round and medium-length (early), black radishes. White salsify and black salsify. Thyme, imported tomatoes (early), Jerusalem artichokes, truffles.

April - White or common garlic, artichokes from Provence and Algeria, asparagus (seasonal variety). Carrots, old and new, celery, chervil, mushrooms (cultivated), mushrooms and morels (expensive), wild chicory (mignonnette), improved wild chicory, Belgian chicory, (more and more scarce), late round-headed white cabbage, new headed cabbage, late Savoy cabbage, Brussels sprouts (the last), cauliflowers (from all quarters), sprouting broccoli, spring onions and chives, cucumbers, green and white, seakale, watercress. Shallots, (the last), spinach, tarragon. Dried haricot beans. Cabbage lettuces and cos lettuces, bay laurel, dried lentils. Lambs-lettuce (the last), melons (early, expensive). Turnips, white medium-length (early). Onions, white and yellow, (new), sorrel (new). Parsnips (the last), common parsley and curled parsley, green dandelions (field variety), forced white dandelions (the last), leeks, long and stout from Rouen, green peas (early), peas, mange-tout (early), potatoes, early and late. Radishes, round and medium-length (early), horseradish (roots). Scorzonera or black salsify (the last). Thyme, imported tomatoes (early), Jerusalem artichokes.

May - Artichokes (from Provence, Algeria and Brittany), Argenteuil asparagus. Basil (the whole aromatic plant, condiment). Carrots, new, mushrooms (cultivated), mushrooms, morels and cèpes, chervil, endive (chicory) and wild chicory (mignonnette), York cabbage and bullock's heart, cauliflower and broccoli, spring onions and chives, cucumbers (green and white), gherkins from the Midi, sea-kale, watercress. Spinach, tarragon. String beans (from the Midi and Algeria). Summer cabbage, lettuce and cos lettuce, yellow and green, bay laurel. Melons (early). Turnips, white, round and medium-length (early). Sorrel. Samphire, common and curly parsley, leeks (the last), green peas (from the Midi and Algeria), new potatoes (there are no more old ones). Round and medium length radishes (early), horseradish (roots), rhubarb (stalks for stewing and preserves). Thyme, tomatoes (imported).

VEGETABLE PEAR

June – Garlic (new), garden orach (leaves eaten like spinach), artichokes from Provence and Brittany, artichokes from Laon (last two weeks), Argenteuil asparagus (early). Basil (the whole aromatic plant, condiment). Early carrots (new hardy), chervil, mushrooms (cultivated), cèpes and chanterelles, endive, York cabbages and bullock's heart, cauliflowers, spring onions and chives, cucumbers and gherkins, watercress, shallots (new), tarragon. Broad beans. String beans from the Midi and Algeria, dried haricot beans. Cabbage and cos lettuces (any amount), bay laurel. Melons (forced and from the Midi). Turnips (hardy). White onions (seasonal), sorrel. Parsnips (new), samphire, common and curly parsley, leeks (new), green peas, potatoes (new, hardy), green purslane. Rhubarb (stalks for stewing and preserves). Thyme, tomatoes (imported).

July – Garlic (new), garden orach (leaves eaten like spinach), green artichokes from Laon and the camus artichokes from Brittany, late asparagus (the last), aubergines. Basil (the whole aromatic plant, condiment). Carrots (premature, outdoor), mushrooms (cultivated), cèpes and chanterelles, chervil, cucumbers, gherkins, endive (chicory), white-heart York cabbage and bullock's heart, cauliflowers, watercress, garden cress, courgettes. Tarragon. Broad beans. String beans from Bagnole called petits gris and others, butter beans and mange-tout, fresh shelling haricot beans. Summer cabbage and cos lettuce, bay laurel, lavender and rosemary. Cantaloup melons and others. Long-rooted and flat-rooted turnips. White onions, sorrel. Parsnip (new), common and curly parsley, peppers, imported or from the Midi, leeks (new summer variety), small green peas, large sweet rugose peas, split peas, potatoes (new, outdoor), green and golden purslane (for salads). Round and medium-length radishes. New Zealand spinach, thyme, tomatoes from the Midi.

August – Garlic, garden orach, green artichokes from Laon, large camus artichokes from Brittany, aubergines. Carrots (red, short and medium-length), chervil, mushrooms, Bordeaux cèpes, endive and escarole, curly savoy cabbage (early), round-headed cabbages (second season), cauliflowers, kohlrabi, spring onions and chives, cucumbers and gherkins, watercress, garden cress. Shallots, tarragon. String beans (of all varieties), fresh podding haricot beans. Cabbage and cos lettuces, bay laurel, Cantaloup melons and others. Long-rooted and flat-rooted turnips. Yellow onions, sorrel. Parsnips (long and round), peppers, summer leeks (short leeks), Clamart peas and others, large sweet rugose peas, peas (mange-tout), early potatoes, purslane, green and gold, for salad. Savory, thyme, tomatoes, spinach.

September – Pink garlic, Laon artichokes, aubergines. Carrots, (red, short and medium length), celery, chervil, mushrooms (cultivated), cèpes and chanterelles, skirret (a kind of salsify), endive and escarole, round-headed cabbages and curly savoy cabbages, cauliflowers, spring onions and chives, cucumbers and gherkins, gourds (winter squash – premature), watercress, garden cress. String beans, French beans (mange-tout), fresh podding haricot beans (white and coloured). Cabbage and cos lettuces, bay laurel, dried lentils. Chestnuts and marrons (Lyons variety) water melons (pastèques). Long-rooted and flat-rooted turnips. Yellow onions, sorrel. Parsnips, common and curly parsley, peppers, new leeks, Swiss chard, late green peas and large sweet rugose peas (mange-tout), potatoes (mature), purslane, green and gold, (salad variety). Radishes, long and medium-length. Spanish scolyne (a kind of salsify). Thyme, tomatoes (outdoor). New Zealand spinach.

October – Garlic, Laon artichokes, aubergines. Red carrots, (short, medium-length and long) celery, celeriac, mushrooms (cultivated), cèpes and chanterelles, skirret, chervil, endive and escarole, wild chicory. Belgian chicory, round-headed and curly savoy cabbages (autumn variety), cauliflowers, spring onions and chives, various gourds, watercress. Shallots, spinach. String beans, French beans (mange-tout), fresh podding haricot beans (white and coloured). Various varieties of cabbage lettuce, cos lettuces, yellow and green. Corn salad, chestnuts and marrons, Lyon variety, cantaloup melons and others. Long-rooted and flat-rooted turnips. Yellow onions, sorrel. Parsnips, common and curly parsley, peppers, dandelions (from the fields), leeks, Swiss chard, green peas, large sweet rugose peas, potatoes of all varieties, gourds and pumpkins. Radishes, long and medium-length (monthly), black winter radishes, horseradish (roots), rampion (the small white roots are eaten along with the leaves). White salsify, black salsify or scorzonera, Spanish scolyne. Thyme, tomatoes.

November – Garlic, green artichokes from Laon (scarce). Red beetroot (already cooked). Cardoons, red carrots, medium-length and long. Celery, celeriac, chervil, mushrooms (cultivated), skirret, endive and escarole, Belgian chicory, round-headed white cabbages and curly Savoy cabbages (autumn variety), Brussels sprouts, cauliflowers (late), swedes and kohlrabi, watercress, Japanese artichokes. Spinach. String beans, French beans (mange-tout), fresh podding haricot beans. Cabbage and cos lettuces. Lamb-lettuce. Long-rooted and flat-rooted turnips. Yellow onions, sorrel. Parsnips, round and long, common and curly parsley, leeks, Swiss chard, dandelions (from the fields), all varieties of potato, gourds and pumpkins. Radishes, round and medium-length (monthly), black winter radishes, rampion. White salsify, black salsify. Thyme, tomatoes (imported), truffles.

December – Garlic, forced asparagus (very scarce and very expensive, early). Salad beet (already cooked). Red carrots, long and medium-length, celery, celeriac, chervil, bulbous chervil, endive (chicory) and escarole, wild chicory, Belgian chicory, round-headed cabbages, curly savoy cabbages, Brussels sprouts, cauliflowers (late), swedes, spring onions and chives, watercress, Japanese artichokes. Shallots, spinach, dried haricot beans, string beans (imported, scarce, early variety). Winter lettuces (scarce and expensive). Lamb-lettuce. Long-rooted and flat-rooted turnips. Yellow onions, sorrel (grown under glass). Parsnips, common and curly parsley, white dandelions (forced), Swiss chard, potatoes (all varieties), pumpkins. Radishes (forced), horseradish (roots), rampion. White salsify, black salsify. Thyme, tomatoes (imported), truffles.

VEGETABLE PEAR – See CHAYOTE.

VELOUTÉ – This name is used more than anything else for a white sauce made with white veal or chicken stock, used as a base for a number of other sauces, notably allemande.

The word is also used to describe certain thickened soups (see SOUPS AND BROTHS).

There are meat and fish veloutés. The first is obtained by adding white stock, veal or poultry to white roux (a blend of butter and flour). The second is made with fish stock or fish fumet.

When egg yolks are added for thickening, the velouté becomes allemande sauce. This sauce is used very frequently.

Velouté is the basis for most white sauces. Recipes for these are to be found in alphabetical order under SAUCE.

VELVET SWIMMING CRAB. ENTRILLE – Common name for the small, delicate-fleshed crab (see CRAB).

VENISON. VENAISON – The meat of any kind of deer. In French, and formerly in English, it described the meat of any kind of game animal or wild beast killed for food, and basse venaison is the meat of hare or wild rabbit.

For other recipes for venison, see ROEBUCK.

Haunch of venison (English cookery). HANCHE DE VENAISON – Rub the quarter of venison with a mixture of flour and pepper, and hang it in a cool, well-aired place and leave for 3 or 4 days.

To cook. Trim and cover completely with Flour-and-water paste (see DOUGH). Wrap in strong paper, tie with string. Roast, basting often, allowing 3 to 4 hours for a haunch of venison.

Ten minutes before removing from the oven take off the flour-and-water paste, pour melted butter over the meat and sprinkle it with salt and flour. Brown in a very hot oven.

The custom in England is to serve the haunch of venison with boiled French beans and redcurrant jelly.

VENUS – Type of mollusc usually called the cockle, found in all seas.

All types of these are edible. They are eaten raw, like oysters, or cooked like mussels.

VERJUICE. VERJUS – Acid juice extracted from large unripened grapes, used like vinegar.

Some writers say that in former times the word verjus meant sauce verte, which was sold in the streets of Paris.

VERJUICE JELLY. CLAREQUETS DE VERJUS – Here is an ancient recipe for this jelly:

'Dilute 4 tablespoons ( $\frac{1}{3}$  cup) apple purée with  $3\frac{1}{2}$  litres (6 pints,  $7\frac{1}{2}$  pints) water; sieve until  $3\frac{1}{2}$  litres (6 pints,  $7\frac{1}{2}$  pints) of the mixture is obtained; pound and sieve  $3\frac{1}{2}$  litres (6 pints,  $7\frac{1}{2}$  pints) of under-ripe verjuice grapes.

'Clarify 750 g. ( $1\frac{3}{4}$  lb.,  $3\frac{1}{4}$  cups) sugar and cook to a hard crack (see SUGAR). Remove from the heat and add the verjuice and the apple mixture previously blended together with a wooden spoon.

'Reheat without boiling, then pour the jelly into claret (small) moulds and put in a warm place to set.'

VERMICELLI – A pasta whose descriptive name suggests its wormlike form. It is used for soups, puddings and soufflés.

VERMOUTH – Word deriving from the German vermut which means absinthe. A white wine flavoured with various bitter ingredients such as absinthe, anise, cinnamon, coriander, bitter orange peel, cloves, quassia, quinine, elderberries, etc.

VÉRON (Café) – See RESTAURANTS OF BYGONE DAYS.

VERT-PRÉ – Method of preparing certain grilled meats, garnished with straw potatoes and watercress and served with Maître d'hôtel butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters), containing plenty of chopped parsley.

Certain foodstuffs, such as poultry or fish, coated with Green mayonnaise (see SAUCE), are also called vert-pré.

VERVAIN, VERBENA. VERVEINE – Plant cultivated in gardens. The dried leaves of verbenas, which are highly scented, are used to make infusions.

VÉRY – See RESTAURANTS OF BYGONE DAYS.

VESPÉTRO – Old liqueur, which formerly had a high reputation, now hardly ever made in France.

It was made in the district round Metz, and its fame, which was very great in the eighteenth century, came chiefly from the fact that Louis XV drank a great deal of it to restore his failing strength. It was flavoured with the seeds of angelica, coriander, anise and fennel.

VETCH. GESSE – Name used for several different pulses, some of them used as food. The cultivated vetch, originally from the Caucasus, then cultivated in Spain, was imported into France about the middle of the seventeenth century. Its seeds are eaten green, like peas.

Chick-vetch is used in the same way as chick-peas. The tuber-vetch has a starchy root which is roasted in hot ash, and tastes rather like chestnuts.

VICHY (Carrots à la) – Carrots are thought to be good for affections of the liver and are much used at Vichy, whose waters are particularly favourable for hepatic conditions. For the preparation of Carrots à la Vichy (see CARROTS).

VICTORIA – There are a great number of dishes dedicated to Queen Victoria. Some of the best known are: sole (or other fish) Victoria, poularde Victoria, salade Victoria and bombe Victoria.

VICTORIA CAKE – Made like plum cake using 1 kg. ( $2\frac{1}{4}$  lb.,  $4\frac{1}{2}$  cups) butter, 750 g. ( $1\frac{3}{4}$  lb.,  $3\frac{1}{2}$  cups) sugar, 250 g. (9 oz., generous 2 cups) ground almonds mixed with 2 eggs, 22 eggs (put in one by one),  $1\frac{1}{2}$  kg. ( $3\frac{1}{2}$  lb., 14 cups) flour mixed with 3 teaspoons baking powder, 500 g. (18 oz.,  $2\frac{1}{4}$  cups) crystallised cherries, 400 g. (14 oz.,  $1\frac{1}{4}$  cups) chopped peel, 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) rum, the grated rind of 2 lemons, 2 teaspoons cinnamon and 2 teaspoons powdered cloves.

VIDELLE – Small implement used in confectionery to remove the stones from fruits. Also known by this name is a kind of wheel pastry-cutter.

VIENNESE PASTRY. KNUSPER – Make a short pastry from 350 g. (12 oz., 3 cups) sieved flour, 225 g. (8 oz., 1 cup) butter, 175 g. (6 oz., scant cup) sugar, 1 teaspoon cinnamon and, if necessary, a little milk. Let the dough stand for 15 minutes. Roll it out and spread in a buttered baking tin. Brush the surface with egg and sprinkle with chopped almonds and crystallised sugar. Bake at 190°C. (375°F., Gas Mark 5). When the cake is a good colour, take it out of the oven. While it is still hot cut it into rectangles. It can be eaten fresh or kept for several days in a tin.

VIERGE – Butter mixed with salt, pepper and lemon juice, beaten well in a bowl until it becomes frothy. This whipped butter is served with asparagus and other boiled vegetables.

VILLEDIEU – See CHEESE.

VIN DU MARCHÉ or POT DE VIN – Formerly this was the wine given as a present to someone who had acted as an intermediary in a business transaction. It was later replaced by a present of any kind or a sum of money.

VIN DES NOCES (Marriage wine) – This wine was a gift offered to the priest who performed a marriage ceremony. 'In certain dioceses,' says M. Chernel (Dictionnaire historiques des institutions, moeurs et coutumes de France) 'the priest, in blessing the nuptial bed, mixed together red and white wine to symbolize the union of the bride and bridegroom.'

'In the diocese of Amiens, the priest began by blessing the bread and wine. He then dipped three roties (rusks) in the wine, one for himself, one for the bridal pair and the third for the friends and relations present at the ceremony. After taking his own, he gave the bridal pair theirs and finished with that of the other guests. Then he blessed the bed.'

VINAGE, FORTIFICATION

VINAGE, FORTIFICATION – Addition of alcohol to a must or a wine.

VINAIGRETTE – Mixture of oil and vinegar seasoned with salt and pepper and sometimes with the addition of chopped herbs. (See SAUCE, Cold sauces.)

VINAIGRIER – Small barrel, of wood or earthenware, in which vinegar is made.

VINCENT – Cold sauce prepared with various herbs, blanched, pounded and sieved, and hard boiled eggs. (See SAUCE, Cold sauces.)

Pruning the vine in the Médoc

VINE, VIGNE – Plant growing wild in Europe and Asia Minor, whose discovery is attributed to divine intervention. It is mentioned in Genesis and in the most ancient Egyptian and Greek documents. In antiquity the Greek vine growers of Scio were particularly renowned. Among the Romans the wines of Campania, Falernia, Massicus, etc. held first place.

It appears from recent archaeological discoveries that vines had been cultivated in Gaul long before the country's occupation by the Greeks and the Romans. But although the invaders were not responsible for introducing the vine to the country, they probably gave considerable impetus to its development. And while they may not have actually taught the Gauls how to make wine from fermented grape juice, they were almost certainly responsible for introducing more elaborate processes of vinification.

The legend of the vine (from the Talmud) :

Noah planted the vine.

'And what are you doing there?' the devil asked him.

'I am planting a vine.'

'What is the use of that?'

'Its fruit, freshly picked or dried, is sweet and good: the pressed juice gladdens the heart of man.'

'Let us work together,' said the devil.

Spraying vines in the Gironde

'I should like that,' said Noah.

The vine planted, the devil went in search of a lamb, a lion, a monkey and a pig. He cut their throats and poured their blood on the ground.

'That is why when man eats the fruit of the vine he is as gentle as a lamb, when he drinks wine he believes himself a lion, if by chance he drinks too much he grimaces like a monkey and when he is often drunk he is nothing more than a vile pig.'

Vine leaves. FEUILLES DE VIGNE – See LEAF.

VINEGAR. VINAIGRE – Produce of the acetic fermentation of wine under the action of a fungus, the Mycoderma aceti, making its first appearance in the form of a light veil, which penetrates the liquid more and more, forming a thick, folded, sticky skin, which is called the mère de vinaigre. This micro-organism is developed between 15° and 30° C. (59° and 86° F.).

A good vinegar must be clear and transparent, colourless if it is made from white wine, pinkish if it comes from red wine, but always lighter coloured than the latter. It must have a frankly acid taste, and an aroma recalling that of the wine from which it comes.

Vinegar is made of any kind of alcoholic liquid (alcoholised water, beer, cider, perry, milk, etc.). Alcohol vinegar is colourless if it has not been tinted with caramel. Cider vinegar is yellowish, always less acid than wine vinegar; beer vinegar is yellow, slightly bitter and its flavour recalls that of bitter beer. Glucose vinegar has a taste of fermented flour; wood vinegar has an acid taste; vinegar made from piquettes or from marc has a characteristic smell.

It is an everyday condiment, serving to conserve some substances in marinades or pickles, and has no disadvantages, so long as acid condiments are not forbidden in the diet. For table use, vinegar is often flavoured with tarragon, onion, shallot, herbs, etc.

The use of vinegar as seasoning for foodstuffs has a high place in the story of human diet. Greek and Roman antiquity, oxybaphon and acetabulum (vinegar vessel) were the names for bowls that were placed, filled with vinegar, on the dining table, for guests to dip their bread in.

In the thirteenth century, among the street vendors who had the right to cry their wares in Paris, some rolled a barrel in the street, announcing to the *hôteli*ers and housewives:

'Vinaigres bons et biaux! vinaigre de moutarde i ail!' ('Good and beautiful vinegars! Mustard and garlic vinegar!').

In 1657, an edict of Charles IX accorded the bourgeois of Paris the privilege of selling vinegar made from the wine of their vineyards, in small quantities and à pot, and it was chiefly this that the young boys sold as they wheeled their barrows from one district to another, crying at every door, 'marchand de vinaigre! du bon vinaigre!'

Aromatic vinegar. VINAIGRE AROMATIQUE – A mixture of 125 g. (4 oz.) spirit of aromatic herbs with 9 dl. (1½ pints, 2 pints) vinegar.

Raspberry vinegar. VINAIGRE FRAMBOISE – Pour into a stoneware jar 2 litres (3½ pints, 4½ pints) vinegar and as many raspberries as it will hold. Leave for 8 days. Strain without pressure through a horsehair strainer.

Rose vinegar. VINAIGRE ROSAT – Add 100 g. (4 oz.) red rose petals to 1 litre (1¾ pints, generous quart) of vinegar and leave to macerate for 10 days.

VIOLET. VIOLETTE – The sweet violet is one of the species of fleurs pectorales. Their petals are candied in sugar.

Candied violets are used in pastry-making, confectionery, the making of ices and iced mousses, and in the preparation of salads.

VIRGOULEUSE – Winter pear, so called because it comes from the commune of Virgoulée, near Limoges.

VISNISKI (Russian cookery) – Rissole made with coulibiach paste (see COULIBIACH) filled with fish forcemeat seasoned with fennel, and fried.

Fish visniski. VISNISKI AU POISSON – Make some coulibiach dough. Roll out and cut with a pastry-cutter into pieces about 5 cm. (2 inches) in diameter.

Garnish with chopped cooked fish to which chopped fennel has been added. Season and blend with a thick meatless Velouté (see SAUCE). The portions of the garnish should be the size of a walnut. Cover with a round of coulibiach dough of the same size as the first one.

Put the visniski on a baking-tray. Let them rise in a warm place for 25 minutes. Fry in very hot oil. Drain and serve.

VITAMINS. VITAMINES – Substances indispensable to nutrition, whose absence can cause serious disorders.

Vitamin A. Derived mainly from carotene, a yellow pigment that is found extensively in some vegetables, particularly green ones and carrots. The vitamin also exists in some animal foods. Its absence gives rise to eye troubles and, in young people, a stoppage of growth.

Vitamin B. This was first discovered in the husks of rice. It is nowadays seen as a compound, composed mainly of three factors:

Vitamin B<sub>1</sub>. Nitrogen base, related to the alkaloids destroyed by high temperatures and alkalis. It is an antineurotic factor and plays its part in the equilibrium of the nervous system.

Vitamin B<sub>2</sub>. Riboflavin, a yellow substance found in milk, eggs and in liver. It resists all but very high degrees of heat and alkalis. It has an effect on growth, and its absence causes skin troubles similar to pellagra.

Vitamin B<sub>3</sub>. Resists heat, but is destroyed by alkalis; it is a factor in the utilisation of foodstuffs by the body.

These three elements are usually found together, but in proportions which vary from one foodstuff to another.

Absence of vitamin B from the diet gives rise to neurotic complaints and to beri-beri. There is a tendency to attribute certain digestive complaints, like constipation, diarrhoea, vomiting, loss of appetite, etc., to a slight deficiency of vitamin B.

Vitamin C. This is also known as ascorbic acid. It is found mainly in citrus fruits, blackcurrants and green vegetables. Necessary for the growth of children, and healthy skin and firm, strong muscles.

Vitamin D. Necessary for the absorption and laying down of calcium and phosphorus in bones which helps to keep them strong. It is found in dairy products and oily fish.

Vitamin E. Essential for normal metabolism and found in vegetable oils, wheat germ and eggs.

Vitamins in dietetics – The role that vitamins play in the phenomena of nutrition is still not completely clear but there is no doubt that these chemical substances so extraordinarily active in infinitesimal amounts are essential for the proper functioning of the human organism. A tolerably accurate assessment of individual vitamin requirements has been reached as a result of a multiple series of experiments on animals and humans. Such experiments took into account the geographical location, temperament, age of the individual and the muscular effort required of him.

Vitamins are divided into two categories: those soluble in fats (liposoluble vitamins), namely Vitamins A, D, E and K; and those soluble in water (hydro-soluble vitamins) – the Vitamin B groups and Vitamin C. The whole art of the dietician lies in calculating an individual's daily needs in terms of the properties of each of these vitamins. It is essential to remember that in this domain every case is different.

Lack of vitamins upsets the equilibrium of our organs, tissues and endocrine glands and consequently the whole physiological process of growth, mental and physical development, youth, vigour, resistance to disease and longevity.

Vitamins are rather unstable organic compounds which, nevertheless, are only partially destroyed by cooking. On the other hand, they are particularly sensitive to prolonged exposure to air and light; it is therefore desirable to consume vegetables and fruit as fresh as possible. A well-balanced diet including a moderate amount of raw fruit and vegetables assures a sufficiency of varied vitamins for a healthy individual. It is not necessary to eat an excessive amount of raw vegetables to obtain the proper amount of vitamins. Nor is it enough just to swallow the vitamins: the important thing is to assimilate them. Too many vitamins can sometimes be as harmful as too few, and it is advisable to be wary of pharmaceutical 'synthetic' vitamins unless prescribed by a doctor. Their action cannot be compared to that of natural vitamins, for the simple reason that the molecules of the latter are linked to those of the plant.

Foods classified (in descending order) according to their richness in specific vitamins. (M<sup>me</sup> Lucie Randoin).

Vitamin A. Butter, cod liver oil, liver, egg yolk, beef fat, tomatoes, cream, milk powder, cream cheese, spinach, carrots, cabbage, lemon, orange, fish oil, herring, brains, heart, kidney, fatty meat, mushrooms, cauliflower, lettuce, cereal grain, wheat bran, wholemeal bread, fresh peas, beetroot, artichokes, lentils, almonds, walnuts, bananas, pumpkin, haricot beans.

Vitamin B. Brewer's yeast, cereal germ, lentils, egg yolk, brain, liver, cabbage, carrots, spinach, cauliflower, onions, kidneys, fresh and dried peas, apples, pears, beetroot, artichokes, potatoes, wholemeal bread, haricot beans, dried milk, milk, whey, malt extract, lemons, oranges, tomatoes, almonds, walnuts, chestnuts, mushrooms, pumpkin, plums, grapes, bananas, lettuce, lean meat.

Vitamin C. Lemons, oranges, blackcurrants, cabbage, tomatoes, oysters, onions, lettuces, dandelions, rutabaga (swede turnip), fresh peas, spinach, cauliflower, grapes, bananas, beetroot, carrots, french beans, rhubarb, turnip, apples, plums, meat juices, milk, whey.

Vitamin D. Cod liver oil, fish oils, animal fats, milk, cream.

Vitamin E. Wheatgerm oil.

VOISIN – See RESTAURANTS OF BYGONE DAYS.

VITELOTTE. KIDNEY POTATO – Type of potato which remains firm when cooked.

VIVEURS – Name given to various preparations characterized by strong seasoning with cayenne or paprika, such as potage or consommé des viveurs.

VOL-AU-VENT – ‘This entrée,’ said Carême, ‘is pretty and good without a doubt. It is eaten with pleasure for its extreme delicacy and lightness, but to cook it perfectly demands the utmost care. This is the essential part of the operation, so that the flakiness of the pastry is not lost in dampness.’

To make the pastry. Take a half quantity of Flaky pastry (see DOUGH) and divide it into 2 pieces. Roll out each piece to a thickness of about 5 mm. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  inch).

Cut the first piece in a circle 15 cm. (6 inches) in diameter and place it on a baking sheet which has been brushed with water. Cut the second piece into a circle of the same thickness and remove a round from the middle so as to leave an interior diameter of 11 cm. ( $4\frac{1}{2}$  inches) and an exterior diameter of 16 cm. ( $6\frac{1}{2}$  inches). Brush the first piece with water and place the pastry circle on top. Press lightly to fix and leave for 10 minutes.

Brush the top with beaten egg. Lightly cut a circle on the central part, which, after cooking, will form a ‘lid’. Pink the edges at regular intervals. Cook in a hot oven for 20 to 25 minutes, according to the size of the vol-au-vent. After cooking detach the ‘lid’.

Fill the vol-au-vent case with various kinds of mixtures bound with brown and white sauce. Among the most usual for this purpose are: Financière, Marinière, purée of chicken or purée of shellfish, Toulouse, various salpicons, etc. (see GARNISHES, SALPICON).

VOLAILLE – See CHICKEN.

VOLIÈRE (EN) – Style of serving game birds, much used formerly but now abandoned. This rather ostentatious presentation was done by placing on the cooked bird, each in its proper position, the head, the tail, and outspread wings. All these were fixed with little wooden pegs.

Peacocks were served in this way in the Middle Ages adorned with their plumage, and holding between their beaks, which were gilded, a little piece of burning tow.

Service en volière, applied chiefly to pheasants and woodcock, was in vogue up to the end of the nineteenth century. Quite often, during the same period, game was served under the title of chasse royale, the birds adorned with their plumage being set on a great silver dish, the largest on croûtons of fried bread and the smallest arranged in a border round the sides.

Today, roasts of game or any other meat are put on the serving dish or on a croûton of fried bread spread with forcemeat and garnished with watercress.

VOLNAY – A highly esteemed Burgundy wine which comes from Volnay in the Côte d’Or. (See BURGUNDY.)

VOSNE – Red wine from the Côte d’Or. (See BURGUNDY.)

VOUGEOT – One of the greatest Burgundies, from Vougeot, a community of the Côte d’Or, not far from Beaune.

VOUVRAY – Reputed white wine from the district of Vouvray, near Tours. This wine, which is highly flavoured and a little musky, is mildly sparkling, but is often treated like champagne to make it more so.

VOYAGE (German cookery) – Sweet pastry which keeps for a long time, an apricot biscuit with an individual flavour due to the substitution of breadcrumbs for flour.

Ingredients. 225 g. (8 oz., 1 cup) fine sugar, 7 eggs, 250 g. (9 oz.,  $2\frac{1}{4}$  cups) breadcrumbs, 2 teaspoons vanilla sugar, 175 g. (6 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) apricot jam.

Method. Cream the sugar and egg yolks together in a basin.

Beat the egg whites stiffly and fold them into the sugar and yolk mixture, which will become very light, frothy and whitish. Mix in the breadcrumbs and sugar. Fill a forcing-bag fitted with a plain nozzle about 1 cm. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  inch) wide with the mixture. Pipe circles on to buttered, floured baking sheets. Bake them in a low oven and cool on a cake rack.

When the biscuits are quite cold, spread the first with apricot jam flavoured with kirsch. Cover with a second biscuit and spread this, too, with jam. Superimpose 5 or 6 biscuits in this way and sprinkle the top one with icing sugar mixed with powdered cinnamon.

Wrap at once in aluminium foil. Keep in a cool place.

WADERS. CHEVALIERS – Birds of passage (sandpipers, redlegs, gambets, etc.) some of which have delicate meat. They are prepared like woodcock (q.v.) or snipe (q.v.).

WAFFLE. GAUFRE – The French waffle is a very light type of sweet pastry cooked between the two buttered and heated plates of a waffle iron. The plates, decorated with embossed patterns, are fixed to the ends of two long iron stems hinged together.

Waffles are mentioned in the poems of the end of the twelfth century when they were made and sold in the streets. On great religious feast days the waffle-sellers would set up their stalls at the doors of the churches and bake their waffles, which were eaten piping hot. The best quality waffles were called métiers.

Filled waffles I. GAUFRES FOURRÉES – Ingredients. 500 g. (18 oz., 4½ cups) sieved flour, 250 g. (9 oz., generous cup) butter, 50 g. (2 oz., ¼ cup) sugar, 3 eggs, 1½ teaspoons bicarbonate of soda, ½ vanilla pod or ½ teaspoon vanilla essence.

Method. Make a circle of flour on the table, add butter, sugar, eggs, bicarbonate and vanilla. Mix everything together without working the dough too hard.

Let this dough stand for 2 hours. Roll it out to a thickness of 1 cm. (½ inch) and cut it into round or oval shapes with a fluted pastry-cutter. Heat the waffle iron on both sides. Butter the iron and put a piece of dough between the plates. Close the iron and cook on high heat. Turn the iron once during the cooking.

Waffles (Nicolas)

Take out the waffles, and slice them across while they are still hot. Put them under a weight and allow to cool, and spread them with the cream for which a recipe is given below. Sandwich the two halves together and keep them in a tin in a dry place until they are required. They will keep for 2 or 3 days. Put in the filling as required.

Cream filling for the waffles. 250 g. (9 oz., generous cup) butter, 250 g. (9 oz., generous cup) icing sugar and 200 g. (7 oz., 1 cup) praline (q.v.).

Warm a basin and place the butter, sugar and praline in it. Work with a whisk. When the mixture is blended to a smooth paste, use it as a filling for the waffles.

Filled waffles II. GAUFRES FOURRÉES—Ingredients. 500 g. (18 oz., 4½ cups) flour, 125 g. (4 oz., ½ cup) butter, 25 g. (1 oz., 2 tablespoons) fine sugar, 15 g. (½ oz., ½ cake) dry or compressed yeast, 1½ teaspoons salt, 4 eggs, about 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) milk.

Method. Mix together as for all other batters.

This waffle dough should be made the night before and left to rise in an earthenware dish covered with a cloth, in a cool place. Next morning shape the dough into little balls the size of half an egg and put on a floured baking sheet. Allow to rise to double their size and proceed with the cooking as in the previous recipe.

Open the irons as soon as the waffles are cooked. Put them under a weight and fill them with cream.

Liège waffles. GAUFRES LIÉGEOISES—Place 500 g. (18 oz., 4½ cups) flour on a board. Add dry or compressed yeast, about 1 teaspoon, in the centre. Mix the yeast with a little warm water, and mix in with the flour. Leave to rise.

Add a pinch of salt, 125 g. (4 oz., ½ cup) sugar, 200 g. (7 oz., scant cup) butter, a pinch of ground cinnamon and 4 eggs. Mix well. Work the dough with the palm of the hand. Divide it into pieces the size of an egg. Roll into the shape of sausages. Put them on a floured slab and let them stand for half an hour.

Heat a waffle iron and butter it. Put a piece of dough between the plates. Cook on both sides over moderate heat.

Northern waffles or Dutch wafers. GAUFRES DU NORD, GAUFRETTES HOLLANDAISES—Ingredients. 250 g. (9 oz., generous cup) flour, 125 g. (4 oz., ½ cup) sugar, 175 g. (6 oz., ¾ cup) butter, 1 egg white, a small pinch of salt, vanilla essence, ground cinnamon or grated orange or lemon peel, according to taste.

Method. Arrange the flour in a circle. Place the sugar, salt and flavouring in the centre. Dissolve the sugar in the egg white, add the butter and mix all the ingredients. Shape the dough into a ball. Cook the waffles in the usual way.

Plain waffles (old recipe). GAUFRES ORDINAIRES—Ingredients. 450 g. (1 lb., 4 cups) flour, 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, 1 cup) fresh cream, 450 g. (1 lb., 2 cups) sugar and 4 drops of orange flower water.

Method. Beat the flour with half the cream. When it is quite smooth, add the sugar, the rest of the cream and orange flower water, so that the mixture is as thin as milk. Heat and grease the waffle-iron with melted butter. Place one and a half spoonfuls of the mixture between the plates to make each waffle. A little pressure is exerted to make the waffles thinner.

To discover whether the waffle is ready, open up the iron a little. If the waffle is a good colour, remove it by sliding a knife under and prising it free. Put the waffles, one by one, in a warm oven to keep them crisp.

Plain waffles (modern recipe). GAUFRES ORDINAIRES—Ingredients. 250 g. (9 oz., generous cup) butter, 250 g. (9 oz., generous cup) lump sugar, 16 egg yolks, 200 g. (7 oz., scant cup) praline (q.v.), 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) water.

Method. Put the sugar and water in a basin. Cook to ball degree, i.e. until a drop of the mixture forms a ball when plunged into cold water (see SUGAR). While the sugar is cooking, skim it until the surface is clear, strain through a fine strainer.

Put the egg yolks in a basin and pour the sugar on to them in a thin trickle. Mix with a beater, working the mixture until it is quite cold. Next add the butter, softened to the consistency of a paste. Add the praline, still whisking.

Drop a spoonful of mixture on the heated and buttered waffle iron. Cook on both sides.

Vanilla waffles. GAUFRES À LA VANILLE—Ingredients. 500 g. (18 oz., 4½ cups) sieved flour, 250 g. (9 oz., generous cup) butter, 4 eggs, 4 tablespoons (½ cup) sugar, vanilla pod or ½ teaspoon vanilla essence, 1½ teaspoons bicarbonate of soda.

For the butter cream. 250 g. (9 oz., generous cup) butter, 250 g. (9 oz., 2 cups) icing sugar, 5 egg yolks, 1 pod of vanilla or ½ teaspoon vanilla essence.

Mardi Gras waffles
(seventeenth century)

Fifteenth century waffle irons

Walnuts (Nicolas)

Method. Arrange the flour in a circle and place the sugar, butter, eggs, the inside of the vanilla pod (or the essence) and the bicarbonate of soda in the middle.

Mix quickly to avoid lumps. Roll the dough into a ball and let it stand for 2 hours.

Roll out the dough to a thickness of 5 mm. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  inch) and cut into oval shapes with a fluted pastry cutter. Place on a floured slab. Heat and butter the waffle iron lightly. Place the pastry in the middle, close, and cook.

Turn over the iron to ensure that the waffle is cooked on both sides. As soon as the waffle is ready, remove it, slice it across, and put it under a weight to keep it in shape.

Butter cream. Put the butter in a bowl. Work it to the consistency of a paste, add the icing sugar, and the egg yolks. Mix thoroughly. Spread the halves of the waffle on the inside with this cream.

WAFFLE IRON, GAUFRIER – Special mould used in the preparation of waffles, made of two cast-iron plates which fit together and are embossed with matching designs.

WAGTAIL, HOCHEQUEUE – European bird, cooked in the same way as the lark.

WALEWSKA (À LA) – Method of preparing fish, particularly fillets of sole. Fish cooked in this way is poached in fish fumet (q.v.) set on a fireproof dish, garnished with slices of spiny lobster and truffles, and coated with Mornay sauce (see SAUCE) with Spiny lobster butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters).

WALNUT, NOIX – Fruit of the walnut tree, which grows in Europe. Walnuts and walnut oil have been known from the earliest times. The Greeks knew it four centuries before Christ and towards the end of the fourth century, the Romans extended its cultivation all over Europe.

Before they are quite ripe walnuts are known as green walnuts. The fleshy casing of the walnut is called the shuck. An excellent liqueur (brou) is made from walnut shucks.

When it is fresh, the walnut is very pleasant to eat and easily digestible. The dried walnut, used a great deal in cookery and confectionery, is more difficult to digest, because of its high fat content.

The best-known varieties of French walnuts are Franquette, Mayette and Parisienne, cultivated in Isère and Savoy; Corne and Marbot cultivated in Périgord. The 'Grenoble' walnut can apply to any of the first three varieties.

Vegetarians mix walnuts with crushed cereals to make 'vegetarian steaks' as a substitute for meat.

In winter, dried walnuts can be given the appearance of fresh by soaking them (unshelled) in hot milk overnight, then drying and draining them. This steeping produces a vapour inside the shell, which moistens the endocarp.

Pickled walnuts, NOIX AU VINAIGRE – Choose fairly large green walnuts with husks that can be easily pierced with a pin. Wipe and prick them quite deeply all over. Marinate them for 3 days in brine – 125 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) salt per litre ( $1\frac{3}{4}$  pints, generous quart) water – then bring them up to the boil. Repeat this operation three times, resting the nuts for 3 days between each boiling.

WARBLER

Drain the walnuts and place them in jars. Cover generously with boiling spiced vinegar prepared thus: simmer 5 litres (4½ quarts, 5½ quarts) vinegar seasoned with 50 g. (2 oz., ½ cup) black peppercorns, 25 g. (1 oz., ¼ cup) allspice, 25 g. (1 oz., cup) cloves, 25 g. (1 oz., ¼ cup) mace, 40 g. (1½ oz., ¾ cup) crushed root ginger. Pour this mixture, unstrained, over the walnuts.

Seal the jars. Store in a cool place.

Walnut cordial. BROU DE NOIX. See LIQUEUR, Walnut liqueur or ratafia.

Walnut ketchup (English condiment) – Put in a tub, with about 1½ kg. (2¾ lb. 3½ cups) rock salt, about 2 kg. (4½ lb., 8½ cups) green walnuts. Mix well and leave for 6 days, crushing the shells from time to time with a pestle. Leave the tub tilted to one side after each operation so that the juice which runs from the fruit can be poured off every day, until only the pulp remains. Boil this juice and skim it. Add 100 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) ginger, 100 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) powdered spice, 50 g. (2 oz., ½ cup) cayenne pepper and an equal quantity of cloves. Simmer for half an hour. Put into small bottles, seal hermetically and keep in a very dry place. Leave for several months before using.

Walnut oil. HUILE DE NOIX – Walnut oil has a pronounced nutty flavour. It goes well with certain salads. (See OIL.)

WARBLER. FAUVETTE – This bird is protected but its flavour is considered to be as delicate as that of garden warblers. It is prepared as for lark (q.v.).

WARTHOG. PHACOCHÈRE – Type of wild boar indigenous to Africa. Prepare as for wild boar (q.v.).

WASTE MATTER. DÉCHETS – Inedible parts of foods (bone, skin, tendons of meat; husks, pods, skin of fruit or vegetables).

A water carrier (lithograph by Joseph Felon, nineteenth century)

WATER. EAU – Water accounts for 65 per cent of an adult's weight, 70 per cent of a child's weight. This proportion indicates how important a part it plays in the organism. An adult absorbs an average of 25 grams per pound; a child drinks (comparatively) much more. 'Solid' foods, after allowing for the proportion of these eliminated as waste matter, provide about 1 litre (1¾ pints, generous quart). Beverages have therefore to make up the difference.

Drinking water. EAU POTABLE – Water suitable for drinking must be clear, colourless, aerated, odourless even when boiled, pleasant-tasting, neutral in reaction, and fresh. From the point of view of chemical analysis, it must dissolve soap, reveal no traces of lead (sometimes present when water flows through lead pipes), leave no more than 0.50 dry residue per litre after evaporation, contain less than 66 mg. chloride per litre, less than 50 mg. sulphates, less than 3 mg. organic matter, less than 1 mg. ammonia, less than 10 mg. nitrates, contain no trace of albuminoids or nitrites, and contain at least 8–12 mg. dissolved oxygen per litre. All this explains the remark of Dr. Besançon: 'Pure water is a myth.'

After the above, water must be examined under a microscope in order to detect algae, infusoria, and (later) helminth eggs (intestinal worms), and it should be examined bacteriologically to discover the number and nature of microbes present. This final examination is extremely important, especially where the town water supply is concerned, and should be carried out at regular intervals.

Insufficiently aerated water is heavy; water rich in calcareous salts is hard; consequently it does not dissolve soap and is bad for cooking vegetables. If water contains salts of any kind it has an alkaline, earthy, bitter or briny taste, depending upon the nature of the salt.

One must stress the importance of using bacteria-free drinking water, for many contagious diseases are transmitted through water. Chemical purity is no less important; to give an example, medical statistics show that the number of cases of stones in the bladder have considerably diminished in Glasgow by supplying a purer type of drinking water than that in previous use. Water deficient in minerals is another cause of health disorders; for example, the high incidence of goitre in certain regions is attributed to the absence of iodine in the mountain springs. Natural spring or river water is a living food and not simply the liquid vehicle of inert minerals. It is possible to live for twenty, thirty or forty days without eating if ample water is available.

Water is the only natural beverage, and only man can claim to appease his thirst with any other liquid. Dieticians lay down no hard and fast rules, but recommend that only a moderate amount should be drunk with meals, so as not to over-dilute the digestive juices, and to avoid dilating the stomach. But there is no harm in drinking one or two glasses of water between meals. Constant thirst indicates the organism's need to dilute substances ingested to excess, particularly salt, spices, sugar. More frequently, it is an indication of the body's need to rid itself of toxins present in the organs and body fluids.

Distilled water is heavy and flat, but is acceptable as drinking water provided it is aerated by beating. It is used on ships.

Rainwater has been soiled by all the impurities of the roof, when it is collected there, and must not be consumed unless the first flow, which washes the gutters and roofs, is diverted before collecting the remainder in the cisterns.

Spring water is considered to be the best but much depends on the soil. Water of granitic soil is seriously lacking in mineral salts. The water of Siluria, Devonian, Triassic and Jurassic soils is the best, provided it has not been subjected to contamination through fissures in the ground, frequently found in deforested areas.

River water varies in purity according to the part of the river from which it is drawn. It is always polluted after passing through built-up areas. Aeration and insolation have a purifying effect and the water becomes naturally pure again 50 to 80 kilometres (30 to 50 miles) downstream.

Canal water has the same disadvantages as river water, but purifies itself less easily because of its lack of current.

Mountain water is the product of melting snows and glaciers. It is heavy because of lack of aeration, but pure at its source, and rapidly enriches itself with minerals.

Ditch and drainage canal water is usually impure.

The water of the great lakes is usually pure if drawn far from the shore or from a certain depth. The organic matter and minerals of the streams and rivers that feed the lakes form a deposit before reaching their destination.

The waters of marshes and ponds, are almost always impure, as the absence of current gives rise rapidly to microbic pollution.

Well water varies considerably according to the installation, depth and positioning of the well. It is often polluted by infiltrations from the surrounding area.

The composition of the water of artesian wells, which are artificial springs, depends upon the sheet of water used.

There are various methods of purifying suspect water and making it drinkable. For town supplies filter beds are used, as well as other physical or chemical purification processes too involved to describe here. From a bacteriological point of view such water is qualified as drinkable but it is more or less devitalized, sometimes unpleasant to the taste, and often contains an excess of calcareous salts, often responsible for visceral disorders and rheumatism. This calcareous excess can be corrected by means of equipment called 'water softeners' which convert the water to something akin to distilled water, though not of a high standard. Some of the processes for purifying suspect water, based on the oxidising process of potassium permanganate or iodine have already been mentioned. Here are a few formulae (for 1 litre water):

Dissolve 1 packet of:

Powdered potassium permanganate	3 cg.
Common alum	5 cg.

Decolourise after 10 minutes with a second packet of:

Powdered hyposulphate of soda	3 cg.
Carbonate of lime	5 cg.

or pour in 5 drops of the solution:

Iodine	5 g.
Sodium iodide	2 g.
Alcohol at 60°	100 cl.

and then decolourise, using the same quantity of a 10 per cent hyposulphate of soda solution.

Simpler still, 30 minutes before using the water, pour 5 to 6 drops of tincture of iodine into a carafe. The addition of a little red wine or any liquid containing tannin will be enough to neutralize the iodine and to mask its taste.

Suspect water may also be sterilised by the addition of a few drops of bleach (sodium hypochlorite) per litre. Passing the water through a filter of activated charcoal removes the taste and smell of the bleach. The water can be used after lengthy boiling in the form of tea or other infusions.

Temperature of water –

Water is very cold below	8°C. (46-5°F.)
Cold from	8 to 12°C. (46-5 to 53-5°F.)
Cool up to	16°C. (61°F.)
Tepid from	16 to 35°C. (61° to 97°F.)
Hot from	35 to 40°C. (97° to 110°F.)

Piping hot above this temperature.

Sea water. EAU DE MER – Contains 33 to 38 g. mineral substances per litre (depending on the latitude), four-fifths of which consist of sodium chloride. It is not drinkable but contains plankton which, under certain conditions, can serve as human food. Experiments are in progress to extract new nutritional elements (algae, etc.) from the sea. Frozen sea water is used to conserve fish at the fishing grounds.

Sea water is also used to cook certain shellfish: shrimps, for example.

Natural mineral waters. EAUX MINÉRALES NATURELLES – See MINERAL WATERS.

Table waters. EAUX DE TABLE – Among the best known are Volvic water (natural, not aerated) and Evian water which is also the freshest and is, with mineralisation at 0-40 per litre, one of the best. It can be alternated with the light Contrexéville or Vittel Grande Source, less frequently with an alkaline water like Badoit or Vichy Célestins, which should be drunk in moderation. Alternating table waters like this ensures that the organism absorbs a little of each of the hydrous salts, and guards against any deficiency. It is said that such waters are especially active at the mineral water spring from which they come, but that some of their quality is lost once they are bottled. It is, however, almost exclusively bottled mineral water that dieticians use. A number still contain valuable properties long after bottling, but have to be drunk in larger quantities than mineral waters taken at the spring itself. The expression thermal waters refers exclusively to hot mineral springs, although it is sometimes used to describe all mineral waters, hot and cold.

Albuminous water. EAU ALBUMINEUSE – Whisk together 4 whites of egg and 1 litre of ordinary water; add 10 g. orange flower water. This water is used as an antidote to poison and is especially effective if taken after eating poisonous fungi.

Melissa water. EAU DE MÉLISSE – See MELISSA.

Aromatic medicated water. EAUX DISTILLÉES OU HYDROLATS – Water charged with volatile constituents by distillation over aromatic plants; distilled water of bitter almonds, pineapple, cinnamon, orange flowers, lettuce, roses, melissa, valerian, etc. Used mainly in pharmacy and perfumery.

WATER CHESTNUT. MACRE OU CHÂTAIGNE D'EAU – Herbaceous water plant with edible fruit. Water chestnuts are eaten boiled or roasted. Their pulp bears some resemblance to ordinary chestnuts but has less flavour.

WATERCRESS. CRESSON – See also CRESS. Watercress is used raw to garnish grilled and roast meats, or in salads. Cooked, it provides excellent dishes.

Watercress cooked with butter. CRESSON ÉTUVÉ AU BEURRE – Blanch the cress rapidly in salt water, drain, dry, and simmer in butter in the same way as spinach.

Watercress cooked with cream. CRESSON ÉTUVÉ À LA CRÈME – Cook in the same way as above. Add a few tablespoons fresh boiling cream.

Watercress cooked au jus. CRESSON ÉTUVÉ AU JUS – The same as above. Finish with the addition of some juice from the roast.

Watercress garnish. GARNITURE DE CRESSON – Trim, wash and drain the cress. Arrange it in bunches beside grilled or roast meat.

Watercress purée. PURÉE DE CRESSON – Simmer watercress in butter and sieve. Add a third of its volume of potato purée. Finish with fresh butter or boiled cream, according to the recipe.

Watercress salad. SALADE DE CRESSON – Trim, wash, drain and dry the watercress. Season in the usual way with oil, vinegar or lemon juice, salt and pepper.

WATERFISCH

This salad must only be dressed at the last moment.

Watercress sandwiches. SANDWICHES AU CRESSON – Cover buttered slices of bread with watercress which has been dried, or with a chiffonnade of watercress.

Sandwiches can also be made with watercress which has been finely chopped and mixed with a rather thick mayonnaise.

Cream of watercress soup – See SOUPS AND BROTHS.

WATERFISCH – Dutch word used in France for 'freshwater fish'. The name waterfisch or patervisch is used in cookery for a kind of sauce served with freshwater fish, particularly perch.

Waterfisch sauce (cold). SAUCE WATERFISCH – Prepared with the court-bouillon (q.v.) of the fish being used. Add gelatine, strained and mixed with a julienne of vegetables (see below) cooked in a court-bouillon (or fish fumet (q.v.)). Add sweet pimientos, gherkins and capers.

This sauce (jelly) is used to coat the fish after it has been cooked in court-bouillon, cooled in the same liquid, skinned and wiped dry. It is then decorated with anchovy fillets cut into thin strips. Serve with Rémoulade sauce (see SAUCE).

Waterfisch sauce (hot). SAUCE WATERFISCH – Cook 50 g. (2 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) carrots, 25 g. (1 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) white part of leeks, 25 g. (1 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) celery and 25 g. (1 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) parsley roots, all cut in a fine julienne gently in butter till soft. Add 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) court-bouillon (q.v.) or fish fumet (q.v.). Boil down the liquid, and add 4 dl. ( $\frac{3}{4}$  pint, scant 2 cups) White wine sauce (see SAUCE).

WATERMELON. PASTÈQUE – Fruit of a cucurbitaceae family plant. There are many varieties, with white, yellow, and red coloured flesh. They can be pleasantly musky or rather insipid. Water melons, unlike ordinary melons, have no central cavity. They are eaten raw or made into jam.

Water parsnip

WATER PARSNIP. BERLE – Aquatic plant, the leaves of which have some similarity to those of celery. It is also called Water parsley, Creeping watercress and Water smallage.

The leaves of the water parsnip are eaten in salads. Only the leaves should be eaten, as its roots are poisonous.

WATERZOOTJE Flemish cookery. WATERZOI – A fish dish having some analogy with the cotriade of the Breton fishermen, but which is solid rather than a soup.

In Holland and Belgium this preparation is equivalent to bouillabaisse but without tomato, garlic and saffron. It is Chicken waterzootje or waterzoi (Robert Carrier)

cooked not with oil, like the Provençale soup, but with butter.

Line a buttered sauté pan with 200 g. (7 oz., 1½ cups) of the white part of celery, chopped. Put on top 2 kg. (4½ lb.) freshwater fish (eel, carp, pike, tench, etc.) cut in chunks. Season with salt and pepper, add a bouquet garni of parsley, thyme, bay leaf and 2 or 3 leaves of sage. Cover with water (or fish fumet (q.v.)). Dot the top with 100 g. (4 oz., ½ cup) butter cut into small pieces.

Begin cooking on high heat. Cover the pan and continue cooking very slowly, so that the liquid is boiled down while the fish cooks.

Add stock to give the desired consistency and a little biscotte (melba toast) reduced to powder. Remove the bouquet garni. Serve with slices of buttered bread.

Chicken waterzootje. WATERZOI DE VOLAILLE – Although waterzootje is the name for a fish dish, it is sometimes prepared with jointed chicken cooked in a white stock flavoured with onions, leeks, bouquet garni, celery, thyme, bay leaf and cloves. Bring to the boil, then add a little white wine. Season with salt and pepper, and simmer very slowly for 1½ hours. Cut into pieces, remove the bouquet garni and serve in the stock, garnished with chopped parsley.

WAXWING. JASEUR – European bird of the sparrow family. It is edible and is cooked in the same way as lark.

WEEVER. VIVE – Type of European fish found on the sandy coasts. The greater weever, whose firm white flesh is highly esteemed, has an elongated body, pinkish or yellowish in colour with dark bands. It has stiff spines along the dorsal fin, whose pricks are poisonous, even after the fish is dead. All the methods of cooking whiting (q.v.) are applicable to the weever.

Weever en matelote vierge (Carême's recipe). VIVE EN MATELOTTE – 'Take 6 weevers, clean them and cut each into 3 chunks, not using the head. Put into a buttered saucepan with a bouquet garni, chopped onions, 2 cloves garlic, 2 cloves, salt and grated nutmeg. Pour in a bottle of white Burgundy. Start cooking over strong heat, then skim and moderate the heat so that the fish simmers.

'As soon as it becomes firm to the touch, drain and put it into another saucepan. Strain the liquor. Make a white roux to thicken the liquid and add the trimmings of 1 kg. (2¼ lb.) peeled and cooked mushrooms.

'Remove all grease, boil down, thicken with 3 egg yolks, strain through a cloth and keep it hot in a bain-marie.

'Arrange the pieces of weever in a pyramid, keeping them in place with heart-shaped croûtons of bread fried in butter. Pour over the sauce, to which the mushrooms have been added, together with a piece of the finest butter as big as an egg.'

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES. POIDS ET MESURES – We have quoted several old French recipes in which the quantities of the ingredients are given in old French units. Often we have indicated the metric equivalents, but here is all the data in a comparative table.

Measures of weight – Livre (pound): this old unit of measure of weight has had varied values, but it is generally accepted to be the equivalent of 489.5 g.

Marc. Equalled half a livre, i.e. 244.75 g.

Quarteron. Quarter of a livre, i.e. about 122 g.

Once. One-sixteenth part of a livre, i.e. 30.59 g.

Gros. One-eighth part of an once, i.e. 3.825 g.

Grain. About one-eighteenth of a gram, i.e. 0.053 g.

Measures of capacity – Muid represented 2 feuilletes or 4 quartauts, i.e. 268.23 litres.

Pinte. Equalled 0.93 litre (in Paris).

Quartaut. 72 French pints, i.e. about 67 litres.

Setier. 8 Paris pints, i.e. 7.45 litres.

Chopine. Used to be half a French pint.

Some of the old measures of capacity have remained in use, particularly for Champagne wines, the value differing slightly from the old values, the metric equivalents being expressed in round figures. A bottle may at times have the same capacity as the old pint, i.e. 0.93 litre, but the present-day bottle generally equals 0.80 litre.

Muid = 260 litres.

Trentain = 300 litres.

Poincon = 200 litres.

Caque = 100 litres.

Queue de Reims = 396 litres.

Queue de Champagne = 366 litres.

Sapinée = 30 pints (28 litres).

Vette = 1 setier = 7.45 litres.

Quartaut = 50 litres.

Feuillette = 114 litres.

Pièce = 200 litres.

Old linear measures – The foot equalled 0.3248 m., it was divided into 12 inches of 0.017 m. The inch equalled 12 lines of 0.225 cm.

WELL. PUTS – Word used for the space left empty in the middle of a circle of flour, in which are placed the ingredients necessary to make pastry or other mixtures; the central part of food arranged in the form of a crown, 'turban' or circle, where various garnishes are placed; the hollow made in the middle of a cake or pudding; the metal sleeve or chimney in the middle of certain moulds and cake tins.

WELS. SILURE – Large freshwater fish with smooth soft skin and barbelled mouth.

The European wels, which is not found in France except in the River Doubs, and which is also called the glanis, grows up to over 2 m. (6½ feet) in length and weighs 25 kg. (55 lb.).

The dwarf wels, or freshwater catfish, originating in America whence it has been imported and used to stock French rivers, grows to 40 to 60 cm. (16 to 24 inches) in length. Its flesh is very delicate. The pectoral and dorsal fins have spikes, whose prick is disagreeable but not dangerous.

This fish is prepared like the freshwater burbot (q.v.).

WELSH RABBIT or RAREBIT – English toasted cheese preparation, made as follows:

Put into a saucepan with a little English beer, 8 oz. (225 g., 2 cups) Gloucester cheese cut in small pieces. Add a little English mustard. Cook this mixture stirring all the time until the cheese has melted. Pour over slices of toasted and buttered bread. Brown well under the grill.

WHALE. BALEINE – In the Middle Ages whale meat, under the name of crapois or Lenten bacon, was sold on meatless days and formed the staple diet of the poor. The flesh of this cetacean is most indigestible and remains tough even after 24 hours cooking.

There are several kinds of whales, which differ in name, appearance and size. From the gastronomical point of view, only whale calves are of any interest. The flesh of these is of a reddish colour and somewhat similar to beef in appearance, but not in taste. Whale meat was not greatly esteemed by our grandfathers, but they set some store by the tongue of the animal, usually salted. Ambroise Paré says that 'it is tender and delicious'. They also much appreciated whale fat which they ate 'during Lent, with peas'.

As whale meat can be kept for quite a long time without going bad, sailors used to store it, to cook as required. It can be prepared like tunny (tuna fish) (q.v.).

There are not many recipes for whale meat.

Dr. Félix Brémont tells how he had an occasion to eat whale meat in 1892 in a restaurant near the Halles: 'I will not say anything bad about whale meat, but neither can I find it in me to say anything good about it. Boil a piece of lean beef in water which has been used to wash a not-too-fresh mackerel, and you will have a dish similar to that which was served to me under the name of Escalope of whale à la Valois'. Whale steaks are often served in Norway.

Whale Calf. BALEINEAU – The young of the whale. Its flesh is very delicate and is prepared as for tunny (q.v.).

WHEAT. BLÉ, FROMENT – Cereal crop known and cultivated from the earliest times. Wheat appears to have originated in Chaldea. From there it found its way all over the East and to Italy. The Gauls, according to Herodotus, discovered it as a result of their overseas expeditions. In Caesar's time, it was cultivated in Gaul on a very limited scale. In the sixteenth century the poor had only barley or rye bread to eat. Wheat bread was reserved exclusively for the rich man's table.

Wheat grain, which is a fruit in the botanical sense of the word, consists of three parts: shell (or pericarp), nut (or caryopsis) and seed (or embryo). The shell represents 14.36 per cent of the grain. The nut, consisting of gluten, is filled with starch cells.

According to strain and race, it contains on the average from 9 to 11 per cent of gluten and from 56 to 75 per cent of starch. It represents 84.21 per cent of the grain.

The embryo (1.43 per cent of the grain) is rich in nitrogenous matter and fats. It also contains ferment and odoriferous substances. In addition to starch and gluten, wheat grain also contains soluble sugar, dextrines and mineral salts (ash).

There is a considerable number of varieties, which can be classified in two groups: hard grain, richer in gluten, and soft grain, richer in starch.

The main uses of grain are in the making and manufacture of cereals, flours, pasta products and bread (see BREAD).

Germinated wheat. BLÉ GERMÉ – Wheat is not only eaten in the form of flour and bread; dieticians recommend eating it raw after germination of the grain. It has a remarkable amino acid content which increases by 130 per cent during the germination period. At this stage, too, an amylose appears which partly hydrolyzes the reserve starch and aids its transformation in the digestive tract. Last but not least, the seeds are rich in Vitamin B. Ripe wheat can contain as much as 10 to 20 mg. per 100 g. of this precious vitamin.

Wheatgerm, therefore, constitutes a first-class energy food and strengthens resistance to disease.

How to prepare germinated wheat. Dr. Pierre Oudinot offers this simple and practical recipe: 'Select good quality seed corn, enough for three days' needs. Pick over, if necessary, and wash in cold water. Soak in plenty of cold water, preferably spring or rain water, but this is of secondary importance. A large soup plate or similar dish serves the purpose.

'The wheat must be completely immersed for twenty-four hours. At the end of this period, drain the grains, rinse them in fresh water, and replace, damp, in the dish. Repeat this operation every twenty-four hours. After forty-eight hours, the grain will have softened and the barely perceptible white speck of the germ will have emerged. The grain may be eaten at this point, but is edible for a further two days. It is essential to ensure that the grain never dries. If necessary, it should be moistened in the course of the day. In winter, keep the wheat in the kitchen; in summer, choose a cooler room. With practice, these small precautions become a matter of routine.'

Ten or so grains of germinated wheat should be taken to begin with, and thoroughly masticated to a pap. This may be gradually increased to a level teaspoon for adults and adolescents. Five or six well-crushed grains are sufficient for children.

It should be taken daily, preferably at the beginning of the meal along with the hors-d'œuvre or salad; alternatively, in the morning at breakfast time. There is no fixed rule as to the duration of the cure; it varies from individual to individual according to his constitutional needs and his tolerance of this unusual food. Generally speaking, wheatgerm can be taken regularly for periods of 12 to 15 days followed by rest periods of the same duration.

Wheat in dietetics. BLÉ EN DIETETIQUE – Cereals, and wheat in particular, are very important nutritionally. The flours extracted from them occupy pride of place in the normal daily diet: bread, pastries, dessert, sauces and other culinary preparations. Thirty-five per cent of the calories and 31 per cent of the proteins of the daily diet are derived from cereals.

The following constitutes a grain of wheat. There is first the exterior husk, the pericarp, which is very hard and encrusted with lignite. Then come the intermediary layers: the seed coat and the hyaline band. Attached to this triple casing is an important part of the grain, the proteic layer, containing a substance called aleurone, a mixture of proteins, vitamins and mineral salts. Beneath this there is the kernel containing proteins and starch; it constitutes four-fifths of the volume of the grain. Finally, in the lower part of the convex surface is the germ, very small, 1.5 per cent of the whole grain, containing all the vital force, the embryo.

Modern milling processes using metal rollers deprive the flour of the most vital and important constituents of wheat: the whole of the husk with the proteic layer, and the germ. The flour we use to make our bread is thus stripped of an essential part of its food and energy value. This is the reason for the controversy over the merits of wholemeal bread as opposed to white bread. (See BREAD, Bread in dietetics.)

WHIPPED CREAM. CRÈME FOUETTÉE – Cream whipped with a whisk or beater.

WHISK. FOUET – Utensil to beat eggs, cream, white sauces, béarnaise, hollandaise, mayonnaise, etc. For cooking, whisks made of metal are used. For baking and confectionery whisks

Large egg-whisk
(Larousse)

made of box-wood or wicker are also used. Modern rotary hand and electric beaters are often used to replace the whisk, but many professionals find these inferior to the whisk.

WHISKY or WHISKEY – Grain spirit from Scotland or Ireland distilled from barley, rye and other cereals, malted and fermented.

There were only the three lines above on this subject in the 1938 edition of Larousse gastronomique. Evidence enough of the rapid spread of this spirit in France, which now has a place on the shelves of the most modest provincial tavern.

The origin of whisky is obscure, but its name comes from the Celtic. Uisgebeatha, in the Gaelic that is still spoken in Ireland and in the Highlands of Scotland, means 'water of life'. We suppose, therefore, that whisky was first distilled in Ireland from where it spread to Western Scotland.

Originally, it was a distillation of malt, home made by the crofters. It was a robust drink suited to the hard local climate. Soon it began to be manufactured industrially but, after 1830, instead of being made from malt, it was made from grain and was lighter in character with a finer bouquet.

Nowadays, the best-known manufacturers produce skilful blends of different types of whisky, malt and grain. The grain can be malted barley, unmalted barley, maize, rye or even a mixture of these.

'Scotch' or Scottish whisky is in a class of its own because of the peaty water used in its manufacture. It is usually a 50-50 blend of malt and grain whiskies. Irish whiskey (spelt differently to distinguish it from the others) has an unusual and quite individual flavour; it is an indispensable ingredient of Irish coffee. Production is comparatively small. Rye whisky (Canadian or American whisky) is made from malted rye or barley, with the addition of a quantity of unmalted rye which provides the sugar. Bourbon (American whisky) is made from malted wheat and maize.

Not surprisingly, French 'manufacturers' have tried to produce their version of whisky: it is as undrinkable as the Cognac manufactured outside France.

Whisky, like all spirits, is clear when it comes from the still. In the course of maturation in oak barrels, its colour deepens and its quality improves. Whisky lovers drink it with 'flat' water or 'on the rocks' (on ice), but true connoisseurs know that whisky should not be refrigerated or served with ice. It should be served at the same temperature as the small amount of un aerated water that accompanies it. This is especially relevant for old whiskies such as Chivas, Legacy and the even more venerable ones over ten years old.

Unauthorised propaganda attributes a certain health value to whisky; that it is a remedy for heart troubles. This is not strictly true. All the same, besides producing the same ill effects on the body as other alcoholic beverages, whisky is both a stimulant and a vasodilator. Its absorption in moderate doses can therefore be justified for fatigue, colds, influenza, etc. Like all grain spirits, it does not release esters, and ages better than spirits made from fruit. According to some connoisseurs whisky is by far superior to other spirits used in cooking.

Whisky, then, may be substituted for Cognac or Armagnac in flambages, etc.

In Geneva there is a 'Confrérie du bon vieux whisky'.

Finally, here is the genuine Shannon recipe for the 'Irish coffee' that so pleases the connoisseurs and which many consider to be the best dessert of all.

Irish coffee – Gently warm a large glass. Pour in a measure of Irish whiskey. Add several lumps of sugar, according to taste. (Some people do not add sugar at all and this is perhaps an improvement.) Fill the glass to within 3 cm. (1¼ inches) of the brim with very strong black coffee. Stir to dissolve the sugar. Slowly add chilled thick cream. Do not stir again as the cream should float on the top.

WHITEBAIT. BLANCHAILLE – The 'fry' or young of the common herring (Clupea harengus) and sprat (Clupea sprattus), which abound in the Thames and along the coasts of the North Sea. It is also found in vast numbers in the mouth of the Garonne.

These little fishes are mostly fried in deep fat.

All the recipes given for nonats (q.v.) (the 'fry' of a small Mediterranean goby) are applicable to whitebait.

WHITE BEET. POIRÉE – Variety of chard (q.v.).

WHITE-TAIL. CUL-BLANC – Several migrant birds are known by this name, especially the wheatear, prized in France as game, and cooked in the same way as lark (q.v.).

Whiting

WHITING. MERLAN – The European whiting is a gadoid fish with a long, somewhat compact body. It has soft rounded scales and is greyish or olive green along the back, with copper or pale yellow shading. Its flanks are white, speckled with yellow, and its belly silvery. It is between 26 and 41 cm. (10 and 16 inches) long. Whiting is caught mainly in the English Channel and the Baltic. Its flesh is fine in texture, flaky and easy to digest.

Another species of whiting, the pollack, is similar in appearance but is yellowish in colour and darker. Its flesh, though of good quality, is less delicate than that of the whiting proper.

The American whiting is also known as silver hake and is fished off the New England coast. The average whiting is 31 to 36 cm. (12 to 14 inches) long but larger specimens are not uncommon.

Whiting à l'anglaise. MERLAN À L'ANGLAISE – Slit the fish along the back and remove backbone. Season, flour, dip in egg and breadcrumbs and fry in butter, browning well on both sides.

Serve on a dish covered with slightly softened Maitre d'hôtel butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters).

Grilled whiting, served with melted butter and boiled potatoes, is also called whiting à l'anglaise.

Whiting à la Bercy. MERLAN À LA BERCY – Make a shallow incision along the back. Put the whiting in a buttered fireproof dish and sprinkle with a teaspoon of chopped shallot.

Season, moisten with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant ½ cup) white wine and dot with 2 teaspoons butter cut into tiny fragments. Bring to the boil on the stove, then bake in the oven, basting frequently.

When the fish is cooked, glaze in a very hot oven. Squeeze a few drops of lemon juice over the fish and sprinkle with chopped parsley.

Boiled whiting with melted butter or other sauce. MERLAN

WHITING

BOUILLI AVEC BEURRE FONDU – Boil the whiting in salt water. Drain, and garnish with potatoes and fresh parsley. Serve with melted butter or any sauce suitable for boiled fish.

Whiting à la bonne femme. MERLAN À LA BONNE FEMME – Prepare as for Brill à la bonne femme (see BRILL).

Whiting à la cancalaise. MERLAN À LA CONCALAISE – Prepare as for Brill à la cancalaise (see BRILL).

Whiting Colbert. MERLAN COLBERT – Slit the whiting along the back and remove backbone. Season with salt and pepper, sprinkle with flour, dip in egg and breadcrumbs and deep fry.

Put into the slit in the fish 1 tablespoon Maître d'hôtel butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters).

Whiting à la dieppoise. MERLAN À LA DIEPPOISE – Prepare as for Brill à la dieppoise (see BRILL).

Whiting à l'espagnole. MERLAN À L'ESPAGNOLE – Dip in egg and breadcrumbs as indicated for Whiting à l'anglaise. Fry in oil until well browned on both sides. Serve on a bed of Tomato fondue (see FONDUE) seasoned with a little crushed garlic. Garnish each end of the dish with a clump of onion rings fried in oil.

Fillets of whiting. FILETS DE MERLAN – Fillets of whiting can be prepared in all ways suitable for whole whiting.

Recipes given for fillets of sea perch, brill, sole, etc., are also suitable for fillets of whiting.

Whiting forcemeat. FARCE DE MERLAN – Made of whiting, panade (q.v.) cream and eggs, in the same way as Pike forcemeat (see FORCEMEATS).

Fried whiting. MERLAN FRIT – Slit the whiting, dip in milk and flour. Fry, drain, and season with dry table salt.

Serve with fried parsley and lemon halves.

Whiting au gratin. MERLAN AU GRATIN – Prepare as for Sole au gratin (see SOLE).

Grilled whiting. MERLAN GRILLÉ – Make a shallow incision in the whiting. Season, dredge with flour, brush with melted butter or oil and grill under gentle heat.

Garnish with parsley and slices of lemon and serve with melted butter, Maître d'hôtel butter, or any sauce suitable for grilled fish. (See BUTTER, Compound butters, and SAUCE.)

Whiting loaf – See LOAVES, Fish loaves.

Whiting en lorgnette (fried). MERLAN FRIT EN LORGNETTE – Fillet a large whiting, starting at the tail and working towards the head. Shave off the flesh very close to the bone. Remove the bone, cutting it off at the base of the head. Season the fish and dip in egg and breadcrumbs. Roll the fillets. Skewer them to keep them in shape.

Deep fry in hot fat and garnish with fried parsley and lemon.

Whiting en lorgnette (poached). MERLAN POCHÉ EN LORGNETTE – Split the whiting open as indicated above and remove the bone. Season the fillets. Spread them with a layer, not too thick, of Fish forcemeat (see FORCEMEATS), roll them up, and put them in a buttered baking dish moistened with concentrated fish fumet (q.v.). Cook in the oven, basting frequently.

Drain the fish, and serve with the garnish and sauce indicated.

Whiting à la meunière. MERLAN À LA MEUNIÈRE – Prepare as MERLAN AUX COURGETTES, AUBERGINES – Season the whiting, dredge with flour and fry in butter.

Garnish with little Italian marrows or aubergines, diced and sautéed in oil. Squeeze a little lemon juice over the fish, sprinkle with chopped parsley, and pour on 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) browned butter.

Whiting à la meunière. MERLAN À LA MEUNIÈRE – Prepare as for Bass à la meunière (see BASS).

Whiting mousse. MOUSSE DE MERLAN – Using raw whiting, prepare as indicated for Fish mousse (see FISH).

Fill a deep dish three-quarters full of this mixture and cook in a bain-marie.

Serve with garnish and sauce as indicated in the recipe.

Filleting Whiting

Make an incision just below the head

Cut along the length of the backbone

Cut the fillet away completely from the bone and remove

The two fillets cleaned and ready for cooking

Whiting with mushrooms. MERLAN AUX CHAMPIGNONS – Proceed as for Brill with mushrooms (see BRILL).

Whiting Only. MERLAN ONLY – Fillet a large raw whiting. Dip the fillets in a lighter batter.

Deep-fry in hot fat. Drain, sprinkle with table salt, and garnish with fried parsley. Serve with Tomato sauce (see SAUCE).

Whiting with oysters. MERLAN AUX HUITRES – Prepare the whiting as indicated for Brill with oysters (see BRILL). Garnish with poached oysters, drained and trimmed.

Whiting sur le plat. MERLAN SUR LE PLAT – Make a shallow incision along the back of the whiting. Season. Put it in a buttered fireproof dish and pour on 2 to 3 tablespoons white wine and a few drops lemon juice. Bring to the boil on the stove and finish cooking in the oven, basting frequently. Serve in the cooking dish.

Whiting Richelieu. MERLAN RICHELIEU – Prepare as for Whiting à l'anglaise. Cover with Maître d'hôtel butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters) and arrange 4 strips of truffle on top.

Whiting paupiettes. MERLAN EN PAUPIETTES – Fillet the whiting. Spread the inside with a thin layer of fish forcemeat. Roll the fillets tightly and poach in concentrated fish stock. Prepare according to the recipe selected.

Paupiettes of whiting can be prepared à la Bercy; à la dieppoise; aux fines herbes; au gratin; à la Nantua; à la normande; in white wine. All garnishes and sauces indicated for sole are suitable for this dish.

Whiting with shrimps. MERLAN AUX CREVETTES – Prepare as for Brill with shrimps (see BRILL).

Whiting in wine. MERLAN AU VIN BLANC – Prepare as for Brill in white wine (see BRILL).

WHOLEMEAL (WHOLE-WHEAT). BIS – Term applied to loaves of homemade bread which contain a certain proportion of bran, or made of a mixture of wheat and rye flour. The crust of wholemeal bread is of a brown colour. (See BREAD.)

Whortleberry

Small branches of whortleberry

WHORTLEBERRY or HUCKLEBERRY. AIRELLE – The French name airelle is often used to define different berries; bilberry (U.S.A. huckleberry), whortleberry, etc. The real whortleberry is a small reddish berry, acid in taste, which is used mostly in compotes in Germanic countries (preisel-beere in German). It makes a sweet-sour accompaniment to red meats and game. Its properties resemble those of cranberries and bilberries.

Whortleberry or huckleberry accompaniment to cold meats.

AIRELLES – Separate berries from the stem. Measure 2 litres (3½ pints, 4½ pints) berries, wash, drain, and put them in a basin. Add 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) red wine, a pinch powdered cinnamon, 5 cloves and 500 g. (18 oz., 2¼ cups) fine sugar. Bring to the boil, skim and cook for 30 minutes.

Drain the whortleberries and boil down the juice until it reaches the consistency of a thick syrup. Put the berries back into the syrup and mix well. Cool, and put in jars. Seal firmly and keep in a cool place.

Serve with boiled beef and with cold meats.

Whortleberry or huckleberry compote. COMPOTE D'AIRELLES – Prepare a syrup of 500 g. (18 oz., 2¼ cups) sugar, 2 dl. (½ pint, scant cup) water, the peel of ½ lemon and a piece of cinnamon bark. Pick over 1 kg. (2¼ lb.) whortleberries, remove stalks and put into the syrup. Boil fast.

Remove the berries with a perforated spoon as soon as they are cooked and put into a dish. Boil down the syrup and pour over the fruit. Chill before serving.

Whortleberry or huckleberry jam. CONFITURE D'AIRELLES – For 2 kg. (4½ lb.) seeded whortleberries allow 1½ kg. (3½ lb., 6½ cups) sugar. Melt the sugar with ½ litre (scant pint, 2¼ cups) water in a copper or stainless steel pan. Add the berries. Cook, stirring frequently with a wooden spoon to prevent the fruit sticking to the pan.

Finish off as described in the general rules for making jam (see JAMS AND JELLIES). Pour into jars and seal.

Whortleberry or huckleberry jelly. GELEE D'AIRELLES – 2 kg. (4½ lb.) seeded whortleberries, 1 kg. (2¼ lb.) seeded red currants and 3 kg. (6½ lb., 13 cups) sugar.

Press the whortleberries and the red currants to extract all juice. Put this into a pan with the sugar. Mix well and bring to the boil.

Skim carefully and cook for 5 minutes. Leave to stand until lukewarm. Pour into jars and seal.

Whortleberry or huckleberry kissel (Russian cookery). KISSEL D'AIRELLES – Pound 1 kg. (2¼ lb.) whortleberries in a mortar, adding about 2½ litres (4½ pints, 5½ pints) water. Press through a napkin to extract all juice.

Put 6 tablespoons cornflour or potato starch into a pan, pour the juice over it and stir. Add 225 g. (8 oz., 1 cup) sugar. Boil, stirring all the time. As soon as the mixture thickens and becomes transparent, transfer it into a bowl. Serve hot. Serve very thick cream separately.

WIDERKOMM. VIDRECOME – Large glass used in Germany in the Middle Ages for ceremonial feasts.

WILD ARUM, LORDS AND LADIES. GOUET, PIED-DE-VEAU – This plant has a tuberous stem very rich in starch, which can be extracted and used in cooking. When it is fresh, it contains a bitter, corrosive substance, but this can be eliminated by washing or drying.

WILD BOAR. SANGLIER – Wild mammal, very near to the domestic pig (bête noire, in French hunting terms). Its flesh, which has a pronounced 'wild' taste, does not make good eating except in the young animals. The flesh of the adult animals is tough and only becomes palatable if left to marinate for a long time.

Up to the age of six months the wild boar is called a marcassin; from six months to a year, a bête rousse; between one year and two, a bête de compagnie; after two years, a ragot; at three years a wild boar à son tiers an; at four years he is a quartenier, older, a porc entier, and finally, when he is advanced in age, he is given the name of solitaire or ermite. He can attain the age of thirty.

Only the marcassins and the bêtes rousses are used in their entirety in the kitchen. Every part of these creatures, leg, saddle, loin, shoulder and back is excellent. In an old boar only the head is eatable, and even then it is necessary to add to it a great number of other ingredients, such as fine pork forcemeat, chicken meat, fresh pork tongue, fat bacon, truffles and pistachios.

WILD BOAR

Before being cooked in any way the meat of the marcassin or bête rousse should be left for a time in a strong marinade.

Chine of marcassin (young wild boar) à la chipolata. ÉCHINE DE MARCASSIN À LA CHIPOLATA – The chine is the whole or part of the backbone and adhering flesh. After having marinated the chine for several hours, drain, dry and braise it in a well seasoned braising stock. (See CULINARY METHODS, Braising.)

When it is three-quarters cooked, drain the chine. Put it back in the saucepan with a Chipolata garnish (see GARNISHES). Pour over the strained juices from the braising. Finish cooking, simmering very slowly.

Civet of marcassin (young wild boar). CIVET DE MARCASSIN – Prepared like Civet of hare (see HARE).

Cutlets (U.S.A. chops) of marcassin (young wild boar). CÔTELETTES DE MARCASSIN – Prepared like Cutlets (chops) of roebuck or of pork. (See ROEBUCK and PORK.)

Wild boar ham. JAMBON DE SANGLIER – This is cured and cooked in exactly the same way as pork ham (see HAM) and can be eaten cooked or raw. It is garnished with a vegetable purée, usually chestnut.

Wild boar ham, sweet-sour. JAMBON DE SANGLIER À L'AIGRE-DOUCE – Braise the ham, in the same way as pork ham (see HAM). When it is cooked drain it, pour over a few tablespoons of the strained braising juices, sprinkle with sugar and glaze in the oven.

Finish off the braising juices like a Romaine sauce (see SAUCE). Add to this sauce 12 prunes soaked in water and stoned, and 24 cherries pickled in vinegar. Add a little chocolate dissolved in water. Serve the ham with the sauce, accompanied by a garnish.

This way of preparing wild boar is popular in the north of Europe.

Wild boar ham, sweet-sour à l'italienne. JAMBON DE SANGLIER, À L'AIGRE-DOUCE, À L'ITALIENNE – Made like the preceding recipe, but add to the sauce pine kernels, citron peel and chopped candied orange.

Boar's head. HURE DE SANGLIER – The cooking of boar's head, which is a very large dish, involves many different ingredients. The actual boar's head is the most insignificant part of this preparation, because apart from the tongue and a few pieces of lean flesh which are taken off the skull, this cold dish uses only the cutaneous parts covering the animal's head.

For a head of about 5 kg. (11 lb.) when cooked: 4½ kg. (10 lb.) Fine pork forcemeat (see FORCEMEAT), 1 kg. (2¼ lb.) chicken meat boned and trimmed, 750 g. (1½ lb.) cooked lean ham, 4 fresh pork tongues heated, skinned and pickled in brine, 500 g. (1 lb.) scarlet tongue, 500 g. (1 lb.) fat bacon, 400 g. (14 oz.) peeled truffles, 125 g. (4 oz., 1 cup) blanched pistachios.

Singe and scrape the head carefully, and bone it completely, taking care not to tear the skin. Cut off the ears (which must be cooked separately), take out the tongue and remove the small fleshy pieces from next to the skin.

Trim these pieces of lean flesh and cut them into dice. Put them together with the tongue and the skin of the head to marinate for 10 hours with carrots, chopped onions, thyme, bay leaf, salt, pepper and spices.

Prepare a salpicon by cutting into dice the wild boar's tongue, the cooked pork tongues, the scarlet tongue, ham, chicken and bacon. Add the truffles cut into large dice, the pistachio nuts and the pieces of lean meat taken from the head of the boar. Marinate for 2 hours with brandy, salt, pepper and spices.

Add to this salpicon the fine pork forcemeat and 4 whole eggs. Mix all well together.

Boar's head, after Carême

Spread the skin from the boar's head, the outside downwards on a cloth that has been soaked in cold water and wrung out. Put the above mixture in the middle. Fold the skin over the mixture, and wrap it completely in the cloth, reshaping it in its original form. Tie up firmly.

Cook in a jelly stock (see JELLY), using the bones and trimmings of the boar's head as well as the carcase and trimmings of the chicken. Cook gently for 4½ hours. One hour before it is ready, put in the ears. When cooked, drain. Leave to stand for 30 minutes, then untie it. Wash the cloth and wring it out well to remove the moisture. Roll the head in the cloth again, securing it firmly with string, taking care to keep the shape; begin tying at the snout end. Leave to cool for at least 12 hours.

Untie the head and wipe it carefully. Skewer the two ears, coated with a layer of brown Chaud-froid sauce (see SAUCE) or dissolved meat jelly, in their places. Coat the whole of the boar's head, placed on a grid or rack, with the same sauce or with meat jelly, and put back the tusks in their place. Using hard boiled egg white and truffles, make the eyes.

Decorate with Montpellier butter (see BUTTER, Compound butters) or with cut-out egg white, truffles and blanched pistachios. Glaze with jelly. Chill before serving.

Instead of being set on a platter the head may be put on a foundation of shaped rice, and truffles skewered to it.

In home cooking, and even in grande cuisine, the boar's head is most often covered, when quite cold, with a thick layer of golden breadcrumbs, the ears cut up in a salpicon before being cooked and added to the other ingredients. When thus served, the head is a kind of galantine or roll of boar's head.

Loin of marcassin (young wild boar). CARRÉ DE MARCASSIN – Cooked whole like the Loin of roebuck (see ROEBUCK), but more often divided into cutlets (chops) which are prepared like those of roebuck or pork.

Scalloped marcassin (young wild boar). ESCALOPES DE

MARCASSIN – All the recipes given for Scalloped roebuck or Noisettes of roebuck are applicable to young wild boar. (See ROEBUCK.)

WILD CHICORY. BARBE DE CAPUCIN – Variety of wild chicory blanched by being grown in a dark place. It has a slight bitterness which is not unpleasant.

Wild chicory is greatly valued as a salad, because it is always tender. It can be prepared like chicory, and can also be cut into chunks and pickled in vinegar like gherkins.

The slightly purgative tisane of wild chicory is excellent for regulating the circulation. Eaten raw in salad, it helps to prevent constipation in sufferers from hepatitis.

WILD THYME. SERPOLET – Labiate-flowered plant, scented and aromatic, used as condiment and for infusions.

WILLIAM – Variety of eating pear that is very juicy and sweet-flavoured. It ripens in September. A well known spirit is made from this variety of pear.

Old Médoc vines

WINE. VIN – According to the legal definition, wine is 'the product of the alcoholic fermentation of fresh or dried grapes or the juice of fresh grapes.'

The making of wine, which varies a little from region to region, was done differently in ancient times.

The Greeks dried the grapes in the sun on wicker trays which were brought in each evening to prevent the dew falling on them. They tried to make wine that was strong and heavy. The Romans, too, liked their wines to be very concentrated, exposing them to the heat in amphorae. This wine was always mixed with water at mealtimes.

Vinification – The various processes involved in contemporary wine-making are described below.

Vendange or harvest. The date at which the grapes are picked varies according to the region, the temperature and local custom. Where there is a ban de vendange the gathering must not be done before a given date.

The grape harvest takes place when the density of the must, taken from a number of bunches, is found to be stationary, so that the grape has nothing more to gain from remaining on the plant. As far as possible a spell of fine dry weather is chosen for harvesting.

Égrappage or removal from the stalks. According to the region and the growth the fruit may next be partly removed from the stalks. This is more usual in making white wine than red, and is also done when the must is acid or the grapes are over-ripe.

The skins of the grapes are then burst by crushing. Grapes used to be treaded, but nowadays crushing is a mechanical process. The grapes used in the manufacture of white wine are not burst before being pressed, nor are all the grapes used in the manufacture of red wines; sometimes they have to remain whole, e.g. in the case of carbonic maceration.

Cuvaison or fermentation. For the making of red wine, once the grape harvest has been crushed it is put into huge vats, which are made of wood (for fine wines), stone, brick, cement (sometimes coated with silicate), and in hotter countries in enamelled or japanned iron. It is also becoming increasingly common for vintage wines to be fermented in stainless steel vats. The success of the fermentation depends to a great extent on the surrounding temperature, so that in cold districts the vats must be thick and the cellars must be heated, whereas in Algeria and Tunisia, thin-walled vats, which are good heat conductors and are cooled by being wrapped in wet cloths, are used.

Fermentation. Fermentation is due to the action of fungi of the species Saccharomyces, very small in size (the average diameter is 5 to 6 thousandths of a mm.). These are found on the surface of the skins and persist in the soil, where they can resist the most intense cold. At  $-4^{\circ}\text{C}$ . ( $25^{\circ}\text{F}$ .) they become torpid and inactive, but recover their vitality with the first warmth. Yeasts are of different types, among them Saccharomyces apiculatus, pastorianus and ellipsoidus, the most active of all, which appears later on the bunches, when the fruit is ripe. Cultivated on barley must, they provide a barley wine which would have been the cervisia of the Gauls. Each growth has its individual fermenting agent.

By submitting a sterilised must to fermentation with leavens coming from Médoc, Burgundy or Champagne, it is possible to obtain wines which resemble those from which the leaven originated, without ever quite equalling their quality.

For fermentation to take place in the best conditions, the temperature of the cellars should not drop below  $18^{\circ}\text{C}$ . ( $64^{\circ}\text{F}$ .) or the fermentation will be too slow, nor should it rise above  $35^{\circ}\text{C}$ . ( $95^{\circ}\text{F}$ .) or it will become excessive, to the detriment of the quality of the wine, which thereby loses a large part of its volatile products. The best temperature for fine wines is  $25^{\circ}\text{C}$ . ( $77^{\circ}\text{F}$ .)

Fermentation takes place spontaneously, due to the leavening agent in the grapes. Sometimes selected leavens are used. In a hot country, leavens adapted to higher temperatures obtain a better yield of alcohol. If the grape harvest has been soaked by rain, a fully active yeast is introduced into the vat which will prevent the development of harmful ferments. It is always advisable in the latter case to use a yeast from the same district as the harvest or from its immediate neighbourhood; from this a ferment is prepared which is in full activity at the time it is put into the vat.

The ferment breaks down the glucose (grape sugar), and from the beginning of fermentation the carbonic gas which is freed raises the solid parts of the grapes, le chapeau, to the level at which fermentation is most active. If it is allowed to float, the process is unevenly distributed, the marc evaporates less and acid ferments develop on the surface on contact with the air. These difficulties are prevented by sprinkling and pressing back the 'hat', a risky task, carrying with it some danger of asphyxia. Wine-growers sometimes prefer fermentation to be carried out à chapeau immergé, keeping it down in the must with the aid of wicker racks.

Fermentation, at first quite violent, later becomes calmer. This is generally the moment chosen for the décuvage, when the wine is drawn off from the vats. The length of time the wine stays in the vats is variable; a short period gives finer, more delicately flavoured wines, richer in alcohol, less acid and paler in colour; a prolonged period in the vats gives wines that are more robust, stronger and darker in colour. This period lasts from 10 to 15 days in the Médoc, 4 to 8 days in Burgundy and less in Algeria.

The making of Burgundy wine about 1470, as represented on an old tapestry

Décuvage. This has the effect of separating the fermented wine from the marc; a tap placed at the base of the vat allows the first wine to be drawn off. This is called the vin de goutte or pied du cuve, the bottom of the vat.

Pressurage or pressing. The solid residue known as marc (if no wine of second growth is to be made) is then put under the press and submitted to moderate pressure. The vin de presse is always richer in tannin than the vin de goutte, with which it is mixed. The marc is pressed again, more strongly, giving a more astringent, acid wine, less rich in alcohol. Finally the marc is pressed once more. The wine from this third pressing always has a distinct taste of the husks.

On average the wine harvest gives 63 per cent vin de goutte, 25 per cent wine of the first pressing and 10 per cent wines of the second and third pressings.

Vinification (of white wine). White wine can be made of white or red grapes, with the exception of a few vines whose juice is coloured. These varieties are called teinturiers. The grapes are taken as quickly as possible to the press, without previous crushing and the juice alone is set to ferment. The operation of 'débouillage' commonly used for vins ordinaires is strictly forbidden for fine wines. The object of this débouillage is to eliminate the bulk of impurities from the must; this is done either by drawing off the clear must or by adding massive doses of sulphur dioxide. This operation has the effect of arresting fermentation which must then be quickly restarted.

The fermentation of fine wines has to be carried out at a low temperature, 15° to 20°C. (59° to 68°F.), in oak vats or in glass-lined tanks. After its fermentation the wine must rest for a long time until the lees drop to the bottom. This ensures that the wine drawn off will be clear.

Subsequent operations – On removal from the vats, the wine is drawn off into casks where malo-lactic fermentation takes place. Repeated ullaging is necessary to ensure that the casks are always full.

Soutirages or drawings off. Drawing-off has the effect of decanting wines from lees. The first soutirage takes place two to four weeks after the décuvage, the drawing-off from the vats. The second is in January in the South of France and in March and April in colder parts of France.

An old wine press

The part played by the yeasts, though they have by now become much less active, is not yet finished. After fermentation they develop the taste-producing elements, provided that air is excluded; this is why ullage is carried out in the first place and the barrels afterwards placed 'side bung' or bonde sur le côté.

Filtering and clarifying. Before being released for consumption the wine is filtered and clarified to give it greater limpidity. Different substances are used for this, which, by coagulating on contact with tannin, form a kind of screen which entraps and deposits the particles in suspension.

As a rule gelatine or dried albumen is used for vins ordinaires (10 to 15 g. per hectolitre), fresh egg whites for fine wines (2 or 3 per hectolitre), and isinglass for white wines (10 to 15 g. per hectolitre dissolved in 2 to 3 litres water along with 2 g. tartaric acid).

The technique of collage, which is often practised as part of the treatment given to wine after it has arrived in the cellar, is described below.

Other operations are sometimes carried out, such as pasteurisation – heating to 55°C. (131°F.) and 60°C. (140°F.), with air excluded, the presence of air giving wine a 'cooked' taste at 35°C. (95°F.), to assure that the wine will keep. This is chiefly done after blending to amalgamate the mixture. The pasteurisation which is sometimes carried out to remedy maladies of the wine will be considered later.

Fortification, where French wines are concerned, is a matter of adding alcohol to wines which are too deficient in it to keep well, thereby raising the content by one or two degrees at the most. This addition of alcohol is legally forbidden for wines destined to be consumed in France and is strictly limited to wines for export.

Other practices have more relation to chemistry than genuine wine-making.

Chaptalisation. This practice, authorised under certain conditions, consists of enriching must deficient in saccharose, and has the effect of raising the alcoholic strength of the finished product. The process takes place during fermentation. For the amount of must contained in a 228-litre Burgundy barrel, or a 225-litre Bordeaux barrel, the addition of 4 kg. (9 lb.) sugar is equivalent to an increase of one alcoholic degree. White crystallised sugar is generally used.

Chaptalisation must be employed only to re-establish the biological balance of a weak vintage. It should never be used artificially to increase the alcoholic strength of a well-balanced wine. The taxing of wine according to its alcoholic strength has had the unfortunate effect of encouraging the vine growers to chaptalise excessively; this practice has led to a shifting of public taste to wine of high alcoholic strength.

Plâtrage or plastering. This was formerly done, chiefly in the Mediterranean region, to augment the acidity and add brilliance to the colour. The practice has fallen into disuse in France.

Phosphatage (addition of phosphate of lime). This has much the same effect as plâtrage, but does not improve the colour.

Taninase or treatment with tannin. This corrects lack of astringency. Alcohol tannin is used for this purpose, usually in the proportion of 4 to 8 g. per hectolitre.

Salage. Also a very ancient practice, known to the ancient Greeks, who added sea water to their wines. Usually salt is added (up to 1 g. per litre is permitted) to augment the extract and perhaps to cloak some adulteration such as fortification or watering-down.

Shellisage or addition of glycerine. This makes the wine smooth, gives it body, improves its keeping qualities and above all, increases the proportion of extract. The addition of glycerine is forbidden by law, and can easily be detected by the expert.

The use of sulphur, in the form of sulphuric acid, obtained by burning sulphurated wicks or by adding alkaline bisulphates, is recommended by all oenologists as a preventative against the maladies of the wine. Part of the sulphuric acid is eliminated by the soutirage or drawing off.

These chemical processes, which remove wine somewhat from its legal definition, present many disadvantages, especially when several of them are done simultaneously, and they may be dangerous to the consumer.

Among the processes which are plainly fraudulent are the use of saccharine, dulcine, antiseptics and of mineral, vegetable and organic colouring matter.

Ageing of wine – This takes place naturally by the wine being left to rest, in cask, side bung, for one, two or more years, according to the nature of the wine, but can be induced artificially by agitation, by heating, by refrigeration, and by the use of electrical impulses. These can never replace the effect of natural ageing.

Fine wines are subsequently put into bottles, which has the effect of slowing down the processes resulting from oxidation and etherification. These develop the bouquet, and allow the wine to acquire what is called 'bottle age'.

Wines of second and third pressing – Obtained by adding

Wine presses (Remy Martin)

A burgundian fermenting room

Cement vats for wine storage (Demay frères)

sugared water to the marc (50 kg. per hectolitre) and fermenting this anew. These wines always have less extract, cream of tartar and tannin, but they still provide a healthy drink which is worth about two-thirds as much as natural wine.

Piquettes – Made from the fermentation of marcs to which unsweetened water has been added. Very poor in alcohol and extract, they are normally used for home consumption and for blending with wines of second and third pressings.

Wine from dried fruit – Raisins are generally used after having been cooked in warm water. The resulting wines, always white, are characterised by the presence of 0.7 per cent to 1 per cent levogyrous sugar of which there is no trace in natural wine. They are mostly used for blending.

Sparkling wines – See SPARKLING.

Luxury or liqueur wines – Wines which are sweeter or richer in alcohol than those in current consumption. The following varieties are distinguished:

Vins doux mutés or mistelles. Obtained by adding alcohol to partly fermented must immediately after its extraction.

Vins doux semi-mutés. Obtained by the addition of alcohol to partly fermented must so as to obtain about 15°.

Vins doux passerillés. Obtained from musts with a strong sugar content and from raisins dried on the plant, in the sun or in ovens. The must is such as to give a wine of 13° to 15° alcoholic content without the addition of alcohol. Part of the sugar should remain, not decomposed.

Wines muted by the addition of alcohol. This is done immediately after fermentation while still containing much sugar (port).

Dry wines. Fortified after fermentation, like sherry.

Wines with a dry wine base. Blended to give them smoothness (Madeira, Marsala).

Cooked wines. The cooking of the must augmenting the sugar concentration and transforming it partly into caramel (Malaga).

Maladies of wines – A liquid which is essentially alive, wine is subject to various maladies.

Fleurs de vin. Small whitish efflorescences which develop on wines deficient in alcohol on contact with the air when ullage is neglected: these are due to a fungus, Mycoderma vini. The fleurs du vin are often the first stage of acescence, which can be checked at the outset by the addition of chalk or neutral tartrate of potassium (3 to 7 g. per g. of acetic acid). When it is marked, the only thing to do is to turn the wine into vinegar.

Amertume. Literally 'bitterness', manifests itself chiefly in Burgundies and is due to a ferment which decomposes the glycerine in wines which have been kept too long in barrels, and in wines deficient in alcohol. It can be treated, when taken in the early stages, by adding tannin, tartaric acid and alcohol. A simple means of dispersing amertume is to mix the affected wine with a younger wine. A wine which has contracted the taste of amertume in bottles can re-establish itself in a short time if the bottles are well corked, and stacked carefully on their sides in a properly arranged cellar. It is possible to decant the bottles into a perfectly clean, well-fumigated cask, add younger wine and clarify.

Acescence. When casks have not been ullaged regularly, the wine is quickly attacked by acescence. This is a very common malady due to an acetic ferment which turns into vinegar. This ferment develops mostly in barrels which have a vidange, that is to say a gap between the upper part and the wine itself, and can attack good quality wines, though it principally attacks weak wines whenever they are exposed to heat.

Development of the ferment is prevented by drawing-off the wine and by keeping the barrels full all the time, side bung, so that as little air as possible is allowed to penetrate.

A wine is piqué, or pricked, when it is attacked by an acetic ferment. It is very difficult to save a pricked wine. Several methods are advocated. Neutral tartrate of potassium lessens the vinegary taste a little but the wine so treated must be used immediately.

Pasteurisation. The surest way to achieve an appreciable result is to pasteurise the spoiled wine. Heated by means of a pasteuriser, the wine is freed from all the ferment-producing germs which spoil its keeping qualities. There are numerous types of pasteurisers operated by steam, hot air or gas.

The wine to be pasteurised must be clarified and drawn off and have perfect limpidity. To save time the wine can be filtered, then heated to a maximum temperature of 60° to 72°C. (140° to 161°F.). The pasteurised wine should be put into perfectly clean and strongly fumigated barrels which should then be set in a very clean place. This operation, done with care, has satisfactory results.

Pasteurisation can be done in bottles. These are placed upright in a double-bottomed heater which is filled up to the necks of the bottles. One, used for testing, is filled with water and provided with a thermometer to show the rise in temperature and the correct moment to remove from the heat.

Pasteurisation will not restore to its normal state a wine that is badly soured, but it nevertheless has the effect of killing off the existing acetic ferments so that the liquid can be used. Pasteurised wines can remain on ullage, i.e. with an air-filled gap in the barrel, for quite a long time without being affected.

Pasteurisation has the effect of ageing the wine. Some people claim that the process benefits the wine, but opinions are divided. Certainly wines that have slight natural alcoholic content or deteriorate quickly can be helped by pasteurisation.

Goût d'évent. Wine put into barrels which have not been properly cleaned, are very old or badly corked, loses part of its bouquet and takes on a particular taste which is called goût d'évent.

To get rid of this taste the wine is drawn off into a clean, well fumigated barrel. If the taste is too strong, the wine should be mixed with another, which has a higher alcohol content. It must then be clarified and drawn off immediately the wine is clear and the goût d'évent has gone.

Vins tournés. Wine usually 'turns' as a result of a poor quality grape harvest. It is a common mistake to confuse 'turned' wine with wine that is piqué or soured. In cask, wine begins to turn from the bottom, whereas souring always begins on the surface.

A wine that turns completely may be recognised by its dull colour, it is clouded like muddy water and has a smell of rotting organic matter; it has no characteristic of wine.

There are several remedies for turned wine, of which the best and most used is as follows: As soon as it is seen that the wine has turned, citric acid should be added to it, without exceeding the authorized proportion (50 g. per hectolitre). The bright red colour will return in a few days. To restore the spoiled wine completely, it should be mixed with another wine of good quality and the mixture clarified. Pasteurisation is also indicated in these circumstances; the wine should be heated to a temperature of 60 to 70°C. (140 to 158°F.).

Wines which become rosey (gras), stained (taché) or yellow (jaune). It is said that a wine has become rosey or gras when it is oily and viscid. This malady is particularly rampant among the white wines of the centre of France, but it also attacks weak red wines.

Use alcohol tannin in a proper dosage (8 g. per hectolitre). Shake the wine from time to time for two or three days to mix well, then clarify thoroughly.

If white wine becomes taché, that is to say slightly reddened, a combination of sulphuric acid and animal black can be used to lighten the colour again.

White wines which become yellow are also treated in the same way, but there is a simpler method, invariably successful, which is to clarify the yellowed wine according to the instructions given below under the heading Clarifying wine (collage), then to filter and draw off a fortnight later.

Wines which taste stagnant or mildewed. It often happens that the utensils used in making wine have been badly cleaned or incompletely dried. Water has been left in the casks and has become stagnant. It is therefore understandable that the wine may acquire the same taste.

Wine generally passes unharmed from the press to the vat but if it is put into mildewed casks, the bad taste is quickly communicated. To get rid of this, the wine is drawn off into a clean cask and a litre of pure olive oil is added, the barrel being vigorously shaken. A few days later, when the oil has risen to the surface, the wine is drawn off. Alternatively the oil floating on the top may be expelled by introducing a certain amount of wine through a tube. This takes the place of the oil, which is expelled through the bung-hole.

When a bottled wine contracts a corked taste (goût de bouchon), it can be treated in the same way, but this happens rarely on important scale. The corked taste is usually found in one or two bottles only and it is better to sacrifice them.

Casse. Under the name casse three sorts of malady are known. Casse brune, which may be observed on red and white wines, is due to oxidization and insolubility of the colouring matter under the influence of an oxide. It is seen in wines whose fermentation has been slowed down by too high a temperature or made with grapes attacked by pourriture grise (grey rot). Exposed to the air the wine becomes cloudy, forms a considerable deposit and develops a taste first insipid then bitter. At the outset, casse brune can be treated with tannin (4 to 10 g. per hectolitre), followed by drawing off into a well fumigated cask, or adding bisulphate. It is then clarified and pasteurised.

Wine may develop casse as a result of a considerable change of temperature, or a long journey. If it is a robust wine it will right itself after a few days.

Casse bleue or casse ferrugine which attacks white and red wines is due to an excess of iron salts in the wine (the grapes having been tainted with ferruginous earth or contact with iron instruments or receptacles). The iron salts combine with tannin to form ferrous tannates which, by oxidation, are transformed into insoluble ferric tannates. The treatment is to add citric acid (20 to 40 g. per hectolitre), to clarify with egg whites and draw off into a fumigated cask.

Pousse and tourne are troubles caused by the presence of an anaerobic bacillus which attacks the tartaric acid and which develops in weak wines. On contact with the air the surface of the wine becomes iridescent, discoloured, loses its clarity and acidity, and forms a brownish deposit.

It liberates, at the expense of bitartrate of potassium, lactic acid, propionic acid and carbonic acid gas, which tend to dilate the cask and blow off the bottom. The taste, at first insipid, becomes bitter and nauseating. If the malady is taken at the outset it can be checked by an addition to the wine of tartaric acid (20 to 30 g. per hectolitre), followed 30 to 40 hours later by treatment with tannin (10 g. per hectolitre), then clarification with gelatine.

The causes of these troubles are dirty cellars, insufficient care of vessels and utensils used in the wine-making and imperfect cleaning of casks, failure to use only sound grapes, or too high a temperature in the cellars.

Wines unsuitable for consumption – According to the decree of 1 February 1930, wine is considered unfit for consumption if it is suffering from any malady, with or without accescence, which gives it an abnormal appearance and taste, and when it has either a deficiency of tartaric acid, or of bitartrates of potassium, or at least two of the following characteristics:

1. Volatile acids in excess of 1½ g. per litre expressed as sulphuric acid;

2. Total acidity expressed as a bitartrate of potassium less than 1½ g. per litre;

3. Ammonia content higher than 20 mg. per litre.

Care of the finished wine – The first requirement of a cellar is not that it should be extremely cold but that its temperature should be as constant as possible.

In a large town, where there is heavy traffic, it is important to see that the cellar is not shaken when heavy vehicles pass. Repeated shocks of this kind can cause lees to rise, which, mixed with the wine, can turn it sour.

A wine cellar must be kept scrupulously clean. No rubbish should be left in it, no vegetables with a strong odour (carrots, cabbage, onions, turnips), no cheese, no barnyard animals and no liquids such as petrol, mineral oils, etc. All these easily communicate their aroma sui generis to the wine, as has often been observed.

WINE

The wooden stands on which the casks are set must be firmly fixed, 20 to 30 cm. (8 to 12 inches) above the ground on crossbars made of wood or stone. In this way the air circulates freely under the barrels and will prevent the hoops becoming damp.

Care should be taken to fix the casks with wedges so that one can be removed without others being shaken, since this might cause the lees to rise.

Clarifying wine (collage) – It is necessary to clarify (coller) wine which is going to be bottled. The purpose of the collage is to give the wine its limpidity; it precipitates to the bottom of the barrel the solids which the liquid holds in suspension, and which can give rise to the maladies already detailed.

A barrel of red wine containing 225 litres is clarified with 4 egg whites well beaten in a litre of wine. For white wine a tablet of special gelatine dissolved in  $\frac{1}{2}$  litre of hot water for each hectolitre of wine is used.

The bung having been extracted, 4 or 5 litres of wine are removed with a rubber tube, a special suction pump or a siphon. Failing any of these tools, the barrel can be pierced with a gimlet for the necessary amount of wine to be withdrawn. The clarifying agent is poured in through the bung-hole, then with the aid of a stick split into four at the end the liquid is vigorously whisked to mix in the colle. The wine which was drawn off is now poured back, and more wine is added, if needed. The barrel is banged again and again to make the sediment fall and get rid of bubbles, and the bung is replaced. The wine is then rested for 20 days.

Age at which wine should be bottled – Wines are bottled at different 'ages' according to their colour, character, origin and vintage year. Generally speaking, wines that must be drunk young or 'en fraîcheur' – and therefore have to preserve their fruit – e.g. the white wines of the Loire, rosé wines and the lighter red wines – should be bottled at an early stage. Red Bordeaux and Médoc wines, in particular, are not bottled until they are at least three years old. Burgundy grands crus are bottled after two or three years. However, in a poor vintage year, wines, even the grands crus, may be bottled earlier in order to emphasise the fruity character of the lighter wine.

The bottles – Bottles are of the same capacity to within a few centilitres, but their shape differs from one wine district to another. It is therefore best to put each wine into bottles which come from its district of origin.

Cleaning. The bottles are washed in hot water in which soda has been dissolved (20 kg. to 100 litres). When they are half filled with this solution a quantity of small shot is poured in and the bottles are shaken vigorously to scour the glass thoroughly.

If the bottom of the bottle is very much encrusted, a long-handled brush is used to clean it. It is then rinsed in cold water and turned upside down on a perforated shelf (planche à égoutter), on a draining-board of galvanized iron, or on a metal contrivance with spikes. They are often dried by hot air.

Bottling, corking, sealing, capping. Bottling should preferably be done in spring or autumn. Cool, dry weather should be chosen, a day when the wind blows from the north or the east. Stormy weather should be avoided.

It is not necessary to draw off the clarified wine before bottling but it must be absolutely clear. This is easily verified

Bottled wine stored in a cellar by filling a glass with wine from the barrel and holding it up to the light.

The next requirement is a tap of rust-proof metal or wood. A hole is made in the base of the barrel with a brace and bit exactly in the middle, about the same size as the tap, care being taken not to come on a joint. The tap is carefully fixed so that it will not leak. A clean wooden bucket or deep dish is placed below so that none of the wine is lost. One or two bottles are drawn to 'clear', then the others are filled until the barrel is empty.

The choice of corks is very important. They must be of fine, soft, supple cork, giving to pressure from the fingers and without blemishes. Before using they should be put into a receptacle and boiling water poured over them. This is intended not only to make them more supple but also to ensure that they are freed of any impurities. They are then drained for an hour in a strainer, and finally soaked for 10 to 15 minutes in good quality alcohol, either brandy or an old marc which has lost its aroma.

It is preferable not to re-use old corks, or to use them only for vins ordinaires which are going to be drunk soon.

The bottles are corked immediately, with a small space left at the top, so that if strong pressure is exerted on the cork, it will not burst the neck of the bottle.

In private cellars the implement used to knock the cork down into the bottle is a kind of bat; the cork is put in and hit with the batte until it is well down in the neck.

In industrial premises, large restaurants, etc., apparatus is used which allows many bottles to be corked in a short time without fear of breakage.

To seal the corks, Spanish wax is dissolved in boiling water. (This wax is sold in paint shops and by grocers in France. It is essential to add a little fat to the wax so as to make it less breakable, and, at the same time, more adhesive.) When the wax has been softened the neck of the bottle is held in the left hand and the base in the right hand and the end of the cork and a very small part of the neck are dipped into it. The bottle is gently turned with the right hand for a moment so as to coat the cork and bottle neck well, then the bottle is set upright.

The purpose of the wax is to preserve the cork and to prevent it from being nibbled by insects, which are always numerous in cellars.

Sealing with wax is now generally replaced by sealing with metal caps, which cover the cork either partly or completely. These are made in many types and sizes. When a machine is not available, a strong string is attached to a large nail firmly fixed in a wall or door. The string is held in one hand and the bottle with the cap in place is held in the other. The string is wound round the cap just below the ridge which ends the neck, and thus attached is pulled to and fro, keeping the string taut, so that the cap is pressed right.

Placing the bottles. The bottles are set in two rows in this way: at the back a row of bottles with their bottoms against the wall and their necks in front. The space in front is filled with another row with bottoms facing towards and the necks fitting between two necks of the bottles in the back row. On top of these two rows others are piled in the same way. A tiny bubble of air should be visible in the middle of the bottle when it is lying on its side and will indicate whether or not it is lying level. Attention to this may prevent breaking, often caused by lack of stability.

To be certain that the bottles are exactly horizontal set laths on top of each row of bottles, both front and back.

For a stack of bottles to be perfectly steady, it is essential to use uniform-sized bottles.

Portable iron racks are often used. These can hold the equivalent of half a barrel, a barrel or more, according to size. This method of stacking bottles is much easier but less favourable to the conservation of the wine, which should be exposed to light and air as little as possible.

Appellations contrôlées (controlled names) of wines and brandies – The general principle of repressing frauds in the naming of wine dates from 1905, but it was not until 6 May 1919 that a law was introduced to control naming. Even this was still incomplete, because it made the name depend entirely on the place in which the wine was made. The result was that unscrupulous producers were able to sell under a celebrated name mediocre wines from commonplace plants grown in places unsuitable for vine-growing but situated in the region designated and therefore without any breach of the law, since these wines came from the region indicated.

The Institut national des appellations d'origine des vins et eaux-de-vie (I.N.A.O.) was created by an Order-in-Council of 30 July 1935.

The viticultural crisis (1930 to 1937) was responsible for the birth of this official and legal body. The government took measures to cut down overproduction; these included the uprooting of vines, slowing of wine sales and the compulsory distillation of wines. Only fine wines, those bearing an appellation d'origine, were exempt. There was an immediate increase of harvesting declarations boasting appellations d'origine; in 1934, 20 per cent of French home-produced wines was described thus. This infringement had serious adverse effects on the marketing of genuine vintage wines. The honest producers of such wines found themselves victims of unfair competition and the consumers were cheated. Senator Capus and the trade union leaders representing the leading vine growers had the idea of creating an organisation linking professional wine growers and State representatives in order to curb the violations, and at the same time to improve the quality of genuine fine wines.

The purpose of the I.N.A.O. is therefore a multiple one: to determine which are the wines and spirits of appellation d'origine that genuinely correspond to the quality upon which their reputation has been founded, to draw up regulations for their production, to supervise the application of these regulations (which explains the term 'appellations contrôlées') not only at production level but also at the later stages of wholesale and retail marketing. In this way appellations were protected from being fraudulently exploited in France and abroad.

The I.N.A.O. accomplishes this with the help of administrative departments in Paris, agents based in the great wine-producing regions, and correspondents throughout the world.

The technical administrative department in Paris has, with the assistance of specialists, succeeded in marking the boundaries of wine-producing areas. It also checks the authenticity of wine-harvesting declarations in liaison with the important State departments.

Besides operating this supervisory control of the vine growers, the technical advisers of the I.N.A.O. are valued consultants on the best vine cultural methods and on the care and treatment of the wine. They also serve as liaison agents between the various viticultural associations with which the I.N.A.O. are anxious to preserve close relations.

A disputed claims department follows up all proceedings instituted in France for fraud of appellations d'origine. The I.N.A.O. intervenes in such cases in the role of a plaintiff claiming damages. From 1942 to 1963 it had 1,595 vine growers, 3,512 wholesalers and 9,049 retailers convicted.

The action of the I.N.A.O. outside France is very varied because it has to take into account the legislation of the individual countries. Some countries, such as Belgium, Italy, Switzerland and Germany give full protection to appellations d'origine; others, such as Anglo-Saxon and South American countries allow the French appellations d'origine to be usurped. This is why we find 'Australian Burgundy', 'Californian Sauternes', 'Pommard Industria Argentina', etc.

When a country's legislation prevents the possibility of instituting successful proceedings, the I.N.A.O. tries to have commercial trademarks that contain French appellations suppressed or, with the help of the Foreign Office and the Ministry of Economic Affairs, tries to negotiate the signing of bilateral agreements to ensure the protection of French appellations d'origine. The I.N.A.O. has lawyers and correspondents in almost every country who keep it informed of all violations. The I.N.A.O. knows that such defence action alone is not enough and has joined forces with the Comité de propagande en faveur de vin and commercial advisers abroad in a publicity campaign aimed at expanding what, to our knowledge, is one of the oldest and certainly the most prestigious of French productions.

To serve wine – This is how wine should be served at table according to Grimod de la Reynière (Almanach des Gourmands):

'Wines of Orléans, Auxerre, Joigny, Coulanges, Verman-ton and other vintages of Basse-Bourgogne, and the common wines of Bordeaux, are generally adopted for the everyday use of the demi-gourmand, or for hosts of a demi-fortune.

'Often, after the soup, a wise gourmet offers a glass of dry Madeira or Tenerife; vin ordinaire occupies the table until the second service; then with the roast it is customary to serve the Beaune, the Pommard, the Clos-Vougeot, the Chamber-tin or, according to the taste of the guests, the second quality Bordeaux, Saint-Émilion, Château Margaux or Graves.

'As soon as the third service has succeeded the roast, with the entremets, the vegetables, the elegant pastries, the Bordeaux-Lafite, the delicious Romanée, the Hermitage, the Côte Rôtie, or if the guests prefer, the white wine of Bordeaux, the Sauternes or the Saint-Péray, etc. should be served. But dessert soon follows the third service. Then all the special wines of Spain or Greece make their appearance, the old port, the sweet Malvoisie, the Royal-Jurançon, the Malaga and the Muscat, the Rota and the wine of Cyprus. Tokay wine is poured into very small glasses. Finally, to crown the feast, Champagne froths into crystal, and gaiety, which has already spread itself among the guests, is manifested in cheerful talk and lively repartee.

'This is, more or less, the order of service of wines. Doubtless the personal taste of each host causes variations to be made from time to time. But the order indicated is generally observed.'

Brillat-Savarin declared: 'The correct order of service of wines is to begin with the most temperate and progress to the headiest and most fragrant.' (Aphorism XII).

In fact, personal taste must be the criterion and there are no rigid rules except, perhaps, the following two:

Never serve vintage sweet white wines with game or brown meat. Never serve vintage red wines with shellfish and fish.

Serving wine is an art. Which wine to choose? And with which dish? From what type of glass ought it to be drunk? And at what temperature? When there are a number of wines, in what order ought they to be offered? It is in this domain that the skills of a good host are most apparent.

The glasses – In every wine-growing region of France there exists a special type of glass created to enhance the qualities of the wine or wines produced there. But it would be a difficult task, indeed, to build up a collection of all these glasses.

The form, transparency and fineness of a glass all contribute greatly to the savouring of a wine. The glass must be spacious and deep, so that it need never be filled; it should be bombé so that the wine has room to expand, and should narrow towards the lip to capture the bouquet. The sides of the glass should be as thin as possible and absolutely transparent; all barriers between the wine, the lips or the gaze being practically non-existent. Heavy or coloured glasses are not correct.

Bordeaux wine glasses tend to be elongated; Burgundy glasses rounder; but the former can quite well be used for all wines, even, if need be, for Champagne. The fluted glass is better; the 'tulip' glass, so-called because of its resemblance to a barely-opened tulip, is the best of all.

The temperature of wines –

Champagne: 5° to 7°C. (41° to 45°F.)

Dry white wines: 5° to 8°C. (41° to 46°F.)

Sweet white wines: 2° to 5°C. (36° to 41°F.)

Rosé wines: 8° to 10°C. (46°F. to 50°F.)

Light-bodied red wines: 10° to 12°C. (50° to 53°F.)

Vintage Burgundies: 15° to 17°C. (59° to 62°F.)

Vintage clarets: 16° to 18°C. (61° to 64°F.)

Decanting – A delicate operation much practised in Bordelais. It consists of transferring the contents of a bottle of wine into a carafe, taking care to leave the sediment at the bottom of the bottle. The liquid must be poured slowly from one receptacle to the other. The operation is carried out by the light of a candle placed behind the neck of the bottle, and continues until the first filaments of sediment appear.

Usually it is only old wines that are decanted. Care must be taken not to decant fragile wines too soon in case they go flat. On the other hand, robust tannic wines improve with aeration.

Wine in dietetics – Dieticians are quick to treat wine with suspicion because of its alcoholic content. Nevertheless, since wine provides the body with 500 to 800 calories, a large number of mineral salts, iron, tannin, and a considerable quantity of B vitamins, no-one can deny its anti-toxic, mineralising and nourishing action. Only a limited amount of it should be consumed because of the alcohol it contains. If a sedentary adult absorbs more than  $\frac{1}{2}$  litre (scant pint,  $2\frac{1}{4}$  cups) daily (1 litre for heavy workers), the body finds it impossible to assimilate the excess alcohol.

Try to drink only good wine; fine wines which have not been subjected to any chemical 'treatment' nor had any preservative added to them. Such wine is rather expensive but it is the only one that is a natural, complete and living food.

Young wines are quality foods, far superior nutritionally to mature wines; red wines are generally better tolerated than white wines mainly because of the type of manufacturing processes involved. Apart from the sulphur derivatives that are currently used to prevent certain fermentations and to hasten the blanching process, wine merchants almost always resort to potassium ferrocyanide to prevent the wine becoming cloudy or 'going flat'. Dieticians condemn the addition of such an extremely toxic substance. They maintain that it is better to resign oneself to drinking water than to drink such wines which, unfortunately, are the ones that usually appear

TABLE RELATING WINES TO FOOD

Food	White wines	Red wines	Rosé wines
HORS-D'ŒUVRE COLD MEATS	Dry &amp; light Bourgogne ali- goté Petit chablis Mâcon blanc Sancerre Pouilly-fumé Montlouis Crépy Edelzwicker Sylvaner	Light Bordeaux supé- rieur Passe-tous- grains Givry Mâcon rouge Beaujolais Chinon, bour- gueil Gris meunier	Bordeaux clai- ret Bourgogne rosé Anjou, touraine Côtes de Pro- vence Saint-pourçain Rosé de Béarn
FOIE GRAS	Fine wines Graves Meursault Montrachet Champagne Coulée de ser- rant Riesling Hermitage blanc Château-grillet  Fine sweet wines Sauternes Barsac Quart-de- chaume Bonnezeaux Gewurz- traminer Frontignan Samos	Grands crus Médoc, graves Saint-émilion Pomerol Musigny Romanée-conti Beaune, volnay Hermitage Banyuls grand cru Porto
ENTRÉES	Dry or mellow Graves, cérons Meursault Chassagne- montrachet Beaune blanc Champagne Vouvray Saumur Anjou Riesling	Supple Margaux Saint-julien Beaune Savigny Mercury Beaujolais Chinon Bourgueil	Fruity Sancerre rosé Roses d'Anjou ou de Touraine Pinot rosé d'Al- sace
OYSTERS AND SHELLFISH	Dry Graves Entre-deux- mers Chablis Pouilly-fuissé Chassagne- montrachet Chevalier- montrachet Champagne Champagne nature Riesling Sancerre Pouilly-fumé Quincy Savennières Roche-aux- moines Muscadet Gros-plant Cassis, bandol Arbois blanc
FISH, CRUSTACEANS, GRILLED OR POACHED	Dry See above		Dry Cassis, bandol Côtes de Provence Tavel, Irac Rosé de Béarn

Food	White wines	Red wines	Rosé wines
FISH, CRUSTACEANS, IN SAUCES	Dry (full-bodied for highly seasoned sauces) Graves Chablis Meursault Corton- charlemagne Les montrachet Pouilly-fuissé Hermitage blanc Condrieu Riesling Arbois blanc- vin jaune  Mellow wines (for sweet sauces) Sauternes Monbazillac Vouvray Coteaux du Layon Gewurz- traminer
GRILLED WHITE MEATS		Light-bodied Médoc, graves Beaune Savigny Volnay Beaujolais Chinon, bourgueil Saumur- champigny
WHITE MEATS WITH WHITE WINE SAUCES	Graves Sauternes Montrachet Meursault Riesling Vouvray Anjou Champagne
WHITE MEATS WITH RED WINE SAUCES		Saint-émilion Chambertin Beaujolais Chinon Bourgueil
GRILLED OR ROAST RED MEAT		Well-matured Médoc, graves Saint-émilion Pomerol Côtes de Nuits Côtes de Beaune Morgon Fleurie Moulin-à-vent Hermitage Cornas Côte-rôtie Château-neuf- du-pape
RAGOUTS, HAM, PORK STEWS		Bordeaux supérieur Côtes de Fronsac Cahors Madiran Santenay Mercury Beaujolais Sancerre rouge Touraine- amboise Côtes du Rhône

TABLE RELATING WINES TO FOOD

Food	White wines	Red wines	Rosé wines
FEATHERED GAME	Champagne Arbois- vin jaune	Margaux Saint-Julien Graves Musigny Beaune Volnay Beaujolais de crus Arbois rouge Hermitage
OTHER GAME	Château- chalon	Pauillac Saint-estèphe Saint-émilion Pomerol Tous les grands crus de la Côte de Nuits Corton Pommard Côte-rôtie Châteauneuf- du-pape
COAGULATED CHEESES		Médoc, graves Saint-émilion Pomerol Vins de la Côte de Beaune Beaujolais Chinon Bourgueil
FERMENTED CHEESES		Pomerol Canon-fronsac Vins de la Côte de Nuits Corton Morgon Hermitage Côte-rôtie Châteauneuf- du-pape
VEINED CHEESES	Sauternes Meursault Arbois- vin jaune Gewurz- traminer Champagne	Vins de la Côte de Nuits Hermitage Châteauneuf- du-pape
GOATS' MILK CHEESES	Sancerre Pouilly-fumé Mâcon blanc Arbois blanc	Mercrey Givry Beaujolais Chinon Bourgueil	Bordeaux clairet Bourgogne rosé Sancerre rosé
DESSERTS	Champagne Vins mousseux de méthode champenoise Sauternes Barsac Monbazillac Vouvray moelleux Coteaux du Layon Muscat d'Alsace Gewurz- traminer  Muscat de: Rivesaltes, Frontignan, Lunel, Beaumes-de- Venise, Samos	Maury Rivesaltes Grand roussillon Banyuls Porto Madère Malaga

Wine suitable for accompanying soups and egg dishes are not included here; ordinary carafe wines do very well.

on the market. The only wine allowed (on condition that it is drunk in moderation) is that produced from vine stock absolutely free of hybrids; the grapes of which have not been 'enriched' during vinification by the addition of beet sugar, have been fermented naturally without the addition of sulphur dioxide (or only in very reduced quantities, and only at this stage so as not to interfere with the action of the natural yeasts). The only nutritionally safe red wines are those that have undergone carbonic maceration only.

FRENCH WINES. VINS DE FRANCE – A list of the great and small regional wines appears under the name of each province, also the names of its appellation contrôlée wines.

PRINCIPAL CÉPAGES (VARIETIES OF VINE) IN FRANCE.

BORDELAIS

Cépages rouges. Cabernet Sauvignon, Cabernet franc, Merlot, Malbec, Petit Verdot, (The first three constitute the principal vine stock of the wines of Médoc, Graves, Saint-Emilion and Pomerol.)

Cépages blancs. Sémillon, Sauvignon, Muscadelle.

Pinot blanc

BURGUNDY

Cépages rouges. Pinot noir, almost exclusively, for the red wines of the Côte-d'Or and Chalonnais; Gamay noir, with added white grape juice, for the wines of Beaujolais and Mâconnais.

Cépages blancs. Chardonnay for all the appellation white wines; Pinot blanc, Aligoté.

ALSACE

CÉPAGES BLANCS –

A. Cépages nobles. Riesling, Traminer and Gewurztraminer, Clevner, Pinot gris or Tokay d'Alsace, Muscat d'Alsace, Sylvaner. (A blend of cépages nobles is called 'Edelzwicker'.)

B. Cépages courants. Knipperle, Chasselas, Goldriesling. (A blend of cépages courants is called 'Zwicker'.)

CÉPAGES ROUGES – Pinot noir or Burgunder. Pinot Meunier (clairet wines 'Schillerwein').

CÔTES DU RHÔNE

As in all southern vineyards there is a wide variety of vines used. Here are the principal ones, not the accessory ones. (The proportion of these is limited by law.)

APPELLATION GÉNÉRALE CÔTES DU RHÔNE – Cépages rouges. Grenache, Syrah, Mourvèdre, Picpoul, Terret noir, Picardan, Cinsault; Cépages blancs. Clairette, Roussette or Roussane, Marsanne, Bourboulenc, Viognier.

Clairette

NORTH REGION – Cépages rouges. Syrah (the appellations Ermitage, Cornas, etc.). Cépages blancs. Viognier, Roussane, Marsanne.

SOUTH REGION – Cépages rouges. Grenache, Cinsault, Mourvèdre, Carignan, Syrah, Picpoul, and some others for local use. Cépages blancs. Grenache blanc, Clairette, Ugni blanc, Bourboulenc, Roussane, Marsanne, Picpoul. (The proportions authorized of these different vines vary from one appellation to the other.)

LOIRE VALLEY

Cépages rouges. (red and rosé wines): Pinot noir (Sancerre), Cabernet franc or 'Breton' (Touraine, Anjou), Gamay, Groslot, Cot (Touraine, Anjou rosés) Pinot Meunier (Orléanais).

Cépages blancs: Sauvignon (Sancerre, Cher wines, Pouilly-Fumé), Chasselas (Pouilly-sur-Loire), Chénin (Touraine, Anjou), Muscadet or Melon, Gros-Plant or Folle Blanche (Nantes region).

MEDITERRANEAN COAST

Like the Côtes du Rhône méridionales, there are a large number of vines, which vary from one appellation to the other.

Cépages rouges. Grenache, Carignan, Mourvèdre, Ginsault, Terret, Picpoul noir, Cournoise, Aramon.

Cépages blancs. Ugni, Clairette, Mauzac, Carignan blanc, Picpoul blanc.

NATURAL SWEET WINES – The principal vine for natural sweet wines is the Grenache, particularly the Grenache noir (Banyuls, Maury, Rivesaltes, etc.). Also the Maccabeo, Malvoisie, Muscat, Carignan, Blanquette, Alicante; Muscat doré (golden) for the muscats (Frontignan, etc.).

EASTERN REGION

Cépages blancs. Savagnin (Jura, Château-Chalon), Roussette (Seyssel), Chasselas or Fendant (Crêpy, Savoy), Clairette (Clairette de Die, with Muscat).

Cépages rouges. Poulsard, Trousseau, Pinot noir (Arbois, Jura).

SOUTH WEST

The basic vine stock of the South-West (Garonne basin) is the same as that of Bordelais with the addition of some local vines.

Cépages rouges. Cabernets. Merlot, Malbec.

Cépages blancs. Sémillon, Sauvignon, Muscadelle, Mauzac, Ondenc, Gros et Petit Manseng (Jurançon), Barroque (Tursan), Folle Blanche.

CHAMPAGNE

Cépages blancs. Sémillon, Sauvignon, Muscadelle, Mauzac, Ondenc, Gros et Petit Manseng (Jurançon).

Cépages blancs. Chardonnay for the 'Blancs de blancs' (natural or effervescent).

HOME-MADE WINES – See BEVERAGES.

INTERNATIONAL WINES. VINS ÉTRANGERS – After France, Italy has the biggest vinicultural production in Europe (around 35 million hectolitres from a wine-growing area of 2 million hectares); Spain is in third position. Other

The vineyards of Anjou

The vineyards of Champagne continents that produce wine are America (which is the biggest wine-producing continent after Europe); Africa (South Africa as well as North Africa); Australia (50,000 hectares in New South Wales and in Victoria); and even Asia, for although Israel as a State is abstemious, there are enough vines grown to produce a kosher wine, which is exported to the Israeli restaurants of Europe.

EUROPE

Germany. ALLEMAGNE – The German vineyards are the most northern of Europe. They produce well known white wines, especially in the Moselle and Rhine valleys; also red wines of local repute.

Rheingau, Rhein-Hessen and Nahe. The great white wines of the Rhine (dry or sweet, made from late-gathered grapes) come from Riesling, Traminer, Gutedel, Müller-Thurgau vine stocks. Some of the best known vineyards are Johannisberg (former domain of the prince de Metternich), Rüdesheimer, Hochheimer, Sonnenberg. The famous Liebfraumilch is not a vineyard, but a type of wine of which there are several brands. There are also the red wines of Assmannshausen.

The Rhein-Hessen region follows after Rheingau on the left bank of the river. Its wines are fruity and elegant. The most important wine-growing communes are Worms, Liebfrauenstift, Mettenheim, Alsheim, Guntersblum, Oppenheim, Nierstein, Mayence, Bingen, etc.

The Nahe, which is a tributary of the Rhine, has given its name to the wines produced in its valley; these have a pronounced bouquet. Three of the communes are Badekreuznach, Münster, Böchelheim. There are also red wines produced from the black Pinot grape.

Moselle, Saar and Ruwer. The elegant, highly reputed Moselle wines are not so full bodied as the Rhine wines. Piesporter, Braunerberger, Zeltinger are just a few of the vineyards. Among the communes are Piesport, Traben, Trarbach, Bernkastel, Graach, Lieser, Wehlen, Zeltingen, Eitelsbach, Kasel in the valley of the Ruwer; Trier, Kanzen, Serrig, in the Saar valley.

Franconia. The white wines of Franconia are dry, full-bodied with a very distinctive flavour. These Steinwein are sold in flat, flagon-shaped bottles called 'Bocksbeutel'. The most important wine-producing area is Würzburg.

Baden and Württemberg. The vineyards of Baden are planted around Lake Constance and on the slopes of the Black Forest. They produce both white and red grapes (of very high quality around Kaiserstuhl). Württemberg produces highly esteemed red and rosé wines, also a claret, Schillerwein.

Palatinate. An extension of the Alsatian vineyards, Palatinate produces heady, fruity wines and Auslese, white wines of excellent quality made from late-gathered grapes.

Austria. AUTRICHE – Austria produces good-quality dry white wines, sometimes agreeably mellow, and red wines of local interest.

South of Vienna lies the region of Sudbahn, which produces quality white wines made from the Riesling, Sylvaner and Muscat grapes. A wine made from half-dried grapes (not unlike Tokay) is produced near Lake Neusiedel.

Bulgaria. BULGARIE – Wine production is as much as 2 million hectolitres in the good years from a wine-growing area of 165,000 hectares. Two-thirds of the wines are red.

The best-known of the red wines are Gamza, Pamid, Navrovd, Takia, Karabounar, Melnik, Zartchin. The white include Dimiat, Vinenca as well as Muscat and sparkling wines.

Spain. ESPAGNE – Spain comes third in world wine production with an average yield of 15 to 20 million hectolitres. This includes quite a number of good quality table wines, reputed wines from named vineyards, and some special sweet wines known the world over, like sherry, Muscatel, Malaga, which are drunk as apéritif or dessert wines.

The principal wine-growing regions of Spain:

Rioja. Rioja wines are produced in a demarcated area of the province of Logroño, south of the Basque country. They are red, rosé and white. The red wines from Garnache and Tempanillo vine stocks are generous, glowing wines with a relatively high alcohol content. They are usually drunk young, but also mature well, especially in Upper Rioja. This is done by leaving the wine in casks for several years before bottling it.

White wines are produced mainly from the Malvoisie grape. They are full-bodied wines with a low acid content and are often sweet. They acquire a very fine bouquet when left to mature.

Galicia. Light red wines are produced here; these are somewhat 'verts' (immature). There are also the fresh, fruity white wines of Ribeiro de Avia. Both white and red wines are produced in Amandi, Cocabelos, Ponferrada.

Valladolid. Red vins ordinaires and quality white wines from the Verdelho vine stock (Nava la Seca and Rueda).

La Mancha. Very large production of smooth, versatile, red and white wines of quite considerable alcohol strength. These make good ordinary table wines, most of which are exported. The most esteemed vineyards are, for the white wines, Manzanarès; for red and white wines, Valdepeñas.

Catalonia. Rosés and clarets from Panadès. The 'tintos' (reds) also have a good reputation; Cugat is known for white wines.

Tarragona. Here we find the strong red wines of Priorato and the light, fruity, white wines of Peralada and Alella.

Levant. There are the red and rosé wines of Requena and Utiel; in Murcia, we find the highly alcoholic wines of Yecla and Jumilla.

Andalusia. The red wines of Rota and the dry white wines of Manzanilla and Helva.

The Balearic Islands and the Canary Islands. Also produce splendid, generous wines with a fine bouquet.

Malaga. Its almost black colour, natural alcoholic content and distinctive flavour have earned this wine a well-deserved reputation. It comes principally from Moscatel and Pedro-Ximénez grapes. The vines grow on schistose soil which is favourable for them. There are several varieties of Malaga wine, each the result of a special manufacturing and blending process.

White Malaga, delicate and sweet, produced exclusively from the Pedro-Ximénez vine stock; dark red Malaga, produced from a blend of white Malaga and a cooked wine, arropé; Muscat Malaga; rancid black Malaga.

Sherry (Jerez or Xérès). This famous wine is produced in the province of Cadiz (Jerez de la Frontera). The principal vine stock is the Palomino, close relation of the Savagnin from which the yellow wines of Jura are produced. Vinification is the same: grapes gathered by successive selection and pressed when they are almost crystallised. After fermentation and maturation for several years in casks the action of the yeast causes a thin skin to form on the surface of the wine and helps to develop its characteristic nutlike flavour.

There are several varieties of sherry, the best known being: Fino, Amontillado, Manzanilla, Oloroso. The first three are dry; Oloroso is the most mellow and aromatic.

Moscatel. These wines are produced in many regions of Spain. They are based on the musts of muscat grapes muted with alcohol. The varieties differ from producer to producer.

Spain produces a number of sparkling wines, mostly in Catalonia, Perzlada, and in Villafranca del Panades; also in Navarra and in the Rioja region.

Greece. GRÈCE – The Greeks did not invent wine but viticulture in Greece goes far back into the mists of time, as mythological tales and legends show. In ancient times Greek wines had a very high reputation; and, today, in the land of Dionysus, the vine is held in high honour. Wine is produced in all the provinces of the Greek mainland, in Crete, and in the Aegean islands. A great many of these wines bear an appellation d'origine. They fall into two categories: wines that undergo the whole process of fermentation and wines of which the fermentation is stopped by a mutage of alcohol.

In the first category we find the dark red wines of Santa Maura, Euboea, Paros, Crete, Corfu and Nemea; then the dry white, red or rosé wines of Messenia, Olympia, Patras, Tripolis, Attica, Euboea, Crete, Thira, Cephalonia, Zante, Ithaca, Macedonia, Samos.

In the second category, that of natural sweet wines, we find the world-renowned Muscat of Samos and the Muscat wines of Patras and of Cephalonia. Besides these, there are the sweet wines of Crete, the Peloponnese, the Ionian Islands and the  mavrodaphni.

Production of regulation appellation wines was 369,000 hectolitres in 1958; while for the same year the production of vins ordinaires rose to 3,334,410 hectolitres.

Hungary. HONGRIE – Tokay has a worldwide reputation. It is full-bodied, sweet without being too mellow, strong and aromatic. The grapes are picked as late as possible almost at crystallisation stage from the Furmint and Muscat vine stocks. The region where they are produced is situated in the upper valley of the Tisza on the slopes of the Carpathian Mountains.

Hungary also produces dry white wines and a red wine called 'Bull's blood'.

Italy. ITALIE – Except for France, Italy leads wine growing countries in the quantity it produces. Apart from the very many varieties of wine for everyday consumption, the various regions have excellent quality wines to offer.

Piedmont. Here are the red wines Barolo, Barbaresco, Barbera, Freisa, Gattinara, Grinolino, Nebbiolo; the white wines, Cortese, Gavi. In the region of Asti there is a wine made from the Muscat grape, Moscato; and the famous Asti Spumante, a sparkling wine made according to a process which has much in common with the méthode champenoise.

Liguria. Offers the dry or sweet white wines of Cinqueterre near La Spezia, and of Coronato. Then there are the red wines of Dolceacqua.

Lombardy. Has a number of highly reputed wines produced in the Valtellina: Grumello, Sassello and Inferno. There are light red and rosé wines from the banks of Lake Garda; Moscato from around Pavia.

Venetia (Veneto). Produces the white wines: Soave, Gambellara, Prosecco, Cartizze. The red wines are Valpolicella, Valpentina.

Upper Adige and Trent (Trento). Here we find dry white wines made from the Riesling (Italian), and Traminer grapes, Marzemino and Toreldego. The red wines, are made from black Pinot grapes.

Tuscany. The home of Chianti, which is the Italian wine best known outside the country, also the Brunello di Montalcino and Montepulciano.

The other regions of Italy also produce a number of well-known wines: the red Lambrusco and the white Alba or Emilia; the Frascati, Velletri and Marino of Latium; the Orvieto of Umbria; Lacrima Christi produced around Naples along with Capri (a white wine) and Ischia wine.

Sicily. Excellent red and white wines: the dessert wine of Syracuse and the famous Marsala. Excellent Muscat grapes grow in the island of Pantelleria.

Luxembourg. – The Grand Duchy produces fine dry white wines noted for their pronounced bouquet; they bear a close resemblance to German Moselle. Higher standard of production of these wines in recent years has led to a marked improvement in their quality and quantity. They are Riesling, Sylvaner and Elbing.

Portugal. – Portuguese wine production is fourth in world importance. They comprise vins ordinaires, wines bearing an appellation d'origine and, most important of all, port and Madeira.

Madeira. This wine is produced in the island of the same name that lies off the coast of Africa. It is made from Malvasia vine stock imported from Crete in 1418. This dessert wine is muted with eau-de-vie and undergoes a special ageing process induced by prolonged steaming in chambers heated to a temperature of 40° to 50°C. (104° to 122°F.).

Dry or sweet, they are easily recognisable by their engaging, velvety aroma. Madeira is used in cooking to enrich sauces with its flavour and mildness.

The Moscatel of Setubal. Also a sweet wine. Made from Muscat grapes, it is a beautiful amber-coloured wine, generous and fruity. It is produced in the Setubal region, south of the Tagus.

Green wines (vinho verde). The name does not refer to their colour (there is red and white vinho verde); it is their lightness and their acidulous freshness that has led to their being called thus. They are drunk young and cool. Green wines are produced in a demarcated region between Minho in the north and Douro in the south. The productive vines are unusual in that they are trained on living supports, in trellises and espaliers, not in vineyards but on the borders of fields and roads.

Finally, there are the delicious fragrant red wines of Colares on the slopes of the Bay of Tagus, and the red and white wines of the Dão.

Rumania. ROUMANIE - In a good year wine production is in the region of 5 to 6 million hectolitres for a wine-growing area of 250,000 hectares. This comprises 30 per cent superior wines and 70 per cent vins ordinaires.

The most important Rumanian vineyards are (for white wines): Murfatlar, Vales Târnavelor, Drăgășani, Odobesti, Nicoresti, Muscel, Husi, Teremia, Diosig; white wines predominate too in Cotnar and Dealul Mare; Sarica-Niculitel produces red wines.

Switzerland. SUISSE - Vineyards cover an area of approximately 13,000 hectares. Annual production is in the region of 750,000 hectolitres. White wines predominate especially in French and Italian Switzerland. The country produces mostly vins ordinaires; it has few recognised appellations. It is the latter that we shall examine here.

The most extensively grown white grape is Chasselas or Fendant; Riesling and Sylvaner are also used. The red grapes are the black Pinot and the Gamay; also Merlot and Syrah.

The great wine-growing regions of Switzerland are the cantons of Vaud, Valais, Neuchâtel and Geneva, German Switzerland, Grisons and Ticino (Tessin).

The Canton of Vaud is the largest of the wine-growing cantons, covering an area of 3,600 hectares and producing 100,000 to 300,000 hectolitres. It is divided into four regions:

La Côte. The steep slopes between Geneva and Lausanne produce dry white wines, light and fresh and often 'moussillants' (sparkling) from the vineyards of Beguins, Luins, Bursins, Vinzel, Mont, Malessert, Perroy, Bougy and Féchy in the Rolle and Aubonne districts. Beyond these are the more gentle slopes of Morges, Saint-Prex, Lonay and Echandens.

Lavaux. This region, situated to the east of Lausanne, produces wines made from the Chasselas grape, full-bodied, glowing, well-rounded wines of which the most esteemed is Dézaley. The most important wine-growing centres are Vilette, Grandvaux, Cully, Riez, Épesses, Rivaz, Saint-Saphorin, Chardonne, Vevey.

Chablais. Situated in the Rhône valley on the north bank, Chablais Vaudois produces dry white wines, distinguished wines with a fine bouquet. The principal centres are Yverne, Aigle and Villeneuve. Wines from the black Pinot grape are produced in Aigle and Villeneuve.

Jura. Delicate white wines of Arnex, Orbe, Rances, Champvent, Montagny, Granson, Champagne, Bonvillars and Concieux.

The wine-growing area of Valais is the second largest in the country covering an area of 3,000 hectares and with an average production in the region of 200,000 hectolitres. It is situated for the most part on the right bank of the Rhône with the Bernese and Valaisan Alps protecting it from the winds.

The white wines produced from the Fendant grape are full-bodied and age well. They are produced in Sion, Sierre, Fully and Martigny, Leytron. Among the named vineyards are Mont-d'Or, Mollignon, Ravaney, Uvrier, Coquemprey the claves and the bans. Besides the Fendant wines, Valais produces Malvoisie, Ermitage, Johannisberg, and dried Muscat.

Dôle produces a strong red wine with a pronounced bouquet made mainly from the black Pinot grape.

The wine-growing district of the Neuchâtel canton covers 850 hectares and produces an average of 70,000 hectolitres. It is situated on Lake Neuchâtel. The white wines are lively, light and 'font l'étoile' (make stars) when they are poured. Their 'pièce à fusil' (flinty) taste and their sparkling quality combine to make them very attractive wines. The red wines, and one of the best is Cortailod, come from the black Pinot grape; Oeil de Perdrix (partridge's eye) is also derived from barely fermented black Pinot grapes.

The wine-growing district of the canton of Geneva covers an area of about 1,000 hectares. It is divided between the Genoese Petite Côte, the Côte du Mandement and the commune of Satigny on the right bank of the Rhône. There are also vineyards on the left bank of the Léman, between Hermance and Coligny.

The white wines come from the Fendant grape; the red from the Pinot and Gamay.

The vineyards of the German cantons, although smaller than those of French Switzerland, also produce excellent wines.

In the Bernese Oberland there are the Chasselas wines of the banks of Lake Biel, also the Schafiser and the Twanner, the black Pinot and the Riesling-Sylvaner from the shores of Lake Thun.

Aargau produces wines made from Riesling-Sylvaner. Red wines include Herrenberg, Schartenfels, Golwändler.

The canton of Thurgau produces well-known red and white wines at the Thurgau monastery of Ittingen and at Château Arenenberg.

The town of Schaffhausen offers a first class quality 'Tokay' and excellent black Pinot wines. The wines on the shores of Lake Zurich yield flavoursome fruity wines, white (Riesling-Sylvaner) and red (black Pinot) from the vineyards of Shipfaut, Sternthalde, Lattenberg, Stammheim, Shiterberg.

A low-fermentation red wine, light-coloured and moussillant (sparkling) is produced in Graubünden (Grisons) at Chur, Zizers, Trimmis. It is called Schiller. There is also a famous red Pinot wine produced in Herrschaft.

In the Ticino (Tessin) Valley, the vines are planted on the shores of Lakes Maggiore and Lugano. Here we get full-flavoured white wines made from Chasselas and Sémillon grapes. The Bourdeaux Merlot vine stock produces aromatic red wines, rounded and glowing. We must not forget the local red wine which is tending to take the place of Merlot.

U.S.S.R. - The wine-growing area of the Soviet Union exceeded a million hectares in 1960 and boasted a production of 7,500,000 hectolitres of wine.

The great viticultural regions of the U.S.S.R. are: Russia, Ukraine, Uzbekistan, Kazakhstan, Georgian SSR, Azerbaijan SSR, Moldavian SSR, Kirghizia, Tadshik SSR, Armenian SSR, Turkmen SSR.

Cultivation is divided between sovkhoz and kokhoz (collective farms) grouped in large wine-producing 'combines' which are under the jurisdiction of a Ministry.

It is mostly white and sparkling wines that are produced; production of the latter reaching 32,800,000 bottles in 1958.

Yugoslavia. YUGOSLAVIE - The average wine production in a viticultural area of 272,000 hectares varies between 3.5 and 4.5 million hectolitres apart from exceptional years like 1958 when it reached 5,759,000 hectolitres.

The principal wine-producing regions are Croatia, which accounts for half the production, then in order of importance, Slovenia, Macedonia, Bosnia-Herzegovina, Montenegro.

The dry white wines of Slovenia are worth mentioning. They are: Traminer, Ferment, Sauvignon. The red wines of Dalmatia are much esteemed.

AMERICA

United States. ÉTATS-UNIS - The largest wine-producing area of the United States is California; it accounts for four-fifths of vine-growing country. In 1959, Californian production rose to 5,532,410 hectolitres or 209,402,345 gallons (total American wine production 6,303,430 hectolitres or 238,585,531 gallons.) The other wine-producing regions are New York State, New Jersey, Illinois, Michigan and Washington State.

The United States produces apéritif wines, red wines, rosés and white table wines, dessert wines and sparkling wines.

There are no appellations d'origine. American wines often borrow their names from those of European wines which they claim to resemble (port, sherry, Chablis, Burgundy, Champagne, etc.). Occasionally they adopt the name of the vine stock from which they come (and, fortunately, this is becoming more and more the rule); these are Cabernet, Pinot Noir, Gamay, Traminer, Riesling, etc.

Argentina. ARGENTINE – The wine-growing country covers an area of 230,000 hectares, the principal region being Mendoza, covering more than 150,000 hectares. In 1958, the total vintaging of 14,041,437 hectolitres was divided as follows: vins ordinaires, 11,365,789 hectolitres; fine wines, 1,213,248 hectolitres; special wines, 1,462,400 hectolitres.

The Argentine has an embryonic system of wine legislation using the denomination of 'Wine from the region of . . .' followed by the province of origin. These wines must not be diluted or mixed with the wine of other regions.

Brazil. BRÉSIL – The area allotted to wine-growing was 63,000 hectares in 1960, with a production of 1,230,000 hectolitres, two-thirds of which were red wines.

In Brazil the appellations correspond to the denominations of the vine stock growths used (at least of the principal vine stocks, the proportion of which is laid down by the law). For the appellations Trebbiano, Malvazia, Riesling, Merlot, at least 60 per cent; Barbara, at least 50 per cent; Moscatel, at least 35 per cent.

Chile. CHILI – Average production is in the region of 4 million hectolitres for an area of 112,000 hectares (figures of 1960), 70 per cent being red wines.

The principal productive regions are Santiago, O'Higgins and Conchagua; Curicô and Talca; Lînarès and Maule; Nuble, Concêpcion and Bio-Bio. Apart from a few large domains, the Chilean vineyards are very broken up (average 3 hectares).

Mexico. MEXIQUE – The wine-growing area of Mexico covered an area of 12,000 hectares in 1960. The average wine production then was about 60,000 hectolitres (only 25 per cent of the grapes cultivated are made into wine). Mexican wines are divided between red and white table wines, aromatized wines (vermouth) and 'generous' types of wine such as Moscatel, sherry, port. There are also some sparkling wines produced.

AFRICA

South Africa. AFRIQUE DU SUD – The vineyards of the Republic of South Africa are situated in Cape Province. Production is in the region of 3 to 3½ million hectolitres.

The wines are mostly red and white table wines (rather full-bodied ones) and 'fortified wines'. The latter consist of wines similar to port ('Cape ports') with an alcoholic strength of 18° to 20°, sherry-type wines (South African sherries).

South Africa also produces a number of sparkling wines.

Algeria. ALGÉRIE – See ALGERIA.

Egypt. ÉGYPTÉ – The Egyptian vineyards lie in the north of the country, west of the Nile delta. Wine production is not very large (about 30,000 hectolitres). Worth mentioning are the following vineyards and their wines: 'Ptolemy' (white), the 'Clos Mariout' (white), 'Clos Matamix' (red).

Morocco. MAROC – Annual wine production is in the region of 2 to 2½ million hectolitres. Almost all of the wines are vins ordinaires and are mainly for exportation. Red wines predominate; there are also Muscat wines and vermouths.

The principal wine-growing regions are Oujda, Fès, Meknès, Rabat, Casablanca, Marrakesh.

Tunisia. TUNISIE – Average production is around 1½ million hectolitres. Vins ordinaires account for most of the production, but there are also some excellent 'quality' wines and more particularly sweet wines, Muscats.

The appellation contrôlée 'Muscat de Tunisia', was accorded in 1959. The other appellations d'origine are held by the Muscat wines of Thibar, Rhadès, Kelibia.

ASIA

Iran – Notwithstanding the fact that Iran is supposed to be the birthplace of the vine and despite all the songs of praise Persian poets have dedicated to their wine, production is quite small, due mainly to the interdiction of the Moslems. Raisin wine is the most common of what wine is produced, but most of the 75,000 hectares of vineyards cultivate dessert grapes.

Israel. ISRAËL – In Israel, too, most of the grapes produced are destined for the table. Average wine production is 200,000 hectolitres for an area of 3,500 hectares. A large part of this consists of 'kasher' wine much of which is exported to Jewish communities in Europe.

Lebanon. LIBAN – The wine-growing area of the Lebanon covers approximately 24,000 hectares. Most of the production is devoted to dessert or dried grapes (raisins, etc.) and grape juice. Actual wine production amounts to little more than 35,000 hectolitres.

Asian Russia. RUSSIE D'ASIE – A large part of the Russian vineyards are situated in the continent of Asia in the regions of Turkestan and the Caucasus.

Turkey. TURQUIE – Although most of the 700,000 hectares of vineyards are given over to the cultivation of dessert grapes (580,000 tons in 1960) and dried grapes (more than 100,000 tons). Turkey has an average annual wine production of 250,000 hectolitres.

Besides the vins ordinaires there are 'quality' wines in the following appellations: Izmir, Tekirgad, Mürefte, Bozcaada, Ankara, Tokat, Elazig, Antep.

AUSTRALASIA

Australia. AUSTRALIE – Average production between 1 and 1½ million hectolitres. Part of this is exported to Britain. The principal vinicultural area is South Australia. New South Wales, Victoria, Western Australia and Queensland follow.

WINKLE or PERIWINKLE. BIGORNEAU – Name applied to many small gastropod molluscs of the genus Littorina, which occurs on all coasts from the Arctic and Antarctic to the equator.

In various regions of France this mollusc, with a brown coloured spiral shell with a corneous operculum, is called by different names: in Brittany it is called vignot or vignette, in Normandy brelin and in Aunis escargot de mer or guignette.

At Croisic and in the Auray region winkle farms have been set up where winkles are cultivated.

In France there is an order of winkles called the Compagnons du bigorneau. Sir Winston Churchill was one of its most illustrious members.

Generally speaking winkles are eaten raw, but they can be cooked like cockles. To eat it, the mollusc is extracted from its shell with a pin.

WINTERTHUR (À LA) – Spiny lobster prepared as Spiny lobster cardinal (see SPINY LOBSTER), but stuffed with peeled shrimps as well as a salpicon (q.v.) of spiny lobster.

WITLOOF – Belgian endive blanched in cellars. (See ENDIVE, CHICORY.)

WOODCOCK. BÉCASSE – The woodcock is considered the best winged game. It is a migratory bird, and goes to France about the end of September and stays the whole winter, its mating season. In Great Britain it is a 'classified' game bird and can only be shot, in season, from September to January. Towards the end of February it flies back to its land of origin.

There are three varieties of woodcock; the large which is the size of a medium-sized partridge, the medium and the small.

People who like eating woodcock insist that it should be cooked undrawn. Only the gizzard has to be removed.

The woodcock, they say, being insect-eating and berry-eating, should not be drawn any more than thrushes, black-birds, rails or the garden-warbler, for its full flavour to be appreciated.

But there are some people who hold the view that woodcock is difficult to digest, indeed harmful to health, especially when it is prepared as a salmis (q.v.). This opinion is erroneous, the gourmets assure us, particularly where sound woodcock is concerned, that is, birds which are not excessively high. Allowing winged or ground game to get too high is quite wrong gastronomically and is often done out of snobbery. Game which has reached the state of decomposition is difficult to digest and often even toxic.

Some decry the use of rôtie, which is usually prepared by spreading pieces of fried bread with the bird's trail (i.e. the intestines) chopped up finely, blended with a little chopped bacon fat or foie gras, strengthened with a dash of brandy, seasoned with salt and pepper and flavoured with spices. Gourmets, however, consider woodcock and the trail, which is normally served with it, one of the most succulent morsels.

Pierre Belon wrote:

'The woodcock has plenty of rich fat. It sharpens one's discernment of the wines; those who are well off, knowing this, eat it to appreciate the wine.'

Brillat-Savarin wrote in his Physiologie du goût:

'The woodcock is a very distinguished bird but few people know its charms. It is in its full glory when roasted before the eyes of the hunter, especially the hunter who shot it.'

Godard d'Aucour sings its praises as a purée:

'When a woodcock is reduced to a purée

Prepared by skilful art,

This dish, so rare, and not less precious,

Should only be served at the banquets of gods.'

But nothing can rival a roast woodcock cooked to a turn, or Woodcock in brandy (à la fine Champagne).

Woodcock à l'Armagnac. BÉCASSE À L'ARMAGNAC – Prepare, using Armagnac, as described in the recipe for Woodcock in brandy (à la fine Champagne).

Woodcock in brandy (à la fine Champagne). BÉCASSE À LA FINE CHAMPAGNE – Cook the woodcock from 10 to 12 minutes. Cut it into pieces and put them into a buttered casserole or low-sided terrine, arranging them in a pyramid. Cover the casserole. Keep hot on a hot-plate without allowing to boil.

Dilute the juices in which the woodcock was cooked with a small glass of previously flamed fine Champagne brandy. Add the chopped intestines, blended with the blood left from pressing the carcase and the trimmings, 1 tablespoon concentrated game stock boiled down to the consistency of a fumet (q.v.) and a dash of lemon juice. Season with a pinch of cayenne pepper. Pour this sauce over the woodcock and reheat without allowing it to boil.

Woodcock au Calvados. BÉCASSE AU CALVADOS – Prepare, using Calvados, as described in the recipe for Woodcock in brandy (à la fine Champagne).

Woodcock in casserole or cocotte. BÉCASSE EN CASSEROLE, EN COCOTTE – Truss the woodcock as for an entrée, cover with a thin rasher of bacon or salt pork, put into a casserole in which some butter has been heated, season, and cook in the oven from 15 to 18 minutes, basting frequently. Drain and remove trussing string. Put in the casserole a dash of brandy and a few tablespoons concentrated game stock boiled down to a consistency of a fumet (q.v.), or use thickened brown gravy. Put the woodcock back in the casserole.

As usual with roast woodcock, serve the trail at the same time. This can either be put underneath the bird in the casserole or served separately. For the preparation of trail, see recipe for Roast woodcock (see below).

Woodcock au Chambertin. BÉCASSE AU CHAMBERTIN – A kind of salmi, which can be garnished with truffles and mushrooms.

Truss a woodcock as for an entrée and cook in the oven from 8 to 10 minutes. Divide it into pieces. Remove the intestines and keep two-thirds to prepare the rôtie, and the rest for thickening the sauce.

Put the pieces of woodcock into a buttered serving dish, cover with sliced truffles and mushrooms, the latter lightly tossed in butter. Keep hot without allowing to boil. Chop up the carcase and all the trimmings. Put them into a chambertin wine sauce prepared in the following manner:

Brown in butter a mirepoix, consisting of half a carrot and half an onion cut into dice, 25 g. (1 oz.) raw lean ham, a sprig of thyme and a piece of bay leaf. Moisten with 3 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint,  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cups) Chambertin wine. Boil down completely. Moisten with 2  $\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, generous cup) Demi-glace (see SAUCE) based on a game fumet (q.v.). Simmer for 20 minutes. Add to this sauce the chopped carcase and trimmings of the woodcock and a small glass of previously flamed brandy. Rub through a fine sieve. Put back on the heat, bind, using one-third of the intestines rubbed through a fine sieve, as a liaison. Add a tablespoon butter and pour over the pieces of woodcock. Heat over a low heat without allowing it to boil.

Serve with the rôtie made with the rest of the intestines.

Chaud-froid of woodcock. BÉCASSE EN CHAUD-FROID – Cook the woodcock in the oven, leaving it slightly under-done. Cut in pieces and remove the skin. Coat them with brown Chaud-froid sauce (see SAUCE) based on concentrated game stock. Decorate each piece with slices of truffles, white of hard boiled eggs, salt beef tongue or cooked ham, and glaze with jelly. Allow to cool thoroughly. (See CHAUD-FROID.)

Arrange the pieces of woodcock either on a foundation of well-set jelly, or on a buttered croûton. Garnish with chopped jelly.

Woodcock à la crème. BÉCASSE À LA CRÈME – Prepare the woodcock as described in the preceding recipe. After removing the trussing string, put the bird back in the casserole, sprinkle with a dash of brandy and add a few tablespoons thick fresh cream. Simmer in the oven for a few moments.

Woodcock en daube à l'ancienne. BÉCASSE EN DAUBE À L'ANCIENNE – Dress the woodcock, removing the backbone. Season the inside with Spiced salt (see SALT). Stuff with a large piece of raw foie gras studded with pieces of truffle, seasoned with spiced salt and sprinkled with brandy.

Enclose the foie gras in the bird. Truss as for an entrée, and bard with a lean rasher of bacon. Put the woodcock in an earthenware casserole in which 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) butter have been heated. Baste with this butter and cook in the oven for 10 minutes.

Add 8 mushroom caps and 8 thick slices of truffles, and finish cooking together, with a lid on, for 6 minutes. Drain the bird and garnish. Dilute the juices left in the casserole with half a glass red wine (Bordeaux or Burgundy), boil down, add 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{3}$  pint, scant cup) game fumet (q.v.), or Demi-glace sauce (see SAUCE) with the chopped carcass added to it. Boil for a few moments, and add finely chopped intestines blended with 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) brandy and 1 tablespoon butter. Strain.

Remove trussing string and put the woodcock and the garnish into the casserole. Pour the sauce over it and heat for a few moments without allowing it to boil.

Woodcock en daube (cold) I. BÉCASSE EN DAUBE – Prepare and cook the woodcock as described in the above recipe but do not add mushrooms to the garnish.

When the bird is cooked, drain, remove trussing string and barding bacon, and put it with some truffles into an earthenware cocotte. Cover with the sauce prepared as described in the above recipe, adding meat jelly, strained and with all the fat carefully skimmed off. Chill.

Woodcock en daube (cold) II. BÉCASSE EN DAUBE – Bone the woodcock completely without tearing the skin. Spread the bird on a piece of muslin which has been soaked in water, wrung out and stretched on the table.

Season with Spiced salt (see SALT) and sprinkle with a few drops of brandy. Cover the middle with a layer of finely pounded pork forcemeat mixed with one-third of its weight of à gratin game forcemeat (see FORCEMEATS) together with the bird's intestines, rubbed through a sieve. On this forcemeat put a piece of foie gras of about 75 g. (3 oz., scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup), studded with large pieces of uncooked truffles, seasoned with spiced salt, well pressed in and sprinkled with a dash of brandy. Cover the foie gras with a layer of forcemeat, enclose the whole in the woodcock and wrap the bird in the piece of muslin.

Tie with string at both ends and in the middle, tightening it to give the ballotine its correct shape. Cook for 40 minutes in concentrated game stock to which the carcass and the trimmings of the bird have been added.

Drain the ballotine, unwrap it, rinse the piece of muslin in hot water, wring it out and wrap the ballotine in it once again. Put into a terrine. Strain the liquor left over in the pan, skim off fat, allow it to cool thoroughly and pour over the ballotine.

Take the ballotine out and unwrap it. Put it in a dish on a foundation of well-set jelly, clarified in the usual manner (see JELLY) with the liquor left over from cooking the woodcock. Cover the ballotine completely with the half set jelly and chill on ice before serving.

Ballotine of woodcock can be served on a buttered croûton of bread, and garnished with chopped jelly. It can also be lightly coated with a brown chaud-froid sauce based on a game fumet (q.v.) decorated with pieces of truffles, white of hard boiled eggs and salt beef tongue, and glazed with jelly.

Woodcock à la Diane (cold). BÉCASSE À LA DIANE – The recipe which follows comes from Leopold Mourier:

'Roast the woodcock but remove from heat while still markedly underdone, and cut it into fillets.

'Pound the carcass and the intestines with a piece of foie gras the size of a walnut, a piece of butter the size of a hazelnut, some nutmeg and brandy. Rub through a sieve and season well.

'Arrange this forcemeat on large pieces of uncooked truffles, steeped in fine Champagne brandy.

'Reshape the woodcock, sandwiching the fillets together with slices of truffles covered with forcemeat. Cover the whole with very concentrated game jelly. Chill thoroughly before serving.'

Woodcock au fumet. BÉCASSE AU FUMET – Prepare like Woodcock in brandy (à la fine Champagne). When it is cooked but quite underdone cut it into pieces, put in a casserole and finish off on a hot-plate, pouring over it the blood pressed out of the carcass, thickened a little with finely chopped intestines and a dash of previously flamed fine Champagne brandy.

Serve the rest of the trail on a piece of fried bread.

Woodcock à l'orange. BÉCASSE À L'ORANGE – Cook the woodcock on a spit or in the oven. Arrange it on a croûton spread with the trail. (See Roast woodcock below.)

Dilute the pan juices with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) dry white wine, add a few tablespoons concentrated game stock boiled down to the consistency of a fumet (q.v.). Simmer for 5 minutes. Add the juice of an orange, strain through a fine strainer or muslin bag, add finely shredded rind of the orange, blanched and well drained, and blend in 1 teaspoon butter. Pour this sauce over the woodcock. Garnish with slices of orange.

Woodcock with oysters à l'ancienne. BÉCASSE AUX HUÎTRES À L'ANCIENNE – Although a woodcock cannot be considered as abstinence fare, it is often served as such during Lent.

Stuff the woodcock with 8 oysters à la crème, i.e. poached in their own liquid, drained, de-bearded and dried, then put into very thick Velouté sauce (see SAUCE) based on concentrated fish stock and the liquor left over from the oysters.

Truss the woodcock and cook in the oven, until light golden. Spread with finely chopped intestines blended with 2 pounded anchovy fillets, seasoned with salt, pepper, grated nutmeg and lemon juices on a croûton, fried in oil, and brown the top. Arrange the woodcock on the croûton.

Dilute the cooking juices with a dash of brandy, blend in 2 tablespoons butter and pour over the bird. Surround it with 4 oysters dipped in egg and breadcrumbs and fried, and lemon cut in quarters.

Hot woodcock pâté à la périgourdine I. PÂTÉ CHAUD DE BÉCASSE À LA PÉRIGOURDINE – Cut off the breast fillets of 2

Woodcock pâté

woodcocks. Using the boned flesh of the rest of the birds, and adding to it the flesh of another whole woodcock and a quantity of fat bacon equal to half the total weight of the woodcocks' flesh, prepare a very finely pounded forcemeat. Season with salt, pepper and spices, and sprinkle with a small glass of brandy.

Coat a hinged pâté dish, lined with Short pastry (see DOUGH), with the forcemeat, on this put 2 fillets, slightly flattened with a steak-beater, and 4 small slices of foie gras and 8 thick slices of truffles. Cover with another layer of forcemeat, to be followed by the other 2 fillets and slices of foie gras and truffles. Finish off with another layer of forcemeat. Cover with a lid of pastry. Seal the edges and crimp with a pastry crimper. Make a small hole in the middle of the pâté to allow steam to escape. Decorate with pieces of pastry cut in fancy shapes. Brush with yolk of egg. Put on a baking tray and cook in a slow oven for about an hour.

Unhinge the mould, take out the pâté and arrange it on a dish. Through the hole in the top pour in a few tablespoons Demi-glace sauce (see SAUCE), based on concentrated game stock boiled down to the consistency of a fumet (q.v.), and essence of truffles.

Hot woodcock pâté à la périgourdine II. PÂTÉ CHAUD DE BÉCASSE À LA PÉRIGOURDINE – Bone 2 woodcocks completely. Lay them out on the table and spread each with a forcemeat as described in the above recipe, with foie gras and truffles. Roll into ballotines and wrap each in a piece of muslin. Poach for 12 minutes in Madeira-flavoured braising stock, made from the carcasses and trimmings of the birds. Drain and allow to cool. When quite cold, unwrap the ballotines.

Prepare a finely pounded forcemeat, composed of two-thirds à gratin game forcemeat and one-third veal forcemeat (see FORCEMEATS). Line a hot pâté mould with Short pastry (see DOUGH), and coat with the above forcemeat. Put the ballotines on this forcemeat, laying them side by side, cover with 10 slices of foie gras heated in butter and 20 slivers of truffles. Cover with the rest of the forcemeat and a lid of pastry and finish off as described above.

Cook in a slow oven from 40 to 45 minutes, pour into the pâté through the opening in the top, several tablespoons Périgueux sauce (see SAUCE).

Cold woodcock pâté. PÂTÉ FROID DE BÉCASSE – This can be prepared in the same way as Hot woodcock pâté II.

Allow the pâté to cool without taking it out of the mould. Pour into it a few tablespoons liquid aspic jelly flavoured with Madeira, port or sherry. Leave to get cold for 12 hours.

Take the pâté out of the mould and serve.

Woodcock à la périgourdine. BÉCASSE À LA PÉRIGOURDINE – Stuff the woodcock with a forcemeat of the bird's chopped intestines, chopped or diced, foie gras and truffles, seasoned with salt, pepper and spices and strengthened with a dash of Armagnac. Truss the woodcock as for an entrée. Heat 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) butter in an earthenware casserole and put the woodcock in. Season, and brown on all sides. Add 6 small peeled truffles. Sprinkle with a small glass of Armagnac. Cook in the oven, uncovered, from 15 to 18 minutes. Remove trussing string. Baste with 4 tablespoons ( $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) concentrated game stock boiled down to a consistency of a fumet (q.v.). Serve in the casserole.

This dish is a variation of Woodcock à la Souvarov (see below).

Woodcock pie with truffles. TOURTE DE BÉCASSE AUX TRUFFES – Fill the middle of a round piece of Flaky pastry (see DOUGH), with a layer of à gratin game forcemeat (see FORCEMEAT). On this put 2 woodcocks cut into serving pieces and briskly fried in sizzling butter to brown them lightly. Cover with slices of truffles. Season with salt and pepper and scatter a few dabs of butter over.

Cover with puff paste and seal the edges. Make a hole in the middle to allow steam to escape. Decorate the top with pastry cut in fancy shapes and brush with egg yolk. Bake in a hot oven. Pour into the pie a few tablespoons concentrated game stock.

Purée of woodcock. PURÉE DE BÉCASSE – Cook a woodcock in the oven for 10 minutes, allow to cool and bone completely. Pound the flesh in a mortar, together with the intestines. Rub this purée through a fine sieve. Heat in a bain-marie, casserole or timbale. Add a few tablespoons of very concentrated game fumet (q.v.) made from the carcass and the trimmings of the woodcock and with rich Demi-glace (see SAUCE). Add 2 tablespoons (3 tablespoons) of fine Champagne brandy and stir.

You can add to this purée diced truffles, cooked in Madeira, or a few tablespoons of truffle purée. The woodcock purée can be served by itself, pyramided on a platter and garnished with puff pastry rosettes or heart-shaped croûtons fried in butter. It can also be used as a garnish for various dishes: soft boiled or poached eggs on woodcock purée, and especially for plover eggs. It is used for filling barquettes and other tartlets, patties, vol-au-vent cases, and also dishes of similar nature which are served as small entrées, or entrées volantes.

Woodcock à la Riche. BÉCASSE À LA RICHE – This dish was the speciality of the old Café Riche, famous for the excellence of its cuisine, which disappeared in 1917.

This woodcock is prepared as Woodcock in brandy (à la fine Champagne). It is arranged on a croûton of fried bread, spread with à gratin game forcemeat (see FORCEMEATS). The gravy which is poured over the woodcock is thickened with purée of foie gras and butter. The bird is cut into pieces at the last moment.

Roast woodcock. BÉCASSE RÔTIE – Truss the woodcock, drawing the head round and running the beak through the legs. Bard it and tie with string. Cook on a spit on a very lively fire, from 18 to 20 minutes, or in the oven from 15 to 18 minutes. Arrange the bird on a canapé of bread fried in butter, or fried golden in the dripping pan or in the roasting pan.

Roast woodcock must always be served with its rôtie, i.e. croûton of fried bread spread with the intestines of the bird taken out after cooking. It is prepared as follows.

Chop up finely the woodcock's intestines (the gizzard having been removed) with an equal quantity of foie gras or fresh grated bacon fat. Season with salt and pepper and add a pinch of grated nutmeg and a dash of Cognac. Spread this mixture on pieces of bread, either fried or cooked in the dripping pan. Sprinkle with freshly ground pepper straight from the pepper mill. Put in a very hot oven for a few moments.

The rôties, i.e. pieces of fried bread with the trail on them, can be garnished with peeled grapes. Instead of Cognac, the mixture can be flavoured with Armagnac or Calvados.

It is customary for making croûtons for serving the trail of woodcock or other winged game to use crustless bread, or what is called in France 'English bread'. These croûtons are best made from home-made bread.

Salmis of woodcock. SALMIS DE BÉCASSE – Roast a woodcock for a short time so it is slightly underdone, and cut into pieces. Skin and trim the pieces, and put them into a buttered sauté pan. Place 12 small mushrooms tossed in butter, or sliced large mushrooms, and 8 to 10 slices of truffles on them. Sprinkle with a tablespoon of previously flamed brandy. Keep hot, with a lid on, but do not allow to boil.

Chop or pound finely the carcass of the woodcock. The carcass can be chopped together with the intestines, or the trail can be kept for spreading on garnish croûtons.

Add these ingredients to 2 dl. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, scant cup) dry white wine boiled down in a pan with 2 small chopped shallots. Moisten with  $2\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, generous cup) thickened brown veal stock to which  $1\frac{1}{2}$  dl. ( $\frac{1}{4}$  pint,  $\frac{2}{3}$  cup) game fumet (q.v.) has been added. Boil for 10 minutes. Strain through a sieve, pressing to extract all the juices from the carcass. Put the strained sauce into a sauté pan, add to it 1 or 2 tablespoons veal stock, and boil down to the right consistency. Season the sauce to taste, add 1 tablespoon previously flamed brandy, and strain through a fine strainer. Pour this sauce over the pieces of woodcock and heat without allowing to boil.

Put the pieces of woodcock into a timbale, pour the sauce over them and garnish with heart-shaped croûtons fried in butter.

The salmis of woodcock can be served on a croûton cooked in butter and spread with the trail of the bird. When it is served with heart-shaped croûtons these can be spread with à gratin game forcemeat (see FORCEMEATS).

All the recipes for the preparation of various salmis will be found under the entry SALMIS.

Sautéed woodcock à la Brillat-Savarin. BÉCASSE SAUTÉE BRILLAT-SAVARIN – Prepare the woodcock as described in the recipe for Sautéed woodcock in Champagne (see below) replacing Champagne by Madeira.

Arrange the pieces of woodcock in a flan case lined with Short pastry (see DOUGH). Garnish with a ragoût of cocks' combs and kidneys, sautéed lamb sweetbreads, truffles and mushrooms, bound with boiled down Demi-glace (see SAUCE) based on a game fumet (q.v.). Pour over the gravy left from cooking the woodcock.

Sautéed woodcock in Champagne. BÉCASSE SAUTÉE AU CHAMPAGNE – Cut the woodcock into pieces. Use the carcass and the trimmings to prepare a fumet (q.v.) and add rich Demi-glace (see SAUCE).

Put the pieces of woodcock in a sauté pan just big enough to hold them and brown briskly in butter. Cover the pan and simmer for 8 minutes. Drain the pieces, arrange in a timbale or in a shallow dish, and keep hot.

Dilute the pan juices with a glass of dry Champagne, add the strained concentrated woodcock fumet (q.v.) and boil for a few moments. Thicken this sauce with the chopped intestines, season with a small pinch of cayenne and add a teaspoon butter and a dash of lemon juice. Strain the sauce and pour it over the woodcock, piping hot.

Sautéed woodcock with truffles. BÉCASSE SAUTÉE AUX TRUFFES – Prepare the woodcock as described in the recipe for Sautéed woodcock in Champagne. Rub the woodcock's intestines through a fine sieve, mix with à gratin game forcemeat (see FORCEMEATS) spread on a croûton, fried in butter, and brown the top. Arrange the woodcock on this croûton.

Toss a dozen thick slices of truffles in the cooking butter, season with salt and pepper, moisten with 1 dl. (6 tablespoons, scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) Madeira and boil down. Add 5 tablespoons ( $\frac{1}{2}$  cup) game fumet (q.v.) and pour over the woodcock.

Woodcock soufflé. SOUFFLÉ DE BÉCASSE – Bone an uncooked woodcock and prepare a soufflé mixture, adding a little foie gras and the bird's intestines rubbed through a sieve.

Fill a buttered soufflé dish three-quarters full with the mixture and poach in the oven, in a bain-marie from 25 to 35 minutes, according to the size of the dish. Serve with Madeira sauce (see SAUCE) based on game essence.

Woodcock soufflé can also be prepared using cooked flesh pounded in a mortar and rubbed through a sieve. Add to it either Demi-glace or Velouté sauce made with concentrated game stock (see SAUCE). Bind with a liaison of 2 egg yolks and fold in the stiffly beaten whites.

Cook like an ordinary soufflé.

Woodcock à la Souvarov. BÉCASSE À LA SOUVAROV – Prepare like Partridge à la Souvarov (see PARTRIDGE).

Suprêmes of woodcock. SUPRÊMES DE BÉCASSE – Prepare like any of the recipes for chicken suprêmes. (See CHICKEN.)

Timbale of woodcock (hot). TIMBALE DE BÉCASSE – Line a pie-dish with pie pastry and add thin rashers of fat bacon. Coat the dish with à gratin game forcemeat (see FORCEMEATS), mixed with diced truffles.

Bone 2 woodcocks, stuff with a piece of foie gras studded with pieces of truffle, roll into ballotines, brown briskly in butter and put into the dish.

Cover the woodcocks and fill in the spaces with fine forcemeat, mixed with a purée of foie gras and the intestines, rubbed through a sieve, well seasoned and flavoured with a dash of brandy. Over this forcemeat put a layer of à gratin game forcemeat, piling it slightly into a dome shape. Cover with thin rashers of fat bacon, then with pastry cut to the diameter of the dish, sealing the edges to form a ridge. Decorate with pastry cut in fancy shapes. Make a hole in the centre to allow steam to escape. Brush with beaten egg and cook in a hot oven for  $1\frac{1}{4}$  hours.

Leave for a few moments before taking it out of the pie dish. Arrange on a dish and pour in a few tablespoons of Demi-glace (see SAUCE), based on concentrated game stock.

Usually hot timbales, whatever their nature, are lined with ordinary Pastry dough (see PASTRY) its main purpose being its strength.

The pie dish can be lined with Short pastry (see DOUGH) which will make the crust more edible.

Timbale of woodcock (cold). TIMBALE DE BÉCASSE – Prepare in a pie dish, lined with Fine lining paste (see DOUGH) and cook as described in the recipe for Timbale of woodcock (hot).

Leave to cool. Pour into it liquid aspic jelly based on concentrated game stock, flavoured with Madeira or some other wine. Allow to get quite cold before taking out of the pie dish.

Truffled woodcock (in casserole). BÉCASSE TRUFFÉE – Prepare the woodcock as described in the recipe below for Truffled roast woodcock. Cook it in an earthenware casserole as described in the recipe for Woodcock in casserole. At the end of cooking, sprinkle with a dash of brandy and a few tablespoons of game fumet (q.v.).

Truffled roast woodcock. BÉCASSE TRUFFÉE RÔTIE – Remove the backbone and stuff the woodcock with lard mixed with truffles, prepared as described in the recipe for Forcemeat for truffled poultry (see FORCEMEATS) and with truffles, cut in pieces, tossed for a few moments in the heated lard, and seasoned with Spiced salt (see SALT).

Suprême of woodcock

WOODEN PLINTH

Slip a dozen thin slices of truffle under the skin of the woodcock, raising it gently. Truss and bard the bird. Wrap it in a piece of buttered greaseproof paper and cook on a spit from 20 to 25 minutes, or in the oven from 18 to 20 minutes. Arrange the woodcock on a canapé of fried bread, which may be spread with the trail, as described in the recipe for Roast woodcock. Serve with its own juices or with Périgueux sauce (see SAUCE).

Truffled woodcock should be stuffed with truffles and forcemeat at least two days before it is cooked.

WOODEN PLINTH. MANDRIN – Formerly, these plinths were covered with such substances as modelling fat, butter, decorative sugar motifs, etc., for the presentation of cold dishes displayed on plinths. This method of presentation has now been almost completely abandoned and is merely of historical interest.

In former times, these wooden plinths were much used. Carême, in his writings, often speaks of them for, at that time, dishes were almost always presented on plinths or supports of one kind or another, all more or less elaborately decorated.

Nowadays it is usual to serve cold food either simply laid out on a dish, or covered with jelly in a bowl.

WOOD GROUSE. COQ DE BRUYÈRE – Bird belonging to the Gallinae order. The wood grouse is the largest type of feathered game which is to be found in Europe. In its size and weight it resembles the turkey. The bird, which has very delicate flesh, is found in considerable abundance in the countries of northern Europe, in Russia, Poland, Hungary, and in the Black Forest region of Germany.

It is rarer in France, but is still found in the Ardennes, the Vosges, the Alpes, and the Pyrenees. In these districts the great grouse or grand coq de bruyère, a magnificent bird, is prepared and cooked in the same way as pheasant.

In north European countries, the bird is first left to soak for 2 to 3 days in cream. For its preparation, see PHEASANT.

WOODPECKER. PIC – Edible scansorial bird which, in France, is prepared like blackbird (q.v.) or thrush (q.v.).

WOOD PIGEON. PALOMBE – Species of ring dove or wild pigeon, prepared like ordinary pigeon. This bird is called palombe or ramier in French.

WORCESTERSHIRE SAUCE – Highly spiced sauce originally manufactured in Worcester.

WORMSEED (U.S.A. Mexican tea) – A kind of tea produced by the ambroissier shrub with a sweet-smelling flower. Restorative and stomachic properties are attributed to the infusion of this plant.

WORMWOOD. GENEPI – Name applied to several species of plants, among which are the Alpine yarrow, used in the preparation of medicinal herb-teas, and the musk milfoil, which is believed to aid digestion. The musk milfoil is the main ingredient of a liqueur (liqueur d'Ira or Irabitter) made in Switzerland and Italy from a number of different Alpine herbs. Originally, the liqueur distilled at the Grande Chartreuse bore this name.

WRAP. EMBALLER – To envelope a joint of meat, etc. first in a slice of pork or pig's caul, then in a cloth or, in the case of certain puddings and other similar preparations, in a buttered and floured cloth.

XIMENIA. XIMÉNIE – Type of small plant found in hot countries, of which there are a number of species, among them the ximenia of Gabon which is widespread in Africa. The fruits, known as mountain plums or wild limes, are edible.

XYLOPIA. XYLOPIE – The fruit of this tropical tree is a condiment (a substitute for pepper) known as malaguetta pepper or grains of paradise.

YAK. YACK – Long-haired humped grunting wild or domesticated ox of Tibet.

The flesh of the yak is edible; the milk is abundant, rich in butter and casein. It is more like goat's milk than cow's milk.

YAM. IGNAME – Climbing plant. Its very large root is edible and is prepared in the same way as the sweet potato. A starch called Guiana arrowroot, also extracted from yams, is much used in cookery and confectionery.

YEAST. LEVURE – Microscopic organism of a fungus group, which multiplies rapidly and produces ferments which are capable of converting starch and sugars into carbon dioxide and alcohol. There are three main types of yeast – fresh, dried and brewer's. Fresh and dried yeast are used in making breads and some cakes. If an amount of fresh yeast is mentioned in a recipe, dried yeast can be used instead, but only half the amount should be used as it is more concentrated. Brewer's yeast (which is slightly liquid) is used mainly in the brewing of beer and ale. Yeast is a good source of Vitamin B and is often prescribed, medicinally, in the form of yeast tablets or concentrated extract.

YOGHOURT, YOGURT. YAOURT – Curdled milk product from the Balkans made with lactic ferments which have a much greater acidifying power than the natural fermenting agents.

The use of yoghurt is not so recent as might be thought, at least in France. History recounts that King François I, suffering from an intestinal complaint which had resisted the whole pharmacopoeia of the day, heard that a Jewish doctor from Constantinople had been responsible for marvellous cures in similar cases, with milk curds prepared in a certain way. He brought this practitioner to Paris. The doctor arrived on foot with a flock of sheep and cured his royal client, but refused to divulge the secret of his concoction.

The method used in Bulgaria for making yoghurt consists of reducing the partially skimmed milk by one-third over a slow heat. The milk is then divided up into bowls. When it has cooled to about 30°C. (86°F.) some leaven from a previous fermentation is introduced. It is called Maya and is slipped under the skin which has formed on the surface of the milk without breaking it. The bowls are left for 24 hours at a temperature of about 25°C. (77°F.), then kept for 24 hours in a cool place before being used.

In Europe, since these oriental curds have come into fashion, they have been factory-produced, evaporated whole-cream milk being treated with a purée culture of selected lactic ferments.

YORK HAM. JAMBON DE YORK – York ham, which is prepared in the town of the same name in England, has the reputation of being the best in Europe.

Yorkshire pigs are remarkable for their early maturity, but their fat is a little soft, and their meat is accompanied by a large proportion of fat.

YORKSHIRE PUDDING – A kind of thick pancake rather than a pudding in the ordinary sense. In England, it is served with roast beef.

It is made as follows:

Mix together without lumps 500 g. (18 oz., 4½ cups) flour with 4 eggs and 1¼ litres (2½ pints, 2¾ pints) milk. Season with salt, pepper and grated nutmeg. Pour into a deep pan in which has been heated some of the fat from the roast. Bake in the oven.

If the piece of beef is being spit-roasted, place the Yorkshire pudding underneath it when taking it from the oven, so that the pudding is impregnated with the juice dripping from the beef.

Cut the Yorkshire pudding into squares or lozenges and set it on the edges of the dish on which the beef is served, or serve it separately.

YULE LOG – See CAKES, Christmas Yule log.

ZABAGLIONE. SABAYON – A cream mousse of Italian origin which is used to coat hot puddings but which can also be served in cups or glasses, as a sweet.

The word sabayon in French is a corruption of the Italian word zabaglione, and for this word the dictionary gives the following definition: Composed of the yolks of fresh eggs, sugar, wine and some flavourings, cooked while beating to make it thicken.

Beat together in a basin 250 g. (9 oz., generous cup) sugar and 6 egg yolks until the mixture forms a 'ribbon'. Flavour with 1 tablespoon vanilla sugar, orange, lemon or tangerine peel, or vanilla extract.

Add 2½ dl. (scant ½ pint, generous cup) sweet or dry white wine. Cook in a bain-marie or in a double saucepan over a very low heat, whisking vigorously until the mixture becomes frothy and stiff.

Zabaglione à l'asti. SABAYON À L'ASTI – Made as above, using Asti Spumante instead of white wine.

Zabaglione au Champagne. SABAYON AU CHAMPAGNE – Follow basic zabaglione recipe, using Champagne instead of white wine.

Zabaglione au frontignan (or other sweet wine). SABAYON AU FRONTIGNAN OU AUTRES – Follow basic zabaglione using Frontignan (or any other type of liqueur such as Madeira, Malaga, Marsala, port or sherry).

Zabaglione à la créole. SABAYON À LA CRÉOLE – Make a zabaglione with white wine, flavouring it with orange peel. As soon as it becomes frothy, cool it by plunging the bain-marie into a basin of cold water, still whisking at the same time.

Zabaglione

Add 4 tablespoons ( $\frac{1}{3}$  cup) rum and  $2\frac{1}{2}$  dl. (scant  $\frac{1}{2}$  pint, generous cup) of stiffly whipped cream. Mix and serve in a bowl set in crushed ice. Serve immediately.

Zabaglione à la kola. SABAYON À LA KOLA – Prepare some zabaglione using port wine. When the mixture begins to set, add 2 teaspoons of the following mixture: equal quantities of liquid cola extract and liquid coca extract flavoured with a little syrup made from the rind of bitter oranges.

This zabaglione, which should be eaten very hot, is not only a very tasty dessert, but also an excellent medicine.

Zabaglione aux liqueurs. SABAYON AUX LIQUEURS – Follow basic zabaglione recipe flavoured with a liqueur (Cognac, anisette, cherry brandy, Chartreuse, kirsch, rum, kummel, etc.).

ZAKUSKI – Hors-d'œuvre served in Russia. These hors-d'œuvre are usually eaten immediately after drinking a glass of vodka.

In a certain corps of the Imperial Guard it was the tradition when entertaining young officers to provoke them to drink so many toasts with the zakuski that they could go no further and had to be carried to beds which had usually been prepared for them in advance!

ZAMPINO – See PORK, Stuffed pig's leg.

ZARA (Maraschino). MARASQUIN DE ZARA – Renowned liqueur made at Zara, a Dalmatian village situated on the Adriatic, which was ceded to Italy by the Treaty of Rapallo. This liqueur is much used in pastry-making and confectionery to flavour sweets and ices.

ZEBU – Bovine mammal, widely domesticated in Africa and Asia. Its flesh can be eaten and is prepared like beef.

ZEELAND (Oysters). HUÏTRES DE ZÉLANDE – This province of the Low Countries, made up almost entirely of islands, is situated at the mouths of the rivers l'Escaut and Meuse. Zeeland oysters are famous. For various preparations see OYSTER.

ZEPHIR. ZEPHYR – Name used by some chefs to designate light and frothy preparations.

It is often, quite wrongly, applied to mousses and mousselines of foie gras, fish and chicken.

Zeste of lemon (Larousse)

ZESTE – French for 'peel', the exterior, coloured, flavoured part of the skin of lemon, orange, tangerine, citron, etc.

ZESTER – Term meaning to peel an orange or lemon. This operation is made easier by using a special instrument called a zesteur.

ZIBET. ZIBETH – Variety of chives from tropical Asia, used to season sauces, ragoûts and salads.

ZINGARA – Garnish which accompanies small cuts of meat and poultry. It is made up of finely chopped or shredded lean ham, tongue, mushrooms and truffles, bound with Demi-glace sauce (see SAUCE) flavoured with tomato and tarragon essence.

ZISTE – French word for the white pith found in oranges and lemons just underneath the outer peel. This substance has a rather bitter taste.

ZUCCHINI – Italian marrows. In U.S.A. these slender green vegetables are called Italian squash or zucchini. In England they are known as baby marrows or courgettes. For recipes see ITALIAN MARROWS.

ZWIEBACK – Biscotte or rusk found in French bakeries.

---

Index

INDEX

p = photograph or illustration

A

- abaisse 1, 1p
- abat-faim 1
- abel-musk 1
- ablutions, table 1
- abomasum 1
- abondance 1
- Abrantès, à l' 393
- abrotonite 1
- Absinth 1
  - wine 1
- absorption 2
- abstinence 2
- Abutilon 2
- Acacia 2
  - fritters 396
  - liqueur 555
- Acanthus 2
- acarne 2
- accolade, in 2, 2p
- aceline 2
- acetabulum 2
- acetic acid 2
- acetification 2
- acetimeter 2
- aceto-dolce 2
- acetomel 2
- acetone 2
- achar(d)s 2, 965
  - lemon 2
  - palmetto 2
  - vegetable 2
- Achillea 2
- acid 2-3
- acidifiers 2-3
- acidity 3
- acidulated 3
- acon 3
- acorn 3
- acquette 3
- acridophage 3
- acroama 3-4
- Actinia 4
- adoc 4
- adulteration 4
- Aeginetia 4
- Aegis of Rhodes 4
- Africa, North: culinary
  - specialities 10-11
- africaine, à l' 410
- after-taste 4
- agami 4, 4p
  - à la chilienne 4
- agape 4
- agar-agar 4, 422
- agarc 4-5, 4p
- Agathon 5
- Agave 5
- Agnès Sorel 410
- agnolotti à la
  - piémontaise 5
- agone d'Istria 5
- agoranome 5
- agou 5
- agouti 5
- agras 5
- aguaxima 5
- aguncate 5
- aigre de cèdre 5
- aiguillette 5
- aillade 5-6
- aioli 6
  - garnished 6
  - à la grecque 6
  - de Provence 823
- aisy 6
- Alaria 6
- albacore 6
- albarelle 6
- albatross 6, 6p
- albigeoise 6, 410
- Albuféra d' 6, 410
- albumen 6
- albumin 6-7
- albuminoids 7, 12
- albundigas 7
- alcarraza 7, 7p
- alcazar 7
- alcohol 8
- alcoholism 8
- ale 8
  - posset 8
  - toast and 8
- Alectryon 8
- albemic 8-9, 8p
- algae 9
- Algeria 9-11
- algérienne, à l' 11, 410
- alica 11
- alicuit 11
- aliment 11-14
- alimentation 14-15
- alkalescents 15
- alkali volatile 15
- alkaloids 15
- alkermes 15
- Allaria 15
- alligator 15
- allspice 16
- allumettes (cakes) 16, 16p
- allumettes (pastry straws)
  - (hors-d'oeuvre) 16, 469, 902
  - anchovy 466, 469, 902
  - à l'andalouse 469
- with caviare 466
- à la chalonaise 470, 902
- Chavette 470
- cheese 902
- à l'écarlate 470
- à l'écossaise 470
- à la florentine 470
- ox palate 16
- Parisian 466
- à la périgourdine 16
- à la reine 16
- à la toscane 16
- Vladimir 466
- almonds 16, 16p
  - Aboukir 16
  - bar croquets 290
  - bâtonnets 88
  - blanched 17
  - Bordelais croquets 290
  - butter 16, 168
  - chopped 17
  - cookies 16-17
  - coloured 17-18
  - cream 17, 286
  - croissants 289
  - diced 18
  - emulsion 359
  - ice cream 492
  - loaf 17
  - macaroons 568-9
  - marzipan 578
  - marzipan sweets 578-9
  - milk 17, 359
  - Nantois 621
  - nougat 17
  - oil 647
  - paste 17
  - plombières ice cream 493
  - praline 17
  - pudding, English 741
  - raw 18
  - roasted 18
  - salted 18
  - shredded 18
  - soufflé 866
  - sugared 18
  - syrup 912
  - tartlets 17
  - vacherin with almond
    - paste crown 951
    - whole 18
- almonds, bitter 17
  - essence 363
- almonds, country 18
- almonds, earth 18
- almonds, sweet 18
- Alocasia 18
- Aloe 18
- alpheus 18
- Alsace 18-20
  - charcuterie 19p
  - gastronomic map 19p
  - wine lodges 262, 263p
  - wine map 20p
- alsacienne, à l' 20, 410
- alum 20
- aluminite 20
  - kitchen utensils in 21p
- aluminium 21
- amanita 21, 21p
- Amaranth 21
- ambassadrice 410
- ambergis 21
- Ambialet 546p
- ambigu 21-2
- ambrosia 22
- Améleon 22
- America, Central:
  - cooking 501-2
  - America, South: cooking 501-2
- américaine, à l' 22, 410
- Amiens 22
- amiral, à l' 22
- ammaperdrix 22
- ammocoete 22
- ammonia 22
- ammonia, carbonate of 22
- Amomum 22
- amourettes 22
- Amphicles 22
- Amphitryon 22-3
- amphora 23, 23p
- amygdaline 23
- anaemia 23
- anaemics: diet for 23-4
- anagnost 24
- analect 24
- analeptic 24
- analysis 24
- anaphylaxis 24
- anchovies 24, 24p, 459
  - anchoyade 26, 470
  - barquettes 471
  - butter 168
  - canapés 24, 25p
  - croûtes 476
  - dartois 477
  - essence 363
  - fillets 25
  - forcemeat 388
  - fried 25
  - fritters 394, 478-9
  - à la grecque 459
  - and hard-boiled eggs 459
  - médallions à la niçoise 25, 25p
  - à la normande 459

- Norwegian 459, 525
 in oil 459
 omelette 351–2
 pannequets 480, 664
 Portuguese fillets 25 preparation 24p preserved 25
 purée 745 rolled; with hard-boiled eggs 25
 salad 459
 salad dressing 787
 salpicon 800
 sauce 817, 823
 scrolls 459–60
 à la silésienne 24
 soufflé fritters 479
 soused 25–6
 straw (allumettes) 466, 469, 902 tart with pissalet 470 toast 25
 anchoyade 26, 470
 à la niçoise 26
 ancienne, à l' 26, 410, 410p andalouse, à l' 26
 andouille 26, 26p andouillettes 26
 à la lyonnaise 26
 Andropogon 26
 anecdotes 26–8 anéthole 28
 angel cake 178 angel fish 28 angelica 28, 28p candied 29
 hippocras 123
 liqueur 28–9, 555
 Niort, à la sybarite 29 angels on horseback 29
 anglaise 29
 anglaise, à l' 29, 410 angler (anglerfish) 29
 à l'anglaise 29
 boiled with various sauces 29
 fillets braised in white wine 29
 fried 29
 matelot 29
 pâté 29
 Anglet 29
 Angoulême 30
 Angoumois 30
 gastronomic map 30p
 Angrec 30
 animelles 30, 633
 in cream sauce 633
 fricassée 633
 fried 633
 fried in batter 633
 fried with mushrooms 633
 à la vinaigrette 633
 anise: sugar 908 aniseed 30–1, 31p cookies 31
 cream of 555
 sauce 808
 sugar flavoured with 31
 anisette 31
 liqueur 555
 Anjou 31–3
 gastronomic map 31p
 vineyards 33p, 993p
 Anna 393
 anon 34 annona 34, 34p anthracite 34 antidote 34
 antisepsis 34 antiseptics 34
 anversoise, à l' 34, 410 aoudzé 34
 apéritif 34–5
 aphorisms 35–7
 Aphonitus 38
 Apicius 38
 Aponogetonaceae 38–9
 apophoreta 39 apotheca 39
 apothegms 37–8
 appareil appellations d'origine 39
 Appert, Nicolas 39, 39p appétit 40 appetite 40 appigret 40
 apple-corer 42
 apples 40, 40p
 baked in pastry or douillon normand 41–1, 40p
 Bavarian cream à la normande 89
 bonne femme 41
 Bourdaloue 41
 buttered 41
 au chambertin 41
 charlotte 205
 compote 250
 Condé 41
 à la crème au kirsch 41 croûte 41
 croûte à la normande 294
 douillon normand 40–1, 40p
 Figaro 41
 flambé au kirsch 41
 flan Grimaldi 377
 freezing 736
 fritters 396
 glacé à l'impératrice 41
 gratiné 41
 green, rougail 781 iced, à la normande 495–6
 jelly 517
 marmalade 575–6
 mousse à la Chantilly 41
 omelette à la normande 41–2, 357
 pancakes 41
 paste jelly 519
 pectin 42
 pie à l'anglaise 695 pudding, English 741
 with rice 42
 with rice and meringue 42
 ring: Brillat-Savarin 42
 à la normande 42
 rissoles 42
 sauce 42, 823
 freezing 736
 soufflé 42, 866
 Russian 866
 tart 916–17, 916p
 à l'allemande 917
 à l'alsacienne 917
 of Demoiselles Tatin 917 with lattice-work 917 Messina 917
 tartlets 919 turnover 946, 946p apricoting 45
 apricots 42, 42p
 à l'ancienne 43
 attereaux Pompadour 61
 barquettes 85–6
 à l'ancienne 86
 biscuits 125
 bombe 43
 bouchées 43
 Bourdaloue 43
 candied or crystallised 43
 in brandy 43, 44
 caramel, in brandy 43
 charlotte 205
 Colbert 43
 comfits 43
 in brandy 43
 compote 260
 Condé 43–4, 44p
 coupe 494
 croquettes 291
 croûte 44
 à la diable 44
 flambé in kirsch 44
 freezing 737
 fritters 396
 ice 492
 à l'impératrice 44, 44p
 jam 516
 jelly 517
 omelette à la Célestine 355
 liqueur 555
 marmalade 576
 mousse 598
 omelette 45p oreillons 44
 pannequets 664
 paste jelly 519
 preserved: au naturel 45
 in syrup 45
 with rice 45
 with rice and meringue 45
 sauce 827
 soufflé 866
 stones, liqueur 556
 tart 917
 à l'allemande 917
 à l'alsacienne 917
 tartlets 919
 tourte 931–2
 apron (fish) 45, 45p Arabs: cuisine or 'tent' cookery 10 gastronomic customs 10
 arapède 45
 arbolade 45
 Arbutus berry 45
 arca 45
 Arcachon 45 arcanette 45
 Archestratus 45–6
 archiduc, à l' 46 archil 46
 ardennaise, à l' 46
 ardoise 46
 Arenga 46
 Argenteuil 46
 argus pheasant 46
 Ariège 46
 ariégeoise, à l' 46
 arlequin 46
 Arles 46
 arlésienne, à l' 46
 armadillo 46
 Armagnac 46
 Armoricaïne 46
 armoricaïne, à l' 47
 army biscuits 125
 aroma 47
 aromatic plants 47

- aromatics 47
- arpenteur, see plover
- Arquebuse 47
- Arracacha (Arracacia) 47
- Arrack 47
- arrowroot 47
  - liaison 47
  - porridge 47–8
  - thickening with 922
- arsenic 48
- Artagnan, à la d' 48
- artichokes 48, 48p, 460, 460p
  - barigoule 48
  - Baron-Brise 460
  - boiled, whole 48
  - boiled with various sauces 48
  - braised (large); stuffed au gras 48
    - stuffed au maigre 49
  - braised (small) 49
  - Clamart 49
  - Crécy 49
  - à la diable 49
  - dried 49
  - fritters 49, 479
  - garnished hearts 460
  - à la grecque 459p, 460
  - hearts 50, 50p
    - à l'allemande 50
    - à la béchamel 50
    - cooked in butter 50
    - in court-bouillon 50
    - à la crème 50
    - filled as garnish 50
    - finest herbes 50
    - fried in butter 50
    - garnished 50
    - à la grecque 460
    - à la hollandaise 50
    - Mornay 50
    - pickled 50–1
    - stuffed à la cévenole 51
    - stuffed à la chalonaise 51
    - stuffed à la duxelles 51
    - stuffed à la florentine 51
    - stuffed à la lyonnaise 51
    - stuffed piémontaise 51
    - stuffed Soubise 51
    - à la tartare 460
  - à la lyonnaise 49
  - à la ménagère 49
  - mirepoix 49
  - omelette 352
- Monselet 353
- viveur 355
- pickled 49
  - à la grecque 49
- à la poivrade 460
- purée 746
  - for garnish 49–50
  - soubisée, for garnishes 50
- quarters 51, 460
  - in butter 51
- aux fines herbes 51
- fried in batter 51
- à la grecque 51
- à l'italienne 51
- au jus 51
- à la lyonnaise 51
- à la moelle 51
- à la portugaise 51
- salpicon 800
  - with cream 800
- soup, cream of 873–4
- velouté 878
- stalks 50
- à la vinaigrette 460
- artichokes, winter, see Jerusalem artichokes
- Artois, à la d' 393
- Artois and Boulonnais 51–2
  - gastronomic map 52p
- Arum maculatum 52
- asafoetida 52–3
- asbestos 53
- Ascalaphus 53
- Ash (tree) 53
- ashdrink 53
- ashes 53
- asparagus 53, 53p
  - Argenteuil fondants 477
- Argenteuil tartlets 487
- with cold sauces 55
- à la flamande 54
- à la Fontanelle 54
- freezing 735
- fried in batter 54
- with fried bread 55
- au gratin 54, 54p
- green: salpicon 800
- heaped in a croustade à la Carême 54, 54p
- with hot sauces 55
- with melted butter 55
- à la milanaise 54
- à la Mornay 54
- with noisette butter 54
- omelette 352
  - Argenteuil 352
  - Princess 354
- à la polonaise 54
- preserving 53–4
  - green tips 54
- purée 55, 746–7
- salad (white) 55
- soup: cream of (green) 874
  - cream of (white), called Argenteuil 874
  - velouté 878
- tips in butter 55
- tips with cream 54
- tips for garnishes 54
- tips, green 55
- tips, royale 418
- Asperula 55
- aspic jelly: clarification 56
- aspic moulds 56p
- aspics 55–6, 55p
  - chaud-froid of chicken 206–7
  - chicken 57p, 58, 58p, 222
  - crayfish 58
  - croûtons 56
  - fish 56
  - foie gras 56
  - freshwater crayfish tails 56
  - frogs' legs à l'ancienne 58
  - game 58
  - lobster 56p, 58, 562
  - in moulds 56
  - pheasant à l'ancienne 689
  - poultry 58
  - shrimps 58
  - sole 56p
  - spiny lobster 58
- assiettes: anglaise 58, 58p, 460
  - garnies 58
  - volantes 58
- Assyrians: banquets 76–7
- Asti 58
- Astragal 58–9, 58p
- astringent 59
- astroderme 59
- Athenaeus 59
- Athénienne à l' 59
- athérine 59, 59p, 843
- Atriplex 59
- attelet 59, 59p
- attreaux 60, 470
  - brains: à l'ancienne 470
  - à l'italienne 470
  - à la mirepoix 470
  - Villeroi 60
- calf's sweetbreads Villeroi 60
- à la chalonaise 60
- chicken livers: à la duxelles 470
  - à la mirepoix 60
- cocks' combs à l'ancienne 470
- à la duchesse 60
- à l'écarlate 470
- à l'écossaise 60
- lamb's sweetbreads Villeroi 60, 60p
- lobster 470
- à la maraîchère 60
- à la normande 60
- ox palate 60–1
- oysters 470
  - Monselet 61
- Parmesan (à la royale, à la princesse) 60, 470
- à la piémontaise 60
- pineapple 61
- Pompadour 61
- à la Saint-Hubert 60
- sweetbreads 470
- vegetables 470
- Victoria 61
- à la Villeroi 470
- Aubenas 61
- aubergines 61, 61p
  - caponata 183
  - à la crème 61
  - fried 61
  - fritters 394
  - au gratin 61
    - à la catalane 61
    - à l'italienne 61
    - à la languedocienne 61
    - à la portugaise 63
    - à la reine 63
    - à la toulousaine 63
    - à la turque 63
- gratin of tomatoes and 928
- in gravy 63
- à la grecque 63
- grilled 63
- Imam Baaldi 62p, 63
- omelette 352
  - Mistral 353
- purée 63, 747
- rougail 781
- salad 63
- salpicon, in cream 800
- sautéed 63
- soufflé 63
  - à la hongroise 63
  - au parmesan 63
- Aude 63
- Audiger 63

Augsburgerwürste 830
 auk 63–4
 Aunis and Saintonge 64
   gastronomic map 30p
 auriol 64
 aurochs 64
 Aurore 393
 aurore, à l' 64
 Austria: cookery 503 autoclave 64–5, 64p
 auto-intoxication, digestive 65
 autrichienne, à l' 65
 Auvergnat 66
 Auvergne 65–6, 65p
   gastronomic map 60p
 Avise 66
 aviner 66
 avocado pear 66, 66p avocet 66, 66p
 axioms 35–7
 Ay 66–7
 Ayapana 67
 azarole 67, 67p azi (azy) 67 azymous 67

B

baba 68–9, 68p batter for 319
 babiroussa 69
 Bacchanalia 69
 Bacchante 69
 Bacchus 69, 69p bacon 69
   omelette 352
   à la forestière 353
   rinds 720
 bacon fat dressing 787
 Badian anise 69–70, 69p, 898 Bagration 70, 393
 bain-de-pied 70
 bain-marie 70, 70p baiser 70 bajet 70

baked Alaska 356p, 357 bakers' ovens 72p bakery 70–2
 balachan 72
 Balaine (Baleine) 72
 balanus 72
 balaou 73
 Balkan cookery 504
 ballottines 73
   chicken 222
     with dark sauce, served with various garnishes 73
     glazed 74
     in jelly 74 with light sauce 73–4
     small 74
 duckling 322
 eel 330
   à l'ancienne 330
   à la bourguignonne 330–1
   à la gauloise 331
 goose 430
 guinea-fowl 74
 hare 447
   à la périgourdine 447 lamb: à la boulangère 73
   à la bourgeoise 73 braised à la bonne femme 73
   braised, with various garnishes 73
   cold, with various garnishes 73
   in jelly 73, 73p
 mutton 73
 partridge, jellied 666
   with various
     garnishes 666
 pheasant in jelly 689
 pigeon 74
 pork; braised, with various garnishes 73
   in jelly 73
 poultry 74
 Rouen duckling 323
 turkey 74
   à la toulousaine 943
 veal 73
 balm 74 bamoch bambocher 74 bamboo 74 bamboo mushroom 74
 bananas 74–5, 75p
   baked 75
   Beauharnais 75
   Bourdaloue 75
   in butter 75
   compote 260
   Condé 75
   à la créole 75
   croûtes: à la Bauvilliers 75 à la maltaise 75 flan (tart) à la crème 75 flambé 75
   fried 75, 75p
   fritters 76, 396
   ice 492
   ripening 74p
   soufflé 76
 Bandol 76
 bangi 76
 banilles 76 banquets 76–83
 banquière, à la 83, 410 bantam 83
 banvin 83
 Banyuls 83 baobab 83, 83p
 baraquilles 83
 Barashek iz Masla 84
 Barbados Cream 84
 Barbarea 84 barbarin 84 barbarine 84
 barbel 84, 84p
   boiled, with various sauces 84
   à la bourguignonne 84
   fried 84
   grilled 84
   à la meunière 84 à la mode des mariniers 84
   roast 84 barberry 84 dried candied 84 bard, to 84
 barding fat 84–5
 barigoule 85
 barigoule, à la 85
 barley 85
   beer 118
   broth 85
   consommé with 85
   cordial 122
   soup, cream of 874
   water 122
 barley sugar 85
 barnacle 85, 85p acorn 3, 3p
 barnacle goose 85
 baron 85
 barquettes 85, 460
   à l'américaine 471
   with anchovies 471
   apricot 85–6
   à l'ancienne 86
 Bagration 460
 Beauharnais 460
   à la bouquetière 471
   à la cancalaise 460
   caviare 463
   chestnut 218, 471
   cocks' combs 246
   garnished 470–1
   making 86p
   Marivaux 460
   mushroom 602
   with mussels 471
   à la normande 460–1
   oysters 471, 659
     à l'américaine 660
     à la Nantua 660–1
     à la normande 661
   savory 85p with shrimps 471
   sole 853
   vegetables à la bouquetière 471 barrel 86 basella 86
 basil 86, 86p
 basquaise, à la 86
 bass 87, 87p
   boiled, with various sauces 87
   braised, with various sauces and garnishes 87 cold, with various sauces 87
   curried à l'indienne 87
   Duglère 87
   fillets 87
   fried 87
   au gratin 87
   grilled, with various sauces 87
   à la livornaise 87
   à la meunière 88
   poached, with various
     sauces 87
   à la portugaise 88
   à la provençale 88
   stuffed braised, with various garnishes 88
 bat 88
 ba-ta-clan 88
 bateaux 88 bath chaps 636
 bâtonnets (bâtons) 88
   almond 88
   chocolate 88
   cumin 88
   hazelnut 88
   Jacob's 88
   royal 88

- with vanilla icing 88
- batters: baba 319
- biscuits: fine 320
- Italian 320
- ordinary 320
- Reims 320
- Swiss 320
- whisked over heat 320
- for blini 128
- crêpe (sweet) 319
- cussy 319
- for frying 88–9
- galette 319
- Genoese 319
- gougère 319
- for little salted galettes 319
- manqué 319–20
- small tea biscuits 319
- for soufflé fritters 319
- sponge cake: fine 320
- Italian 320
- ordinary 320
- Reims 320
- Swiss 320
- whisked over heat 320
- sponge fingers 320
- for Vienna fritters 319
- Bavarian cream
- (Bavarois) 89, 89p
- à la cévenole 89
- à la créole 89
- fruit 90p, 91
- mixture for 594
- Mocha coffee 91
- à la normande 89
- au parfait amour 89
- with pistachio nuts 89
- raspberry 761
- aux roses 91
- strawberry 92
- striped 91, 91p
- striped chocolate and vanilla 91
- vanilla 91
- Bavarian cream mould 89p
- bavaroise 91
- aux choux 91
- bay 91
- Bayonne 91–2
- beans 92, 92p
- freezing 735
- jelly 519
- mixed 93
- soup, cream of 874
- purée of 875
- beans, broad 92
- à l'anglaise 92
- in butter 92
- in cream 92
- à la croque-au-sel 92
- à la française 92
- purée 92, 747
- with savory 92
- beans, field 92
- beans, flageolet 92
- purée 747
- beans, French 92–3, 464
- à l'anglaise 93
- à la bonne femme 93
- in brown butter 93
- in butter à la maître d'hôtel 93
- in cream 93
- dried 93
- à la française 93
- au gratin 93
- in gravy 93
- à la lyonnaise 93
- à la normande 93
- purée 93, 747
- salad 93, 93p
- salpicon 801
- à la crème 801
- sautéed à la provençale 93
- in tomato sauce 93
- beans, haricot 94p
- cassoulet 193, 193p
- purée 747
- beans, Lima 93
- beans, red haricot: dried 93
- fresh 93
- in red wine à la bourguignonne 94
- soup, purée of, called à la Condé 875
- beans, tonka 94
- beans, white haricot: cassoulet de Castelnau-dary 193–4
- dried 95
- à l'américaine 95
- à l'anglaise 95
- à la berrichonne 95
- à la charcutière 95
- au gratin 95
- in tomato sauce 95
- fresh 94
- à la bretonne 94
- in butter 94
- en cassoulet 94
- in cream 94
- croustades à la bretonne 475
- estouffat à l'occitane 94
- à la lyonnaise 94
- with parsley 94
- potage d'Artois 879
- purée 94–5
- salad 95
- soup, purée of (Soissonnaise) 875
- bear 95
- ham 95
- paw 95
- Béarn 95–6, 96p
- gastronomic map 96p
- beast 97
- béatilles 97
- ragoût 97
- Beauharnais, à la 97, 410
- Beaujolois 97
- Beaumont 97
- Beaune 97
- Beauvilliers, Antoine 97–8
- Beauvilliers (cake) 98
- Beauvilliers (garnish) 98, 411
- beaver 98
- bécasseau 98
- Béchameil, Louis de 98
- bec-plat 98
- bec-pointu 98
- bedstraw 98
- beech 98
- beech nut 98–9
- beef 99
- aiguillette 99
- amourettes 629
- baron 85, 99
- Beilche 119
- boiled: cold 103
- à la diable 103
- hash 450
- à la hongroise 103
- with horseradish sauce 103
- à l'indienne 103
- à la parisienne, cold 103
- au pauvre homme 103
- with piquante sauce 103–4
- à la provençale 104
- with root vegetables 104
- sautéed à la lyonnaise 104
- sautéed Parmentier 104
- with tomato sauce 104
- bouillon 104
- braised 104
- brisket 104
- carbonades: à la flamande 104
- with lambic 104
- Chateaubriand 104, 104p
- contre-filet 104, 105p
- braised à l'ancienne 105
- braised à la bourgeoise 105
- cold, with various salads 105
- with garnishes 105
- jellied 105
- coquilles au gratin 105
- à la créole 105
- croquettes 474
- curried, hash 450
- cuts 100p, 101p, 102p, 103p
- daube 105
- à l'ancienne 105
- à la béarnaise 105
- à la provençale 105p, 106
- émincés: with
- bordelaise sauce 359
- chasseur 359
- à l'italienne 359
- à la lyonnaise 359
- with mushrooms 359
- with piquante sauce 359
- with poivrade sauce 359
- with Robert sauce 359
- with tomato sauce 359
- entrecôte 106, 361, 361p
- à la béarnaise 106
- à la Bercy 106
- à la bonne femme 106
- à la bordelaise 106
- à la bourguignonne 106
- Dumas 106
- à la fermière 106
- à la forestière 106
- 'Grand-mère' 106
- à la hongroise 106
- à la lyonnaise 106
- maître d'hôtel 106
- marchand de vin 106
- à la ménagère 106
- à la minute 106
- Mirabeau 106, 107p
- with mushrooms 106
- à la niçoise 106–7

- à la tyrolienne 107
- au vert-pré 107
- à la viennoise 107
- essence 107
- filets mignons 107, 374
- en chevreuil 107
- fillet 107–8, 108p
- cold 108
- with garnish 108
- jellied, cold 108
- London House 108
- Matignon 108
- à la niçoise, cold 108–9
- à la parisienne, cold 109
- à la périgourdine 108
- Prince Albert 108
- à la russe, cold 109
- on skewers 108
- à la strasbourgeoise, cold 109
- fillets; small 109
- grilled 109p
- à la niçoise 109, 109p
- fillet steaks 109
- flank 379
- forcemeat 386
- forequarter flank 109
- fricadelles: cooked 109
- raw 109
- fritots 478
- fritters à la lyonnaise 479
- glaze 109
- goulash 109–10, 110p, 432
- au gros sel 110
- Gulyas soup 885
- Hamburger steak 110, 447
- à la berlinoise 447
- hash 110
- with herbs 450
- à la hongroise 450
- à l'italienne 450
- à la languedocienne 450
- à la lyonnaise 450
- with mashed potatoes 450
- à la Parmentier 450
- with poached eggs 450
- à la polonaise 450
- à la portugaise 450
- with potatoes 450
- Hungarian soup with dumplings 886
- jambe de bois 517
- juices 110
- keftedes 110
- liver, see liver, ox
- marrow 130
- en croûtes 110
- medallions of fillet 110
- miroton 110
- offal 628, 629–33
- oiseaux sans tête
- 'Loose vinken' 649
- omelette à la ménagère 353
- paupiettes 110
- à la bourguignonne 110
- à la hongroise 110
- with pilaf 110
- with risotto 110
- Sainte-Menehould 110
- with vegetables 111
- pie à la parisienne 693
- porterhouse steak 111
- pressed 111
- purée 746
- ragoût 111, 111p
- rib 111–12, 112p
- à la bouquetière 112
- braised 112
- with garnish 112
- jellied 112
- à la mode, cold 112
- roast 113
- decorating 112p
- hash 450
- roast rib 112, 112p
- à l'anglaise 112
- round 781
- rump 113, 782
- rump steak 113
- salt and smoked 113
- sautés 113
- shoulder 113
- silverside 781
- sirloin 112p, 113, 846
- à la d'Albuféra 113
- braised 113
- braised, with various garnishes 113
- left-over pieces
- braised or roast 113
- roast 113
- à l'anglaise 113
- with various garnishes 113
- sliced, with various sauces 114
- small fillets 848
- smoked 461
- steak 99
- à l'allemande 110
- à l'américaine 99
- à l'andalouse 99
- à cheval 99
- and kidney pudding 740
- and oyster pudding 740
- pie 99
- pudding 740
- à la russe 102
- tartare 102, 102p
- subrics à la ménagère 905
- à la tartare 916
- tea 114
- tip of sirloin 846
- top rump 114, 114p, 932
- à la bourgeoise 114
- à la bourguignonne 114–15
- braised à l'ancienne 115
- à la mode 115
- top skirt 115
- tournedos 115, 931
- Abrantès 115
- à l'algérienne 115
- archiduc 115
- à la béarnaise 115
- à la bordelaise 115
- chasseur 115
- Choron 115
- à la Clamart 115
- Helder 115
- Henri IV 115
- Marguery 115, 115p
- Massena 115
- with mushrooms 115
- à la périgourdine 115
- à la portugaise 116
- Rossini 116
- Saint-Germain 116
- à la vinaigrette 116
- Beefeaters 116
- beer 116–18
- barley 118
- ginger 118
- home-made 118
- making 116–17p
- malt 118
- soup 118, 883, 884p
- beer glass 915
- beestings 118
- beeswax 118
- beetroot (beet) 118, 118p, 461
- à l'anglaise 118
- à la béchamel 119
- in cream 119, 461
- freezing 735
- for garnish 119
- in gravy 119
- and hard-boiled eggs 461
- à la lyonnaise 119
- à la normande 461
- à la poitevine 119
- purée 747
- salad 461, 789
- à la crème 789
- à la polonaise 789
- salpicon 800
- soup: à l'allemande 883
- à la russe 883
- stuffed cassolettes 119
- beignets, see fritters
- Beilche 119
- Belgium: cookery 503–4
- bellevue 393
- Belshazzar 119
- beluga 119
- Bénédictin 119
- bénédictine (dish) 393
- Bénédictine (liqueur) 120
- bénédictine, à la 120, 411
- Berchoux, Joseph 120, 120p
- bergamot 120, 120p
- berlingot 120
- Bernard, Emile 120
- berichonne, à la 120, 411
- berries: freezing 737
- Berry 120–1
- gastronomic map 121p
- Berry, à la 393
- beurrecks à la turque 471
- beverages 121–2
- in dietetics 122
- fermented 122–4
- Béziers 124
- Bezieu soep 124
- Biarrotte, à la 124, 411
- bicarbonate of soda 124
- bichique: curry 300
- Bignon, Louis 124
- Bigorre 95–6
- bigos 124
- bijane 124
- bilberry 124
- bile 124
- bird 124–5
- bird's-foot trefoil 125
- birds' nests 622–3, 623p
- consommé with 870
- soup 910
- Bireweck 178
- biscuits 125, 125p
- apricot 125
- army 125

INDEX

- batter for 319, 320
- chocolate soufflé 125
- Genoa 125
- ginger 125–6
- Italian 126
- lemon 126
- ring-biscuit 777
- orange 777
- sweet 125–6
- unleavened, small 126
- bishop 126
- iced 126
- Rhine wine 126
- bison 126, 126p
- bisque 126
- crayfish 283, 876
- lobster 876
- shrimp 878
- spiny lobster 878
- bistort 126
- bitok 126
- bitter 126–7
- bitter ash 127
- blackberry 143
- blackbird 127
- pie 692, 693
- black cumin 127
- blackcurrant 127
- icing 498
- liqueur 555
- syrup 912
- wine 124
- black pudding 719–20
- à l'anglaise 720
- with apples, à la
normande 720
- à la flamande 720
- omelette à la nancéienne 353
- with sour apple 506p
- water soup 882
- bladder 127
- Blaisois (Blésois) 127
- blanc 127
- Blanc de Blancs 127
- blanching 127
- blancmange 127
- blanquettes 128
- lamb 536
- à l'ancienne 536
- à la ménagère 128
- pig's lights 637
- rabbit, wild 758
- veal 952–3, 957p
- à l'ancienne 953
- with garnishes 953
- Blanquette de Limoux
128
- bleak 128, 128p
- blender 128
- blenny 128
- bletting 852
- bleu, au 128
- blind, baking 128
- blinis 128, 471
- batter for 128
- with carrots 471
- with caviare 471
- with eggs 471
- frying pan for 128p
- Lithuanian 471
- bloater 128
- canapés 472
- block 128
- blond de veau 129
- blond de volaille 129
- blondir 129
- blood 129
- blood sausage, see black
pudding
- blossom: fritters 396
- blue gazelle 129
- blue grass 26
- bocal 129
- Boeuf à la Mode 766
- boiling 129
- bolée 129
- boletus 129
- bombes 129
- Aida 493
- Algerian 493
- Alhambra 493
- American 493
- Bourdaloue 493
- cardinal 493
- Chateaubriand 493
- dame-blanche 494
- dauphinoise 494
- diplomate 494
- Doria 494
- duchesse 494
- Francillon 494
- Gismonda 494
- Grimaldi 494
- Héricart 494
- impératrice 494
- Médicis 494
- Monselet 494
- Montmorency 494
- moulds 129p
- Nelusko ice cream 494
- Nesselrode 494
- succès 494
- tutti-frutti 494
- Véronique 494
- bonbon 129
- bone 130
- bone-marrow 130
- beef 130
- canapés 130
- croquettes 474
- croûtes with 476
- à la duxelles, scallop shells of 485
- flan à la bordelaise 377
- fritots 130, 478
- omelette 352
- pudding 742
- salpicon 130
- vol-au-vent 130
- Bonfinger 766
- boning 130
- bonito 130, 683
- bonne-femme 411
- Bonnes-Mares 130
- bonvalet 98, 130
- boops 130
- borage 130
- borax 130
- bord-de-plat 130
- Bordeaux 130–4
- map of wine-growing districts 131p
- wine lodges 262–3
- Bordelais: wine lodges
263p
- bordeaux, à la 134, 411
- border, see ring
- boric acid 136
- borshch: Polish 883–4
- Russian 884
- Botherel, Vicomte de 136
- bottle gourd 180
- bottles 136–7, 136p
- bottling 733
- botulism 137
- Botvinga 884
- boucanade 137
- Bouche du roi 137, 137p
- bouchées, see patties
- bougras 138, 882
- bouillabaisse 138–9
- borgne 139
- Breton 277
- cod 139
- ocean 139
- à la parisienne 139–40
- salt cod 252
- à la ménagère 252
- sardine 140, 805
- spinach 140
- bouillant 140
- bouillette (bouilliture) 140
- bouillons 140
- cereal 140
- clarification 140
- herb 140
- de noce 140
- vegetable 140
- bouillon aveugle 140
- boulangère, à la 411
- boule-de-neige (agaric)
140
- boule-de-neige
(pâtisserie) 140
- boule de son 141
- boulette 141
- Boulogne 52p
- bouquet 141
- bouquet garni 141
- bouquetière, à la 141, 411
- Bourbonnais 141
- Bourdaloue, à la 393
- bourgeoise, à la 141, 411
- Bourgueil 141
- Bourgogne: wine lodges
263p
- bourguignonne, à la 160,
411
- bourride 141
- Bourru 141
- Bouteiller 141
- bowels 142
- bowls 142, 142p
- box crab 180
- brabançonne, à la 142, 411
- brains 142
- à l'allemande 638
- scallop shells of 485
- à l'anglaise 638
- à l'aurore, scallop shells of 485
- attereaux: à l'ancienne
470
- à l'italienne 470
- à la mirepoix 470
- à la bordelaise 633
- à la bourguignonne 638
- in browned butter 638
- calves' 638
- attereaux Villeroi 60
- fritots 478
- fritters 395
- salad 790
- cold jellied 639
- à la parisienne 639
- croquettes 474
- à la duxelles, scallop shells of 485
- fried: in batter 638
- à la provençale 638
- à la romaine 638
- fritters 395
- au gratin 638
- à la hongroise 638
- à l'indienne 638
- à l'italienne 638
- in jelly 638–9
- lamb's: attereaux
Villeroi 60
- loaf à l'ancienne 639

- en matelote 639
 in noisette butter 638
 ox 629
 à la poulette 639
 purée 746
 salpicon 800
 sheep's 633, 841
 fritots 478
 soufflé 863
   à la chanoinesse 863
   à la hongroise 864
 subrics 486
   à l'italienne 486
 braising 142, 295–6
 braising pan 143, 143p for fillet beef 108p bramble 143
 bran 143
 brandade 143
 brandevinier 143
 brasserie 143
 Brasserie des Martyrs 766 brazil nut 143
 bread 143–5, 144p, 145p azymous 67
   choine 146 consecrated 146 corn 275
   croustade 292, 292p
   croûtes 292–3
   croûton 294, 294p
   in dietetics 145–6
   English bread and butter sauce 819 English loaf 146 finger rolls: with eggs 146 with milk 146
   French rolled loaf 146
   gluten 427
   Gonesse 146
   Graham 433
   loaf à la grecque 146 loaf à la terrine 146 offering 146
   ordinary 146
   panada 663
   plaited 146
   pudding: French 741 German 741 with fruit, German 741, 742p with red wine 741
   sauce 147, 809, 810, 817
   for soups 146
   tin loaf 146
   toast 781
   unleavened 146
   Viennese 146
- breadcrumb, to 147 with egg 147
   à la milanaise 146
 breadcrumbs 146
 breadfruit 147, 147p bream 147, 147p
 Brébant-Vachette 766
 brèdes 147
   cabbage 147–8 lettuce 148
   pumpkin 148
   spinach 148
   watercress 148
 bresolles 148, 393
 Bresse 148
 bretois 148
 Breton (cake) 148 Breton far 148
 bretonne, à la 148, 411 Brie 148
 brignole 148
 brill 148–9, 148p, 149p
   à l'américaine 149
   à l'amiral 149, 149p
   à la Bercy 149
   boiled, with various sauces 149
   à la bonne femme 149
   à la bourguignonne 149
   braised, with various garnishes 149
   Branças 149–50
   à la cancalaise 150
   cardinal 150
   au Chambertin 150
   in Champagne 150
   Chérubin 150 cold, in various sauces 150 with crayfish 150 in cream au gratin 150
   à la dieppoise 150
   Dugléré 150
   à la fermière 150
   fillets 150, 151p
     à l'anglaise 150
     à la créole 150–1
     curried 151
     à la Duxelles 151
     Richelieu 151
     à la toulonnaise 151
     à la tyrolienne 151
     Véron 151
   à la florentine 151
   fried 151
   au gratin 151
   grilled 151
     with various garnishes 151
   à la mâconnaise 151
- à la marinière 152
   à la ménagère 152
   Mornay 152
     scallop shells of 485
   with mushrooms 152
   with mussels 152
   à la Nantua 150
   à la normande 152
   with oysters 152
   sur le plat 152
   poached with various sauces 149
   à la portugaise 152
   à la provençale 152
   in red wine 152
   à la russe 152
   in scallop shells 152
   with shrimps 152
   stuffed with salmon, with various sauces and garnishes 152 à la trouvillaise, scallop shells of 485 à la vénitienne 152 à la Victoria 152
   in white wine 152
 Brillat-Savarin, Jean Anthelme 152–3
 Brillat-Savarin (garnish) 153, 411–12 bristol 217 brine 153
 brioche 153–4, 153p
   cheese 154
   with caviare 463
   en couronne 154, 154p filled, à la bohémienne 154
   garnished 471
   Goubaud 154, 154p
   mousseline 154, 154p
   small 155
     garnished 461
     à tête 154, 154p brioche dough 315–16, 617
   mousseline 316
 briochin: fruit 154
 brioli 154
 Brisse, Baron 154 Brittany 155–6
   beverages 155–6
   culinary specialties 156
   gastronomic map 155p
 broccoli 156
   freezing 735
   fritters 395
 brochettes 471–2
   sweetbreads 472
 brocket 156
- broiling 296, 436
 brooklime 156
 broth: barley 85
   chicken 885
   crab and shellfish 281
   herb 453
   Longchamp 565
   mutton 608, 887 snail 850
   turkey pinion 701
 broutes (broutons) 156
 broye 156
 brunoise 156 vegetable, for soups 156 brush 156 Brussels sprouts 156
   boiled 156
   with cream 156
   fritters 395
   in gravy 156
   à l'indienne 156
   à la milanaise 156
   Mornay 156
   omelette: à la bruxelloise 352
     à la maraîchère 354
   à la polonaise 156
   purée 156
   salad 156–7
   sautéed in butter 157
   soup, purée of 875
 buccan 157
 buckwheat 157, 804 crêpes 288
 buffalo 157, 949–50 buffet (table) 157, 157p, 158p buffet, station 159 Bugey 159
   culinary specialties 159
 bugloss 159
 bugnes 159
 Bulgaria: cookery 504
 bull 159
 bully-beef 159
 Bundenfleisch 160 buns 177p bunting 160
 bunting, garden, see ortolan burbot 160
   fillets à la créole 782 liver 160
 burdock 160 Burgundy 160–4
   gastronomic map 161p map of wine-growing district 162p wine lodges 263–4

INDEX

wine manufacture 163p bruxelloise, à la 157, 412
 bush, in a 164
 bustard 164
 Butcher's broom 164, 456 butcher's shop 164-6, 165p, 166p butcher's tools 166p Butsége 888
 butter 166-7 clarification 245
   melted 169
   lamb made of 84 making 166-7, 166p, 167p preservation 167
   sauce 817-18
     with chervil 818
 butter cream 286
   mixture 594 butter dish 170 buttermilk 136, 170
   soup 170
 butters: almond 16, 168
   anchovy 168
   Bercy 168
   brown 168
   caviare 168
   chive 168 Chivry 168
   cocoa 167-8 coconut 168
   Colbert 168
   compound 168-70
   crab 168
   crayfish 168
   cream 286
     mixture 594 filbert 168
   garlic 168, 408
   Gascoigne 168
   green 168
   hazelnut 168
   herring 168
   horseradish 168
   kneaded 168
     thickening with 922
   lemon 168
   lobster 169
   maître d'hôtel 169, 572
   marchand de vins 169
   Marseille 169
   mazarin 320
   meunière 169
   Montpellier 169, 596
   mushroom 169
   mustard 169
   noisette 169
   nutmeg 168 paprika 169

peanut 168 pistachio 169
 printanier 169
 ravigote 169
 red 169
 salmon 169
 sardine 169, 805
 shallot 169, 841
 shrimp 169
 for snails, à la bourguignonne 169
 soft roe 169-70
 spiny lobster 170, 892
 sweet pimento 170
 tarragon 170
 tomato 170
 truffle 170
 tunny 170
 vegetable 167-8 vierge 967
 walnut 168, 170
 butyric acid 170
 butyrometer 170, 170p butyrons 170 buvette 170

C

cabaret 171-2, 171p cabaretier 122p cabbage 172
   boiled 172
   braised 172
   brèdes 147-8
   freezing 735
   as hors d'oeuvre 461
   little stuffed balls 172, 172p in marinade 172
   pickled 828-9
   salad 172
   sou-fassum 863
   soup with cabbage and miques 882 stalks and stumps 174
   stuffed 174, 174p
     à la provençale 173p, 174

stuffed rolls 174, 174p cabbage, Chinese 240, 240p cabbage, red: à la flamande 174
   as hors d'oeuvre 461
   à la limousine 174
   in marinade 174
   stalks and stumps 174
 cabbage palm 174 en daube 174 cachalot 174 cachou 175 cadinas 175, 175p
 Cadran Bleu 766
 Café Anglais 766, 766p
 Café des Aveugles 766
 Café de Flore 766-7
 Café de Foy 767
 Café Lemblin 767
 Café de Paris 767
 Café de Valois 767
 Café des Variétés 767 cafés 175-6, 175p caffeine 176 caillebotte 176 caillette 1 caillier 176
 caissettes 472 cake rack or tray 180 cakes 176-8
   angel 178
   Easter: coque du Lot 274
     German 178, 178p
     Russian 178-9
   Genoa 178
   Genoese 422-3
     apricot 423
     with chocolate filling 423, 423p with mocha cream 423 with filling à la normande 423 large 177p Madeira 570
   Mecca 179
   Milanese 589
   mocha 594
   Montmorency 596
   nougatine 626-7
   plum 179
   punch 179 small 177p spice 179
   Twelfth-Night 179-80, 402, 675
   Victoria 967 wedding 180

calabash gourd 180 calamary 180 stuffed à la marseillaise 180 calappa 180 calefaction 180-1 calendar, gastronomic 421 calf: brains, see brains crow 181
   ears 181
     braised: à la mirepoix 639 braised: Mont-Bry 639
     fried 639
     grilled à la diable 639
     à la hongroise 639
     à l'indienne 639
     à l'italienne 639
     stuffed en tortue 639
     en tortue 639
     Villeroi 639-40 feet 181, 640, 640p
   fritots 478
   à l'indienne 640
   à l'italienne 640
   with tartare sauce 640
   à la vinaigrette 640
 head 181, 640
   à l'anglaise 640
   à la bonne femme 640
   Caillou 640
   in crépinettes 640
   à la financière 640
   fried 640-1
   fritots 478
   Godard 641
   with Gribiche sauce 641 hot, with various sauces 641
   à l'italienne 641
   à la lyonnaise 641
   à l'occitane 641
   in oil 641
   with olives 641
   à la pochette 641
   à la portugaise 641
   à la ravigote 641
   stuffed 641
   stuffed à l'ancienne 641-2 en la Tertillière 642
   en tortue 642
   à la toulousaine 642 à la vinaigrette 642
 heart 181

- à l'anglaise 642
- à la bonne femme 642
- casserole 642
- roast 642
- sautéed 642
- stuffed, with various vegetables 642
- kidneys, see kidneys
- liver, see liver
- lungs: à la bourgeoise 644
- à la poulette 644
- stewed 644
- mesentery 588, 644
- fried 644
- fritots 478
- fritters 395
- à la hongroise 644
- à l'indienne 644
- à la lyonnaise 644
- à la poulette 644
- sweetbreads, see sweetbreads
- tongue, see tongue
- udder 181
- calories 14, 181, 313
- Cambacérès, Jean-Jacques, duc de 181, 181p
- camel 181
- couscous 181
- escalopes with pimentos and aubergines 181
- feet à la vinaigrette 181
- paunch à la marocaine 182
- pilaf 182
- ragoût, with tomato sauce 182
- ribs with rice 182
- roast fillet 181–2
- roast hump 182
- camomile 182
- Campanula 182
- Campeachy wood 182
- Canada: cookery 501
- canapés 182, 461, 461p, 462p, 472
- Aurora 461
- à la bayonnaise 461
- with bloater 472
- à la bordelaise 461
- with caviare 461
- crayfish 461
- à la danoise 461
- à la florentine 472
- with Gruyère cheese 472
- with ham 472
- with hard-boiled eggs 472
- Harlequin 461
- herring 461
- à la hollandaise 461–2
- horseradish à l'anglaise 489
- Laguipière 462
- à la livonienne 462
- lobster 462
- Monselet 462
- Mont-Bry 462
- à la moscovite 462
- à la nantaise 462
- Ninon 462
- à la parisienne 462
- with pickled tongue 462
- à la printanière 462
- à la reine 462
- Russian salad 462
- with sardines 472
- with scrambled eggs 472
- shrimp 462
- smoked eel 462
- à la Veron 462
- Victoria 472
- watercress 462
- with York ham 462
- canary grass 182, 182p
- cancalaïse, à la 182, 412
- candy 182
- cane 183
- cane juice 183
- cannelloni: garnished 472
- canning 733
- canteen 183
- Canton 183
- capelin (caplin) 183
- capers 183
- sauce 818
- capilotade 792
- capitaine 183
- caponata 183
- capons 183
- baked in butter 219
- baked à la Matignon 219
- boiled 222
- braised 219
- in pastry crust 183
- poached 222
- Capua 183
- caramel (burnt sugar) 183
- caramel cream mixture 594
- caramel custard 301, 301p
- caramelise 184
- caramels 183
- chocolate 183
- coffee 183
- hazelnut 183–4
- pistachio-nut 184
- caraway 184, 184p
- carbohydrates 11
- carbon dioxide 184
- carcase 184
- carciofa à l'inferno 49
- Cardamine 184
- cardamom 184
- cardinal, à la 184, 393, 412
- cardinal fish 184
- cardinaliser 184
- cardoons 184
- in béchamel sauce 184
- in butter 184
- with cream 184–5
- aux fines herbes 185
- fried 185
- fritters 395
- à la grecque 185
- à l'italienne 185
- gratinés 185
- à la lyonnaise 185
- with marrow 185
- à la milanaise 185
- Mornay 185
- with Parmesan 185
- purée 185
- raw, à la piémontaise 185
- salad 185
- with various sauces 185
- Carême, Antonin (Marie-Antoine) 185–7, 185p
- Caribbean cabbage 187
- carline thistle 187
- carmélite 393
- carminative 187
- carmine 187
- Carnation 187
- liqueur 555
- Carnival 187
- carob tree 565
- carolines 187, 462
- carotene 187
- carp 187, 187p, 188p
- à l'alsacienne 187
- au bleu 188
- Chambord 188, 188p
- cold 188
- cooked in beer 187–8
- au court-bouillon 188
- fillets 188
- fried 188
- grilled à la maître d'hôtel 188
- à la juive 188
- à l'orientale 188
- with parsley 188
- with raisins 188
- en matelote 188
- matelote à la canotière 580
- à la polonaise 189
- quenelles 189
- roast 189
- roes 189, 851
- stuffed à l'ancienne 189
- carpillon (carpeau) 189
- carpion 189
- carrier pigeon 189
- carrots 189, 189p
- in béchamel sauce 189
- blinis 471
- boiled 189
- buttered 189
- en cheveux d'ange 189
- à la crème 189–90
- croustades Vichy 476
- aux fines herbes 190
- flan à la flamande 378
- fondants Crécy 477
- fondue 384
- freezing 735
- glazed 190
- au jus 190
- omelette à la Crécy 352
- patties à la Crécy 483
- pirozski 703
- potage Velours 881
- purée 190, 747
- with cream 190
- with rice 190
- royale, à la Crécy 418
- salpicon, à la crème 800
- soufflé 190
- soup, purée of, called Crécy 875
- aux perles 876
- with rice 876
- timbales 190, 412
- à la Vichy 190, 967
- carving 190–1, 191p
- casein 191
- cashew 191
- casking 191
- cassata 192
- cassava 192
- casse-museau 192
- casserole (dish) 192
- casserole (utensil) 192
- cassia 192
- Cassis 192
- cassolette 193, 472–3
- ambassadrice 473
- bouquetière 473

INDEX

- à la florentine 473
- à la gauloise 473
- with lobster or spiny lobster 473
- marquise 473
- Régence 473
- Sagan 473
- sweetbread 473
- à la vénitienne 473
- cassonade 193
- cassoulet 193, 193p
- de Castelnaudary 193–4
- castagnaci 194, 217
- Castiglione, à la 194, 412
- castor set 294
- castrate 194
- cat 194
- bones 194p
- catalane, à la 194, 412
- catechu 194
- catfish 194, 194p
- catsup, see ketchup
- cattle: Charolais 99p
- cauf 195
- caul 195
- cauldron 207
- cauliflower 195, 195p
- boiled 195
- with various sauces 195
- with brown butter 195
- with cream 195
- croûtes Dubarry 476
- freezing 735
- fritters 195, 395
- au gratin 195, 195p
- loaves 559
- à la milanaise 195
- Mornay 195
- mould 195
- with noisette butter 195
- omelette Du Barry 352
- à la polonaise 195
- purée 196, 747
- salad 195
- sautéed in butter 196
- soufflé 196
- soup, purée of, called Dubarry 875
- stalks and stumps 196
- Caveau (restaurant) 767
- Caveau, Le (society) 196
- caviare 196, 463
- barquette or tartlets 463
- blinis 471
- brioche, small 463
- butter 168
- pastry straws with 466
- cavôur, à la 196, 412
- cédration 244
- celeriac 196, 197p, 463
- julienne 196–7
- omelette viveur 335
- purée 197
- ragoût 759
- salad with cress 790
- salpicon 197, 800
- stuffed à la paysanne 197
- celery 197, 197p
- with béchamel sauce 197
- in butter 197
- with cream 197
- fondue 384
- fritters 395
- à la grecque 197, 463
- à l'italienne 197
- au jus 197
- with marrow 197
- Mornay 197
- with Parmesan 197
- purée 197–8, 747
- royale 418
- sauce 818
- soup: cream of 874
- purée of 875
- velouté 878
- with various sauces 198
- vinaigrette 198
- celery salt 803
- celfar 198
- cellulose 198
- centaury tisane 927
- cépage 198
- cèpes, see mushrooms
- cereals 198
- bouillons 140
- as garnish 417
- cervelas 198
- chaboisseau 198
- chabot 198
- Chaldeans: banquets 76–7
- chalk 198
- chalonnaise, à la 412
- Chambertin 198
- Chambord, à la 198, 412
- chambrier 198–9
- chamois 199
- Champagne (Fine) 202
- Champagne (province) 199–202, 200p
- gastronomic map 199p
- vineyards: map of 200p
- wine lodges 264
- Champagne (wine): production 200–2, 201p
- Champeaux 767
- champigny 202
- champoreau 202
- chanfaina 202
- chanoinesse, à la 412
- chanterelle 202
- Chantilly 202, 393
- chap 202
- chapon 202
- char (charr) 202
- potted 731
- charcuterie 202–4, 202p, 203p
- chard 204, 204p
- fritters 395
- Charente 204
- wines 204
- charlotte mould 204p
- charlottes 204–5
- apple 205
- with rice 205
- à la Chantilly 205
- fruit 205
- à la parisienne 205
- plombières 205
- raspberry 761
- russe 205
- vanilla ice cream 205
- Charquican-Chileno 205
- chartreuse (dish) 205, 393
- larks à la française 206
- à la parisienne, en surprise 205–6
- partridge 667
- Chartreuse (liqueur) 205, 556
- Chasselas 206
- chasse royale 206
- chasseur, à la 206
- château 206
- châtelaine, à la 412
- chateaubriand 206
- Châteauneuf-du-Pape 206
- chatouillard 206
- chaud-froid 206, 207p
- chicken 223, 223p
- in aspic 206–7
- hazel grouse 451
- lamb chops 537, 537p
- partridge 667
- pheasant 689, 689p
- quails 750
- Rouen duckling 323
- thrush 923
- woodcock 998
- chaudrée de fouras 207
- chaudron 207
- cheese 207–16
- atteraux of Parmesan 470
- Brie croquettes 291
- brioche 154
- choux 473
- cream cheese mixture for hors d'oeuvre à la russe 593
- cream: pirozhki 703
- crêpes with Roquefort 288
- croûtes 476
- flan 378
- Juliette Récamier 378
- fondants 477
- fondue 384–5, 395p, 510
- grated: croûtes with 293
- Gruyère: canapés 472
- croquettes 291
- manufacture 207–8, 207p, 208p
- omelette, Swiss 355
- pannequets 480–1
- Parmesan: soufflé 864
- straws 665–6
- ramekin 761
- Saint-Denis talmouses 487
- soufflé 863–4, 864p
- soufflé fritters 479
- soup 882
- straws 902
- talmouse 487
- à l'ancienne 487
- à la pâtisserie 487
- varieties 209–16
- Welsh rabbit (rarebit) 977
- cheese-rennet 216
- chef de cuisine 216
- chemist's jar 216
- cherries 216
- à l'allemande 216
- in brandy 216
- with claret 216
- compote 216, 260
- Condé 216
- coupe 494
- croûtes 216
- Danish tart or flan 217
- dried: sauce 811
- flan 216
- freezing 737
- fritters 216–17, 396
- ice 217, 492
- jam 217, 516
- jelly 517
- jubilee 217

- meringue tart (flan)
  - with rice 217
- millas 590
- Morello 596–7
- paste jelly 519
- rice ring with 136
- sauce 827
- savarin à la Chantilly 832
- soufflé 866
  - cold 217
  - Montmorency 217
- soufflé fritters 396
- soup 884–5
- stones: liqueur 555
- syrup 912
- tart 917, 917p
  - à l'alsacienne 917, 917p
  - German 917
- tartlets 919
- in vinegar 217, 463
- wine 124
- Cherry Bay 217
- Cherry Laurel 217
- chervil 217
  - essence 363
  - fondue 385
  - as garnish 412
  - omelette 352
- chervil, bulbous 159
- chervis 217
- chestnuts 217–18, 217p
  - barquettes 218, 471
  - Bavarian cream à la cévenole 89
  - boiled 218
  - braised 218
  - Clermont pudding 742
  - compote 218
  - confection 218
  - crêpes à la cévenole 288
  - croquembouche 290
  - croquettes 218, 291
  - fritters 396
  - jam 218
  - marrons 577
    - glacés 218
  - Mont-Blanc 218
  - Mont-Bry soufflé 866
  - Nesselrode pudding 742–3
  - omelette à la châtelaine 352
  - pannequets à la cévenole 664
  - plombières ice cream 493
  - potage julienne à la cévenole 880
  - purée 218, 747
  - and rice 218
  - roast 218
  - soufflé 218, 864
    - soubise 864
    - sweet 218
  - soufflé pudding 741–2
  - soup, purée of 875
  - stewed, as garnish 218
  - sundaes à la cévenole 908
  - chevalet 218
  - chevrier 218
  - Chicha 219
  - chicken 219
    - à la d'Albuféra 224
    - Agnes Sorel tartlets 487
    - à l'allemande 222
    - ambassadrice 222
    - à l'andalouse 222
    - à l'anversoise 222
    - aspic 57p, 58, 58p, 222
    - à l'aurore 222
    - baked in butter 219
    - baked à la Matignon 219
    - ballottines 222
      - with dark sauce, served with various garnishes 73
    - glazed 74
    - in jelly 74
    - with light sauce 73–4
    - small 74
  - à la banquière 222
  - boiled 222
    - à l'anglaise 222
  - à la bonne femme 222
  - bouchées 222
  - boudins à la Richelieu 222
  - à la bourgeoise 222
  - à la bourguignonne 222–3
  - braised 219, 219p
  - brochettes 223
  - canapés 222
  - capilotade 223
  - carving 221p
  - casserole 223
    - à la bonne femme 223
    - with celery 223
  - à la Chantilly 223
  - chartreuse à la parisienne, en surprise 205–6
  - chaud-froid 223, 223p
    - in aspic 206–7
  - à la chevalière 223
  - chipolata 223
  - à la Chivry 223
  - à la Clamart 223
  - cock-a-leekie 885
  - en cocotte 223
  - cominée de gelines 260
  - compote 223
  - consommé: à
    - l'ambassadrice 870
    - à l'américaine 870
    - Beauharnais 870
    - Bizet 870
    - Brillat-Savarin 870
    - Célestine 871
    - with chicken 871
    - and rice 871
    - à la chilienne 871
    - clarified 869
    - à la Colbert 871
    - Colnet 871
    - à la Crécy 871
    - Dalayrac 871
    - aux diabolots 871
    - Edward VII 871
    - à la flip 871
    - à la florentine 871
    - Florette 871
    - à la gauloise 871
    - with gombos 871
    - Grimaldi 871
    - à l'impériale 872
    - à l'infante 872
    - à l'italienne 872
    - Leverrier 872
    - à la madrilène 872
    - Mercédès 872
    - à l'Orléans 872
    - à la parisienne 872
    - Pépita 872
    - with plover or lapwing eggs 872
    - Princess Alice 872
    - princesse 872
    - Rachel 873
    - à la reine 873
    - à la Reine-Jeanne 873
    - à la royale 873
    - with sago 873
    - simple 869
  - coq en pâté 274
  - coq au vin 274, 274p
  - côtelettes 223
    - à l'anglaise 224
    - Helder 224
    - maréchale 224
  - à la crapaudine 224
  - crépinettes 228
  - croquettes 224
  - croûtes 222
    - à l'ambassadrice 476
  - with cucumber 224
  - curry 224
  - à la Cussy 224
  - demi-deuil 224, 227
  - Demidoff 224
  - à la Derby 224
  - à la Doria 224
  - émincés 224–5
  - extract 364
  - filets mignons 225
  - fillets 225
  - à la financière 225
  - flan à la reine 378
  - forcemeat 386
    - ring with various garnishes 135
  - fricassée: à la berrichonne 394
  - à la minute 225
  - fritot 225
  - fritters 395
  - fumet 401
  - galantine 402–3
  - gallimaufry 404
  - general cooking instructions 219, 222
  - giblets, see giblets
  - à la Godard 225
  - grilled 225
    - à la diable 225
  - ham 225
  - hash 225
  - Hungarian 225
  - à l'impériale 225
  - à l'indienne 225
  - Isabelle 225
  - à l'ivoire 225
  - jambalaya 225–6
  - jellied: in casserole 226
    - with Champagne 226
    - with foie gras 226
  - jelly: stock for 518
  - katoff 226
  - kromesnies 226
  - Lambertye 226
  - à la languedocienne 226
  - liver, see liver
  - loaf 226–7
  - à la lyonnaise 227
  - Maerterlinck 227
  - marinade 227
  - à la Matignon 227
  - mayonnaise 227
  - médallions 227
    - à l'algérienne 227
    - Beauharnais 227
    - chopped 227
    - cut from the breast 227

- Dunan 227
 à l'écarlate 227
 à l'égyptienne 227
 Fédora 227
 Grignan 227–8 à la mantouane 228
 à la turque 228
 à la milanaise 228,
 228p with mousseline
 forcemeat 228
 mulligatawny hotpot 599 mulligatawny soup 887
 with mushrooms 228
 à la Nantua 228
 à la Néva 228
 à la niçoise 228
 with noodles 228
 with oysters 228–9
 pannequets à la reine 664 Panurge 229
 à la parisienne 229
 pavé à l'écarlate 675
 à la périgourdine 229
 pie: à la créole 229
     Russian 278
 à la piémontaise 229
 pilaf 229
 poached 222
 à la polonaise 229
 à la portugaise 229
 potage Camaro à la brésilienne 884
 princess 229
 pudding à la Richelieu 740
 purée 229, 746
     royale of 418
 quenelles 754
 Rassol'nik 887–8
 à la régence 229
 à la reine 229
 à la Renaissance 229–30
 with rice à la Bourbon 230 and rice with suprême
 sauce 230
 ring 238
 roast 230, 230p
     à l'anglaise 230
 with rock (coarse) salt 230 Rosière 230–1 à la Rossini 231
 salad 231
 salpicon 800
     à la reine 801
 sautéed 231
     Alexandra 231
     à l'algérienne 231
     ambassadrice 231
     à l'ancienne mode
     231 Annette 231
     Archduke 231
     Archduke Salvator 231–2
     with artichokes 232 with basil 232
     à la biarrotte 232
     à la bohémienne 232 Boivin 232
     à la bordelaise 232,
     232p
     à la bourguignonne 232
     in butter 232
     with cèpes 232
     chasseur 233, 233p with chayotes 233
     with cream 233
     Demidoff 233
     Duroc 233
     à l'écoissaise 233
     fermière 233
     aux fines herbes 233
     à la florentine 233
     à la forestière 233
     with hop shoots 233
         in cream 233
     à l'indienne 233–4
     à l'italienne 234
     à la japonaise 234
     à la livonienne 234
     à la lyonnaise 234
     à la Marengo 234
     en matelote 232
     à la meunière 234
     à la minute 232
     Mireille 234
     Monselet 234
     with morels and other mushrooms 234 with mushrooms
     234, 234p
     niçoise 234
     with oysters 234–5
     panetière 235
     with paprika 235
     à la parisienne 235
     Parmentier 235
     à la paysanne 233
     à la Périgord 235
     petit-duc 235
     à la piémontaise 235
     à la portugaise 235
     à la provençale 235
 Rivoli 235
 à la romaine 235
 Stanley 235
 with tarragon 235 with white wine 235
 à la zingara 235
 soufflé 236, 864
     à l'aurore 486
     à la mirepoix 864
     with truffles 864
 soup: cream of 236,
 874
     English 885
     purée of, à la reine 875–6
     velouté 878–9 Souvarov 236
 spring 236 en compote 236
     fried 236
     grilled à la diable 236 in marinade 236
     with peas 236
     à la piémontaise 236
     à la polonaise 236
     roasted 236
     à la sicilienne 236
     à la tartare 236
     à la viennoise 236
 Stanley 236
 stuffed 782
     à l'ariégeois 236
     à la mode de Sorges 236–7 suprêmes 237
     ambassadrice 237
     Camérani 237
     Carème 237
     à la florentine 237 Gabrielle 237
     à l'impériale 237
     marquise 237
     Montpensier 237
     à la Périgux 237 Pojariski 237
     princesse 237
     Richelieu 237
     Rossini 237
     with various vegetables 237
     Verdi 237
 with tarragon 237,
 237p
     in jelly 226, 226p tartellettes 222
 timbales à la Montrouge 488
 à la Toscane 238
 Toulouse 238
 with truffles 235, 238
     à la périgourdine 238 trussing 220p
 turban 238
 turnovers à la reine 946 with various wines 235
 à la viennoise 235, 238
 Waterzootje 976p, 977
 white poultry stock 900 chick-peas 238, 406
     Catalan style 238
     purée 748
 chicory 238, 239p, 360p
     à la béchamel 238
     with brown butter 238
     with butter 238
 chiffonnade 238
     with cream 238
 à la flamande 238
 fondue 385
 fritots 238
 fritters 395
 au gratin 238
 in gravy 238–9
 à la grecque 239
 à la meunière 239
 à la milanaise 239
 à la Mornay 239
 with noisette butter 238 omelette à la flamande 352 à la polonaise 239
 purée 239
 salad 239
 soufflé 239, 864
     with Parmesan 864
 soup: cream of 874
     purée of 876
 chicory, wild (coffee substitute) 239
 chiffonnade 239, 412
 chicory 238
     with cream 238
 lettuce: in butter 239, 553 for cold dishes 553
     with cream 239–40, 553–4
 mixed 240
 sorrel 240, 863
     with cream 863
 Chinese artichoke 240,
 240p omelette, Japanese 353
 soup, cream of 874
 tartlets à la japonaise 487 Chinese cookery 504–5 chinois (fruit) 240

- chinois (utensil) 240, 240p
 chinonaise, à la 412
 chipolata 240, 412
 chitterlings 26
 chives 240, 240p
   butter 168
 chloride 240
 chocolate 240–1
   bâtonnets 88
   Bavarian cream, striped 91
   caramels 183
   cream 286
   ice cream 492
   icing 498
   mousse 598
   pavé 676
   pudding 742
   sauce 827
   soufflé 866
   soufflé biscuits 125 chocolate (beverage) 241
 choesels 241
   à la bruxelloise 241
 cholesterol 241–2
 chopettes, see cutlets choppers 591–2, 592p chopping 242
 chops 242
 chopsticks 242
 Chorizos 830
 Choron 242
 chou paste 242, 316, 594 balls: as garnish 412
 choux 242, 242p
   à la cévenole 242
   à la Chantilly 242
   with cheese 473
   chocolate 242
   coffee 242
   à la crème 242
   à la frangipane 242
   glazed 242
   as hors d'oeuvre 473
   à la maraîchère 473
   Montmorency 242
   à la Nantua 473
   à la normande 242
   à la royale 473
   à la Saint-Hubert 473
   à la strasbourgeoise 473
   à la toulousaine 473
   au vert-pré 473
 chowder, clam, Manhattan 885 Christmas 242–3
   cookery 372–3
 Christmas pudding 743
 Christmas yule log 178
 chub 243, 243p chutney 243
 cicada 243 cider 243
 cider type drink 122 Cierniki 473 cigars and cigarettes 243 cinnamon 243, 244, 244p
   sugar 908
 citric acid 244
   syrup 912
 citron 244, 244p
 liqueur 556
 Citronella 244
 Citrus aurantium 244 citrus fruits 244, 399p
 civet 244
 clafouti 244
 Clairet 123, 244–5 clam 245
   chowder, Manhattan 885 soup with vegetables 885
 Clamart, à la 393, 412 clarification (clarifying) 245, 296
 Clary 245, 656
 Clavaria 245
 clementine 245
 Clermont, à la 412
 cloche 245
 Close, Jean-Joseph 245
 Clos Vougeot 245
 clove 245–6
   sugar 908 clovisse 246
 Clupeidae 246 cnicaut 246 coagulate 246 coal fish 246 coaster 246 coca 246, 246p
 cochineal 246
 Cochlearia 246
 cochon au père 320
 cocido 246
 cock-a-leekie 885
 cockle 246
 cocks: combs 246, 473
   attelets 246
   à l'ancienne 470
   en attereaux 246
   à la Villeroi 246
   barquettes 246
   fritots 478
   and kidneys: ragoût 759
   salpicon 800
   salpicon à blanc 246
   salpicon à brun 246
   salpicon à la chalonnaise 800
     stuffed 246
     tartlets 246
     Villeroi 473
   kidneys, see kidneys cocktails 246–9 cocktail set 247p cocoa 248–9, 249p
   butter 167–8
 coconut 249, 249p
   butter 168
   milk 249
 coco-plum 249
 cocose 249
 cod 250, 250p
   à l'anglaise 250
   boiled, with various sauces 250
   bouillabaisse 139
   à la boulangère 250
   braised in white wine 250 with butter, melted 250 cold, with various sauces 250 cooked in cream 250 cream gratin 250
   à la crème 250
   croquettes 474
   à la dieppoise 250
   Dugléré 250
   filleting 251p
   fillets 250
   à la flamande 251
   fried 251, 251p
     in breadcrumbs 251
     Orly 251
   au gratin 251
   grilled 251
   à la hollandaise 251
   à l'indienne 251
   liver à la scandinave 509p
   à la meunière 251
   Mornay 251
     in scallop shells 251
   roast 251
   in shells à la florentine 251 in shells au gratin 251–2 in shells à la Nantua 252
   in white wine 252
 cod, salt 252
   à l'anglaise 252
   à la bamboche 252
   à la béchamel 252
   à la bénédictine 252
   à la Benoiton 252
   boiled, with various sauces 252
   bouillabaisse 252
     à la ménagère 252
   brandade 252, 253p
     à la Nantua 252
     with truffles 252
   in brown butter 252, 254
   à la crème 254
     au gratin 254
   à la créole 254
   croquettes 254
   curried 254, 468
   en escabèche 254
   fillets Orly 254
   fish balls à l'américaine 254
   fried 254
   fritot 254
   à la hongroise 254
   à la languedocienne 254
   à la lyonnaise 254
   à la maître d'hôtel 254
   mayonnaise 254
   à la meunière 254
   Mireille 254
   with noisette butter 254
   à l'occitane 254
   à la parisienne 254
   Parmentier 254–5
   à la provençale 255
   en rayte 255
   rougail, with tomatoes 781
   salad 255
   with spinach au gratin 255 with tomatoes à la marseillaise 255 tongues: à la madrilène 468
     marinated 468
     vol-au-vent 255
 cod-burbot 255
 coffee 255–7
   Bourbon créole 257 brewing 257
   caramels 183
   champoreau 202
   with cream or milk 257 decaffeinated 258
   essence 363
   ice cream 492, 492p
   iced 257
   icing 498
   Irish 979
   mocha: Bavarian cream 91

- pastilles 670
- pavé 676
- soufflé 866, 867p
- substitutes 258
- syrup 913
- uses 258
- coffee grinder 255p, 256p, 257p
- coffee pots 255p, 257p
- Cognac 258
  - map of areas producing 258p
  - cola 258, 258p
  - cream 258
  - elixir 359
- Colbert, à la 258
- cold dishes: presentation 258–9
- cold room 259
- colifichet 259
- colin 259
- collop 259, 362
- Colocasia 259
- Colocynth 259
- colonne, moule à 259, 259p
- colourings 259
- columbines 259, 473
- colza 259
- confits 260
- comfrey 260
- cominée de gelines 260
- compote 260–1
- condé 261
  - mixture 594
- Condé, à la 393
- condiments 261–2
- condiment set 261p, 262
- confectioners 262p
- confectionery 262
- confit 262
- Confréries Vineuses 262–5
- conger eel 265, 265p
- consommés:
  - à l'alsacienne 870
  - à l'ambassadrice 870
  - à l'américaine 870
  - à l'amiral 870
  - à la basquaise 870
  - Beauharnais 870
  - with birds' nests 870
  - Bizet 870
  - à la bourgeoise 870
  - Branca's 870
  - with bread 870
  - Brillat-Savarin 870
  - brunoise 870–1
  - à la cancalaise 871
  - celery-flavoured 873
  - Célestine 871
  - chasseur 871
  - aux cheveux d'ange 871
  - chicken, clarified 869
  - with chicken giblets 871
  - with chicken pinions 871
    - and rice 871
  - chicken, simple 869
    - à la chilienne 871
    - clarified 869
    - à la Colbert 871
    - cold 873
    - Colnet 871
    - Commodore 871
    - à la Crécy 871
    - croûte au pot 871
      - à l'ancienne 871
    - Dalayrac 871
    - aux diabolots 871
    - à l'écoissaise 871
    - Edward VII 871
    - fish: clarified 869
      - simple 869
    - flavoured with game fumet 873
    - à la flip 871
    - Florence 871
    - à la florentine 871
    - Florette 871
    - game, simple 869
    - with garden cress 871
    - with garnishes 870–3
    - à la gauloise 871
    - with gombos à l'orientale 871
    - Grimaldi 871
    - à la hollandaise 871
    - houblonnière 871
    - Hudson 871
    - à l'impériale 872
    - à l'infante 872
    - à l'irlandaise 872
    - à l'italienne 872
    - julienne 872
    - Léopold 872
    - Leverrier 872
    - with macaroni 872
    - à la madrilène 872
    - Mercédès 872
    - à la messine 872
    - à la neige de Florence 872
    - Nesselrode 872
    - Nimrod 872
    - with noodles 872
    - à l'Orléans 872
    - oxtail 872
    - à la parisienne 872
    - with pasta products 872
    - with pearl barley 85, 872
    - Pépita 872
    - with pinions 701
    - with plover or lapwing eggs 872
    - with poached eggs 872
    - Princess Alice 872
    - princesse 872
    - printanier 873
      - aux perles, or au riz 873
    - with profiteroles 873
    - with quenelles 873
    - Rachel 873
    - with ravioli 873
    - à la reine 873
    - à la Reine-Jeanne 873
    - with rice 873
    - riche 869
    - à la royale 873
    - with sago 873
    - à la Saint-Hubert 873
    - with salep 873
    - simple white 868–9
    - à la strasbourgeoise 873
    - with stuffed chicken giblets 871
    - with tapioca 873
    - tarragon-flavoured 873
    - tomato-flavoured 873
    - truffle-flavoured 873
    - with various wines 873
    - with vermicelli 873
  - Conti, à la 393, 412
  - contiser 265
  - conversation (pâtisserie) 265–6
  - cook 266
  - cooker, fuelless 451
  - cookies, see biscuits
  - cooking 266–73
  - coot 273, 273p
  - copeaux 273
  - copper 273
  - coq: en pâte 274
    - au vin 274, 274p
  - coque du Lot 274
  - coqueret, see strawberry-tomato
  - coques à petits fours 274–5
  - coquetier 275
  - coquille 275, 275p
  - coriander 275
  - corkscrew 275
  - Cornelian cherry 276
  - cornet 276
  - cornflour 276
  - corn oil 276
  - corn-on-the-cob, see sweetcorn
  - corn salad 276, 841
  - cornstarch 276
  - corozo 276
  - Corsica 276–7
    - culinary specialties 276–7
    - gastronomic map 276
  - Coteaux, Ordre des 277
  - cotignac 277
  - cotriade 277
  - cotton-seed oil 647
  - couch grass 277
  - coucouselle 277
  - coulibiac 277–8
    - chicken 278
  - eel 331
  - coulis 278
    - crayfish 283
  - coup d'avant 278
  - coup de milieu 934
  - coupes (sundaes) 494, 494p, 908
    - apricot 494
    - à la cévenole 908
    - cherry 494
    - Crapotte 494
    - Jacques 494
    - peach 494
    - raspberry 909p
  - courgettes, see marrows
  - court-bouillons 278
    - au bleu 278
  - Champagne, à la mirepoix 279
  - à la grecque 278
  - red wine, à la mirepoix 279
  - for salmon 793
  - salt water 278
  - au vert 279
  - white 279
  - white wine 279
    - à la hongroise 278
    - à la mirepoix 279
  - couscous (couscoussou) 279–80
    - Armenian 280
    - bowl for 279p
    - camel 181
    - Moroccan 280
    - mutton, 'Chittra' 280
  - cousinette 280
  - cover 280–1
  - cow 281
  - cow-parasit 281
  - crab 281
    - butter 168
    - cold 281
    - dressed 281, 281p

- au gratin 281
- preparing 281p, 282p
- and shellfish in broth 281
- soup, purée of 876
- crab, hermit 453, 453p
- crab, velvet-swimming 967
- cracknel 281
- cramique 283
- cranberry 283
- jelly 283
- sauce 811
- crane 283
- crapaudine, à la 283
- craquelins 283, 473
- crayfish 159p, 283, 283p, 463
- aspic 58
- bisque 283, 876
- à la bordelaise 283, 283p
- bush 283–4
- butter 168
- canapés 461
- choux à la Nantua 473
- coulis 283
- croûtes 284
- à la Nantua 293
- dish for 284p
- flan: with cheese 284
- à la Nantua 378
- forcemeat 388
- as garnish 284
- as hors d'oeuvre 473–4
- à la liégeoise 284
- à la marinière 284
- mousse 284
- à l'ancienne 284
- mousselines 284
- à la Nantua 284
- à la nage 284
- omelette à la Nantua 354
- pannequets à la Nantua 664
- patties 483
- puffs 284
- ragoût Nantua 760
- rolls 284
- des Dames de Bous 284
- fried 284–5
- salpicon 800
- à la dieppoise 801
- à la Joinville 801
- sauce 819
- scallop shells of 485
- soufflé: à la Nantua 486
- à la normande 864
- with Parmesan 486
- soup: cream of 874
- purée of 876
- velouté 879
- tails: aspic of 36
- au gratin 285
- ragoût à la Nantua 285
- in shells 285
- timbale: à l'ancienne 285
- à la mode de Chavillien 285
- vol-au-vent 285
- cream horns à la Chiboust 285–6
- cream puffs, see choux
- creams 285, 286
- almond 17, 286
- butter 286, 594
- Chantilly 286
- with fruit 286
- chocolate 286
- cola 258
- custard 286
- filling for waffles 286
- flavoured with tea 286
- with gelatine 286
- lemon 551
- with liqueurs 286
- au miroir 286
- mocha 287
- praline 287
- frangipane 392
- frangipane pastry 286
- fritters 396
- mocha 594
- mocha custard 287
- à la Montmorency, border of 596
- orange 652
- pastry 594
- French 287, 671
- plombières 287
- raspberry 762
- St Honoré 287, 594
- salad dressing 787
- sour, soup 888
- whipped 978
- Crécy, à la 287
- crème, à la 287
- crème renversée 287
- crémets: d'Angers 287
- de Saumur 287
- créole, à la 287
- crêpes 287–8. See also pannequets
- Alsation 288
- apple 41
- batter for (sweet) 319
- buckwheat, called galetons 288
- à la cévenole 288
- Chartreuse 288
- foie gras à la Périgourdine 382
- as garnish 288, 412–13
- pineapple 701
- potato 728
- raspberry 288
- with Roquefort 288
- savoury butter 288
- spinach 891
- stuffed with apples 41
- Suzette 288
- crêpinettes 288
- cress 288–9
- croquettes 474
- soup, purée of 876
- crever 289
- cricket 289
- crock pot 289
- crocodile 289
- croissants 289
- almond 289
- jam 289, 289p
- cromesquis, see kromeskies
- crop 289
- croquant 289–90
- croque au sel, à la 290
- croquebouché 290
- chestnut 290
- oranges 290, 290p
- croque-monsieur 290
- croquets 290, 474
- bar almond 290
- Bordelais 290
- croquettes 290, 474
- apricot 291
- beef 474
- left-overs 474
- bone-marrow 474
- brain 474
- Brie cheese 291
- chestnut 291
- cod 474
- cress 474
- egg 344
- fish 474
- foie gras 381
- à la Périgueux 474
- à la reine 474
- game 474
- Gruyère cheese 291
- lobster 474, 563
- macaroni 567
- valentinoise 474
- meat 474
- mixtures for 593
- Montrouge 474
- mussel 291, 474
- noodle 475
- oyster: à la normande 475
- Victoria 475
- pheasant 687
- potato 291, 291p, 475
- 725, 725p
- Chevreuse 725
- à la florentine 475
- à la lyonnaise 725
- à la niçoise 475
- à la permesane 475, 725
- à la périgourdine 725
- poultry 475
- printanière 475
- rice 475
- à l'américaine 475
- rice: curried 475
- old style 291
- à la piémontaise 475
- savoury 291
- stuffed 291
- sweet 291
- sheep's trotters 635
- spiny lobster 475, 893
- sweet potato 911
- La Varenne 291–2
- veal 475p
- vegetable 475
- à la viennoise 475
- croquignolles Parisiennes 292
- croustades 292, 475
- à l'alsacienne 475
- à l'anversoise 475
- bread 292, 292p
- à la bretonne 475
- à la forestière 475
- à la grecque 476
- little 292
- little duchess potato 292, 292p
- little noodle 292
- little rice 292
- little semolina 292
- little vermicelli 292
- à la marinière 476
- à la Montrouge 476
- à la napolitaine 476
- à la nivernaise 476
- potato 725
- à la talousaine 476
- vert-pré 476
- Vichy 476
- croûtes 292
- à l'ambassadrice 476
- anchovy 476
- apple 41

- apricot 44
  - banana; à la
    - Banvilliers 75
    - à la maltaise 75
  - with bone-marrow 476
  - Brillat-Savarin 476
  - cardinal 476
  - cheese 476
  - chicken 222
    - à l'ambassadrice 476
  - à la Clamart 476
  - crayfish 284
  - for croûte au pot 292
  - for desserts 293-4
  - devilled 476
  - dorées 293
  - Dubarry 476
  - fruit 293
  - garnished 476
    - and browned à l'ancienne 413
  - golden 293
  - with grated cheese 293
  - gratinées with truffles 293
  - for hors d'oeuvre or small entrées 293
  - à la livonienne 476
  - à la lyonnaise 476
  - with Madeira 293
  - Montmorency 293-4
  - mushroom 293, 476, 602-3
  - à la Nantua 293
  - à la normande 293
  - à la paysanne 476
  - peach 678
  - pear 682
  - preparation 293p
  - à la provençale 476
  - à la reine 293, 476
  - à la roennaise 476
  - Saint-Hubert 293
  - with skate liver 476
  - with soft roes 476
  - for soup 292-3
  - spinach au gratin 891
  - stuffed 292
    - with truffles 293
  - à la zingara 476
  - croûtons 294, 294p
  - as garnish 413
  - omelette 352
  - crow 294
  - crown-pigeon 294
  - cruchade 294
  - crudités 294
  - cruet stand 294
  - crustaceans 294
  - cucumber 294, 463
    - in butter 295
    - à la crème 295
    - à la dijonnaise 295
    - à la grecque 463
    - au gratin 295
    - à la grecque 295
    - au jus 295
    - Mornay 295
    - purée 295, 747
    - salad 295, 463
    - salpicon 800
    - stuffed 295
      - with vegetable salad 463, 463p
  - cucumber, ridge 776
  - Cuisine minceur 295
  - cuisson 295
  - culinary art 295
  - culinary methods 295-9
  - culinary names 393
  - cumin 299
    - bâtonnets 88
  - cumin, black 127
  - cup 299
  - Cup-bearer 299
  - Curaçao liqueur 299, 556
    - soufflé 866
  - Curcuma 299
  - curd 299
  - curing 733
  - curlew 299
  - Curnonsky (Maurice Edmond Saillard) 299-300, 299p
  - currants 300
    - compote 300
    - fritters 396
    - jelly 517
    - juice for ices 300
    - currants (dried) 434
    - curry 300
    - Bichique 300
    - Bringelle 300-1
  - Cussy, à la 393
  - custard 301
    - caramel 301, 301p
    - confectioner's 287
    - English: mixture 594
    - fried 301
    - mould mixture 594
    - ring, with mirabelles à la vosgienne 135-6
    - vanilla 301
  - custard apple 34, 34p, 301, 301p
  - custard cream, see cream, custard
  - custard marrow 301, 301p
    - in béchamel sauce 301
    - braised au jus 301
    - with butter 301-2
    - à la crème 302
    - à la créole 302
    - fritters 302
    - as garnish 302
    - au gratin 302
    - à la grecque 302
    - à la martiniquaise 302
    - Mornay 302
    - salad 302
    - stuffed 302
  - Cussy, à la 413
  - customs, gastronomic 421-2
  - cutlets 476-7
  - cuttlefish 302
  - cuvée 302
  - Czechoslovakia: cookery 504
- D
- dab 303, 303p
  - dace 303
  - dagh kebab 303
  - Dahlia 303
  - daikon 303, 303p
  - Daisy 303
  - Dampfnudeln 303
  - Dandelion 303
  - dariole 304, 304p
  - darne 304
  - dartois (hors d'oeuvre) 477
    - anchovy 477
    - à la florentine 477
    - Grimod de la Reynière 477
    - Laguipière 477
    - Lucullus 477
    - à la reine 477
    - sardine 477
    - tunny 477
  - dartois (pâtisserie) 304, 304p
  - dates 304, 304p
    - fritters 396
    - à la créole 396
    - stuffed 304, 305p
  - daube 304-5
  - daubière 305, 305p
  - Daucus 305
  - daumont, à la 305, 413
  - Dauphine, à la 305, 413
  - Dauphiné 305, 305p
    - gastronomic map 306p
  - dauphinoise, à la 305
  - decant 305-6
  - decoction 306
  - deep-frying 296, 306-7
  - deep frying basket 307p, 308
  - deer 308, 308p
  - defrutum 308
  - déglacage 308
  - déglaçer 308
  - dégorger 308
  - dégraissier 308
  - dégraissis 308
  - dehydration 734
  - déjeuner 308
  - délice 308
  - demi-deuil, à la 308, 413
  - Demidoff 308-9
  - demi-espagnole 309
  - demi-glace 310
  - demi-john 310, 312p
  - demi-tasse 310
  - denier, en 310
  - Denmark: cookery 509-10
  - densimeter 310
  - density 310
  - dent-de-loups 310
  - dentex 310
  - de-oil 310
  - Derby, à la 310
  - dermatitis 310
  - dérober 310
  - Désangiers, Marc-Antoine 310, 310p
  - Desessarts 310
  - desiccation 311
  - dessert 311, 311p
  - détrempe 311
  - Deux-Magots 767
  - devilfish 311
  - devilled 311-12
  - dextrin 312
  - dextrose 312
  - diabetes 312
  - diable 312, 312p
  - diable, à la 311-12
  - diablotins 292-3, 312
  - diaphragm 312
  - diastasis 312
  - dieppoise, à la 312, 413
  - diet 312
  - dietetics 312-13
  - digester 313

- digestibility 314 digestive 314
Dijon 314
dinatoire 314
Dinochau 767 dinner 314 dish stand 314 disinfecting 314 distillation 314
dittany, Cretan 289 diuretic 314
Divan Lepelletier 767 diver 314
dobule 314 doe 314 dog 314 dogfish 315, 315p dog-rose 357
dolic 315
dolmas (dolmades) 315 donkey 315 dormant 315
dorure 315 dotterel 315 double boiler 315 dough:
    brioche 315–16, 671
    mousseline 316
    dumpling 316
    fine lining paste or pastry 318
    kneading 530
    lard pastry 671
    leavened 318
    pastry, for pies 671
    savarin 318–19
douillet 320 douillon 758
douzil (dousil) 320
Doyen, Le 768, 768p draff 320
dragonet, see corn salad draining 320
dressing 320
dressings: for mixed salads 877–9
    for plain salads 785, 787 drink: economical 123
    hygienic and refreshing 123 drinking straw 320 dripping pan 320
dromedary 320
Drouant 767 drum 182, 320 drying 320
dubarry, à la 320, 413,
    413p duchesse, à la 321, 413
duchesse mixture 321
duchesses 321
duck 321
    Amiens pâté 672–3
    ballottines 74
    liver, see liver with pineapple 700
    roast: carving 324p duck, wild 326
    à la bigarade 326
    au chambertin 327
    fillets à la bigarade 326–7 à l'orange 327
    in Port 327
    à la presse 327
    roast 327
    salmis 327
    à la minute 327
    à la tyrolienne 327–8 duckling: d'Albuféra 321
    à l'alsacienne 321–2
    ballottine 322
    à la bigarade 322
    à la bordelaise 322
    braised, with various garnishes 322, 322p casserole, with various
    garnishes 322
    à la chipolata 322
    cold 322
    with olives 322
    à l'orange 322
    with peas 323, 323p
    roast 323
Rouen: ballottine 323
    à la bigarade 323
    au chambertin 323
    in Champagne 323
    chaud-froid 323
    en chemise 323
    with cherries 323
    cold 325
    galantine 325
    jellied: en daube 325
    à l'orange 325,
    325p Lambertye 325
    mousse 325
    mousselines 325
    pie 694
    in Port 325
    pressed 325
    soufflé 326
    suprêmes 326
    terrines 326
    timbale Voisin 326
    with truffles 326
à la rouennaise 325
salmis, à la rouennaise 325–6
    with sauerkraut 323
    terrines 922
    with turnips 323
duck press 327p, 328
dumpling dough 316
Dunand, father and son
    328 Duroc, à la 393
duxelles 328, 413
    mushrooms 328
Dyer's moss 46
- E earth nuts 329
Easter 371
échaudé 329
éclairs 329, 329p Carolines 462
    à la Karoly 463 small, à la hollandaise 329 eels 329–30, 330p, 463
    à l'anglaise 330
    ballottine 330
    à l'ancienne 330
    à la bourguignonne 330–1
    à la gauloise 331
    bastion 331, 331p
    à la bonne femme 331
    bouillette 140
    collared: à l'angevine 331
    à la bordelaise 331
    cold 331
    à la royale 331
    commachio 463
    conger 265, 265p coulubiaks 331
    in cream with paprika 331 à la diable 331–2
    à la fermière 332
    fricassée 332
    fried 332
    Orly 332
galantine: arranged in coil 332, 332p
    cold 330
    grilled, maître d'hôtel 332
à la hongroise 331
à l'indienne 463
à l'italienne 332, 463
jellied: in Chablis 463
    stuffed 330
marinated: in red
    wine 463
    in vinegar 463
    in white wine 463
en matelote 332, 333p
à la normande 332
matelote: à la canotière 580
    à la meunière 580
à la meunière 332
à l'orientale 463
pie 332, 334, 692
    aux fines herbes (à la ménagère) 332, 334
    à la Nantua 332
    with truffles 332, 334
à la piémontaise 334
à la poulette 334
à la provençale 334
with risotto 334
à la romaine 334
sausages 330
on skewers à l'anglaise 334 skinning 330p
smoked 463
    canapés 462
stuffed 330
à la tartare 334
tourte: hot 334
    Rabelais, cold 334
à la tyrolienne 334
in verjuice 464
au vert 334
egg holder 334 eggnog 334
eggplant, see aubergine eggs 334–5
    à l'africaine 338
    à l'agenaise 338
    Aladdin 338
    albuminous water 975
    à l'alsacienne 338 ambassadrice 338
    Amélie 338
    à l'américaine 338
    anchovy 338
    à l'ancienne 338
    à l'andalouse 339
    à l'anglaise 339
    à l'antiboise 339

- à l'anversoise 339
- Apicius 339
- Archduke 339
- Argenteuil 339
- Armenonville 339
- Amber 339
- with aubergines 339
- à la sicilienne 339
- Augier 339
- Aurora 339
- à l'auvergnate 339–40
- Babinski 340
- Bachaumont 340
- and bacon 337p, 340
- Bagrations 340, 340p
- Balmoral 340
- Bamboche 340
- Banville 340
- à la béarnaise 340
- à la Beauharnais 340
- à la Beaumont 340
- à la béchamel 340
- soubisée 351
- Belle-Hélène 340
- à la belleilloise 340
- à la bénédictine 340
- béranger 340
- bérangère 340
- Bercy 340
- Berlioz 340–1
- Bernis 341
- Bizet 341
- blinis 471
- à la bohémienne 341
- boiled: hard 335
- in shells 337
- soft 335
- Bonvalet 341
- à la bordelaise 341
- as border 341, 341p
- à la bourguignonne 341
- à la bretonne 341–2
- Brillat-Savarin 342
- Brimont 342
- à la bruxelloise 342
- cardinal 342
- Carême 342
- à la carmélite 342
- Carmen 342
- Carnavelet 342
- à la catalane 342
- à la charcutière 342
- à la Chartres 347, 351
- Chartreuse 342
- au chasseur 342
- Chateaubriand 343
- à la châteline 343
- à la Chaville 343
- Chénier 343
- à la chevalière 343
- à la Chevreuse 343
- à la Chimay 343
- with chipolatas 343
- à la Chivry 343
- Choron 343
- à la Clamart 343
- à la Clarence 343
- en cocotte 336p, 337
- with cream 343
- à la duxelles 343
- garnished 343p
- in gravy 343
- au naturel 343
- with Parmesan cheese 343
- à la périgourdine 343
- à la rouennaise 343
- à la strasbourgeoise 343
- with tarragon 343–4
- à la tartare 344
- Colbert 344
- Comtesse 344
- Condé 344
- Conti 344
- à la coque 337
- côtelettes 344
- with cream 344
- with cream sauce 344
- à la Crécy 344
- à la créole 344
- à la cressonnière 344
- croquettes 344
- in cups à la hollandaise 346, 347p
- Daudet 344
- Daumont 344
- Delmonico 344
- demi-deuil 344
- à la diable 344
- à la Diane 344
- Dino 344
- Duchess 344
- Duxelles 344
- Easter 344–5
- à l'écarlate 345
- Edward VII 345
- Elisabeth 345
- Esau 345
- à l'espagnole 345
- Favart 345
- à la flamande 345
- flan: Brillat-Savarin 378
- florentine 345, 346p
- à la forestière 345
- freshness 335, 335p
- fried 337, 337p
- fritters 395
- à la duxelles 395
- à la reine 395
- garnishes 409
- Georgette 345
- Grand Duke 345–6
- au gratin 346
- scallop shells of 485
- Halévy 346
- hard-boiled 464
- and anchovies 459
- and beetroot 461
- canapés 472
- with endive 346
- on macédoine of vegetables 346
- salpicon 801
- with various garnishes 346
- on various purées 346
- with watercress 346
- à l'italienne 346–7
- Jeannette 347
- jellied: à la française 347
- tarragon eggs 347
- Jockey-club 347
- kromesnies 347
- à la polonaise 347
- à la languedocienne 347
- à la lorraine 347
- Lucullus 347
- à la maraîchère 347
- Marianne 347
- Marivaux 347
- Masséna 347
- Massenet 347
- à la ménagère 347
- Meyerbeer 348
- mignons 477
- d'Aigrefeuille 477
- à l'andalouse 477
- Beauharnais 477
- à la cévenole 477
- à la Clamart 477
- curried 477
- à la nivernaise 477
- à la normande 477
- à la royale 477
- à la milanaise 348
- Mirette 348
- miroir 348
- Monselet 348
- Montrouge 348
- Mornay 348, 348p
- in mould 337
- à la Nantua 348
- with noisette butter 348
- à la normande 348
- omelettes 337, 337p, 351
- Agnes Sorel 351
- Albina 351
- à l'alsacienne 351
- anchovy 351–2
- André-Theuriet 352
- apple, à la normande 41–2
- apricot 45p
- Archduke 352
- Argenteuil 352
- with asparagus tips 352
- aubergine 352
- bacon 352
- à la Bercy 352
- à la bigourdine 352
- bone-marrow 352
- à la bouchère 352
- à la bruxelloise 352
- à la Célestine 355
- with cèpes 352
- chasseur 352
- à la châteline 352
- with chervil 352
- chicken liver 352
- Choisy 352
- Christmas 591
- Clamart 352
- courgette 352
- à la Crécy 352
- with croûtons 352
- Diane 352
- à la dijonnaise 355
- Diplomat 352
- du Barry 352
- à la duxelles 352
- à la fermière 352
- Feydeau 352–3, 353p
- filled 351
- aux fines herbes 353
- à la flamande 352
- flat 351
- à la florentine 353
- à la forestière 353
- frangipane 355
- garnished 351
- à la gasconne 353
- à la grecque 353
- ham 353
- Hungarian 353
- jam 357
- jam and fruit 357
- Japanese 353
- à la jardinière 353
- à la jurassienne 353
- kidney 353
- liqueur, flambée 357
- lobster 353
- à la lorraine 353
- Louis Forest 353

- à la lyonnaise 353
- Maintenon 353
- à la maraîchère 354
- à la ménagère 353
- mincemeat 591
- Mistral 353
- Monselet 353
- Montbry 353
- with morels 353
- mousseline 353
- mushroom 353, 603
- à la nancéienne 353, 354p
- à la Nantua 354
- à la niçoise 354
- à la normande 354
- Normandy apple 357
- Norwegian 356p, 357
- okra à la créole 354
- à la parisienne 354
- Parmentier 354
- à la paysanne 354
- Polish 354
- Portuguese 354
- Princess 354
- à la provençale 354
- à la romaine 354
- Rossini 354
- à la rouennaise 354
- à la royale 354
- à la Saint-Flour 354
- à la Saint-Hubert 354
- with salsify and brussels sprouts 354
- de Savarin 354-5
- à la savoyarde 355, 833
- seafood 355
- shrimp 355
- sorrel 355
- soufflé 357
- Spanish 355
- spinach 355
- spiny lobster 355
- spring onion 355
- strawberry 357
- with sugar 357
- sweet 355-7
- sweetcorn 355
- sweet pimento 355
- sweet potato 355
- Swiss 355
- à la Talleyrand 355
- tomato 355, 355p
- truffle 355
- tunny 355
- two-coloured 355
- à la verdurière 355
- viveur 355
- opéra 348
- à la parisienne 348
- Parmentier 348
- sur le plat 338
- poached 337
- à la Polignac 348
- à la portugaise 348
- preservation 335
- Princess 348
- à la printanière 348
- à la provençale 349
- Rachel 349
- à la reine 349
- ring: Brillat-Savarin 134
- à la princesse 134
- à la romaine 349
- Rossini 349
- Rothomago 349
- à la royale 349
- à la Saint-Hubert 349
- sardalaise sauce 827
- sauce 819
  - with butter 819
  - à l'écossaise 819
- Scotch 349
- sauce 822
- scrambled 337-8
  - à l'américaine 349
  - à l'ancienne 349
  - à l'antiboise 349
  - Argenteuil 349
  - à l'arlésienne 349
  - à l'armoricaine 349
  - with artichokes 349-50
  - à la Bercy 350
  - canapés 472
  - with cèpes 350
  - with chicken liver 350
  - Clamart 350
  - with crayfish 350
  - 'l'échelle' 350
  - à l'espagnole 350
  - à la forestière 350
  - Georgette 350
  - with ham or bacon 350
  - Massenet 350
  - with mushrooms 350
  - à la Nantua 350
  - à la normande 350
  - panetière 350
  - Parmentier 350
  - à la périgourdine 350
  - with potatoes 350
  - princess 350
- à la reine 350
- à la romaine 350
- Rossini 350
- Sagan 350
- Saint-Hubert 350
- with salpicon of lobster, spiny lobster or other shellfish 350
- with shrimps 350
- with truffles 350
- Sévigné 350
- shirred 338, 842
- with shrimps 351
- snow 351, 351p
- à la soubise 351
- spun 418
- Stanley 351
- stuffed 464
- stuffing à la moscovite 464
- tarragon 351
- à la tripe 351
- Verdier 351
- Victoria 351
- à la Villeroi 351
- yolk: stuffing 389
- à la zingara 351
- eggs, plovers' or lapwings' 464
- eggs, reptiles' 357
- eggs, turtles' 357
- egg-timer 357, 358p
- Eglantine 357
- Egypt: banquets 76
- cooking 76, 357-8
- elderberry: gourilos 358
- elderblossom: cordial 123
- and lime cordial 123
- electricity 358-9
- elephant 359
- elephant's feet 950
- elixir 359
  - cola 359
  - of Garus 359
  - Grande Chartreuse 359
- elk 359, 596
- embonpoint 359
- émincer 359
- émincés 359
  - beef: with bordelaise sauce 359
  - chasseur 359
  - à l'italienne 359
  - à la lyonnaise 359
  - with mushrooms 359
  - with piquante sauce 359
  - with poivrade sauce 359
- with Robert sauce 359
- with tomato sauce 359
- mutton or lamb 359
- pork 359
- poultry 359
- roebeek 359
- veal 359
- emulsion 359
- en-cas 359-60
- endive 360, 360p
  - with béchamel sauce 360
- braised au gras 360
- buttered 360
- with cream 360
- à la flamande 360
- gourilos, see gourilos
- au gratin 360
- au jus 360
- loaf 360
- au maigre 360
- purée 360
- soufflé 360
  - with Parmesan 360
- soup: cream of 874
- velouté 879
- subrics 360
- England: cookery 505
- entoloma 360
- entomophagous 360
- entrées 361
  - mixed 361
- entremets 361
- épergne 361
- épigramme 361
- epilepsy 361
- Epiphany 362, 369
- Equerry 932
- Ermitage 362
- ermite 362
- erythrin 362
- escalope 362
- escargotiere 850p
- escarole 362
- Escoffier, Auguste 362, 362p
- Esquire Tranchant 363
- essai (essay) 363
- essence 363
  - almond, bitter 363
  - anchovy 363
  - chervil 363
  - coffee 363
  - fish 363
  - game 363
  - garlic 363
  - lemon 551
  - mocha 594
  - mushroom 363

onion 363
parsley 363
shallot 363
tarragon 363
tomato 363-4
truffle 364 estaminet 364 estouffade 364 estouffée (étuvé) 364 étuver 364 euphorism 364 ewe 364 ewer 364 exocoetus 364 extracts 364 chicken 364
    game 364 meat 364

F

Faby (Fabri), Père 393-4
faïence 365, 366p faisandage 365
falcon 365 fallow-deer 365, 367
    roast haunch à l'anglaise 367
fanchette (fanchonnette) 367 fanes 367 fantaisie 367 far 367
farci 367 farinaceous 367 farinada 367
Faro 367
Far Poitevin 367
faséole 367 fat 367 fats 11-12
fattening 368
faubonne 368
fauves 368
favorite, à la 413 Favre, Joseph 368
fawn 368

fedelini 368 Fendant 368 fennel 368, 368p
    with bone-marrow 368
    braised in meat stock 368
    in cream 368
    fondue 385
    au gratin 368
    in gravy 368
    à la grecque 368
    liqueur 556
    roots 464
        à la grecque 464
    sauce 819
Fennel-water 368
fenugreek 368
fêra 368-9, 368p
    à la meunière 369
ferchuse 369 ferment 369 fermentation 369
fermière, à la 369, 416 festive cookery 369-73
feuillantine 373
feuilleton 373
    veal: à l'ancienne 373 in jelly, cold 373
        à la périgourdine 373 feuillette 373 fiatole 373-4
fieldfare 373 field-poppy: oil 374 figs 119, 374, 374p
    compote 260
    Corsican anchoyade 374 dried 374
    fresh 464
    fritters 374, 396
    leg of wild pork with 374
    marmalade 576
    pork stew with 374
    tart 917
    wine 124, 374
figuette 124, 374
filbert, see hazelnut fillet 374
financière, à la 375, 413 finger-bowl: water for 1 finte 375
firecrest 375 firedog 375
fish 375-6. See also cod etc.
    aspic 56
    bouillabaisse, Breton 277 bourride 141

chaudrée de fouras 207
consommé: à l'amiral 870
    à la cancalaise 871
    clarified 869
    Commodore 871
    Hudson 871
    simple 869
cotriade 277
coulbiac 277-8
croquettes 474
escabèche 464
essence 363
fillets 374
forcemeat 388
    ring with various garnishes 134
freezing 734
fritots 478
fritters 395, 479
fumet 401
garnishes 409
grilled à l'anglaise 29
hash 450
jelly: stock for 518
    stock for, with red
    wine 518
loaves 558-9
matelote 580
    à la bourguignonne 580 à la marinière 580
    à la normande 580
mayonnaise 580
mousse 376
mousseline forcemeat 388 pâtés, small 481
pavé 676
pies 692, 695 pirozhki 703
pochouse 708
    de Verdun-sur-le-Doubs 708
potage Bagration 880
purées 745-6
salpicon 801
sauté of 831
scallop shells 485
soufflé 864
soup with vermicelli à la marseillaise 882 soup aïgo-saou 881
stock 899
    with red wine 899
turnovers: à la Cussy 946
    à la lyonnaise 946
    à la Nantua 946
ukha 888
vishiki 969 à la Walewska 973

Waterzootje 976-7
fish kettle 376
fissurelle 376, 376p fistulane 376
Fistulina hepatica 376,
    376p flamande, à la 377, 413, 413p flamiche 377
flamingo 377
flamique 377
flamri 377
flamusse 377
Flanders: culinary specialities 379
flangnarde 379
flans 377
    apple Grimaldi 377
    banana à la crème 75
    à la bordelaise 377
    à la bourguignonne
    377-8
    Brillat-Savarin 378
    carrot à la flamande 378 cases baked blind 916
    cheese 378
        Juliette Récamier 378
    cherry 216
        Danish 217
        meringue with rice 217 chicken liver Chavette 378 crayfish: with cheese 284
        à la Nantua 378
    à la financière 378
    flamusse 377
    flangnarde 379
    à la florentine 378
    latticed 549, 549p
    leek, with cheese 378 mirabelle plum 592
    peach 679, 679p
    pear, à la crème 682p preparing cases 377,
    377p raspberry cream 378
    à la reine 378
    rice 775
        with apricots 775
        with meringue 775
    à la Sagan 378
    seafood 378
    shellfish 179
    sole à la normande 379
    tangerine 918-19
flavour 919

- flavouring 379
 Fletcherism 379
 fleuron 379 fleurs de vin 379 floating island 379
 flognarde 379 florentine, à la 379
 flounder 379, 379p
 flour 380, 380p flouring 380 floutes 380
 flowers: three flowers cordial 124
 fluorine 380
 flûte 380 flute, to 380 fogosch 380
 foie gras 380-1
   aspic 56
   en Bellevue 381 en brioche 381
   en casserole 381
   en chausson 381
   en cocotte 381
   croquettes 381
     à la Périgieux 474
     à la reine 474
   cutlets 381
   'eggs' 381
   escalopes: Cambacérés 381 en chaud-froid 381 with grapes and truffles 381-2
     Montrouge 382
     Richelieu 382
     à la romaine 382
     with truffles 382
   à la financière 382
   fritters: à l'ancienne 395 with truffle 395
   kromesnies 381
   loaf 382, 559
     jellied 382, 559, 559p
   medallions 382
   mousse 382, 597
   mousselines 382
   omelette: à la bigourdane 352
     Louis Forest 353
     Rossini 354
   pancakes à la périgourdine 382
   with paprika 382
   parfait 382
   pâté: de Périgieux 382
     with truffles 673
   pavé: à la king 675
     with truffles 675
   pie with truffles 694
   pilaf 699
   potted with truffles 383
     à la façon
       périgourdine 383
   preserved potted, in goose fat 383
   purée 746
   quenelles 754
   rissoles 383, 484
   salpicon 801
     à la bohémienne 800
     à la Montglas 801
     à la périgourdine 801 sandwiches 804 shells in jelly 383
   soufflé 383
   Souvarov 383
   subrics 905
   tart: à l'ancienne 384
     with truffles 384
   tinned, in goose fat 384
   truffled: in Madeira 384 pâté 382-3, 383p
     in port 384
   turnovers à la
     périgourdine 946
 fondant icing 498
 strawberry 498
 fondants 477
   Argenteuil 477
   cheese 477
   Crécy 477
   with foie gras Taillevant 477 with foie gras and truffles 477-8
   meat 478
   à la Nantua 478
   with poultry liver 478
   à la reine 478
   à la rouennaise 478
   Vladimir 478
   à la Yorkaise 478 fond-de-plat 384
 fondue equipment 385p fondues 384, 510 Burgundy 384
   carrot 384
   celery 384
   cheese 384-5, 385p chervil tuber 385
   chicory 385
   fennel tuber 385
   leek 385
   mushroom 385
   onion 386
   sorrel 386
   sweet pepper 386
   tomato 386
 Fontainebleau 386
 Food processor 386 fool 386
 forcemeats 386
   anchovy 388
   beef 386
   chicken 386
   crayfish 388
   cream fish 388 for fish 389 for galantines, pâtés and potted preparations 386
   game 386
     à gratin 387
   garlic 408
   godiveau with chives
     428 à gratin for canapés and croûtons 387
   mousseline 387
   mushrooms 389, 603
   panada: with butter 387, 388
     with cream 387
     for fish and shellfish mousses 388-9
   panadas for 386 for pâté of foie gras or potted foie gras 387
   périgourdine 387
   pickled herring 389
   pike à la lyonnaise 389
   pork: fine 387 ordinary 387
   for poultry 387
   poultry: liver à gratin 387 for pâtés and potted preparations 387
   prawn 389
   quenelle 387-8
   sage and onion 389
   sardine 389
   shellfish cream 389
   shrimp 389
   truffle 389
   for truffled poultry 387
   veal (hot entrées) 388
   veal and pork 388 for vegetables 389
   whiting 980
   yolk of egg 389 forcing 389 forcing-bag 389 forestière, à la 390, 413 fork luncheon 390 forks 390, 390p fountain 390
 Fourderaine 390 four mendicants 390
 fox 390
 Foyot 767
 française, à la 414
 France: banquets 79-83,
   79-83p
   cooking 268-73
 Franche-Comté 390-2,
   390p culinary specialties 391 gastronomic map 391p
   wines and liqueurs 391-2 francolin 392
 Frankfurterwürste 830
 Franks: banquets 78-9
   cooking and eating habits 267-8
 frangipane 392
   cream 392
   omelette 355
   panada 663
 frangipane, à la 393
 frascati, à la 392, 414 Frascati 767 fraudulent misrepresentations 392 freeze-drying 566
 freezing 734-7
 frénette cordial 123
 Frères Provençaux 767-8
 friandise 394
 fricandeau 394
 fricassée 394
   animelles 633
   chicken: à la berrichonne 394
     à la minute 225
   eel 332
   giblets 425
   périgourdine 394
   rabbit 756
   turkey 944
     pinions 701
   veal 960 fringale 394
 Frites Révolutionnaires 768 fritots 394, 478
   beef 478
   bone-marrow 478
   calf: head 478
     mesentery 478
     and sheep's brains 478 and sheep's foot 478
   cocks' combs 478
   cold meat 478 cooked fish 478 frogs' legs 478
   lambs' tongues 635

- mussel 478
- oyster 478
- poultry, cold 478
- sheeps' brains 478
- sheep's trotters 478
- sweetbread 478
- vegetable 478
- fritters 394, 394p, 478, 478p
  - acacia blossom 396
  - anchovy 394, 478-9
  - apple 396
  - apricot 396
  - artichoke 49, 479
  - aubergine 394
  - banana 396
  - beef à la lyonnaise 479
  - Bernois 479
  - blossom and flower 396
  - brain 395
  - broccoli 395
  - Brussels sprouts 395
  - calf's mesentery 395
  - cardoon 395
  - cauliflower 395
  - celery 395
  - chard 395
  - cherry 216-17, 396
    - soufflé 396
  - chestnut 396
  - chicken 395
    - liver 395
  - chicory 395
  - courgette 395
  - cream 396
  - à la créole 396
  - à la Creppazi 396
  - crystallised fruit 396
  - currant 396
  - date 396
  - Dauphine 397-8
  - egg 395
    - à la duxelles 395
    - à la reine 395
  - fig 374, 396
  - fish 395, 479
  - à la florentine 479
  - foie gras: à l'ancienne 395
    - and truffle 395
  - fruit, fresh 396-7
  - fruit jelly 397
  - herring 479
  - Jerusalem artichokes 395
  - Krapfuns 396
  - Lucullus 479
  - marrow flowers 480
  - meat 395, 479
  - mincemeat 591
- Mont-Bry 397
- moulds for 395p
- mushrooms 395
- mussel à la duxelles 479
- Nanette 397
- orange 397, 652
- oyster, à la normande 661
- pasta 479
- peach 397
- pear 397
- pineapple 397, 700
  - à la Carême 700
- plum 397
  - à l'agenaise 397
- polenta 397
- potato 395, 726p
- raspberry 397
- rice 397, 479
- rice cream 397
- salmon 797
- salsify 395, 802
- seafood 395
- semolina 397
- shellfish 395
- Shrove-Tuesday 397
- soft roe 479
- skate liver 846
- sole 859
- sorrel 395
- soufflé 397, 397p, 479
  - with anchovy 479
  - batter 319
  - à la hongroise 479
  - à la parmesane 479
  - à la toscane 479
- spinach 395-6
  - à la florentine 479
- strawberry 397
- stuffed 397
- surprise 397
- sweetbread 396, 479
- tangerine 397
- tomato 396
- truffle 396, 479, 938
- vegetable 479
- vegetarian à la printanière 480
- vegetarian à la romaine 480
- Vienna 397-8
  - batter for 319
- vine tendril 396
- fritto-misto 398
- frittons, see grattons
- frog 398
  - legs: à l'anglaise 398
  - aspic, à l'ancienne 58
  - à la béchamel 398
  - with chopped parsley 398
  - in cream 398
- curried 398
- fried 398
- fritots 478
- au gratin 398
  - à la grecque 464
  - à la lyonnaise 398
  - à la meunière 398
  - à la mirepoix 398
  - à la Mornay 398
  - à la niçoise 398
  - à la parisienne 464
  - with pimentos 464
  - à la poulette 398
- ring, vert-pré 134
- sautéed à la provençale 398
- à la vinaigrette 464
- soup, velouté à la sicilienne 879
- fromage glacé 399
- fromager 399
- fruit 399. See also apple, apricots, etc.
  - Bavarian cream 90p, 91
  - candied: Rothschild soufflé 866
  - compotes 260, 260p
  - croûtes 293
    - with Madeira 293
  - crystallised: fritters 396
  - in dietetics 400-1
  - dried 399, 399p
  - fool 386
  - freezing 736-7
  - fresh: fritters 396-7
  - ices 399
  - juices 399
    - clarification 245
  - kaltschale 523
  - with strawberry purée 523
  - loaf 178
  - macédoine 569
  - marzipan 400
  - moscovites 597
  - mould 399
  - mousses 598
  - omelette with jam 357
  - pannequets 664
  - pavé 676
  - pickled 399
  - pudding 505p, 742, 742p
  - salad 399-400, 400p, 569, 790
    - à la créole 400
    - with kirsch 400
    - à la maltaise 400
    - à la normande 400
    - à l'occitanienne 400
    - Tsarina 400
- salpicon 801
- soufflé mixture 594
- sugar-coated 400
- tart: à l'allemande 917-18
  - à l'alsacienne 918
  - English 918
- tourte 392
- fruitarian 401
- fruitery 401
- fruit kernel 401
- fruit stone cracker 401
- frumenty 401
- fry, see animelles
- frying pan 401
- fuchsine 401
- Fulbert-Dumonteil, Jean-Camille 401
- fumet 401
  - chicken 401
  - game 401
  - mushroom 401, 603
  - truffle 401
  - vegetable 401, 964

G

- Gaillac 402, 402p
- galantine 402
  - chicken 402-3
  - eel: arranged in a coil 332, 332p
  - cold 330
  - goose 430
  - jellied eels 403, 403p
  - partridge 668
  - pheasant in jelly 689
  - Rouen duckling 325
  - salmon 799
  - turkey, hen, en bellevue 944
- galathée 403
- galazyme (galactozyme) 403
- galette 403
  - batter for 319
  - flaky pastry 403, 404p
  - little salted: batter for 319
  - de plomb 404

- potato 404
 rich 404
 savoury 404
 small orange 403–4 galingale 404
 galichons 404
 galicien 404 gall 404
 gallimaufry 404
 gall nut 405
 Gallo-Romans: banquets 78
 gamache 405
 Gamay 405 gambra 405 game 405, 405p attereaux à la Saint-Hubert 60
   chartreuse à la parisienne, en surprise 205–6
   choux à la Saint-Hubert 473
   consommé: chasseur 871
     flavoured with game fumet 873
     Nesselrode 872
     Nimrod 872
   à la Saint-Hubert 873
   with salep 873
   simple 869
   croquettes 474
   éclares à la Karoly 463
   essence 363
   extract 364
   forcemeat 386
     à gratin 387
     ring with various garnishes 135
   freezing 734
   fumet 401
   ground: hash 450
   hanging 365
   hamburger steak 447
   interlarding 297
   jelly: stock for 518
   loaves 559
   omelette: Diana 352
     à la Saint-Hubert 354
   orieller de la belle Aurore 654 pâtés, small: à la Saint-Hubert 482
     with stock 481
   patties à la Saint-Hubert 483
   pavé à la Saint-Hubert 675
   pies 692–3
   pirozhi 703
   potage gentilhomme 880
   pudding 740–1
   purées 746
     royale of 418
   quenelles 754
   salpicon 801
     à la Saint-Hubert 801
   soufflé 864
     à la Périgieux 864
   soup: purée 876
     velouté 879
   stock 899
   winged: aspic 58
     entrecuisse 361
     fillets 374
     hash 450
   game-bag 406 gantois 406
   garbanzos (garvance) 406 garbure 406
   garde-manger 406, 406p garden warbler 406, 407p
   à l'arlésienne 407
   in the manner of Father Fabri 407 à la landaise 407
   à la piémontaise 407
   à la polenta (à la romaine) 407
   roast 407
   garfish 407
   gargote 407
   garlic 407, 407p
     butter 168, 408
     capons 408
     essence 363
     forcemeat 408
     Gascogne butter 168
     grated 408
     oil 408 powdered 408
     purée 408, 747 sauce, Provençal 822 soup à la provençale 882 toast 408
   garnishes 408
     à l'africaine 410
     Agnès Sorel 410
     albigeoise 6, 410
     albuféra 410
     algérienne 11, 410
     alsacienne 20, 410
     ambassadrice 410
     américaine 410
     à l'ancienne 26, 410, 410p
     à l'anglaise 410
     à l'Anversoise 34, 410
     Armenonville 410
     arrangement 408
     à la banquière 83, 410
     Béatrix 410, 411p
     à la Beauharnais 97, 410
     Beauvilliers 411
     à la bénédictine 120, 411
     à la berrichonne 120, 411
     à la Biarrotte 124, 411
     bonne-femme 411
     à la bordelaise 134, 411
     à la boulangère 411
     à la bouquetière 411
     à la bourgeoise 141, 411
     à la bourguignonne 160, 411
     à la brabançonne 142, 411
     Brancas 411
     à la bretonne 148, 411
     Brillat-Savarin 153, 411–12
     à la bruxelloise 157, 412
     Camérani 412
     à la cancalaise 182, 412
     à la cardinal 184, 412 carrot timbales 190, 412
     Castiglione 194, 412
     à la catalane 194, 412
     Cavour 196, 412
     à la chalonnaise 412
     Chambord 412
     à la chanoinesse 412
     à la châtelaine 412
     chervil leaves 412
     chiffonnade 239–40, 412, 553–4
     chinonaise 412
     chipolata 240, 412
     Choron 412
     chou paste balls 412
     à la Clamart 412
     à la Clermont 412
     cocks' kidneys 412 composite 410–19 à la Conti 412
     crêpes 412
     croûtes garnished browned à l'ancienne 413
     croûtons 294, 413
     à la Cussy 413
     à la Daumont 305, 413 à la Dauphine 305, 413 à la demi-deuil 308, 413
     à la dieppoise 312, 413
     Dubarry 320, 413, 413p
     à la duchesse 413
     Duroc 413
     Duxelles 413
     Favart 413
     à la favorite 413
     à la fermière 369, 413
     à la financière 375, 413
     à la flamande 413, 413p
     à la forestière 390, 413–14
     à la française 414
     Frascati 392, 414, 414p
     à la gauloise 414, 422
     glazed onions 414
     Godard 414
     Gorenflot 414
     Gouffé 414
     gratin (of potatoes):
       dauphinois 414
       à la savoyarde 414
     Henry IV 414
     à la hongroise 414
     à l'impériale 501
     à la jardinière 414, 517–18
     Jessica 415
     Joinville 415
     julienne 415
     à la languedocienne 415, 548
     Limousine, à la 554
     à la lorraine 415
     à la lyonnaise 415
     macédoine 415
     Maillot 415
     à la maraîchère 415
     à la maréchale 415, 574
     à la Marigny 415
     à la marinière 415
     Marivaux 415
     à la marocaine 415
     à la mascotte 415, 579
     Masséna, à la 415, 579
     Massenet 415
     matelote 45
     matignon 415, 580
     Melba 416
     Mentonnaise, à la 416, 585
     Mikado 416
     milanaise à la 416, 589
     mirabeau, à la 416, 592

- à la mode 411
- à la moderne 416
- Monaco 595
- Mont-Bry 416
- Montpensier 416
- Nanette 416
- à la Nantua 416, 621
- Nichette 416
- à la niçoise 416
- Ninon 416
- à la nivernaise 416, 623
- à la normande 416
- à l'orientale 416
- à la paloise 416
- à la parisienne 416, 665
- Parmesan
- Génoise 416–17
- pasta and cereals 417
- à la paysanne 676
- à la périgourdine 685
- à la persane 417
- à la piémontaise 417, 696
- Porte-Maillet 415
- à la portugaise 417
- à la poulette 731
- Prince Albert 417
- à la princesse 417, 738
- printanier 417
- à la printanière 738
- à la provençale 417
- quenelles 417
- Rachel 417
- ravioli 417
- régence 417, 417p
- Réjane 417
- à la renaissance 417, 765
- à la Richelieu 417, 776
- à la romaine 418
- Romanov 418
- Rossini 418
- royale 418, 782
  - of asparagus tips 418
  - of carrots, called à la Crécy 418
  - of celery 418
  - of chicken purée 418
  - of game purée 418
  - of fresh pea purée 418
  - plain 418
  - of tomato purée 418
- Sagan 418
- Saint-Germain 418
- Saint-Saens 418
- à la sarde 418
- à la sarrasine 418
- sauerkraut 418
- semolina gnocchi 418
- Serge 418
- simple 409
- spun eggs 418
- à la strasbourgeoise 418–19
- à la sultane 419, 908
- tomatoes 419
- tortue 419
- à la toscane 419
- à la toulousaine (à la Toulouse) 419
- à la trouvillaise 419
- truffles 419, 938
- à la tyrolienne 419, 419p
- à la valenciennes 419
- à la Valois 419
- au vert-pré 419, 967
- Victoria 419
- à la viennoise 419
- Vladimir 419
- garum 419
- elixir 359
- Gascony 419–20
- gastronomic map 420p
- gastronome 420
- gastronomic associations 420–1
- gastronomic calendar 421
- gastronomic customs 421–2
- gâteaux: Breton 148
- centre-pieces 176p
- Christmas, with cinnamon 506p
- ice 495
- Parisian 665
- Pithiviers 704
- rice: with caramel 775
- with meringue 775
- Saint-Honoré 178p
- gaudes 422
- Franche-Comté 422
- gauloise, à la 414, 422
- Gauls: banquets 78
- cooking 266
- eating habits 267
- gayettes 422
- gazelle 422, 422p
- gazelle, blue 129
- gazpacho 422
- geans cherries 422
- gebie 422
- Gehirnwürste 830
- gelatine 422
- gelatine, leaf 422
- gelose 422
- gendarme 422
- Genista 422
- Genoa biscuits 125
- Genoa cake 178
- Genoese batter 319
- Genoese cake 422–3
  - apricot 423
  - with chocolate filling 423, 423p
  - with filling à la normande 423
  - with mocha cream 423
- Gentian 423
- tisane 927
- Geophagist 423
- georgette 423
- Gérard, à la 393
- Germany: cookery 505–7
- germon 423, 423p
- gherkin 423, 464
  - fresh salt, à la russe 424
  - in vinegar 423–4
- gibassier 710
- giblets 225, 424, 424p
  - à l'anglaise 424
  - bonne femme 424
  - à la bourgeoise 424–5
  - à la bourguignonne 425
  - chasseur 425
  - with chipolata sausages 425
  - consommé with 871
  - corn en suso with 275–6
  - à l'écossaise 425
  - à la fermière 425
  - fricassée 425
  - fried in batter 425
  - ragoût 425
  - stuffed, consommé with 871
  - with turnips 425
- gigot, manche de 425
- gilding 315
- gimlet 426
- Gin 426
- ginger 426, 426p
  - beer 118
  - biscuits 125–6
  - sugar 908
  - wine 124
- giraffe 426
- giraumon 426
- girdle 426
- girella 426, 426p
- gizzard 426
- glacage 426
- glace de viande 426
- glass and glasses 426–7, 426p, 427p
- glazes 427
- glucometer 427
- glucose 427
- gluten 427
- glycerine 427
- gnocchi 427, 427p
  - au gratin 427–8
  - potato 428
  - à la romaine 428
  - semolina 418
- goat 428, 428p
- Goat's Beard 428
- goblet 428
- goblet service 428
- goby 428
- godiveau 428
  - with chives 428
- godwit 428
- goéland 428
- gogues 429
- gold 429
- Good King Henry 429
- goose 429, 429p
  - à l'alsacienne 429
  - à l'anglaise 430
  - ballottine 430
  - à la bourguignonne 430
  - braised, with various garnishes 430
  - à la chipolata 430
  - civet of 430
  - confit d'oie 430
  - Basque 430
  - à la béarnaise 430
  - with green cabbage 430
  - with kidney beans 430
  - à la landaise 430
  - with lentils 430
  - with peas 430
  - à la périgourdine 430–1
  - à la sarladaise 430–1
  - en daube Capitole 431
  - à la flamande 431
  - frittons or grattons 431
  - galantine 430
  - à la mode (à l'instar) de Visé 431, 504
  - paté 431
  - preserved 262
  - ragoût 431
  - à la bonne femme 431
  - smoked 464
  - breast 431
  - stuffed necks 431
  - tongues 431
- gooseberries 431
- sauce 812
- syrup 912
- tart à l'allemande 917–18

Gorenflot 431
 goudale 431
 Gouffé, Jules 431–2
 gougère 432
 gougnettes 432
 goulash 109–10, 110p, 432
 gourds 180, 432–3, 432p
   purée 747
 gourilos 360, 433
   in butter 433
   in cream 433
   in gravy or sauces 433
   à la grecque 433
   grilled 433
 gourmand, gourmandise 28, 433 gourmet 433 grain 433
 gramolates 494
 Grand Café 768
 Grande-Chartreuse 556 grande maître 433
 granités 433, 494
 grapefruit 434, 434p
   iced 496
 grapes 433–4, 434p dried 434
   jelly 434
   paste jelly 519
 Grappa 434 grasshopper 434 grass snake 434
 grater 434
 gratin 296, 434
   languedocien 435 grattons 435
 gravenche 435
 Graves 435 gravy: brown 809 from roast 298
   veal, thickened 900 grayling 435, 435p grecque, à la 435
 Greece: banquets 77, 77p
   cookery 266, 504
 greengages, see plums greenhouse 435
 Grenache 435 grenadier 435
 grenadins, see veal,
   grenadins
 grésiller 436
 griddle 426 grignon 436
 grill (gridiron) 436, 436p double, for small fish
   87p grilling 296, 436
 grilse 436
 Grimod de la Reynière
   436–7, 437p

grissini 437
 grog 437
 Grossetête 768 groundnut: oil 647
 grouse 437
   marinated 437
 gruel: sweetened cream of oats 628
 Grützwürste 830 gryphaea 437
 guava 437
 gudgeon 437 en manchon 437
 guignette 437
 guinea fowl 437, 439,
   439p à l'antillaise 782
   ballottines 74
   à la languedocienne
   438p
   pie 694
 guinea pig 439
 Guinguette 439 gull 439 gum 439
   syrup 913
 gum arabic 439
   syrup 439
 gumbo soup 885 gum dragon 932
 gurnet 439
 Guyenne 439–40
   gastronomic map 440p
 gymnète 440

H

haddock 441
   baked à l'irlandaise
   441, 441p
   smoked 441, 441p
   curried 441
   grilled 441
   with paprika 441
   poached 441
 haggis 441–2 hake 442

halbran 442 halcyon 442
 halibut 442, 442p
 Halles, Les 499p
 ham 442, 442p, 464
   à l'alsacienne 445
   American (preserved) 443 à la bayonnaise 445
   braising 443, 445
   pan for 443p Burgundian, with parsley 445
   canapés 472
   in Chambertin 445
   cold 445
   à la crème 445
   en croûte 445
   Czechoslovakian 443
   English 443
   fondants à la Yorkaise 478 foreleg 389–90
   German 443
   glacé Reine Pédauque
   445, 445p
   glazed 443, 444p
   Hungarian 443
   Italian 443
 jambon de Prague sous le cendre 517
   with lettuce, chicory and endives 445 à la maillot 445–6 mousse 445, 445p
   omelette 353
   Hungarian 353
   in pastry 446, 446p
   pie 446, 695
   poached 443
   Prague: in pastry à l'ancienne 446, 446p
   salpicon 801
   salted and smoked 443
   with sauerkraut 446
   soufflé 864
   à la strasbourgeoise
   864 Spanish 443 with spinach 446 turnover with foie gras and truffles 446 and veal pie 695
   York 443, 443p, 1003
   à la financière 447
 hamburger steak 447
   à la berlinoise 447
   game 447
   poultry 447
 hammerhead shark 447
 Hardy (Café) 768

hare 447
   à l'allemande 447
   ballottine 447
   à la périgourdine 447 civet 447–8
   au chaudron 448
   à la flamande 448
   à la lyonnaise 448
 cutlets 448
 filets 448
   en chaud-froid 448
   in cream 448
   sautéed with truffles 448 pâté 448
 pie 692
 potted 448
 roast legs 448–9
 saddle 449
   à l'allemande 449
   au chambertin 449
   roast 449
 soufflé 449
 soup 885
 stuffed à la
   périgourdine 449
   en cabassal (chabessal) 449
   stuffed à la royale 449 Harlequin 46
 hash 449–50
   beef 110
   boiled 450
   with herbs 450
   à la hongroise 450
   à l'italienne 450
   à la languedocienne 450
   à la lyonnaise 450 with mashed potatoes 450
   à la Parmentier 450
   with poached eggs 450
   à la polonaise 450
   à la portugaise 450
   with potatoes 450
   roast 450
 chicken 225
   curried beef 450
 fish 450
 game 450
 lobster 450
 mutton or lamb 450, 614
 pork 450, 716
 poultry 450–1
 roebuck 779
 shellfish 450
 sweetbread 451

veal 451
 à l'allemande 451
 à la béchamel 451
 with cream sauce 451
 à la Mornay 451
 hasty-pudding 722 hâtercau 451
 hattelle (hâttelette) 451
 haunch 451
 Haut-Brion 451
 hawfinch 451
 hawksbill turtle 451 hay box 451
 hazel grouse 451, 451p
 à l'allemande 451
 casserole à la polonaise 451
 chaud-froid 451
 à la crème 451–2
 grilled 452
 à la hongroise 452
 loaf 452
 mousse 452
 pâté 452
 potted 452
 roast 452
 salmi 452
 suprêmes 452
 hazelnuts (filberts) 452
 bâtonnets 88
 butter 168
 caramels 183–4
 ice-cream 492, 493p
 macaroons 568
 pavé 676
 soufflé 866
 hearth-cake 452
 Hebrews: banquets 77 hedgehog 452
 Helder (Café du) 768 helvelle 452
 hemione 452
 hemlock 452
 Henry IV (garnish) 414 herb-bennet 452 herb-ivy 452
 herbs 452–3 bouillon 140
 broth 453
 Chivry butter 168
 fines herbes 375
 sauce 811, 820
 juice 521
 Montpellier butter 169
 omelette: à la Bercy 352
 aux fines herbes 353
 pot herbs 453
 sauce 812
 turtle 453

hermetical sealing 453 hermit crab 453, 453p
 herrings 453, 453p
 à la boulangère 453–4
 butter 168
 canapés 461
 à la hollandaise 461–2
 devilled grilled 453 fillets à l'anglaise 453
 fried 453
 fritters 479
 grilled 453
 as hors d'oeuvre 464
 à la livonienne 464
 marinade 454
 marinated 464
 à la meunière 454
 pickled: forcemeat 389
 à la portugaise 465
 purée 745
 rollmops 467, 467p, 780
 salt 454
 salted, fillets of 464 sautéed à la lyonnaise 454
 smoked 454
 fillets 464
 Irish 454
 à la russe 465
 soft roes 454
 in white wine 454
 hippocras 123, 455
 angelica 123
 juniper 123
 raspberry 123
 with spices 123
 hippopotamus 455
 hoaxes 455–6
 hocco 456, 456p hog-fish 456
 hog's fat 456
 hog's head cheese 456
 Holland: cookery 505
 holly 456 hollyhocks 456 honey 456–7
 water 123 honeycomb 771
 hongroise, à la 414, 457 hops 457, 457p
 drink 123
 shoots 457 croustades à l'anversoise 475
 omelette 353
 horn 457
 hors d'oeuvre 457, 465p
 cold 457–69
 hot 469–88

presentation 457 horse butchery 488–9 horse chestnut 489 horse mackerel 829 horse parsley 489
 horseradish 489
 Albert sauce 489
 butter 168
 canapés à l'anglaise 489
 grated 489
 sauce 489, 820, 825 Hospice de Beaune 489 hosts 22–3 hotch-potch 489 hothouse 435
 huckleberry 981 accompaniment to cold meats 981
 compote 981
 jam 981
 jelly 981
 kissel 981
 Hungary: cookery 504
 husk 489
 hydromel 123, 489
 hydrometer 489
 Hypericum 785 hyssop 489

I

ibex 490
 ice 490
 ice creams and ices 490–1
 Algerian bombe 493
 almond ice cream 492 American bombe 493
 apricot coupe 494
 apricot ice 492
 banana ice 492
 bombe Aida 493
 bombe Alhambra 493
 bombe Bourdaloue 493
 bombe cardinal 493

bombe Chateaubriand 493
 bombe dame-blanche 494
 bombe dauphinoise 494
 bombe diplomate 494
 bombe Doria 494
 bombe duchesse 494
 bombe Francillon 494
 bombe Gismonda 494
 bombe Grimaldi 494
 bombe Héricart 494
 bombe ices 493–4
 bombe impératrice 494
 bombe Médicis 494
 bombe Monselet 494
 bombe Montmorency 494
 bombe (mousse) mixture 492
 bombe Nesselrode 494
 bombe succès 494
 bombe tutti-frutti 494
 bombe véronique 494
 charlotte 202
 cherry: coupe 494
 ice 217, 492
 chestnut plombières ice cream 493 chocolate ice cream 492 coffee ice cream 492, 492p coupe Crapotte 494 coupe Jacques 494 fruit ices 399, 491
 plain, with syrup base 492 hazelnut ice cream 492, 493p ice cream mixture 491–2 ice cream without eggs 493 ice creams, plain 492–3 ice gâteau 495
 iced coupes 494, 494p
 iced desserts or sweets 495–8 iced Marquises 494–5 iced mousses and mousselines 495
 iced parfaits 495
 iced puddings 495
 iced pudding capucine 495
 iced soufflés 495
 ices flavoured with liqueurs and essences 491

- lemon ice 492
  - melon ice 492
  - moulds 491p
  - Neapolitan ice cream 495
    - Comtesse-Maria 495
  - Neapolitan slices 622
  - Nelusko ice cream 494
  - orange ice 492, 653
  - peach: coupe 494
    - ice 492
  - pear ice 492
  - pineapple ice cream 700
  - pistachio ice cream 492–3
  - plombières ice cream 493
  - plum ice 492
  - praline ice cream 493
  - preparation 490–1
  - presentation 491
  - raspberry ice 492
  - redcurrant ice 492
  - strawberry ice 492
  - sundaes 494
  - tangerine ice 492
  - tea ice cream 493
  - vanilla ice cream 493
  - walnut ice cream 493
  - water ices 494
  - ichthyophagy 498
  - icing 498
    - blackcurrant 498
    - chocolate 498
    - coffee 498
    - Condé mixture 594
    - flavoured with rum and other liqueurs 498
    - fondant 498
    - lemon 498
    - orange 498
    - royal 498
    - strawberry fondant 498
  - ierchi 498
  - iguana 498, 498p
  - Ile-de-France 498–500
    - gastronomic map 500p
  - impératrice, à l' 501
  - impériale, à l' 501
  - Indian corn, see sweetcorn
  - Indian spinach 86
  - insects, edible 501
  - interlarding 296–7, 296p
  - international cookery 501–12
  - intoxication 512
  - Irish stew 512
  - iron 512
  - irrorateur 512
  - isinglass 512
  - italienne, à l' 514
  - Italy: cookery 507–8
  - ivoire, à l' 514
  - ivrogne de mer 514
  - izard 517
- J
- jalousies 515
  - jambe de bois soup 517
  - jambon, see ham
  - jams 515
    - apricot 516
    - cherry 217, 516
    - chestnut 218
    - huckleberry 981
    - lemon 551
    - making 515–16
    - melon 516, 584
    - omelette 357
      - with fruit 357
    - orange 516
    - pannequets 664
    - peach 516
    - persimmon 686
    - pineapple 516
    - plum 516, 708
    - pumpkin 745
    - raspberry 516–17
    - rhubarb 517, 772
    - strawberry 517
    - strawberry tomato 903
    - tomato 517
    - watermelon 517
    - whortleberry 981
  - Japan: cookery 508
  - Japanese medlar 565
  - japonaise, à la 517
  - jardinière, à la 414, 517–18
  - jasmine 518
    - pastilles 670
  - jay 518
  - jellies 518
    - apple 517
  - bean 519
  - cherry 517
  - chicken: stock for 518
  - chopped 518
  - clarifying and enriching 296, 518
  - cranberry 283
  - currant 517
  - dessert 519
  - fish: stock for 518
    - stock with red wine 518
  - fruit: fritters 397
  - fruit preserves 515
  - game: stock for 518
  - grape 434
  - huckleberry 981
  - juicy fruits 519
  - meat 518
    - stock for 518
  - Muscovite 519
  - orange (dessert) 653
  - orange (preserve) 517, 653
  - paste 519–20
    - apple 519
    - apricot 519
    - cherry 519
    - flowers 520
    - grape 519
    - greengage 519
    - Mirabelle 519–20
    - peach 520
    - pear 520
    - quince 520
    - raspberry 520
    - strawberry 520
    - violet 520
  - quince 517, 755
  - red fruit 519
  - Russian 519
  - salep 792
  - set pieces 518
  - stone fruit 519
  - Swedish fruit 519
  - triangles 518
  - vegetable 518–19
  - verjuice 967
  - white: stock for 518
  - whortleberry 981
  - wine 519
  - jerboa 520
  - Jerusalem artichoke 520
    - à l'anglaise 520
    - in butter 520
    - à la crème 520
    - fried 520
    - fritters 395
    - purée 520, 747
    - salad 520
    - salpicon 801
  - soufflé 520, 864
  - soup: cream of 874
    - purée of 876
  - jesse 520
  - jésuite 520
  - John Dory 520, 521
    - fillets Pierre Chapelle 520–1
  - Judas-tree 521
  - juices 521
    - herb 521
    - lemon 521
    - meat 521, 582
    - orange 521
    - pineapple 521
    - red fruit 521
  - jujube 521, 521p
  - julienne 415, 521, 522p
  - juniper berries 521, 522p
    - hippocras 123
    - liqueur 556
    - wine 124, 521
  - Jupiter's beard 522
  - Jurançon 522
- K
- kaltschale 523
    - with strawberry purée 523
  - kanaroor 523
    - sautéed fillets 950
  - kasha 523
    - croûtons 523
    - with mushrooms 523
    - with Parmesan 523
    - Polish 523
    - semolina 523
  - kebab 523–4
    - dagh 303
    - galette 524
    - keftes- 524
    - Tchevir me 524
  - kedgerie: turbot 942
  - kefir 123, 524
  - keftes-kebabs 524
  - ketchup 195, 524

INDEX

mushroom 524, 603
 tomato 524, 928
 walnut 974
 ketmie 524 khlodnik 524 kid 524 kidneys 524
   calves' 642
     à la Bercy 642
     à la bordelaise 642
   casserole 642-3
   grilled 643
   à la liégeoise 643
   omelette 353
   with pilaf 643
   sautéed 643
   on skewers 643
   cocks' 473, 524
   as garnish 412
 lambs': à l'anglaise 633 Carvalho 633
   au gratin 633
   omelette 353
   pilaf 700, 841
   on skewers 633
   Turbigo 633
   au vert-pré 634
 omelette 353
 ox 629
 sautéed with Madeira 524 sheep's or lambs': pilaf 841 on skewer 525p, 634p kilkis 459, 525
 kimali burek 525
 kingfish 525 kingfisher 442
 kippers 525 Kirsch 525
 kisel 525 kissing crust 525 kitchen equipment 525-30, 526p, 527p, 528p, 529p kitchens 267p, 269p, 271p, 272p, 273p kitchen team (staff) 530 Knackwürste 830
 kneading of dough 530 knee-holly 456 knife-rest 531 knives 530p, 530-1, 531p
 Knoblauchwürste 830
 Kochwürstel 830
 kohlrabi 531
   à la paysanne 531
 Königswürste 830
 koumiss 531
 kromeskie (kromesquies) 289, 480

à l'ancienne 480
 à la bonne femme 480
 à la carmélite 480
 chicken 226
 egg 347
   à la polonaise 347
 à la florentine 480
 foie gras 381
 à la française 480
 lobster 563
 à la mirepoix 480
 mixtures for 593
 à la polonaise 480
 à la russe 480
 Saint-Hubert 480
 spiny lobster 893
 with various vegetables 480
   à la Vladimir 480
 Kugelhopf (Kougloff) 20p, 531p, 532
 kulich 178-9, 532, 532p Kummel 532
 kumquat 532
 Kvass 532

L labrus 533

 lache 533 lactary 533
 lactic acid 533
 lactic ferments 533
 lactometer 533
 ladies' fingers, see okra ladle 533
 lady's smock 184
 lagopus 533
 Laguipière 533
 laitiat 533
 lamb 533-4
   baby lamb stuffed with rice 535 ballottine: à la boulangère 73 à la bougeoise 73
   braised: à la bonne

femme 73
 cold, with various garnishes 73
 in jelly 73, 73p
 baron 535, 535p
 blanquette 536
   à l'ancienne 536 brains, see brains
 breast 536
   à l'anglaise 536
   in breadcrumbs with various garnishes 536
   à la diable 536
   épigrammes 536
   fried in batter 536
   stuffed 536
 chops 536
   à l'ancienne 536
   à l'anglaise 536-7
   in aspic jelly 537
   bar-man 537 in breadcrumbs, garnished 537
   Brossard 537
   Champvallon 537
   chaud-froid 537, 537p
   Conti 537
   in crépinettes 537
   Dubarry 537
   à la financière 537
   à la française 537
   with garnish 537-8
   grilled 537p-538
   à l'italienne 538
   Maintenon 538
   à la maréchale 538
   à la mexicaine 538
   minute 538
   Montrouge 538
   en papillotes 538
   à la parisienne 538
   Paul Mounet 538
   Périnette 538
   à la portugaise 538
   princesse 538
   à la romaine 538
   Rossini 538
   à la rouennaise 538
   à la sarladaise 538-9
   soubise 539
   Talleyrand 539
   à la Toulouse 539
   à la turque 539
   Villeroi 539
 crépinettes 288, 539
   à la périgourdine 539
 curry 539
 cuts 534p double 539

 émincés 359
 épigrammes 361
 filets mignons 539
 fillets 539
 grilled shoulder of baby lamb 535
 hash 450
 head: à l'écoissaise 539 stuffed à l'anglaise 539
 kidneys, see kidneys leg 539
   à l'anglaise 539
   of baby lamb in pastry à la périgourdine 534-5
   à la bonne femme 539
   à la bordelaise 539-40
   à la boulangère 540
   braised, with various garnishes 540
   en chevreuil 540
   parslied 540, 540p pot-roasted, with various garnishes 540
   roast 540
 liver, see liver loin 540
   of baby lamb à la Clamart 535 of baby lamb, fried à la viennoise 535 of baby lamb maharajah 535 of baby lamb à la périgourdine 535 of baby lamb La Varenne 535
   à la Beauharnais 540-1
   à la bonne femme 541
   à la bordelaise 541
   in a cocotte à la maraîchère 541
   grilled 541
   à la languedocienne 541
   à la niçoise 541
   with noodles 541
   Parmentier 541
   pot-roasted, with garnishes 541 minced 541
 moussaka 541
 noisettes (medallions, mignonnettes) 541

- à l'algérienne 541
 Armenonville 541
 Béatrix 541
 Beauharnais 542
 Carignan 542
 chasseur 542
 Cussy 542
 Duroc 542 garnished with vegetables 542
 à l'italienne 542
 Melba 542
 Montpensier 542
 Nichette 542
 à la niçoise 542
 Rivoli 542
 Saint-Germain 542
 sautée 541
 à la turque 542
 à la Valenciennes 542
 offal 628, 633–6
 pascaline 542–3
 à la royale 543
 paupiettes à la créole 675 pie: à la languedocienne 543
 à la périgourdine 693
 pilaf 543
 pluck 707
 à l'anglaise 634 quarter 535
 ragoût: à l'anglaise 543
 à la bonne femme 543
 roast baby lamb 535
 saddle 543
 sautée 543
 à l'ancienne 543
 with artichokes 543
 with aubergines 543
 with cèpes, morels, St George's agaric 543
 chasseur 543
 à la crème 543
 aux fines herbes 543
 à l'indienne 543
 à l'italienne 543
 à la minute 544
 with mushrooms 544
 with paprika (à la hongroise) 544
 Parmentier 544
 à la printanière 544
 with tomatoes 544
 shoulder 544
 à l'albigeoise 544
 à la boulangère 544
 braised, with various garnishes 544
 à la catalane (with pistachio nuts) 544 à la gasconne 544
 roast 544
 rolled 544
 on skewers 544, 545p
 sliced 544
 sweetbreads, see sweetbreads
 timbale à l'ancienne 545
 tongue, see tongue
 vol-au-vent with truffles and mushrooms 545
 lamballe 545
 lamprey 329, 545
 à la bordelaise 545–6
 pie à la bordelaise 692
 lampsana 546
 langue-de-chat 546 Languedoc 546–8
 gastronomic map 547p
 languedocienne, à la 415
 548 Lapérouse 768 lapwings 548
 eggs 464
 lard 548
 larding 548
 larding needles 548, 548p, 622 lardoons 548
 larks 548–9
 à la bonne femme 549 in breadcrust 549
 en caisses 549
 chartreuses à la française 206
 à la minute 549
 pâté 549
 en pantin 673
 Pithiviers 673
 pie 692–3
 à la piémontaise 549
 pilaf 549
 with risotto 549
 larks, tufted 940
 Larue 768
 lasagne 549 latex 549 lavaret 549 Laveur 768 leaf 549 leaven 550
 Leberknödeln 886
 Leber-suppe 886
 lecithin 550
 Leckerli 550, 550p
 Leda (restaurant) 768
 leeks 550, 550p
 à la béchamel 550
 boiled 550
 braised 550
 à la crème 550 deep-fried 550
 flamiche 377
 flan: à la bourguignonne 377–8
 with cheese 378
 fondue 385
 au gratin 550
 à la grecque 465, 550–1 with melted butter or other sauces 550
 Mornay 551
 potage bonne-femme 880
 soup: cream of 874, 874p soup à la bonne femme 882
 à la vinaigrette 551
 left-overs 551
 legumin 551 lemonade 552
 fizzy 123, 552 with pomegranate juice 123 lemon peel: preserved 551
 sugar 908
 lemons 551, 551p
 achar 2
 biscuits 126
 butter 168
 custard 551
 essence 551 for garnishing 551p
 ice 492
 icing 498
 jam 551
 juice 521
 liqueur 556
 manqué 551
 soufflé 866
 soufflé pudding 742
 syrup 551
 zest 551
 lemon sole 552, 552p Lent 552
 anecdotes 552–3 cookery 370
 lentils 553
 purée 747 soup: purée à la Conti 876
 purée Conti à la brunoise 876 purée Conti à la julienne 876 lentisk 553 lepidosteus 553 lepiota 553
 lesser celandine 553
 lettuce 553
 with bone-marrow 553
 braised: in meat stock 553
 vegetarian 553
 brèdes 148
 in browned butter 553
 chiffonnade: in butter 239, 553
 for cold dishes 553
 with cream 239–40, 553–4
 mixed 240
 Colbert 554
 creamed 554
 deep-fried 554
 au gratin 554
 in gravy 554
 à la hollandaise 554
 à l'italienne 554
 loaves 559
 omelette: Choisy 352
 à la verdurière 355
 purée 554, 747
 soufflé 554, 864
 soup: cream of 874
 purée of 876
 velouté 879
 stuffed 554 stumps 554 liaison: arrowroot 47 liègeoise, à la 554
 lighten 554 lights 554 limandelle 554 lime 554 and elder cordial 123
 limonadiers 554 Limousin 573
 gastronomic map 574p
 Limousine, à la 554
 Limoux, Blanquette de 554
 ling 554
 linnet 554
 Linzertorte 918, 918p lion 555
 liqueur cellar 198
 liqueurs 555
 acacia 555
 angelica 555
 anise (anisette) 555
 apricot 555
 blackcurrant 555
 carnation 555

- cherry 555
- cherry stones 555
- citron 556
- coffee 556
- Curaçao 556
- Dantzig 556
- fennel 556
- juniper 556
- lemon 556
- omelette flambée 257
- orange 556
- orange blossom 556
- peach and apricot stones 556
- peppermint 556
- quince 556
- raspberry 556
- tangerine 556
- vanilla 556
- verbena 556
- violet 556
- walnut 556
  - à la carmélite 557
- liqueur (dessert) wines 557
- liquorice 557
  - and orange water 123
- litchi (lichee) 557
- little bustard 557
- liver 557
  - balls 24
  - burbot 160
- calf's: à l'anglaise 643
  - Bercy 643
  - à la bordelaise 643
  - à la bourgeoise 643
  - à la bourguignonne 643
  - à la créole 643
  - à l'espagnole 643
  - force meat à gratin 386-7
  - à l'italienne 643
  - à la lyonnaise 643
  - with pilaf 643
  - à la provençale 643
  - purée 746
  - roast 643
  - on skewers 643-4
  - soufflé 644, 863
- chanfaina 202
- chicken 226, 647
  - attereaux à la duxelles 470
  - attereaux à la mirepoix 60
- flan Chavette 378
- force meat à gratin for canapés and croûtons 387
- fritters 395
- omelette 352
- pilaf 699
- salpicon 800
  - on skewers à l'indienne 647
- soufflé 863
- cocktail 23-4
- cream 24
- duck 647
  - omelette à la rouennaise 354
- game: force meat à gratin 387
- goose 431
  - subrics 486
- au gratin 24
- guinea fowl 439
- Hungarian soup with liver dumplings 886
- lamb's 540
  - chanfaina 202
- ox 110, 629
- pig's 637
  - chanfaina 202
  - gayettes 637
  - with mustard 717
  - sausage 721
- pigeon 425
- poultry: fondants with 478
  - force meat à gratin 387
  - subrics 486
- sheep's 841
- soup, purée of 886
- turkey 425, 944
- vinaigrette, raw 24
- livestock 557
- Livre d'Or 557, 557p
- llama 557
- loach 557-8
- loaves 558
  - almond 17
  - brains, à l'ancienne 639
  - cauliflower 559
  - chicken 226-7
  - endive 360
  - fish 558-9
  - foie gras 382, 559
  - jellied 382, 559, 559p
  - fruit 178
  - game 559
  - hazel grouse 452
  - lettuce 559
  - pike 558
  - potato 727
  - shellfish 559
  - spinach à la romaine 559-60
  - tomato 928
- veal 961
- vegetables 965
- lobster 465, 560-1, 560p
  - à l'américaine 561-2
  - aspic 56p, 58, 562
  - attereaux 470
  - barquettes à l'américaine 471
  - bisque 876
  - boiled 562
  - à la bordelaise 562
  - Brillat-Savarin 562
  - butter 169
  - canapés 462
  - cardinal 562
  - cassolettes 473
  - en chemise 562
  - cold, with various sauces 564
  - in cream 562-3
  - croquettes 474, 563
  - cutting up 561p
  - à la franco-américaine 563
  - grilled 563
  - hash 450
  - Henri Duvernois 563
  - kromeskiés 563
  - à la marinière 563
  - mayonnaise 580-1
  - Mornay 563
    - in scallop shells 563
  - mousse, cold 563
  - mousselines, cold 563
  - à la nage 563-4, 563p
  - Newburg 564
  - omelette 353
    - Diplomat 352
  - à la parisienne 564
  - patties 483
    - à l'américaine 483
  - pilaf 564
  - ragoût à la cardinal 759
  - risotto 564
  - à la russe 564
  - salad 790
  - salpicon 800, 801
  - sauce 820
  - scallop shells of 485, 564
    - à la parisienne 564
    - vert-pré 564
  - soufflé 564, 864
    - à l'américaine 486
  - soup: cream of 874
    - purée of 876
    - velouté 879
  - on the spit 564
  - thermidor 564-5
  - Victoria sauce 823
- locust 565
- longe 565
- lonzo 565
- loon 314
- loquat 565
- Lords and Ladies 565, 981
- Lorraine 565-6
  - gastronomic map 565p
- lorraine, à la 415
- lotus, Egyptian 358, 566
- lovage 566
- love feast 4
- Lucas 768
- lupin 566
- lute 566
- Lyonnais 566
  - gastronomic 566p
- lyonnaise, à la 415
- lyophilisation 566

M

- macaroni 567, 567p
  - à l'anglaise 567
  - à la béchamel 567
  - with butter 567
- cooking 567
- with cream 567
- à la créole 567
- croquettes 567
  - valentinoise 474
- à la fermière 567
- au gratin 567-8, 567p
- à l'italienne 568
- à la Lucullus 568
- à la milanaise 568
- à la mirepoix 568
- à la Nantua 568
- à la napolitaine 568
- à la piémontaise 568
- pudding 742
- with seafood 568
- à la sicilienne 568
- in stock 568
- timbale: à l'américaine 926

- à la milanaise 926
- with tomato sauce 568
- with truffles 568
- macarons 568
- crisp 568
- hazelnut 568
- Montmorillon 568
- Niort 568
- à la parisienne 568
- plain 568
- soft 568–9
- mace 569
- macédoine 415, 569
- mackerel 569
- à l'anglaise 569
- à la boulonnaise 569
- with browned butter 569
- Colbert 569
- in court-bouillon 569
- filleting 570p
- fillets: with aubergines 569
- à la dieppoise 569
- à la florentine 569
- au gratin 569
- à la lyonnaise 569
- à la piémontaise 569–70
- with various garnishes 569
- à la vénitienne 570
- in white wine 570
- fried 570
- grilled 570
- marinated 465, 509p
- à la meunière 570
- soused 570
- mâconnaise 570
- mâconnaise, à la 570
- madder-wort 570
- Madeira cake 570
- Madeira wine 570
- madeleines 570–1, 571p
- Commercy 571
- plain 571
- madrilène, à la 571
- magistères 571
- Magny 768
- magpie 571
- maia 571
- maids of honour 179
- maigre 571–2
- Maillot 415
- Maintenon à la 393
- Maintenon mixture 593
- Maire 768
- maison 572
- Maison Dorée 768
- Maison du Roi 572
- Maitrank 572
- Maître d'Hotel 572
- maize. See also sweetcorn
- porridge 722
- malic acid 572
- mallow 572
- Malmsey wine 572
- malt 572
- beer 118
- extract 572
- manatee 836
- manchon 573
- mandarins: soufflé 866
- mange-tout 573
- mango 573
- mangosteen 573
- manier 573
- manque 573
- maple 573
- maraichère, à la 415, 573
- Maraschino 573, 1005
- marc 573
- marcassin, see wild boar
- Marche 573
- gastronomic map 574p
- maréchale, à la 415, 574
- marée 574
- Marengo 393, 574–5
- Marennes 575
- mares-tails 575
- margarine 575
- Marguery 768–9, 769p
- marignan 575
- Marigny, à la 415
- marigold 575
- marinades 575
- marinière, à la 415, 575
- Marivaux 415
- marjoram 575
- marmalades 575
- apple 575–6
- apricot 576
- fig 576
- melon 576
- orange 576, 653p
- peach 576
- pear 576
- quince 576, 755
- marmite 576–7, 576p, 577p
- marmot 577
- marocaine, à la 415
- marouette 577
- marquer 577
- marrons, see chestnuts
- marrow, bone, see bone-marrow
- marrows, vegetable: courgettes 1005
- courgettes: fritters 395
- omelette 352
- à la créole 512
- flowers: fritters 480
- glazed garnish 512
- à la grecque 513
- à l'indienne 513
- à la mentonnaise 513
- à la mingrélienne 513
- à la niçoise 513–14, 513p
- à la provençale 514
- purée 747
- salad 514
- sautéed 514
- soup, cream of 874
- marshmallow 577
- Martinique 577–8
- marzipan 578
- sweets 579
- iced 578
- plain 578–9
- royal 578
- à la russe 579
- soft 579
- mascotte 579
- mascotte, à la 415, 579
- masillons 579
- Masséna, à la 415, 579
- mastic 579
- mâté 579–80
- infusion vessel 579p
- matefaim 580
- matelote 415, 580
- à la bourguignonne 580
- à la canotière 580
- à la marinière 580
- à la meunière 580
- de meunière 580
- à la normande 580
- matias 580
- matignon 415, 580
- mixture 593
- mayonnaise 580
- chicken 227
- fish 580
- lobster 580–1
- poultry 581
- prawns 581
- salt cod 254
- shellfish 581
- sole (fillets) à l'ancienne with border of jelly 581
- spiny lobster 581
- mazagrans 480, 581
- meadow-sweet 581
- meals 581
- meat 581–2. See also beef, lamb, etc.
- braising 295–6
- cold: fritots 478
- croquettes 474
- in dietetics 582
- extract 364, 582
- fondants 478
- freezing 734
- freshness 581
- fritters 395, 479
- garnishes 409
- glaze 582
- interlarding 296–7, 296p
- jelly: stock for 518
- juice 521, 582
- left-overs: scallop shells of 485
- pâtés, small 481
- pies 693–4
- pulp 582
- purées 746
- quality 581–2
- quenelles 754
- salpicon 801
- sauté of 831
- scallop shells of 485
- soufflé 864
- stock, light brown 899–900
- suc of 905
- meatballs 582
- à la viennoise 582
- meat cleaver 582
- Mecca cakes 179
- méchoui 582–3
- médallions 480
- medallions 583
- medlars 583, 583p
- Mehlsuppe 888
- Melba 393
- mélilot 583
- Melissa 583, 583p
- cordial 583
- tisane 927
- melon de Malabar 584
- melons 465, 583–4, 584p
- chilled with Frontignan wine 584
- chilled en surprise (à la parisienne) 584, 584p
- crystallised 584
- frappé 496–7
- fresh 584
- ice 492
- iced 496, 584
- filled à la Chantilly 496
- jam 516, 584
- Jerusalem 520
- marmalade 576
- pickled in vinegar 584
- preserved, small 465
- mendiants 585
- mentonnaise, à la 416, 585

- menus 585–7
  - Méot 769
  - Mère Goutte 587
  - Mère Sagnet 769
  - merga 587
  - meringues 587
    - border, with Chantilly cream 587–8
    - Chantilly 587p
    - croquembouche (pyramid) 588
    - crust 588
    - Italian 588
    - en genoise 594
    - mixture 594
    - à Marignan 588
    - mixture 594
    - Swiss 588
  - mérou 588
  - Merovingians: cooking and eating habits 267–8
  - merveille 588
  - Mescal 588
  - mesentery of calf, see calf
  - Mettwürste 830
  - meunière, à la 589
  - Meursault 589
  - microwave oven 589
  - mignonette 589
  - Mignot 589
  - milanaise, à la 416, 589
  - Milanese cake 589
  - milk 588p, 589–90, 589p
    - ass's 841
    - condensed 590
    - dried 590
    - fermented 590
  - milk analysis laboratory 589p
  - milk vetch 58–9, 58p
  - mill 590
  - millas (miliasse) 590
    - cherry 590
    - fried 590
    - with fritters 590
    - with grape jam 590
    - Lot-et-Garonne 590
    - with sugar 590
    - toasted 590
  - Mille Colonnes 769
  - mille-feuilles 590–1, 590p
  - miller's thumb 591
  - millésime 591
  - millet 591
  - milliassous 591
  - mimosa salad 591
  - mincemeat 591
    - American 591
    - English 591
    - fritters 591
    - omelette 591
  - pie 591, 695
    - rissoles 591
    - vol-au-vent 591
  - mincers 591–2, 592p
  - minerals 12
    - loss during cooking 12
  - mineral waters 592
    - bottling plant for 593p
  - minestra 592
  - minestrone 886, 886p
  - minnow 592, 592p
  - mint 592
    - peppermint liqueur 556
    - sauce 592, 825
  - miques de mais 592
  - mirabeau, à la 416, 592
  - mirabelle, see plums
  - mirbane 592
  - mirepoix 592
    - with meat 592
    - mixture for 594
    - vegetable 593
  - mirlitons de Rouen 593
  - mirour, au 593
  - miroton 593
  - missel thrush 593
  - mites 593
  - mixtures 593–4
  - mocha 594
    - cake 594
    - cream 594
    - essence 594
    - ice cream 594
  - mochatine cakes 594
  - mode, à la 595
  - moderne, à la 416
  - molasses 595
  - molluscs 595, 595p
    - ragoût 760
  - Monaco 595
  - Monselet, Charles 595
  - Monselet, à la 595
  - Montmaur, Pierre de 595–6
  - Montmorency, à la 393, 596
  - Montmorency cake 596
  - Montpensier (garnish) 416
  - montpensier (pâtisserie) 596
  - Montrachet 596
  - moose 596
  - moque 596
  - moray 596
  - morels, see mushrooms
  - moringa 597
  - Mornay, à la 597
  - mortadella 465, 597
  - mortar 597
  - moscovites 597
  - fruit 597
  - mossberry, see cranberry
  - mostelle 597
  - mother of vinegar 597
  - moufflon 597
  - moulding 597
  - moussache 597
  - moussaka: lamb 541
    - mutton 615
  - mousseau 598
  - mousselines 598
    - crayfish 284
    - à la Nantua 284
  - foie gras 382
  - iced 495
  - lobster 563
  - partridge 668
  - pigeon 697
  - pike 698
  - Rouen duckling 325
  - tomato, cold 928
- mousses 597
    - apple à la Chantilly 41
    - chocolate 598, 598p
    - crayfish 284
    - à l'ancienne 284
    - Fanchon 465–6
    - fish 376
    - foie gras 382, 597
    - fruit 598
    - ham 445, 445p
    - hazel grouse 452
    - iced 495
    - lobster 563
    - orange iced 653
    - partridge 668
    - pigeon 697
    - quail 751–2
    - Rouen duckling 325
    - shrimp, cold 843
    - sole 860
    - tomato, cold 928
    - whiting 980
  - moutardelle 598
  - Mouton Blanc 769
  - mud-minnow 948, 948p
  - muesli: Dr Bircher-Benner's 722
  - mugwort 598
  - mulberries 466, 598
    - syrup 912
  - mule 598
  - mullet, grey 598
  - mullet, red 598–9
    - à la Bercy 599
    - à la bordelaise 599
    - en caisse 599
    - with fennel 599
  - fillets à l'anglaise 599
  - fried 599
  - au gratin 599
  - grilled 599
  - à l'indienne 599
  - à l'italienne 599
  - à la meunière 599
  - à la moelle 599
  - à la nantaise 599
  - à la niçoise 599
  - à l'orientale 467
  - en papillote 599
  - à la provençale 599
  - with shallots 599
- mulligatawny hotpot 599
  - mulligatawny soup 887
  - musette, en 599
  - mushrooms 466, 600
    - barquettes 602
    - blewits 605
    - butter 169
    - Caesar's 605
    - cèpes 198
      - à la béarnaise 604
      - à la bordelaise 604
      - cooked with cream 604
      - au gratin 604–5
      - à la grecque 605
      - à la hongroise 605
      - with Indian sauce 605
      - à la provençale 605
      - salpicon 800
    - chanterelles 605
    - cooked in butter 602
    - cooked in cream 602, 603p
    - croustades à la Montrouge 476
    - croûtes 293, 476, 602–3
    - cultivated: preparation 602
    - dangerous 600p, 600–1
    - duxelles 328, 603
    - edible 601–2
    - essence 363
    - aux fines herbes 603
    - flan à la Sagan 378
    - fondue 385
    - forcemeat 389, 603
    - freezing 736
    - fritters 395
    - fumet 401, 603
    - garnish 603
    - à la grecque 603
    - grilled 603
    - grilled cèpes 605
    - à la hongroise 603
    - julienne 603
    - ketchup 524, 603
    - à la lyonnaise 603
    - in Madeira (or liqueur wines) 603

- marinated cèpes and 466
 morels 596, 597p, 605
   sauce 821
 omelette 353, 603
   Agnès Sorel 351
   André-Theuriet 352
   with cèpes 352
   à la forestière 353
   with morels 353
   à la crème 353
 patties 603
 poisoning from 602 à la poulette 603–4, 731p powder 604
 preserved 604
 purée 747–8
 ragoût 760
 St George's agaric 785
 salad 604
 salpicon 604, 801
   with Madeira 801
 sauce 812
 smothered or stewed cèpes 605
 soufflés, little 604
 soup: cream of 874
   velouté Pierre-le-Grand 879
 sous cloche 604
 stuffed 604
 tart 604 on toast 604
   vol-au-vent 604
 musk deer 605
 muslin bag 605
 mussels 466, 605–6, 605p allergy to 606
   atteraux à la normande 60
   barquettes 471
   à la bordelaise 606
   in cream 606
   croquettes 291, 474
   croustades à la marinière 475
   curried 606
   farmers' mouclade 607
   fried 606
   fritots 478
   fritters à la duxelles 479
   as garnish 606
   à la hongroise 606
   à la marinière 606, 606p patties 483
   pilaf 699
   poisoning by 606
   à la poulette 607
   purée 746
   ragoût à la marinière 760
   à la ravigote 466
   risotto 607
   salad 466
   salpicon 801
   à la dieppoise 801
   sauce 607
   scallop shells of 485
   soup 607
   à la tartare 466
 mustard 607
   butter 169
   cream dressing 787 and cream sauce 825
   sauce 607, 812, 821
 mustard, leaf (Chinese) 607
 mustèle 607
 mutton 607
   ballotine 73
   baron 85, 607
   breast 607
   grilled 607–8
   in breadcrumbs 608
   stuffed à l'ariégeoise 608
   broth 608, 887
   à la catalane 616
   chops 608–9
   civet 613
   couscous 'chittra' 280
   curried 613
   cutlets 609, 611p
   à l'albigeoise 609
   à l'anglaise 609
   à la bouchère 601
   braised, with various garnishes 610
   à la bretonne 610
   à la bruxelloise 610
   à la cévenole 610
   Champvallon 610–11
   en chaud-froid 611
   chasseur 611
   à la Clamart 611
   en crépinettes à l'ancienne 611
   curried 611
   à la duxelles 611
   à la fermière 611
   grilled 611
   à l'anglaise 611
   in breadcrumbs 611–12
   à la hongroise 612
   à l'italienne 612
   in jelly 611
   Maintenon 612
   minced: in breadcrumbs, sautéed 612 sautéed and garnished 612
   à la niçoise 612
   Parmentier 612
   Pompadour 612
   à la provençale 612
   à la Réforme 612
   à la russe 612
   sautéed: in breadcrumbs 612
   with garnish 612
   Soubise 612
   stuffed with various garnishes 612–13
   La Varenne 613
   à la villageoise 613
   à la Villeroi 613
 cuts 608p, 609p, 610p
 daube à l'avignonnaise 613
 émincés 359
 épigrammes 613
 filets mignons: en chevreuil 613
   grilled 613
 fillet 613
 filets: in red wine 613–14
   on skewers 613
 haricot (halicot) 614
 hash 450, 614
 hindquarters 614
 Irish stew 512, 616
 knuckle 531 leg: à l'anglaise 614
   à la bonne femme 614
   à la bordelaise 614
   à la boulangère 615
   braised 615
   à la bretonne 615
   en chevreuil 615 cutting 614p
   roast 615
   de sept heures (à la cuiller) 615
   à la Soubise 615
 liver, heart and spleen 615
 moussaka 615
 mulligatawny soup 887
 navarin 615
   with potatoes 615
   printanier 615
 noisettes 615–16
 Armenonville 615p, 616
 Nichette 616
   à la tyrolienne 616, 616p
 offal 628, 633–6
 omelette, Polish 354
 pâtés, small 482
 pie 693–4
 pilaf 699–700
 pistache 616
 pudding 741
 ragoût 616
   à l'anglaise 616
   with barley 616
   à la bonne femme 616–17
   with celeriac 617
   with chick-peas, à la catalane 617
   with kohlrabi 617
   with macaroni, à la milanaise 617
   à la niçoise 617
   à la paysanne 617
   with red beans 616
   with rice 617
   with white haricot beans 616, 616p
 rib 617, 617p
   à l'ancienne 617
   à la boulangère 617
   braised 617–18
   à la bretonne 617
   cold 618
   à la Maintenon 618
   à l'orientale 618
   roast 618
 saddle 618
   cold 618
   à la Maintenon 618 shoulder 619p en ballon (en musette) 618, 618p
   à la bonne femme 618
   à la boulangère 618
   à la bourgeoise 618
   braised with various garnishes 618–19
   à la bretonne 619
   à la catalane (en pistache) 619
   à la chipolata 619
   in jelly 619
   with red cabbage à la flamande 619
   with rice 619
   stuffed and braised 619

stuffed en daube à la bourguignonne 619–20
with turnips 620 sliced 620
soup à la grecque 887 spelt soup 883 myrtle 620

N

nage, à la 621 nalesniki 621
nandu 621
Nantais 621
Nantes cookies 621
Nantua 159p
Nantua, à la 416, 621 napkins 621, 839
Napolitain (restaurant) 769 napolitain (cakes) 621 Narcissus 621 narwhal 621–2
Naseberry plum 804 Nasturtium 622
naturism, naturist 622
navarin 622
Neapolitan slices 622
nectarines 622
freezing 737
tart 916
needles: larding 622 trussing 622
nef 622 Négus 622
neige de Florence 622 nelusko 622
nemours 622
Nénuphar 622 néroli 622 nests: potato 622, 727 nettles 623
soup, cream of 874
néva, à la 623
niçoise, à la 416, 623 Nigella 623
nipplewort 546 nitrogen 623
Nivernais and Morvan 623 nivernaise, à la 416, 623

Noël Peter's 769
noisette 623
noisettes 624
nonat 624
nonnette 624 nonpareille 624 noodles 624
à l'alsacienne 624
boiled 624
with brown butter 624
in butter 624
croquettes 475
au gratin 624
à l'italienne 624
little croustades 292
à la lyonnaise 624
à la milanaise 624
à la napolitaine 624
with stock 624
noques 624
à la viennoise 624–5
normande, à la 416, 625
Normandy 625–6
gastronomic map 625p
norvégien 626
norvégienne, à la 626 Norway: cookery 509–10
nougat 626
almond 17
white 626
nougatine cakes 626–7
nuelles 627
Nurnbergerwürste 830 nut-gall 627
nutmeg 627, 627p
butter 168
nuts 627 blanching 127

O

oatmeal 628
soup 628
cream of 628, 874
au naturel 628
water 123
oats 628

gruel, sweetened cream of 628 oba 628 oblade 628 oca 628
soup, cream of 874
with rice 628
octopus 628
à la provençale 628
with rice 628
offal 628
beef 628, 629–33
lamb 628, 633–6
mutton 628, 633–6
ox 629–33
pork 628, 636–8, 718–19
poultry 647
ragoût 760
veal 629, 638–47
ognonnade (oignonade) 647
oil 647
almond 647 cotton-seed 647
in diätetics 647 field-poppy 374
garlic 408
groundnut (peanut) 647 olive 647 palm 647–8 poppy-seed 648
sesame 648
shellfish 648
walnut 648
oille 648
oiseaux sans tête 649
oka-plant 628 okra 649, 649p braised with bacon 649
in butter 649
in cream 649
à la créole 649
freezing 736
fried 649
omelette à la créole 354
soup 885
in tomato soup 649
à la turque 649
olives 466, 649–50, 649p with anchovy butter 650 black 466
for garnish 650
oil 647
stuffed 466, 650
olla-podrida 650
olluco 948
omelettes, see eggs:
omelettes omnibus 650

onager 650 onions 466, 650
chopped 650
essence 363
fondue 386
fried 650
in batter 650–1
glazed 414, 651
à la grecque 466, 651
omelette: Archduke 352
à la lyonnaise 353
à l'orientale 651
sage and: forcemeat 389 salpicon 801
sauce 821
soubise 748
soup 882, 883p gratinée 882
stuffed 651, 651p
à la catalane 651
à la duxelles (à la parisienne) 651
à l'italienne 651
thourins 922
tourain périgourdin 882–3 onions, spring 834 onopordon 651
onos 651
ophidium 651 opossum 651
orach (orache) 651 orangeat 652
orange blossom 652
liqueur 556
paste jelly 520
pastilles 670–1
water 652
sugar 908 orange leaves 652 orange peel: candied 652
sugar 908
oranges 651–2, 652p,
653p cake, see orangine
compote 652
cream 652
croquemouche 290,
290p
fritters 397, 652
glacé segments 652–3
ice 492, 653
iced 496
iced mousse 653
icing 498
jam 516
jelly 517, 653
juice 521
liqueur 556

- and liquorice water 123
 marmalade 576, 653p
 orangeade 652, 653p
 salad 653, 653p
 sauce 813
 soufflé 653, 866
 soufflé pudding 742
 striped 653–4
 sugar 908
 syrup 913
 in syrup 654
 wine 654
- oranges, sanguine (blood) 804
 oranges, Seville 244
 orangette 123
 orangine 652, 654 orchil 46
 oreiller de la belle Aurore 654
 orgeat 654–5
 syrup 655, 913
 orientale, à la 416, 655 organ 655
 Orléanais 655–6
 gastronomic map 655p
 Orléans, à l' 393
 Orly, à la 656
 ormer 656 ortolans 656 à la Brissac 656
 à la Carême 656
 in cases à la royale 656
 cold 656
 à la landaise 656
 à la périgourdine 656
 à la provençale 656
 roast 656
 on skewers 656
- orval 656
 ostrich 656
 boiled 949
 otter 656
 oublies 656–7
 à la parisienne 657
 ouillet 657
 ouka 657
 ovens 657, 657p bakers' 72p
 ox: belly, see tripe brain, see brains cheeks 657 feet 629
 heart 629
 kidneys, see kidneys liver, see liver marrow 629
 muzzle 629
 salad 466
 offal 629–33
- palate 629
 allumettes 16
 attereaux 60–1
 fried in batter 629
 au gratin 629
 à la lyonnaise 629
 à la poulette 629
 tail 629
 braised stuffed 629
 consommé 872
 grilled 629
 en hochepot 629
 soup 887
 tongue, see tongue
 tripe, see tripe
- oxymel 657
 oyster catcher 661
 oyster plant, see salsify oysters 466, 466p, 480, 657–8, 658p, 1005
 à l'américaine 659–60
 à l'andalouse 659
 angels on horseback 29
 attereaux 470
 Monselet 61
 barquettes 471, 659
 à l'américaine 660
 à la Nantua 660–1
 à la normande 661
 with caviare 659
 cold hors d'oeuvre 658–9
 à la crème 661
 croquettes: à la normande 475
 Victoria 475
 à la diable, scallop shells of 485 à la florentine 660p, 661
 fried 661
 Colbert 661
 fritots 478
 fritters à la normande 661 for garnishing 661
 gastronome's 659
 au gratin 661
 grilled (devilled) 661 hot hors d'oeuvre 659–61
 marinated 659
 à la Mornay 661
 scallop shells of 485
 opening 659p
 à la polonaise 661
 purée 746
 salpicon cancalaise 800
 sauce 813, 821
 on skewers 661
 soufflés 661
- à la cancalaise, small 486
 soup 661, 880–1
 with okra 887
 velouté 879
 Villeroi 661
 oysters, Portuguese 437
- P
- Pacaret 662
 paëlla 662
 Paillard 769
 paillasse 662 pains 662
 palets de dames 662
 palette knife 662
 Palmae 662
 palmetto: achar 2
 palm hearts 662
 palmier 662–3, 663p palm nut 663 palm oil 647–8
 paloise, à la 416
 Palus 663
 panadas 386, 663
 flour, for forcemeat 663
 frangipane 663
 potato 663
 rice 663
 pancho-vila 663
 panetière 663
 panetone 663–4
 Panicum 664
 paniers 664 pulled sugar 664
 pannequets 480, 664. See also crêpes
 anchovy 480, 664
 apricot 664
 à la brunoise 480
 à la cévenole 664
 cheese 480–1
 crayfish, à la Nantua 664
 à la créole 664
- à la florentine 481
 fried, in breadcrumbs 481
 with fruit 664
 à la grecque 481
 à la hongroise 481
 à l'italienne 481
 jam 664
 à la ligurienne 481
 Mornay 664
 pineapple 701
 au praliné 664
 à la reine 664
 à la Saint-Hubert 481
 with shrimps (or other shellfish) 664
 with soft roes 664
 for soup garnish 664
 à la strasbourgeoise 481
 stuffed 481
 la Varenne 664
- pantin 664
 Pantler 664–5
 panure 665
 papaya 665
 papillote 665
 paprika 665
 dressing 787
 paradise nuts 665
 Parfait-Amour 665
 parfaits 665
 iced 495
 Paris-Brest 665, 665p Parisian gâteau 665
 parisienne, à la 416, 665
 Parmentier, Antoine-Auguste 665
 Parmentier (method) 665
 parmesane, à la 666
 parr 666
 parrot 950 parrot fish 666, 836
 parsley 666
 chopped 666
 essence 363
 fried 666
 en pluches 666
 rough-chopped 666
 sauce 821
 parsnip 666
 partridge 666, 666p ballottines: jellied 666
 with various garnishes 666
 with cabbage 666–7
 casserole 667
 à la catalane (en pistache) 667
 in chambertin 667
 à la champenoise 667

- chartreuse 667
- chaud-froid 667
- à la chipolata 667
- à la crapaudine 667
- à la crème 667
- crêpinette: Brillat-Savarin 667–8
- à la périgourdine 668
- estouffade 668
- à la cévenole 668
- à la financière 668
- à la forestière 668
- galantine 668
- grilled à la diable 668
- jellied en daube 668
- à la mirepoix 668
- à la moldave 668
- Monselet 668
- mousse 668
- mousselines 668
- à la normande 668
- pâté 668–9, 673
- à la Périgueux 669
- roast 669
- salmis 669
- sautéed with truffles 669
- soufflé 669
- soup, velouté 879
- à la Souvarov 669
- stuffed, in aspic 669
- terriner 669
- timbale 669
- truffled 669
- à la vigneronne 669
- partridge, American 22
- pashka 669–70
- Passe-Tout-Grain 670
- passion fruit 670
- pasta: fritters 479
- as garnish 417
- Italian 514
- pasta frolla 670
- paste: flour-and-water 318
- pasteurisation 670
- pastillage 670, 670p
- pastilles 670
- coffee 670
- jasmine 670
- officinal 647
- orange-blossom 670–1
- rose 670
- Pastis 671
- pastis (cake) 671
- pastries: bases for 671–2
- pastry: choux (cream puff) 242
- dough for pies 671
- échaudé 329
- flaky 316–18, 316p, 317p
- lard dough 671
- pudding 318
- puff 316–18, 316p, 317p
- shells 671
- raised case cooked blind 671
- rough puff 318
- semi-flaky 318
- short 319
- straws, see allumettes
- suet flaky 318
- tart 318
- three-minute flaky (puff) 318
- Viennese flaky (puff) 318
- pastry-cook's shop 674p
- pastry crimper (pincer) 671, 672p
- pastry cutter 671, 672p
- pastry wheel 671, 781, 781p
- patella 674
- pâté moulds 381p
- pâtés 672. See also pies
- Amiens duck 672–3
- with anchovy 481
- à l'andalouse 481
- angler 29
- à la charcutière 481
- coq en pâté 274
- duck, Amiens 672–3
- à la duxelles 481
- fish 481
- foie gras: de Périgueux 382
- truffled 382–3, 383p
- with truffles 673
- game: à la Saint-Hubert 482
- with stock 481
- au gastronome 481
- goose 431
- hare 448
- hazel grouse 452
- lamb's sweetbreads à l'ancienne 634
- lark 549
- en pantin 673
- Pithiviers 673
- à la lyonnaise 481
- meat 481
- à la moscovite 481–2
- mutton 482
- partridge 668–9, 673
- pheasant 673, 690, 690p
- poultry 673
- with stock 482
- quail 752
- rabbit, wild 758
- à la reine 482
- Rouen duckling 673
- à la Saint-Hubert 482
- small 481, 481p
- snipe Lucullus 851
- sole 861
- with stock 482
- à la strasbourgeoise 482
- thrush 923
- turkey 944
- woodcock 673–4, 999p, 1000
- à la périgourdine 999–1000
- Patience dock 674
- pâtisserie 674–5
- patties (bouchées) 138, 466, 482p
- à l'américaine 483
- à la bénédictine 483
- à la bouquetière 483
- à la Clamart 483
- crayfish 483
- à la Crécy 483
- à la dieppoise 483
- Fanchonnette 466–7
- à la financière 483
- garnished 482–3
- à la julienne 483
- little Russian 675, 675p
- with lobster, spiny lobster or shellfish 483
- Montglas 483
- mushroom 603
- mussel 483
- mutton 694
- oyster 483
- à la périgourdine 483
- poultry 483
- à la reine 483, 483p
- à la Saint-Hubert 483
- Sévigné 483
- shellfish 483
- shrimp 483
- small hot 675
- soft roes 483
- spiny lobster 483
- truffles 483
- paupiettes 675
- pavés 675
- chicken à l'écarlate 675
- chocolate 676
- coffee 676
- foie gras: à la king 675
- with truffles 675
- fruit 676
- hazelnut 676
- pheasant (or other game) à la Saint-Hubert 675
- praline 676
- rice: à la cévenole 676
- à la crêole 676
- with fruit 676
- à la normande 676
- Pompadour 676
- salmon à la Nantua 675
- savoury 675–6
- semolina 676
- sole (or other fish) 676
- sweet 676
- pawpaw 665
- paysanne, à la 676
- Pays Basque 95–6
- peaches 677–8, 678p
- Bourdaloùe 678
- in brandy 678
- cardinal 497
- charlotte 205
- chilled, with raspberries 678
- Colbert 678
- compote 678
- Condé 678
- coupe 494
- croûte 678
- crystallised 678
- flambé Brillat-Savarin 678
- flambé au Kirsch 678–9
- flan or tart 679, 679p
- freezing 737
- fritters 397
- in Frontignan 679
- ice 492
- à l'impératrice 679
- jam 516
- à la Madame Récamier 679
- marmalade 576
- Melba 497–8
- paste jelly 520
- Penelope 679
- pulp 679
- in red wine à la bordelaise 679
- with rice and meringue 679
- ring (border) à la Chantilly 679
- soufflé 679, 866
- stones, liqueur 556
- Sultana 679
- tart 918

- peacock 679–80
 peanuts 680, 680p
     butter 168
     oil 647
     paste 680
 pea-pods: beverage made from 123 pearl 682
 pears 680, 680p
     baked (en douillon, cartouches) 680
 Bourdaloue 680
 Brillat-Savarin 682
 cardinal 682
 charlotte 205, 682
 compote 260, 682
 Condé 682, 682p
 croûtes 682
 flambé au Kirsch 682
 flan à la crème 682p
 fritters 397
 Hélène 682
 ice 492
 iced: belle angevine 496 filled 496
     Mourier 682
 à l'impératrice 681p, 682
 marmalade 576
 Melba 498
 paste jelly 520
 with rice and meringue 682
 ring (border) Chantilly 682 with semolina 682
 soufflé 682, 866
 tart 682, 918
 tartlets 919
 timbale: d'Aremberg 682
     Brillat-Savarin 926
 peas 676, 676p
     boiled 676–7
     à la bonne femme 677
     in butter 677
     à la crème 677
     croûtes à la Clamart 476
     with fennel 677
     à la fermière 677
     à la française 677
     freezing 736
     with ham 677
     with lettuce 677 with mint 677
     patties à la Clamart 483
     à la paysanne 677
     potage: ambassadrice 879
     Balvet (Jubilé) 880
     Fontanges 880
     Lamballe 880
     Longchamp 880
     Marigny 880
     Saint-Cloud 881
     purée 748
         royale of 418
         Saint-Germain 677
     soup, purée Saint Germain 876, 877p peas, dried (split) 677
 potage Faubonne 880
 purée 677, 748
 soup, purée of 876, 877p peas, sugar 677
 peccary 682 pecten 682
 pectin 682–3 pediments 683, 683p peeling 683
 pelamis 683 pelican 683
 pel'meni 683
 pelures 683 pemmican 683 pénide 683
 pennyroyal 683
 peppermint: liqueur 556
 peppers 683, 684p
     freezing 736
     pimiento (red) 683
         paste 683–4
     sauce 813
     small green 467
     sweet (sweet pimentos) 467, 684 with black olives 684
         butter 170
         fondue 386
         fried in batter 684
         au gratin 684
         omelette 355
         Spanish 355
         à l'orientale 684 à la petite russe 684
         à la piémontaise 684
         purée 748
         ragoût à l'espagnole 684 salad à la créole 684, 791 à la turque 684–5, 684p
         à la vinaigrette 685
 perch 685, 685p
 percolator 685
 perdrix 685, 685p
 Père Lathuile 769–70
 Pérignon, Dom 315
 périgourdine, à la 685
 periwinkle 997
 Perry 685
 persane, à la 417
 Persians: banquets 77
 Persico (Persicot) 556, 685
 persillade 685 persimmon 686
     iced à la créole 686
     à l'impératrice 686
     jam 686
     stewed 686
 pestle 686 peteram 686
 petite marmite 686, 869–70
     with chicken 870
     consommé à la messine 872 potage Raphaël 881
 Petit Maure 770 petit salé 792
 petits fours 686, 686p
 petits-pieds 686
 Pe-tsai 240, 240p
 Pets de nonne 397
 Pfannkuchen 686
 pheasant 686–7, 687p
     à l'alsacienne 687
     à l'américaine 687
     aspic à l'ancienne 689
     ballotine in jelly 689
     à la bohémienne 687
     with cabbage 687
     casserole 687
         with mushrooms 687
     en chartreuse 687
     chaud-froid 689, 689p
     en cocotte 687
         with cream 687
     croquettes 687
     cutlets 687
     daube in jelly 689
     galantine in jelly 689 à la géorgienne 687–8
     grilled 688
     hanging 365
     à la languedocienne 688
     à la normande 688
     pâté 673, 690, 690p
     pavé à la Saint-Hubert 675
     à la périgieuse 688
 pie 693
     with truffles 688
 potted 690
 preserved with foie gras and jelly 690 Prince Orloff in jelly 690
 purée 688
 roast 688
 à la Sainte-Alliance 688
 salmis 688
     in red wine 688
 with sauerkraut (à l'alsacienne) 690
 sautéed 688
 à la Souvarov 688–9
 suprêmes 689
 truffled 689
 Philippe (restaurant) 770 phosphorus 690
 Picardy 690–1
     gastronomic map 691p
 picarel 691
 piccalilli 691 pickerel 691 pickles 691
     sour-sweet 468
     vegetables 965 pickling 733 picnic 691 pièces montées 695–6 piémontaise, à la 417, 696 pies 691–2. See also pâtés apple, à l'anglaise 695 beef à la parisienne 693
     beefsteak 99
     blackbird 692, 693
     calves' sweetbreads à l'ancienne 693
     chicken 694
         Russian 278
     cold 695
     eel 332, 334, 692
         aux fines herbes, called à la mirepoix 332
         à la ménagère 334
         à la Nantua 332
         with truffles 332, 334
     fish 692, 695
         coulubiak 277–8
     foie gras and truffle 694
     game 692–3
         oreiller de la belle Aurore 654
     guinea fowl 694
     ham 446, 695
     hare 692
     lamb: à la languedocienne 543
         à la périgourdine 693
     lamb's sweetbreads 693
     lamprey à la bordelaise 692

- lark 692-3
- Madeira 570
- meat 693-4
- mince 591, 695
- mutton 693-4
- pastry dough for 671
- pheasant 693
  - with truffles 688
- pigeon 694-5
  - à la languedocienne 695
  - with mushrooms and truffles 695
- pork à la hongroise 694
- poultry 694-5
- quail with truffles 693
- rabbit with truffles 693
- rhubarb 772
- roebuck 780
- rook 780
- Rouen duckling 694
- salmon 692, 796
  - en pantin 692
  - à la russe 692
- shellfish 692
- sole 692
- spiny lobster 692
- sweet 695
- thrush 693, 923
  - à l'ardennaise 693
  - à la cévenole 693
- turbot 692
- veal, fillet 694
- veal and ham 695
- woodcock, with truffles 693, 1000
- pig. See also pork:
  - bladder 636
  - blood 713
  - brains, see brains
  - cheek, smoked 636
  - ears 636
    - boiled 636
    - braised, with various garnishes 636
    - au gratin 636
    - grilled 636
    - à la hongroise 636
    - Sainte-Menehould 636
    - stuffed 636
  - feet (trotters) 636
  - crépinettes Sainte-Menehould 288
  - Sainte-Menehould 636
  - truffled 636-7
  - head: potted à la pistache 716
  - potted, with truffles 716-17
  - intestine 637
  - kidney, see kidneys
  - leg, stuffed 717, 717p
  - lights 637
    - blanquette 637
    - à la bonne femme 637
  - en civet (in red wine) 637
  - à la ménagère 637
  - à la provençale 637
  - ragoût 637
  - liver, see liver
  - snout 637
  - spleen 637
  - stomach 637
  - tails 637
    - stuffed: braised, with various garnishes 637
    - grilled 637
    - tongue 637-8, 638p
  - pig, suckling: stuffed à l'occitane 721
  - pig, wild: leg with figs 374
  - pigeons 696, 696p
    - ballottines 74
    - casserole 696
    - à la catalane 696
    - en cocotte 696
    - cold 696
    - compote 696
    - à la crapaudine 696
    - à la diable 696
    - fried 696
    - grilled à la Saint-Germain 696
    - à la Maître-Jacques 696
    - à la minute 696-7
    - mousse 696
    - mousselines 697
    - with olives 697
    - en papillote 697
    - with peas 697
  - pie 694-5
    - à la languedocienne 695
    - with mushrooms and truffles 695
    - à la Richelieu 697
    - roast 697
    - salmis 697
    - stewed with blood 697
    - Villeroi 697
    - woodpigeon 1002
  - pigeon, carrier 189
  - piglet 719
  - pike 697, 697p
    - au beurre blanc 697-8
    - au bleu 698
    - braised fillets with various sauces and garnishes 698
    - cutlets 698
    - forcemeat à la lyonnaise 389
    - loaf 558
    - mousselines 698
    - quenelles 698-9
      - à la crème 699
      - en croustade 698p
      - à la florentine 699
      - à la lyonnaise 699, 699p
      - mousseline 754
      - princesse 754, 754p
    - roast à la mode de Bugey 699
  - pike-perch 699
  - pilaf (pilau, pilaw), rice 699
  - pilchard 700
  - pilot-fish 700
  - pimento, see peppers
  - pincer 700
  - pineapple 700
    - atteraux 61
    - à la bavaroise 700
    - Bourdaloue 700
    - compote 260, 700
    - Condé 700
    - fritters 397, 700
    - à la Carême 700
    - ice 492
    - ice cream 700-1
    - iced 496, 496p
      - à la bouronnaise 496
      - à la Chantilly 496, 497p
      - à la créole 496
      - à la parisienne 496
    - à l'impératrice 701
    - jam 516
    - juice 521
    - manqué 701
    - Norwegian omelette with 357
    - pancakes 701
    - à la piémontaise 701
    - with rice 701
    - rice ring à la créole 136
    - with rice and meringue 701
    - sauce 827
    - savarin 701
    - surprise 701
    - tart 701, 918
    - à la royale 701
    - with vanilla ice cream 701
  - pine kernel: sauce à l'italienne 814
  - pine seed (nut) 701
  - piperade 702
  - pipit 703
  - pipkin 703
  - piroghi (pirozski) 483, 703
    - carrot 703
    - Caucasian 703
    - cream cheese 703
    - fish 703
    - game 703
    - Moscow 703
    - Polish 703
    - with truffles 703
    - with various vegetable fillings 703
    - visiga 703
  - pirozski, see piroghi
  - Pislicine 217
  - pissaladière 703
  - pissalat 467
  - pistache, en 703
  - pistachio 703
    - Bavarian cream with 89
    - butter 169
    - caramels 184
    - ice cream 492-3
  - pistou 704
  - Pithiviers gâteau 704
  - plaisir 705
  - plantain tree 705
  - plastron 705
  - plates 705-7, 706p
  - plinths: tiered 923-4, 924p
    - wooden 1002
  - plover 707, 707p
    - eggs 464
  - pluches 707
  - pluck 707
  - plum cake 179
  - plums 707, 707p
    - Bourdaloue 707
    - in brandy 707
    - candied 708
    - charlotte 205
    - compote 260

- Condé 708
 flambé Lorraine 708
 freezing 737
 fritters 397
   à l'agenaise 397
 greengage 435
   paste jelly 519
   tart à l'allemande 917
 ice 492, 708
 iced mousse 708
 jam 516, 708
 marmalade 576
 mirabelle plums 592 custard ring à la vosgienne 135–6
   flan 592
   paste jelly 519–20
   soufflé Lorraine 708
   tart 918, 918p
   tartlets 919
 poaching 297, 708
 pochard 708 pochoise 708 de Verdun-sur-le-Doubs 708 pod 708
 poêlage 708
 poêlon 708, 708p
 pogne de Romans 708–9
 Poissonier 709
 Poitou 709–10
   gastronomic map 709p
 poivrade 710
 Poland: cookery 508–9
 polenta 217, 710
   attereaux à la piémontaise 60
   fritters 397
 Polnischewürste 830
 polypodium 710 polyporus 710
 pomegranate 710
 pomfret 710
 Pomme de Pin 770
 pompe 710 pomponnettes 483 pont-neuf 710
 pope 710–11, 710p poppy 711
 poppy-seed oil 648 porcelain 711
 porcupine 711
 pork 711. See also pig andouilles 711–13
   Nancy 712
   ballottine: braised, with garnishes 73
   in jelly 73
   brawn 456, 716
   with truffles 716–17
   breast 713
   Bringelle curry 300–1 carbonades 713
   cassoulet de Castelnaudary 193–4 chine 713–14
   chops: à l'alsacienne 714
     à l'ardennaise 714
     à la bayonnaise 714
     braised, with various garnishes 714
     charcutière 714–15, 715p fried, with garnish 715
     à la gasconne 715
     grilled 715, 715p
     à la milanaise 715
     Pilleverjus 715–16
     with Robert sauce 716
     à la vosgienne 716
   crêpinettes 716
     Cinderella 716, 716p cuts 712p, 713p, 714p
   émincés 359
   fat 716
   fillet (tenderloin) 716
   forcemeat: fine 387
     ordinary 387
     with veal 388 fricadelles 716
   gelatine 716
   hand 716
   hash 450, 716
   leg: braised 717
     roast 717, 717p
   loin 717
   à l'alsacienne 717–18
   à la bonne femme 718
   à la boulangère 718
   à la chipolata 718
   cold 718
   with green cabbage or Brussels sprouts 718 à la limousine 718
   with red cabbage 718
   roast 718, 718p
   lonzo 565
   offal 628, 636–8, 718–19
   pie 719, 719p
     à la hongroise 694
   with pineapple 701
   preserved 262
   rillauds 777
   rillettes 777
   salt 720
   boiled à l'anglaise 720
   sausages 711–13, 720
   shoulder 721
   skin 720 slices, cold 721
   stew 721
     with green figs 374
   pork butchery 202–4, 202p, 203p porker 721 porpoise 721 porridge 721–2, 721p
     arrowroot 47–8
     Béarn millas 722
     maize (las pous) 722
     Périgord millas 722
   porringer 722 Port (wine) 722
     sauce 814
   Porte-Maillot 415
   portugaise, à la 417
   posset 722
     ale 8
   potage: ambassadeurs 879 Apicius 879
     d'Artois 879
     Bagration 879–80
     Balvet 880
     bonne-femme 880
     Camaro à la brésilienne 884
     Camérani 880
     cultivateur 880
     Faubonne 880
     fermière 880
     Fontages 880, 880p
     gentilhomme 880 Germiny 880
     hochepot à la flamande 885 à la jambe de bois 868p, 868 Jubilé 880
     julienne: à l'allemande 880
       à la cévenole 880
     Darblay 880
     Lamballe 880
     Longchamp 880
     Marigny 880
     paysanne 881
     Rahm-suppe 887
     Raphaël 881
     Saint-Cloud 881
     santé 881
     Solférino 881
     velours 881
     Xavier 881 potash 722 potatoes 722–3
   à l'anglaise 723
   Anna 34, 723
   casserole for 34p
   Annette 34, 723
   with bacon 723–4
   baked in the oven 723
   with basil 724
   à la basquaise 724
   à la berrichonne 724
   black (négresses, pommes de Madagascar) 724
   boiled 724
   borders 724
   à la boulangère 724
   in butter 724
   cakes 724
   château 724
   chatouillard 724 cooked in the ashes 723
   copeaux 724
   Crainquebille 724 à la Crécý (à la Vichy) 724 crisps 726
   croquettes 291, 291p, 475, 725, 725p
   chevreuse 725
     à la florentine 475
     à la lyonnaise 725
     à la niçoise 475
     with Parmesan cheese 475, 725
     à la périgourdine 725
   croustades 725
   curly crisps 724
   Dauphine 725
     mixture for 593
   à la dauphinoise 725, 725p Duchess 725–6
   duchesse mixture 321, 593
   with fennel 726
   fondantes 726
   fried 726
     pont-neuf 726
   fritters 395, 726p galettes 404 game chips 406
   gastronome (à la Cussy) 726 Georgette 726
   gnocchi 428
   gratin à la dauphinoise, as garnish 414 gratin à la savoyarde 414

- grilled 726-7
- hashed brown 727
- à la hongroise 727
- as hors d'oeuvre 467
- à la landaise 727
- Lithuanian soup 886
- little duchess potato
- croustades 292, 292p
- loaves 727
- Lorette 727
- à la lyonnaise 727
- macaire 727
- à la maître d'hôtel 727
- matches (sticks) 727
- with mint 727
- Mont-Dore 727
- mousseline 727
- au naturel (nature)
- 727, 727p
- nects 622, 727
- noisette 623, 727-8
- spoons for shaping
- 727p
- à la normande 728
- omelette: Parmentier
- 354
- à la paysanne 354
- à la savoyarde 355
- panada 663
- pancakes 728
- paniers 664
- à la parisienne 728,
- 728p
- Parmentier 728
- parsley 728
- à la paysanne 728
- potage: julienne
- Darblay 880
- santé 881
- purée 728
- à la crème 728
- au gratin 728
- quenelles: à
- l'alsacienne 728
- with Parmesan
- cheese 728
- ring 135, 135p
- roast 728
- Saint-Flour 728
- salad 789p
- salpicon 801
- à la sarladaise 728
- sautéed 728
- à la provençale
- 728-9
- à la savoyarde 729, 833
- soufflé 864
- with cheese 864
- à la hongroise 864
- soufflé potatoes
- (puffed) 729
- soup, purée
- Parmentier 877, 877p
- steamed 729
- in stock 729
- straw 729, 902
- stuffed 483, 729, 729p
- à la cancalaise
- 729-30
- à la cantalienne 730
- à la chasseur 730
- with cheese 730,
- 730p
- à la duxelles 730
- fermière 730
- à la florentine 730
- à la hongroise 730
- Maintenon 730
- à la ménagère 730
- princesse 730
- à la provençale 730
- with sausage meat
- 730
- soubise 730
- à la Vichy 730
- Yorkshire style 730
- subrics 730, 905
- à la toulousaine 730
- Vitelotte 970
- Voisin 730
- pot-au-feu 722, 870
- à l'albigeoise 870
- à la béarnaise 870
- consommé croûte au
- pot 871
- à l'ancienne 871
- à la languedocienne
- 870
- Pot de vin 967
- potée 730
- Lorraine 730
- pot-roasting 297, 730-1
- à la Matignon 731
- poule-au-pot 870
- poulette, à la 731
- poultry. See also chicken,
- etc.
- à l'allemande, scallop
- shells of 485
- braising 296
- cold: fritots 478
- croquettes 475
- émincés 359
- entrecuisse 361
- fillets 374
- forcemeat 386
- for pâtés and potted
- preparations 387
- freezing 734
- garnishes 409
- grenadins 436
- hamburger steak 447
- hash 450-1
- interlarding 297
- liver, see liver
- mayonnaise 581
- Monselet, scallop shells
- of 485
- offal 647
- pâté 673
- with stock 482
- patties 483
- à la reine 483, 483p
- pinions (wings) 701
- princesse, scallop shells
- of 485
- purées 746
- Rossini, scallop shells
- of 485
- scallop shells of 485
- with smoked or
- pickled tongue
- 485-6
- poupelin 731
- poupeton 731
- poussoir 731
- poutine 732
- praire 732
- praline 732
- ice cream 493
- pannequets 664
- pavé 676
- praliné 732, 732p
- praliner 732
- prawns: Dublin Bay
- 320-1
- Dublin Bay: soup,
- velouté 879
- forcemeat 389
- mayonnaise 581
- rougail 781
- presentation base 910
- presentation of dishes
- 732
- preservation of food
- 732-7
- press 734
- pressure cooker 64-5,
- 64p, 734, 737
- prêtre 737
- Pretzel 737-8, 738p
- prickly pear 738, 738p
- princesse, à la 417, 738
- printanier 417, 738
- printanière, à la 417, 738
- Procope 770, 770p
- profiteroles 738, 738p
- provençale, à la 417, 738
- Provence 738-40
- gastronomic map 739p
- prunes 740
- compote 260, 740
- with wine 740
- freezing 737
- Prunier 770
- puchero 740
- puddings: almond,
- English 741
- American 741
- apple, English 741
- beefsteak 740
- and kidney 740
- and oyster 740
- biscuit 741
- Brazilian 741
- bread: French 741
- German 741
- and fruit, German
- 741, 742p
- with red wine 741
- cabinet 741
- capucine, iced 495
- chestnut soufflé 741
- chicken à la Richelieu
- 740
- chocolate 742
- chocolate rice 743
- Christmas 743
- Clermont 742
- Diplomat 742
- with fruit 742
- fruit 505p, 742, 742p
- game 740-1
- iced 495
- lemon, tangerine or
- orange soufflé 742
- macaroni 742
- marrow 742
- mould for 741p
- mutton 741
- Nesselrode 742-3
- plum 743
- pumpkin 743
- rice 743
- English 743
- mould 775
- roly-poly 780
- sago 743
- savoury 740-1
- Saxon 743-4
- Scotch 744
- semolina 744, 838
- English 838
- flamiri 377
- with stewed fruit
- 838p
- suet roll, English 744
- sweet (dessert) 741-4
- sweet potato 744, 911
- tapioca 744
- vermicelli 744
- Yorkshire 1003
- puffer 744
- puits d'amour 744

pulp 744
 Pulque 744 pumpkin 744, 744p, 745p
   brèdes 148
   au gratin 744-5 gratin, with rice 745
   jam 745
   au jus 745
   pudding 743
   purée 745
   salad 745
   soufflé 745
   soup, purée of 877-8 sweet-sour à l'allemande 745 punch 745
   iced 745
     à la romaine 495
   kirsch 745
   marquise 745
   rum 745 punch cake 179
 purée-presser 748
 purées 745
   anchovy 745 artichokes 746
   asparagus 55, 746-7
   aubergine 63, 747
   beans 92, 93, 94-5, 747
   beef 746
   beetroot 747
   brains 746
   Brussels sprouts 156
   calf's liver 746
   cardoons 185
   carrot 190, 747
     with cream 190
     with rice 190
   cauliflower 196, 747
   celeriac 197
   celery 197-8, 747
   chestnut 218, 747
   chicken 229, 746
     royale of 418
   chick-peas 748
   chicory 239
   cucumber 295, 747 endive 360
   fish, crustaceans and molluscs 745-6
   foie gras 746
     truffled 382-3, 383p
   game 746
     royale of 418
   garlic 408, 747
   herring 745
   Jerusalem artichoke 520, 747 lentil 747 lettuce 554, 747 marrow or gourd 747

meat 746
 mushrooms 747-8
 mussel 746
 onion soubise 748 oysters 746
 peas 748
   royale of 418
   Saint-Germain 667
 peas, split 677, 748
 pheasant 688
 potato 728
   à la crème 728
   au gratin 728
 poultry 746
 pumpkin 745
 salmon 746
 sardine 468
 sea-urchin 746, 837 shrimp 746
 sole 862
 sorrel 863
 spinach 748
 straining 901-2
 sweetbread 746
 sweet pepper 748
 sweet potato 911
 tarragon 748, 916
 tomato, royale of 418
 truffle 748, 938
 tunny 746 turnip 945
 veal 746
 vegetables 746-8
 watercress 975
 woodcock 1000
 purslane 748
   soup, purée of 878
 Puyrémas, Vaucluse 740p

Q

quail 749, 749p in cases 749
     à l'italienne 749
     à la Lamballe 749
     à la mirepoix 749
     Mont-Bry 749

  à la Périgieux 749
   à la strasbourgeoise 749-50
   à la vigneronne 750,
     750p casserole 750
   à la bonne femme 750 with grapes 750
 chaud-froid 750
 en chemise 750
 with cherries 750
 en cocotte 750
 cold 751
 confit 750
 devilled 751
 à la financière 751
   with rice border 751 à la gourmande 751
 grilled: à la duchesse 751
   à l'indienne 751
 jellied à la
   périgourdine 751
 à la limousine 751
 Lucullus 751
 minute 751
 à la Monselet 751
 mousse, cold 751-2
 in a nest 752, 752p
 pâté 752
   with peas 752
 petit-duc 752
 pie with truffles 693
   with rice 752
   with risotto 752
     à la piémontaise 752
 roast 752
   à la romaine 752-3
   Saint-Mars 753
   à la Souvarov 753
   à la Talleyrand 753
   tinned, in jelly 753
 quatre-quarts 753
 quenelles 754
   carp 189
   chicken 754
   foie gras 754
   forcemeat 387-8
   game 754
   as garnish 417
   meat 754
   pike mousseline 754
   pike princesse 754,
     754p salmon 796
   sole 862
   veal 754
 quince 754
   with cheese 754
   with ham 754

Lorraine 483, 754,
 754p quillet 754-5
 quince 755, 755p
   charlotte 205
   compote 755
   cognac 277
   jelly 517, 755
   liqueur 556
   marmalade 576, 755
   paste 755
   paste jelly 520

R

rabbit 756
   bones 194p cleaning 757p Coquibus 756 cutting 757p, 758p
   fricassée 756
   pie, with truffles 693
   with prunes and rum 782 sautéed: with curry 756 with paprika 756, 758 skinning 756p
 rabbit, wild 758
   blanquette 758
   boiled, à l'anglaise 758
   chasseur 758
   en gibelotte 758
   pâté 758
   potted 758
   roast 758
   sautéed: à la minute 758
     with mushrooms 758
 rabotte 758
 racahout 758
 raclette 758
 racoon 758
 radishes 758
   black 758
   as hors d'oeuvre 467
   pink: in cream 758

- glazed 758–9
poulette 759
in stock 759
ragoûts 425, 759
à la banquière 759
béatilles 97
beef 111, 111p
camel, with tomato
sauce 182
à la cancalaise 759
celeriac 759
à la cévenole 759
chipolata 759
cocks' combs and kidneys 759
crayfish tails à la Nantua 285
à la financière 759
giblets 425
goose 431
à la bonne femme 431 lamb: à l'anglaise 543
à la bonne femme 543 lobster à la cardinal 759
à la marinière 760
molluscs 760
mushrooms 760
mutton 616
à l'anglaise 616
with barley 616
à la bonne femme 616–17
with celeriac 617
with chick-peas à la catalane 617
with kohlrabi 617
with macaroni à la milanaise 617
à la niçoise 617
à la paysanne 617
with red beans 616
with rice 617
with white haricot
beans 616, 616p
Nantua 760
offal 760
à la périgourdine 762
pig's lights 637
à la printanière 760
seafood 760
sweet peppers à l'espagnole 684 Talleyrand 760
à la tortue 760
à la toulousaine 760
truffles 760
turkey 944
vegetables 760
- Ragneneau 760 rail 761 raisiné 761 raisins 434, 761
wine 124
raiton 761
Raki 761 ramekins 484, 761
cheese 761
rampion 761
Ramponneau 770
Rancio 761 rape seed 259
raspberries 761, 761p Bavarian cream 761
charlotte 761
compote 260, 762
cream 762
crêpes 288
flan, cream 378
fritters 397
hippocras 123
ice 492
iced mousse or purée 762
jam 516–17
juice, pulp 762
liqueur 556
paste jelly 520
sauce 827
sundae 909p
syrup 912
tart 918
à l'allemande 917
tartlets 919
vinegar 969
Rassol'nik 887–8
rastegai 484 rat 762
ratafia 762
ratatouille 762
Rat-Mort 770 raton 762
ravioli 484, 762, 762p forcemeats for 763
as garnish 417
ray, see skate
réchaud 763, 763p
redcurrants: ice 492
soup 124
tart à l'allemande 917
red mullet, see mullet, red red nettle 763 redstart 763 reduction 763 redwing 763 refrigeration 763–4 refrigerator 764, 764p
régalade, à la 764
Régence, La 770
reindeer 764
- reine, à la 394
religieuse 764, 764p
rémoulade 764, 787
renaissance, à la 765 rennet 67, 765
repère 765 reptiles: eggs 357 restaurants 765–6 of fame 766–71
reticulum 771 réveillon 771
reverdir 771 rhinoceros 771
rhubarb 771
compote 772
freezing 737 golden cordial 123–4
jam 517, 772
pie 772
tart 772
English 918
rhyton 772 ribbon 772 rice 772–3, 772p boiled, with butter 773 border: turning out 963p casserole: à l'ancienne 192 fillings for 192
small 192
cooking 773
creamed 775
cream fritters 397
à la créole 774
croquettes 475
à l'américaine 475
curried 475
old style 291
à la piémontaise 475
savory 291
stuffed 291
sweet 291
dessert (sweet) 775
in dietetics 773
flan 775
with apricots 775
fritters 397, 479
gâteau: with caramel 775 with meringue 775
au gras 774
à la grecque 774
à l'impératrice 775,
775p
à l'indienne 774
little croustades 292
in milk 775
Montmorency 775
panada 663
pavés: à la cévenole 676
- à la créole 676
with fruit 676
à la normande 676 Pompadour 676
pilaf 699
potage Xavier 881
pudding 743
chocolate 743
English 743
pudding mould 775 ring: with cherries 136
à la créole 136
with fruit 775–6
Montmorency 136
with various
garnishes 135
risotto: à la milanaise 774
à la piémontaise
774–5, 774p
saffron 776
à la serviette 840
soup, cream of 874
subrics 776
à la piémontaise 487
tart 775
with apricots 775
vanilla, à la Bourbon 776 water 124, 776
Riche (Café) 770
riche, à la 776
Richelieu (pâtisserie) 776
Richelieu, à la 776
rickets 776
ridge cucumber 776 rigodon 776–7
with meat 777
rijspap 776
rillauds 777
rillettes 777
rillons 777
rillots 777
Rindfleischkochwürste 830 ring (border) 134 for brains à la piémontaise 134
cold, for entrées or sweet dishes 135, 135p custard, with mirabelles à la vosgienne 135–6
for desserts 135–6 egg: Brillat-Savarin 134 à la princesse 134
fish forcemeat with various garnishes 134
frogs' legs vert-pré 134 game forcemeat, with various garnishes 135

- moulds 134p
 potato 135, 135p
 rice with cherries 136
   à la créole 136
   Montmorency 136
   with various
     garnishes 135
 semolina: filled with various fruit 136
   with various
     garnishes 135
 sole à la normande
   135, 135p
 veal forcemeat, with various garnishes 135
 risotto: à la milanaise 774
   à la piémontaise 774–5, 774p
 rissoles 484, 777
   à la bohémienne 484
   à la chalonaise 484
   Cinderella 484
   à la dauphine 484 farm 484
   foie gras 383, 484
   mincemeat 591
   Pompador 484
 Rivesaltes (Muscat de) 778 roach 778, 778p
 roast 778
 roasting 297–8, 297p roasting pan 778 roasts: gravy 298
   average cooking times 298 rob 778
 Robert, à la 394
 robin 778
 Rocher de Cancale 771 rocket 778 rock partridge 778 rock-weed 837 roebuck 778, 778p chops or cutlets 778–9 with chestnuts 779,
       779p Conti 779
   à la crème 779
   with grapes 779
   with juniper berries 779
   à la minute 779
   poivrade 779
   à la romaine 779
   d'Uzès 779
 civet 778
 émincés 359
 filets mignons 779
 hash 779
 haunch 779
 noisettes 779–80
 pie 780
 saddle 780
   à l'allemande 780
   grand veneur 780
 sliced, with various sauces 780
 roes, soft 454, 851
   à l'anglaise 851
   in barquettes 851
   in brown butter 851–2
   butter 169–70
   carps' 189
   cold, with cold fish 852
   croûtes with 476
   à la florentine, scallop shells 486
   fritters 479, 852
   as garnish 852
   herring 454
   in mayonnaise 852
   à la meunière 852
   in noisette butter 852
   omelette de Savarin 354–5
   pannequets 664
   patties 483
   in scallop shells à la normande 852
   soufflés, small 486
   tartlets 852
   on toast 376
 rollmops 467, 467p, 780
 rolls: garnished 467
 roly-poly pudding 780
 romaine, à la 418
 Romans: banquets 78,
   78p cooking 266–7
 rook 780
   pie 780
 ropiness 780
 rosemary 780
 roses: Bavarian cream aux 91
   paste jelly 520
   pastilles 670
   vinegar 969
 Rossoll (Rosolio) 781
 rotengle 781 rôtie 781 rôtisserie 781
 rougail 781
   apples, green 781 aubergines 781
   salt cod and tomatoes 781 shrimps and prawns 781 tomatoes, raw 781 roulade (roll) 781
 roulé 781 roulette 781, 781p
 roussette 781–2 roussir 782 roux 782
 royale 418, 782
   asparagus tips 418
   carrots, à la Crècy 418
   celery 418
   chicken purée 418 game purée 418 pie purée 418
   plain 418
   tomato purée 418
 royale, à la 782
 rudderfish 904, 904p
 rum 782
 Rumania: cookery 504
 Ruscus 782
 rush 782
 rusks 782
   diet 782
   Paris 783
 Russia: cookery 508–9 rutabaga 783 russula 783 rye 783
- S sablage 784 sablé 784 saccharine 784 saccharometer 784 sacristain 784
 saddle 784
 safflower 784 saffron 784
 sage 784
   and onion forcemeat 389 and onion sauce 822
 sago 784
   pudding 743
   with red wine 785
 St George's agaric 785
 Saint-Germain 785
 Saint-Honoré 785
 St John's wort 785
 Saint-Michel 785
 Saintonge: gastronomic map 30p Saké 785
 salad burnet 792
 salad dressings: for mixed salads 788–9
   for plain salads 785, 787 salads 785
   Albignac 789 Ali-Baba 789
   allemande 789
   American 789, 789p
   anchovy 459
   Andalusian 789
   Argenteuil 789
   Arlésienne 789
   aubergine 63
   Bagration 789
   beetroot 461, 789
   à la crème 789
   à la polonaise 789
   Bressane 789
   Brimont 790
   Brussels sprouts 156–7 cabbage 172
   calves' brains 790
   cancaise 790
   cardoon 185
   cauliflower 195
   celeriac with cress 790
   chicken 231
   chicory 239
   cucumber 295, 463
   custard marrow 302
   demi-deuil 790
   Doria 790
   Dubarry 790, 790p favourite 790 Flemish 790
   Francillon 392, 790
   French beans 93, 93p green 786p
   Imperia 790
   Italian 790
   Japanese 790
   Jerusalem artichoke 520 lettuce, with hard-boiled eggs 787p
   lobster 790
   Maharajah 790
   marrow 514
   Mikado 790
   mimosa 591
   mixed 788
   mushroom 604

- mussels 466
- niçoise 791
- oriental 791
- ox muzzle 466, 629
- ox tongue 466
- Parisian 791
- Pernollet 791
- plain 785
  - complimentary
  - garnishes for 787
  - from cooked
  - vegetables 787–8
  - dressings for 785, 787
- Port-Royal 791, 791p
- potato 789p
- pumpkin 745
- Rachel 791
- Raphael 791, 791p
- raw 787
- Reine Pédaque 791
- Rossini 791
- Russian 791
- salsify 802
- salt cod 255
- sauerkraut, à
  - l'allemande 791, 829
- shellfish 791
- shrimp 468, 843
- à la dieppoise 792
- spinach 891
- spiny lobster 790, 894
- sweet peppers
  - (pimento) à la créole 684, 791
- sweet potatoes 911
- tomato 928
- truffles 791, 939
- vegetable 792
- vegetables for 788p
- watercress 792, 975
- whitebait 469
- white beans (fresh) 95
- salamander 792
- salambô 792, 792p
- salami 467, 792
- salangane 792
- salé 792
- salep 792
  - jelly 792
  - soup 792
- salmigondis 792
- salmis 394, 792
- salmon 793, 793p
  - attereaux 793
  - boiled: à l'anglaise 794
  - with various sauces 793
  - braised 794
  - butter 169
  - à la canadienne 467
- Chambord 794
- cold 798–800
  - à l'anglaise 798, 798p
  - garnishes for 798
  - with Montpellier butter 800
- cold steak with various sauces and garnishes 800
- coulbiac 795
- court-bouillon for 793
- creamed, au gratin 795
- croquettes 795
- cutlets 794
  - à l'américaine 794
  - in aspic 798
  - braised with red wine 794
  - braised with white wine 795
  - Mornay 795
  - à la moscovite 798
  - with mushrooms à la crème 795
  - with mushrooms and Madeira 795
  - à la Nantua 798
  - à l'orientale 798
  - à la parisienne 798–9
  - Pojarski 795
  - à la russe 799
  - with truffles 795
  - with truffles and cream 795
  - variously garnished 795
- cutting 794p
- darne, à l'ancienne 304
- Daumont 795
- escalopes 795
- fillets 796
- fried skewered 797
- fritters 797
- galantine 799
- glazed: Bellevue, in aspic 799
  - au Chambertin 799, 799p
  - à la champenoise 799
- cutlets au
  - Chambertin 799
- cutlets with
  - macédoine of vegetables 799
- à l'impériale 799
- Monselet 799
- à la parisienne 799, 799p
- à la russe 799
- hot 793–8
- kedgerie 796
- kromeskies 795
- mayonnaise 799–800
- médallions of, cold 800
- Orly of filets with
  - tomato sauce 796
- paupiettes: à
  - l'impériale 467
  - au vert 467
- pavé à la Nantua 675
- pie 692
  - hot, à la française 796
  - en pantin 692
  - à la russe 692
- pilaf 796
- à la princesse 796
- purée 746
- quenelles 796
- risotto 796
- roast 796
- in scallop shells 796
- à la florentine 796
- à la Mornay 796
- à la provençale 797
- with shrimps 797
- skewered 797
- smoked 467
  - Boston style 467
  - à la moscovite 467
- soufflé 797
- steak à l'américaine 797
  - à l'anglaise 797
  - fried 797
  - grilled 797, 797p
  - à la meunière 797
  - à la Nantua 797
  - poached in white wine 797
  - tronçon, Philéas Gilbert 797–8, 798p
- salmon trout 800, 936
- salpicon 800–1
  - à l'américaine 800
  - anchovies 800
  - artichokes 800
  - with cream 800
- asparagus (green) 800
- aubergines in cream 800
- beetroot 800
- à la bohémienne 800
- bone-marrow 130
- brains 800
- cancalais 800
- cardinal 800
- carrots à la crème 800
- celeriac 197, 800
- cèpes 800
- à la chalonaise 800
- chasseur 800
- chicken 800
- cocks' combs 800
  - à blanc 246
  - à brun 246
- crayfish 800
- cucumbers 800
- Cussy 801
- cutlets 801
- à la dieppoise 801
- à l'écarlate 801
- fish 801
- à la financière 801
- foie gras 801
- French beans 801
  - à la crème 801
- fruit 801
- game 801
- ham 801
- hard-boiled eggs 801
- Jerusalem artichokes 801
- à la Joinville 801
- à la juive 205
- lobster 801
- meat 801
- à la Montglas 595, 801
- mushroom 604, 801
  - with Madeira 801
- mussels 801
- onions 801
- à la périgourdine 801
- potatoes 801
- à la reine 801
- à la royale 801
- à la Saint-Hubert 801
- shrimps 801
- spiny lobster 800, 801
- sweetbreads 801
- tomatoes 801
- truffles 801
- veal 801
- salsify 802
  - in béchamel 802
  - au beurre noisette 802
  - à la crème 802
  - fritters 395, 802
  - Mornay 802
  - omelette à la maraîchère 354
  - à la polonaise 802
- salad 802
- sautéed: au beurre 802
- aux fines herbes 802
- à la provençale 802
- shoots 802
- in veal stock 802
- salt 802–3
  - spiced 803, 890
- salting 733–4, 803

- salting tub 803
 salt meadow 803
 saltpetre 803
 samphire 803
 sand eel 803
 sand piper (guignette) 437, 803
 sand-smelt (athérine) 59,
   59p sandwich cakes, see sponge cakes sandwiches 803
   Alsatian 804
   antibois 804 basil 804 bookmaker's 804 croque-monsieur 290
   Dijon 804
   foie gras 804
   périgourdine 804
   sweet 804
   tartare 804
   toasted 804
   watercress 976
 sangler 804
 sangri 804 Sangria 804 sansonnet 804 sapodilla 804 Saracen corn 804
 sarde, à la 418
 sardines 804–5, 805p
   à l'anglaise 805
   à l'antiboise 805
   bouillabaisse 140, 805
   butter 169, 805
   canapés 472
     à la nantaise 462
   darts 477
   forcemeat 389
   fried 805
   grilled 805
   in oil 468, 805
   in paper cases: au gratin 805
       à l'italienne 805
       à la portugaise 805
   en paupiettes 805
   au plat 805
   purée 468
   salted (preserved) 805 with spinach à la provençale 806
   with white wine 806
 Sargasso 807
 sarrasine, à la 418
 Sassenage 807 satyrion 807
 sauceboat 827, 827p saucepan, double 315
 sauces 807
   African 808 aigre-doux 808
   aigrette, with verjuice 816
   Albert 489, 816
   Alboni 808
   albuféra 816
   allemande 15, 816–17
   American 817
   anchovy 817, 823
   andalouse 817, 823
   aniseed 808
   apple 42, 823
   apricot 827
   aurora 817
   banquière 817 basic (great) 807–8
   bâtarde 817
   bárnaise 97, 817
   beauharnais 817
   béchamel 98, 808 with onion 817
   Bercy 817
   bigarade 808–9
   bonnefoy 809
   bontemps 817
   bordelaise 809
   Brandade à la provençale 817
   bread 147, 809, 810, 817
     fried 809
   Breton 148, 809, 817
   brown 806p brown basic 807–8
   brown compound 808–16
   brown gravy 809
   Burgundy
     (bourguignonne) 809–10
   butter 817–18
     with chervil 818
   Cambridge 823
   caper 818
   cardinal 818
   celery 818
   Chambertin 810
   Chambord 810
   Chantilly 818, 823
   chapelure 810
   charcutière 810
   chasseur 810
   chateaubriand 810
   chaud-froid: à l'allemande 818
       à l'andalouse 818
       à l'aurore 818
       à la banquière 818
       Beauharnais 818
     blonde 818
     brown 810
     chicken 810
     à l'écossaise 818
     fish 810
     game-flavoured 810
     à la hongroise 818
     à l'indienne 818
     à la Nantua 818
     à la niçoise 811
     with orange 810
     à la royale 818
     à la sicilienne 818
     with tomatoes 810
     with truffle essence 810 white 818
   cherry 827
     dried 811
   chivry 818–19
   chocolate 827
   Choron 817
   cingalaise 823
   Colbert 811
   cold 823–7 Collioure 823
   cranberry 811
   crayfish 819
   cream 819
   Cressonnière 823 Cumberland 823
   curry 819
     à l'indienne 819
   demi-espagnole 310
   demi-glace 310, 807
   dessert 827
   diable (devilled) 811
   dijonnaise 823
   diplomat 819 duxelles 811
   écossaise 819
   egg 819
     and butter 819
     à l'écossaise 819
   English 819
   English bread and
     butter 819
   English cream 819 equipment for 807p espagnole 362–3, 807
     demi-glace 811
   fennel 819–20
   financière 811
   fines herbes 811, 820
   foyot 820
   French, for fish 820 freshwater fish 820
   genevoise 422, 811
   genoise, with Bordeaux 811–12
   Godard 820
   gooseberry 812
   grand veneur 812
   Greek 820
   green mayonnaise 825 gribiche 436, 823
   hachée 812
   herb 812
   hollandaise 456, 820
     suprême 820
   horseradish 489, 820, 825 Hungarian 820
   hunter 810
   Indian 819
   indienne 825
   Italian 812
   ivoire 820
   Joinville 820
   Laguipière 820
   lobster 820
   lyonnaise 812, 821
   Madeira 812
   maître d'hôtel 821
   maltaise 821, 825
   marinière 821
   marrow 812
   mayonnaise 824p, 825
     with anchovy 825
     with caviare 825
     with cress 825
     à la russe 825
     with shrimps 825
     with tarragon 825
   mère 362
   mint 592, 825
   morel 821
   Mornay 821
   mousquetaire 825
   mousseline 821
   mousseuse 821
   mushroom 812
   mussel 607
   mustard 607, 812, 821
     and cream 825
   Nantua 821
   napolitaine 812
   niçoise 825
   noisette 813
   normande 821
   onion 821
   orange 813
   orientale 825
   Oxford 657
   oyster 813, 821
   paloise 821 Parisian 825 parsley 821
   pepper 813
   périgourdine 813
   périgieux 813
   piémontaise 821–2

- pineapple 827
 pine kernel, à l'italienne 814
 piquante 814
 poivrade 813
 polonaise 822 poor man's 814
 portugaise 814
 Port wine 814
 poulette 822
 princesse 822
 printanière 822
 provençale 814, 825
   garlic 822
 raspberry 827
 ravigote 762, 814, 822, 825 reducing 808p red wine 809, 815 reform 815 remoulade 825
 riche 819
 Richelieu 822
 Robert 778, 815
 roebuck 815
 romaine 815 roudzé 34
 rouennaise 815
 royal 822
 Russian 822, 825
 sage and onion 822
 Sainte-Menehould 815
 St Malo 822
 salmis 815
   with Champagne 815
   with red wine 816
 sardalaise 827
 saupiquet 829
 Scotch egg 822
 shallot 817, 822, 827
 shrimp 822
 soubise 822
 soya 889
 straining 813p, 814p, 901-2 strawberry 827
 suprême 808, 822-3
 Swedish 827
 Talleyrand 823
 tarragon 816
 tartare 827
 tomato 807-8
 tortue 816
 truffle 939
 La Varenne 827
 velouté 808
   with green onions 823 thick 816

 Venetian 823 venison 816 verdurette 827
 Véron 823
 Victoria 816, 823
 Villeroi 823
 vinaigrette 826p, 827
 Vincent 827, 968
 Waterfisch 976
 white: basic 808
   compound 816-23
 white wine 823
 Worcestershire 1002
 Yorkshire 816
 zingara 816
 saucisson 827-8, 827p, 828p sauerkraut 828-9, 828p
   à l'alsacienne 829
   as garnish 829
   omelette à l'alsacienne 351
   salad 791
   à l'allemande 829 as soup garnish 829
   à la strasbourgeoise 829
 saupiquet 829
 saur 829 saurel 829 sausages 830-1
   à la catalane 720
   chipolata 720
   country 720-1
   crêpinettes 288
   devilled chipolata 484
   à la duchesse 484
   eel 330
   forcemeat for poultry 387
   Frankfurt 484, 830
   for garnish 830
   grilled 830
   as hors d'oeuvre 468, 484
   household (home-made) 828
   à l'italienne 484
   à la languedocienne 484, 830
   long 830
   Lyon 828
   à la lyonnaise 484
   madrilène 830
   à la maltaise 484
   pig's liver 721 pork 711, 720
   red 830
   with red or green cabbage 720
   with risotto 830
   à la piémontaise 831
   roll 831
   smoked 830p, 831
   Strasbourg 484, 831
   Toulouse 831
   à la tyrolienne 484
   Vienna 484, 831
   in white wine 831
   à la zingara 484
 sauté (method) 831
 sauté pan 831, 831p
 sautés 299, 831
   fish 831
   meat 831
 savarin 831-2
   cherry, à la Chantilly 832
   à la crème 832
   dough for 318-19
   Montmorency 832
   pineapple 701
 savarin mould 831p saveloys 468
 savory 832
 savouries 832
 savouring 832-3
 Savoy 833
   gastronomic map 834p
 savoyarde, à la 833
 Sawo manila 834, 835p
 Saxifrage 834
 Scabious 834 scald 834 scale 834 scallion 834 scallop 834
 scallop Saint-Jacques 834-5, 835p, 836p brochettes 835
   fried 835
   in batter 835
   Colbert 835
   à la tartare 835-6
   au gratin 835
   à la dieppoise 835
   in mayonnaise 835
   Mornay 835
 scallop shells: garnished 484-6
 scampi, see prawns, Dublin Bay Scandinavia: cookery 509-10
 scarus 836
 Schaleth, Jewish 836
 Schnitzel 836
 scolymus 836
 scorzonera 802
 scoter-duck 836
 scum 836 sea anemones 836 sea bass 836 sea bream 836, 836p sea cow 836
 seafoods 836, 836p
   flan 378
   fritters 395
   omelette 355
   ragoût 760
   risotto 836-7
 seakale 837
 seakale beet, see Swiss chard seal 837 sea-lark 908 sea perch 837 sea slug 837 seasoning 837
 sea urchin 837, 837p
   purée 746, 837
 seaweed 6 iridescent 512 sea wrack 837
 sébille 837
 Seltzer water 837
 semolina 837
   English pudding 838
   flamiri 377
   fritters 397
   gnocchi 418
   kasha 523, 837-8
   little croustades 292
   pavés, small 676
   pudding 744, 838
   with fruit 838p ring filled with various fruit 136
   subrics 487, 838
 sept-oeil 838
 Serdeau (Sers d'eau) 838 service 838-9
 service-berry 839, 839p serviette 839
 serviette, à la 839-40
 sesame 840
 sesame seed oil 648 Seyssel 840
 shad 840, 840p Claudine 840
   fried 840
   à l'anglaise 840
   Orly 840
   grilled 840
   with mushrooms, à la bonne femme 840 on plank 840
   au plat 840
   stuffed: à l'ancienne 840
   à la ménagère 840-1
   à la mode de Cocherel 841

- à la portugaise 840
- shad-bush 841
- shaggy ink cap 841
- shallot 841
  - butter 169, 841
  - essence 363, 841
  - marchand de vins
    - butter 169
    - sauce 827
- shark 841
- sharpen 841
- sharpening steel 841, 841p
- shchi 888
- she-ass 841
- sheep: brains, see brains
  - head 633
  - kidney, see kidneys
  - liver, see liver
  - tails: braised 620
  - grilled 620
- trotters 635
  - en blanquette 635
  - in crépinettes à la périgourdine 635
  - croquettes 635
  - fried 635
  - à l'ancienne 635
  - fritots 478
  - à la hongroise 635
  - à la poulette 635–6
  - à la rouennaise 636
  - à la vinaigrette 468, 636
- shell 841
- shellfish: flan 379
  - fritters 395
  - hash 450
  - as hors d'œuvre 465
  - loaves 559
  - mayonnaise 581
  - oil 648
  - pannequets 664
  - patties 483
  - pie 692
  - salad 791
- shepherd's purse 841
- sherberts 494–5, 841–2
  - Madeira 570
- Sherry 842
  - cobbler 842
- shin 842
- shirr 842
- shortbread 842
- shoulder 842
- shredder and slicer 842
- shrike 842
- shrimps 468, 842, 842p
  - aspic 58, 842
  - barquettes 471
- bisque 878
- butter 169
- canapés 462
- cold mousse 843
- coquilles 842
- croûtes à la Nantua 293
- forcemeat 389
- fried 843
- omelette 355
- pannequets 664
- patties 483
- pilaf 843
- purée 746
- rougail 781
- salad 468, 843
  - à la dieppoise 792
- salpicon 801
- sauce 822
- scallop shells 486
- soufflé 864
- soup 843
  - purée 878
  - velouté 879
  - à la normande 879
- sigui: smoked 468
- silk-cotton tree 843
- silkworms 843
- Sillery 843
- silver 843, 844p, 845p
- silver birch 843
- silverside (athérine) 59, 59p, 843
- simarouba 843
- simmering 843
- singeing 843
- sink 843
- siphon 843, 846p
- sirloin 846
- skate 846, 846p
  - au beurre noir 846
  - au beurre noisette 846
  - boiled, with various
    - saucers 846
  - fried 846
  - au gratin 846
  - jellied 846
  - liver 846
    - and brown butter,
      - scallop shells of 486
    - croûtes 476, 846
    - fritters 846
  - à la polonaise, scallop
    - shells 486
  - à la meunière 846
- skewer 846
  - food cooked on 60–1
- skim 847
- skimmer 847, 847p
- skin 847
- skinning 847
- skirret 847
- slang, culinary and table 392–3
- slaughter 847, 847p
- slaughter house 847–8, 848p
- sleeve-fish, see calamary
- slimness 848
- sloe 848
- smallage 848
- smell 848
- smelts 848
  - à l'anglaise 848
  - en escabèche 849
  - fried 849, 849p
    - skewered 849
  - au gratin 849
  - grilled 849
    - à l'anglaise 849
  - in marinade 468
  - on skewers 849, 849p
  - soup, velouté 879
    - à la dieppoise 879
    - à l'indienne 879
- smoking (preserving) 734
- smoking (tobacco) 849
- snail dish 850p
- snail pincers and fork 850p
- snails 849, 850p
  - à l'arlésienne 850
  - à la bourguignonne 850
  - broth 850
  - butter for, à la
    - bourguignonne 169
  - à la chablisienne 850
  - Comtesse Riguidi 850
  - à la poulette 850
- snipe 850, 851p
  - casserole 850–1
  - croustade, with truffles 851
  - hot pâté Lucullus 851
- snipe, great 851
- snow 851
- snowball 851
- snow partridge 851
- soaking 851
- sobronade 851
- soda-water 851
- sodium perborate 130
- softening 852
- soft roes, see roes, soft
- sole 852–3
  - à l'américaine 853
  - à l'amiral 853
  - à l'anglaise 853
  - à l'arlésienne 853
  - aspic 56p
  - attereaux: à l'ancienne 853
- à la moderne 853
- with aubergines 853
- barquettes 853
- beignets 853
- Bercy 853
- à la bonne femme 853
- border of filets
  - diplomate 855
- à la bourguignonne 853
- à la bretonne 853
- brochettes, à la
  - duxelles 853
- cardinal 853
- Colbert 854
- curried 854
- à la diplomate 854
- filets 854
  - à l'américaine 854
  - à l'ancienne 854
  - à l'anglaise 854
  - à l'armoricaine 854
  - aspic of, à la
    - parisienne 854–5
  - Bercy 855
  - boiled 855
  - Boitelle 855
  - à la bonne femme 855
  - à la bordelaise 855
  - à la bourguignonne 855
  - à la cancalaise 855
  - cardinal 855, 855p
  - à la catalane 855
  - with Chambertin 855
  - Chauchat 855, 855p
  - Chivry 855
  - cold 855–6
  - with courgettes 856
  - Crécy 856
  - Cubat 856
  - cutting 854p
  - Daumont 856
  - dauphine 856
  - à la dieppoise 856
  - à l'espagnole 856
  - à la fécompoise 856
  - à la florentine 856
  - fried 856
  - en goujons 856, 856p
  - au gratin 856
  - grilled 856
  - à la hongroise 856
  - à l'indienne 856–7
  - à la Jacques 857
  - Joinville 857
  - en julienne 857
  - Marguery 857

- Marivaux 857
- à la meunière 857
- Montreuil 857
- Montrouge 857
- Mornay 857
- Murat 857
- with mushrooms 857
- with mussels 857
- à la Nantua 857
- à la normande 857, 858p
- à l'orientale 857
- Orly 858
- with oysters 858
- à la panetière 858
- Parmentier 858
- à la paysanne 858
- à la piémontaise 858
- en pilaf 858
- sur le plat 858
- poached 855
- princesse 858
- with red wine 859
- Riche 858
- Richelieu 858, 858p
- Saint-Germain 858
- with shrimps 858
- skinning 854p
- Sylvette 858
- en torsade 859
- à la trouvillaise 859
- à la vénitienne 859
- Véron 859
- Victoria 859
- with white wine 859
- Walewska 859
- flan à la normande 379
- à la florentine 859
- fondants à la Nantua 478
- fried 859
- fritters 859
- golden 859
- au gratin 859–60
- grilled 860
- gulyas 860
- marchand de vin 860
- à la marinière 860
- en matelote à la normande 860
- mayonnaise à l'ancienne 581
- à la ménagère 860
- à la meunière 860
- meunière Mont-Bry 860
- Montreuil 860
- Mornay 860
- mousse 860
- with mushrooms 860
- à la Nantua 860
- à la niçoise 860
- Noël 860
- à la normande 861
- pâté 861
- paupiettes 861
- Mont-Bry 861, 861p
- à la nissarde 861
- Paillard 861
- pavé 676
- à la paysanne 861
- pie 692
- pilaf 861
- sur le plat 861–2
- poached, various sauces 862
- à la portugaise 862
- à la provençale 862
- purée 862
- quenelles 862
- with red wine 862
- Richelieu 862
- ring, à la normande 135, 135p
- risotto 862
- à la russe 861
- Saint-Germain 862
- scallop shells of 862
- with shrimps 862
- skinning 852p
- tartlets 853
- timbale à l'américaine 926
- timbale of filets: à l'ancienne 858–9
- Grimaldi 859
- à la normande 859
- Victoria 859
- turban of filets 859
- vol-au-vent of filets 859
- with white wine 862
- solilem (solimene) 862
- Solomon's seal 862
- Solyanka 888
- sommelier 862
- sorb-apple 862, 863p
- sorbets 841–2
- sorghum 862
- sorrel 862
- braised 863
- chiffonnade 240, 863
- with cream 863
- mixed 240
- fondue 386
- fritters 395
- omelette 355
- à la verdurière 355
- preserved 863
- purée 863
- sot-l'y-laisse 863
- soubise 863
- soubise, à la 394
- sou-fassum 863
- soufflès 863
- almond 866
- ambassadrice 866
- à l'américaine 486
- apple 42, 866
- Russian 866
- apricot 866
- aubergine 63
- à la hongroise 63
- au parmesan 63
- à l'aurore 486
- banana 76
- brains 863
- à la chanoinesse 863
- calf's liver 644, 863
- calf's sweetbreads 646–7
- carrot 190
- cauliflower 196
- cheese 863–4, 864p
- cherry 217, 866
- Montmorency 217
- chestnut 218, 864
- soubise 864
- sweet 218
- chicken 236, 864
- liver 863
- à la mirepoix 864
- with truffles 864
- chicory 239, 864
- with Parmesan 864
- chocolate 866
- coffee 866, 867p
- crayfish: à la Nantua 486
- à la normande 864
- with Parmesan 486
- cream-based 865
- Curaçao 866
- endive 360
- with Parmesan 360
- fish 864
- foie gras 383
- fruit-based 865–6
- fruit: mixture 594
- game 864
- à la Périgieux 864
- ham 864
- à la strasbourgeoise 864
- hare 449
- hazelnut 866
- à la hongroise 864
- iced 495
- Jerusalem artichoke 520, 864
- lemon 866
- lettuce 554, 864
- liqueur-flavoured 866
- lobster 565, 864
- mandarin 866
- meat 864
- Mont-Bry 866
- mushroom 604
- omelette 357
- orange 653, 866
- oyster 661
- à la cancalaise 486
- Palmyra 866
- Parmesan 864
- partridge 669
- peach 679, 866
- pear 682, 866
- plum Lorraine 708
- potato 864
- with cheese 864
- à la hongroise 864
- praline 866
- à la princesse 486
- pumpkin 745
- Rothschild 866
- Rouen duckling 326
- savoury 863–5
- shrimp 864
- small 486
- soft roe 486
- spinach 865, 865p
- à la florentine 865
- spiny lobster 865
- strawberry 866
- sweet 865–6
- sweetbreads 865
- sweet potato 864, 911
- tea 866
- tomato 865, 928
- truffle 865, 939
- with Parmesan 865
- turnip 945
- vanilla 866
- vegetable 865
- violet 866
- walnut 866
- woodcock 1001
- soupe 866
- aïgo bouïdo à la ménagère 882
- aïgo bouïdo with poached eggs 882
- aïgo à la ménagère 881
- aïgo-saou 881
- albigeoise 882
- Soupir de Nonne 888
- soup ladle 888
- soups 868
- Andalusian 879
- Arles 882
- artichoke: cream of 873–4
- velouté 878

- asparagus: cream of 874
  - cream of (white), called Argenteuil 874
  - velouté 878
- barley, cream of 874
- bean: cream of 874
  - purée of 875
- beer 118, 883, 884p
- beetroot: à l'allemande 883
- à la russe 883
- bijane 124
- à la bonne femme 882
- bougras 138
- bouillon de nocce (wedding) 140
- bread for 146
- Brussels sprouts, purée of 875
- buttermilk 170
  - with cabbage and miques 882
- carrot, purée of, called Crécy 875
- cauliflower, purée of, called Dubarry 875
- celery: cream of 874
  - purée of 875
  - velouté 878
- chaudrée de fouras 207
- cheese 882
- cherry 884–5
- chestnut, purée of 875
- chicken: cream of 236
  - English 885
  - purée of, à la reine 875–6
  - velouté 878–9
- chicory: cream of 874
  - purée of 876
- Chinese artichoke, cream of 874
- Chotodriec 885
- clam with vegetables 885
- clarifying and enriching 296
- classical 881–3
- clear 868–70
- cock-a-leekie 885
- crab, purée of 876
- crayfish: cream of 874
  - purée of 876
  - velouté 879
- cream 873–5
- Dublin Bay prawn velouté 879
- endive: cream of 874
  - velouté 879
- à la farine 882
- fish, with vermicelli à la marseillaise 882
- flour 888
- frog velouté à la sicilienne 879
- game: purée 876
  - velouté 879
- garden cress, purée 876
- garlic à la provençale 882
- gulyas 885, 885p
- gumbo 885
- hare 885
- Hungarian, with liver dumplings 886
- international 883–8
- jambe de bois 517
- Jerusalem artichoke:
  - cream of 874
  - purée of 876
- khlodnik 524
- leek, cream of 874, 874p
- lentil, purée of, à la Conti 876
- lettuce: cream of 874
  - purée of 876
  - velouté 879
- Lithuanian 886
- liver, purée of 886
- Livonian, with klyotski 886
- lobster: cream of 874
  - purée of 876
  - velouté 879
- magistères 571
- marrow, cream of 874
  - with meat balls and vermicelli 505p
- Milanais tripe 888
- mille-fanti 886
- minestrone 886, 886p
- mock-turtle 886–7
- mulligatawny 887
- mushroom: cream of 874
  - velouté Pierre-le-grand 879
- mussel 607
- mutton, à la grecque 887
  - nettle, cream of 874
- oatmeal 628
  - cream of 628, 874
  - au naturel 628
- occa, cream of 874
- okra 885
- olla-podrida 650
- onion 882, 883p
- onion gratinée 882
- ouka 657
- oxtail: clear 887
  - thick 887
- oyster 661, 880–1
  - with okra 887
  - velouté 879
- partridge velouté 879
- pea (fresh), purée
  - Saint-Germain 876, 877p
- pea (split), purées of 876
  - Périgord 'sobronade' 882
- pistou 704, 887
- Portuguese 881
- potato, purée
  - Parmentier 877, 877p
- puchero 887
- pumpkin, purée of 877–8
- purée 875–8
  - Conti à la brunoise 876
  - Conti à la julienne 876
  - Crécy aux perles 876
  - Crécy with rice 876
- purslane, purée of 878
- redcurrant 124
- red haricot bean, purée of, called à la Condé 875
- regional 881–3
- rice, cream of 874
- salep 792
- shrimp 843
  - cream of 874
  - velouté 879
- smelt velouté 879
- sobronade 851
- sour cream 888
- special 879–81
- spelt 883
- spinach: cream of 874, 875p
  - velouté 879
- spiny lobster: cream of 875
  - purée of 878
  - velouté 879
- swallows' nest 910
- sweet potato, purée of 877
- sweet sour 888
- thick 873–81
- tomato, purée of 878, 878p
- turnip, purée à la Freneuse 878
- turtle 888
- veal with herbs 888
- velouté 873, 878–9
- watercress, cream of 875
  - white haricot bean, purée of, called Soissonnais 875
- whiting à la bretonne 883, 884p
- souvarov 889
- souvarov (suvorow), à la 889
- sow-thistle 889, 889p
- soya bean 889, 889p
  - curd 889
  - extract 889
  - meat 889
  - milk 889
  - sauce (extract) 889
- spaghetti 889
  - alla bolognese 513p
  - croustades à la napolitaine 476
  - à la napolitaine 889
- Spain: cookery 510
- sparklet 889
- speculos 890
- spelt: soup 883
- Spetzli 890
- spice cake 179
- spices 890
  - fine 890
  - four 390
  - mixed 890
- spicy 890
- spider crab 890, 890p
- spikenard 890
- spinach 890–1, 891p
  - à l'anglaise 891
  - bouillabaisse 140
  - brèdes 148
  - in butter 891
  - canapés à la florentine 472
  - in cream 891
  - croquettes 891
  - croûtes au gratin 891
  - dartois à la florentine 477
  - flan à la florentine 378
  - fritters 395–6
    - à la florentine 479
    - vegetarian, à la romaine 480
  - au gratin 891
  - in gravy 891
  - green butter 168
  - loaves à la romaine 559–60
  - in noisette butter 891
  - omelette 355

- à la florentine 353
- pancakes 891
- purée 748
- salad 891
- soufflé 865, 865p
  - à la florentine 865
- soup: cream of 874, 875p
  - velouté 879
- subrics 891
  - à la florentine 486
  - with sugar 891
- talmouses 487
- spinach, giant Mexican 891
- spinach, wild 891
- spiny lobster 465, 891–2
  - à l'américaine 892
- aspic 58, 892
- bisque 878
- boiled, with various sauces 892
- à la bordelaise 892
- à la bourgeoise 892
- butter 170, 892
- cardinal 892
- cassolettes 473
- collops: à l'andalouse 892, 892p
  - à la parisienne 892, 893p
- coquilles of 893
- in court-bouillon 893
- in cream 893
- croquettes 475, 893
- curried 893
- cutting 892p
- demi-deuil 893
- au gratin 893
- grilled 893
- kromeskies 893
- mayonnaise 581
- Mornay 893
- à la moscovite 893
- mousse and mousseline 893
- à la nage 893
- à la niçoise 893–4
- omelette 355
- à la parisienne 894
- patties 483
  - à l'américaine 483
- pie 692
- pilaf 894
- risotto 894
- à la russe 894
- salad 790, 894
- salpicon 800, 801
- soufflé 865
  - à l'américaine 486
- soup 878
  - cream of 875
  - velouté 879
  - on the spit 894
  - stew 894
    - with various sauces 894
- spirits 894–5
- spit roasting 298
- spits 895–6, 895p
  - turnspit 946
- spleen 896
- spondias 896
- sponge cakes 896
  - almond sandwich cake 896
  - batters for 320
  - fingers 896, 896p, 897p
  - Italian sandwich cake 896–7
  - punch sandwich cakes 897
  - sandwich cake manqué 897
  - savoy 897, 897p
- spooms 495
- spoons 897
- sprats 468, 989
- spray gun 512
- spruce beer 898
- 'spurs of Bacchus' 898
- squab, see pigeon
- squash 898, 898p
- squid, see calamary
- squill-fish 898
- squirrel 898
- stalk 898
- Stamppot 898, 898p
- star anise 69–70, 69p, 898
- starch 898
- starling 804, 898
- star of Bethlehem 898
- steeping 898
- steerin 898
- sterilise 899
- sterlet 899
- stickleback 899
- stockfish 899
  - à la niçoise 899
- stocks 899
  - clarifying and enriching 296
  - fish 899
    - with red wine 899
  - game 899
  - light brown 899–900
  - meat 868–9
  - tomato veal 900
  - veal 900
  - white 900
  - white poultry 900
- Stollen 900, 900p
- stomach 901
- stonecrop 901
- stone-curlew 901, 901p
- stopper 901
- stove, kitchen 901, 901p
- strainer 901, 901p
- straining bag 902
- strasbourgeoise, à la 418
- strawberries 902, 902p
  - Bavarian cream 91
  - cardinal 902
  - in Champagne 902
  - compote 260, 902
  - Condé 902
  - and cream 902
  - Czarina 902
  - fondant icing 498
  - fritters 397
  - ice 492
    - mixture 902–3
  - à l'impératrice 903
  - jam 517
    - with liqueurs 903
  - à la maltaise 903
  - omelette 357
  - paste jelly 520
  - pulp for ices 903
  - ratafia 903
  - sauce 827
  - soufflé 866
  - tart 918
    - à l'allemande 917
  - tartlets 919
  - with various dessert wines 903
- strawberry spinach, see Swiss chard
- strawberry tomato 903
  - compote 903
  - glacé in caramel 903
  - glacé in fondant icing 903
  - jam 903
  - syrup 903
- straw-case 902
- straws, see allumettes
- Stritzel 903
- stromateus 904, 904p
- Strudel 904
- stuff, to 904
- stuffings, see forcemeats
- sturgeon 904, 904p
  - à la Brimont 904
  - in Champagne 904
  - curried 904
  - fillets Boris 904
  - fricandeau: à la hongroise 904
  - au jus 904–5
  - with sorrel 905
  - steaks in cream 905
- subrics 486, 905
- beef à la ménagère 905
- brain: à l'italienne 486
  - and bone-marrow 486
- endive 360
- à la florentine 486
- foie gras 905
- goose liver 486
- à la ménagère 486
- potato 730, 905
- poultry liver 486
- rice 776
  - à la piémontaise 487
- semolina 487, 838
- spinach 891
- sweetbread 487
  - and bone-marrow 486
- suc 905
  - of meat 905
- sucées 905
- suédoise 905
- sugar 905–8
  - anise 908
  - aniseed-flavoured 31
  - barley 85
  - boiling 907
  - cinnamon 908
  - clove 908
  - flavoured 908
  - ginger 908
  - lemon peel 908
  - manufacture in 17th century 905p
  - model in 906p
  - orange 908
  - orange flower 908
  - orange peel 908
  - perfumed 908
  - pulled: paniers 664
  - syrup prepared cold 907–8
  - vanilla 908, 952
- sugar palm 46
- sultanas 434
- sultane 908
- sultane, à la 419, 908
- sultan-hen 908
- summer snipe 908
- sumptuousness 908
- sundaes, see coupes
- sundew 909
- sunflower 909
- superstitions of the table 909–10
- support 910
- suprêmes 910
- Suresnes 910
- swallow 910
- swallows' nests 622–3, 623p

- consommé with 870
- soup 910
- swan 910–11
- swede 911
- Sweden: cookery 509–10
- sweetbreads 911
- attereaux 470
- brochettes 472
- calves' 181
- à l'anversoise 644
- attereaux Villeroi 60
- à la banquière 644
- braised in brown stock 644
- braised in white stock 644
- Clamart 644
- à la fermière 646
- à la financière 646
- fritters 396
- grilled, with various garnishes 646
- à la japonaise 646
- à la jardinière 646
- à la macédoine 646
- à la Nantua 646
- à la périgourdine 646
- pie à l'ancienne 693
- poached 646
- poêlé 646
- princesse 646
- Régence 646
- roast 646
- soufflé 646–7
- Talleyrand 647
- Toulouse (toulousaine) 647
- with various purées 646
- with various vegetables 647
- cassolettes 473
- escalopes of calves': à l'ancienne 644, 645p
- in breadcrumbs 644–5
- in butter 645
- fried, in allemande sauce 645
- au gratin 645
- à l'italienne 645
- à la maréchale 645
- à la milanaise 645
- Rossini 645
- Saint-Germain 645–6
- served in pastry case 645p
- with truffles 646, 646p
- Villeroi 646
- fritots 478
- fritters 396, 479
- hash 451
- lambs' 634
- attereaux Villeroi 60, 60p
- fritters 396
- hot pâté à l'ancienne 634
- pie 693
- pilaf 634
- scallop shells of 486
- Villeroi 634p
- vol-au-vent, with truffles and mushrooms 634–5
- purée 746
- salpicon 801
- Cussy 801
- scallop shells 486
- soufflé 865
- subrics 486, 487
- sweet Cecily 217
- sweetcorn (corn-on-the-cob) 275, 275p
- à la béchamel 275
- boiled 275
- bread 275
- in butter 275
- in cream 275
- freezing 736
- grilled 275
- omelette 355
- en suso with chicken giblets 275–6
- sweeten 911
- sweet potato 911
- baked (in jackets) 911
- boiled with honey 911
- à la crème 911
- croquettes 911
- fried 911
- au gratin 911
- à l'impériale (Henri) 911
- omelette 355
- pudding 744, 911
- purée 911
- salad 911
- soufflé 864, 911
- soup, purée of 877
- stewed 911
- swift 911
- Swiss chard 911
- à la béchamel 911
- au blanc 911
- buttered 911
- in cream 911–12
- au gratin 912
- in gravy 912
- à la hollandaise 912
- à l'italienne 912
- à la lyonnaise 912
- à la milanaise 912
- à la moelle 912
- Mornay 912
- à la polonaise 912
- Swiss roll 912, 912p
- Switzerland: cookery 510–11
- swizzle stick 912
- swordfish 912
- syringe 912
- syrup 912
- almond 912
- for babas 69
- blackcurrant 912
- cherry 912
- citric acid 912
- coffee 913
- gooseberry 912
- gum 913
- lemon 551
- mulberry 912
- orange 913
- orgeat 655, 913
- plain 913
- raspberry 912
- tangerines 915
- flan 918–19
- fritters 397
- ice 492
- iced 496, 915
- liqueur 556
- soufflé pudding 742
- en surprise 915
- in syrup 915
- tankard 915
- tapenade 468
- tiapioca 915
- pudding 744
- Brazilian 741
- thickening with 922
- tapis 915
- tarragon 915, 915p
- bottled 915
- butler 170
- cream 915–16
- dried 916
- essence 363
- pickled 916
- purée 748, 916
- sauce 816
- vinegar 916
- tartare 916
- tartare, à la 916
- tartaric acid 919
- tartine 919
- Swiss 919
- tartlets 919
- Agnès Sorel 487
- almond 17
- apple 919
- apricot 919
- barquettes 85–6
- Argenteuil 487
- Béatrix 487
- cases or shells 919
- caviare 463
- cherry 919
- cocks' combs 246
- curried 487
- à l'écossaise 487
- garnished 468, 487
- à la japonaise 487
- little croustades 292
- Metternich 487
- à la mirepoix 487
- Nemours 622
- pear 919
- plum 919
- Printania 487
- raspberry 919
- Regina 487
- strawberry 919
- tarts 916
- Alsatian 916
- anchovy with pissalat 470

T

- tablecloths 914
- drawings on 557, 558p
- table decorations 914
- tacaud 914
- Taillevant (Guillaume Tirel) 914
- tailloir 914
- Talleyrand-Périgord, Charles Maurice 915, 915p
- talmouses 487
- à l'ancienne 487
- à la pâtisserie 487
- Saint-Denis 487
- spinach 487
- tamarind 915
- tammy cloth 915

- apple 916–17, 916p
  - à l'alsacienne 917
  - with lattice-work decoration 917
- apricot 917
  - à l'alsacienne 917
- Austrian 918, 918p
- banana à la crème 75
- cases baked blind 916
- cherry 917, 917p
  - à l'alsacienne 917, 917p
  - Danish 217
  - meringue with rice 217
- of Demoiselles Tatin 917
- fig 917
- flamiche 377
- foie gras: à l'ancienne 384
  - with truffles 384
- fruit: à l'allemande 917
  - à l'alsacienne 918
- latticed 549, 549p
- Me'gin 918
- Messina apple 917
- mushroom 604
- nectarine 918
- peach 679, 918
- pear 918
- pineapple 701, 908
  - à la royale 701
- plum 918, 918p
- raspberry 918
- rhubarb 722p
  - English 918
- rice 775
  - with apricots 775
- strawberry 918
- taste 919
- tâte-vin 919, 920p
- Taverne Anglaise 771
- tea 919–21, 920p
  - ice cream 493
  - soufflé 866
  - trefoil 932
  - wormseed 1002
- tea-caddy 920p
- teal 921
- teapots 921, 921p
- tench 921, 921p
- tendon 921
- terfezia 921
- terrapin 921–2
- terrinerie 922
- tête d'aloïau 922
- thao 922
- thickening 922
- thistle 922
- thonne 922
- thourins 922
  - à la provençale 922
- thrush 923
  - à l'ardennaise 923
  - à la bonne femme 923
  - en caisses 923
  - casserole 923
  - chaud-froid 923
  - en cocotte 923
  - with grapes 923
  - au gratin 923
  - à la liégeoise 923
  - pâté 923
  - pie 693, 923
    - à l'ardennaise 693
    - à la cévenole 693
  - with polenta 710
  - potted 923
  - roast 923
- thyme 923
- thymus 923
- tiger 924
- timbales 924
  - Agnès Sorel 924
  - à l'amiral 487
  - Bagration 487–8
  - Beauvilliers 488
  - Brillat-Savarin 926
  - carrot 190
  - crayfish: à l'ancienne 285
    - à la mode de Chavillieu 285
  - Elysée 926
  - à l'épicurienne 488
  - à la fermière 488
  - fillets of sole: à l'ancienne 858–9
    - Grimaldi 859
    - à la normande 859
    - Victoria 859
  - garnished 487
  - lamb à l'ancienne 545
  - large case or crust 924, 925p
  - macaroni: à l'américaine 926
    - à la milanaise 926
  - à la milanaise 488
  - Monselet 926
  - à la Montrouge 488
  - à la nantuaïenne 488
  - partridge 669
  - pears d'Aremberg 682
  - à la piémontaise 488
  - à la polonaise 488
  - à la printanière 488
  - à la Rossini 488
  - Rouen duckling Boïsin 326
  - à la Saint-Hubert 488
- sole à l'américaine 926
- truffles 939
- vegetables 926
- woodcock 1001
- tin 926
- tinamou 926, 926p
- tinny 926
- tinplate 926
- tisane 926–7
- toast 927
  - and ale 8
  - anchovy 25
  - garlic 408
  - garnished 468
- toaster 927
- tobacco 927
- toddy palm 927
- tomatoes 927, 927p
  - Andalusian soup 879
  - à l'antiboise 468–9
  - butter 170
  - essence 363–4
  - fondue 386, 927–8
    - à la grecque 928
    - à la niçoise 928
    - à la portugaise 928
    - à la turque 928
  - freezing 736
  - fried 928
  - fritters 396
  - as garnish 419
  - glaze, concentrated 928
  - gratin of, and aubergine 928
  - grilled 928
  - as hors d'oeuvre 468
  - jam 517
  - juice 787
  - ketchup (catsup) 524, 928
  - loaf 928
  - mousse, cold 928
  - mousseline, cold 928
  - omelette 355, 355p
    - Portuguese 354
    - à la provençale 354
  - pulp 928
  - purée, royale of 418
  - raw, rougail 781
  - salad 928
  - salpicon 801
  - sauce 807–8
  - sauté: aux fines herbes 928
    - à la lyonnaise 928
    - à la provençale 928
  - soufflé 865, 928
  - soufflé tomatoes 928–9
  - soup, purée of 878, 878p
- stuffed 469, 469p, 929, 929p
  - à la bonne femme 929
  - cold 929
  - à l'italienne 930
  - à la languedocienne 929
  - à la niçoise 929
  - à la parisienne 929–30
  - à la piémontaise 930
  - à la reine 930
  - à la vinaigrette 469, 930
- tomato, strawberry, see strawberry tomato
- tomber 930
  - à glace 930
- tongue: calf's 647
  - lamb's 634, 635
    - braised with various garnishes 635
    - en crépinettes 635
    - devilled 635
    - fritot 635
    - au gratin 635
    - à la hongroise 635
    - à l'italienne 635
    - pickled 635
    - à la poulette 635
    - skewered 635
    - à la vinaigrette 635
- ox 630, 630p
  - à l'alsacienne 630
  - atteraux à l'écoissaise 60
  - à la bourgeoise 630
  - braised with various garnishes 630
  - braised with various sauces 630
  - à la diable 630
  - au gratin 630
  - pickled (scarlet) 630
  - salad 466
  - pickled: canapés 462
  - salpicon: à l'écarlate 801
    - and smoked 469
  - pig's 637–8
- tonka beans 930
- torpedo 930
- Tortoni 771
- toscane, à la 419
- tôt-fait 930
- touffe 930
- toulousaine, à la 419, 930
- Touraine 930–1
  - gastronomic map 930p
- tourain périgourdin 882–3

- Tour d'Argent 771, 771p tour de feuilletage 930 tourin 922
 tourri 657
 tourte (porridge) 218
 tourtes 931
   apricot 931-2
   Corsican 932
   eel 334
     Rabelais, cold 334 as entrées 931
   à la mode béarnaise 932
   sweet 931-2
   truffle à la
     périgourdine 939
   with various fruits 932
 tourteau 932
 tourtière 932
 tragacanth 932 trait 932
 traiteur 932
 Tranchant 932
 Trancheur 932
 tranchoir 914, 932
 travailler 932
 trefoil 932
 trencher 932 tricladium 933
 triggerfish 933, 933p trigle 933 trimmings 933
 tripe 730, 933-4
   en blanquette 630
   à la bourgeoise 630-1
   à la fermière 631
   fried, in breadcrumbs 631
   grilled à l'espagnole 631
   à la lyonnaise 631
   à la mode de Caen 631, 632p
   à la polonaise 631
   à la portugaise 631
   à la poulette 631-2
   à la provençale 632
   sautéed in butter 632-3
   soup, Milanaise 888
 triperie 934
 trognon 934 trois frères 934 mould 934p trou de milieu 934
 trout 934, 934p
   marinated 469
   à l'orientale 469
   smoked 469
 trout, river 934 blue trout 934
   boiled, with various sauces 934
   à la bourguignonne 934 Colbert 934-5
   cold 935
   fillets en papillotes à l'ancienne 935
   fried 935, 935p
   grilled 935, 935p
   à l'hôtelière 935 à la hussarde 936
   jellied in red wine 935
   en matelote: à la
     bourguignonne 935
     à la normande 935
     à la tourangelle 935
   à la marinière 935
   in red wine 935-6
   à la vaclusienne 935
   au vert 935
   in white wine 936
 trout, salmon:
   Beauharnais 936
   Berchoux 936
   cold, with various sauces 936, 936p en douillette 936
   glazed au chambertin
     936, 937p
 trouvillaise, à la 419
 truffes 936, 937p, 938p
   attereaux à l'écossaise 60
   butter 170
   with Champagne 937 en chaussons (in turnovers) 937
   choux à la royale 473 cooked in embers 938
   à la crème 937-8
   essence 364
   flan: Brillat-Savarin 378 à la Sagan 378
   forcemeat 389
   fritters 396, 479, 938
     with foie gras 395
   fumet 401
   as garnish 419, 938
   as hors d'oeuvre 469
   with Madeira and other liqueurs 938
   à la maréchale 938
   omelette 355
     Albina 351
     à la bigourdane 352
     Louis Forest 353
     Monselet 353
     Rossini 354
   in pastry à la
     périgourdine 938
   patties 483
   pirozhi 703
   preparing for game and
     poultry 936
   purée 748, 938
   ragoût 760
   rissoles: à l'ancienne 938 à la Valromey 938-9
   salad 939
     Rossini 791
   salpicon 801
   à la bohémienne 800
   à la chalonnaise 800
   Cussy 801
   à la Joinville 801
   à la Montglas 801
   à la reine 801
   à la périgourdine 801
   à la royale 801
   sauce 939
   sauté: Brillat-Savarin 939
     à la provençale 939
   à la serviette 839-40, 939
   soufflé 865
     with Parmesan 865
     small 939
   timbale 939
   tinned 936-7
   tourte à la périgourdine 939 turnovers à la
     périgourdine 946
   truffles, white (Piedmont)
     939 risotto 939-40
     sauté 940
   truite de mer 940
   trumpet fish 940
   truss 940
   trussing needle 622
   tuiles 940 with almonds 940
   tulip 940
   tun 940
   tunny (tuna fish) 940-1
     butter 170
     dariois 477
     as hors d'oeuvre 469
     à la nantaise 469
     in oil 469
     omelette 355
       de Savarin 354-5
     à la provençale 941
     purée 746
   turban 941
   turbot 941, 941p
     à l'américaine 941
     à l'amiral 941
     à la Bercy 941
     boiled, with various sauces 941
     à la bonne femme 941
     braised with various garnishes and sauces 941 à la cancalaise 941
     cold 941
     creamed au gratin 941
     Duglère 941, 941p fillets 941
     fried 942
     au gratin 942
     grilled 942
     kedgerie 942
     en matelote 942
     à la pélerine 942
     pie 692
     à la Saint-Malo 942
     scallopée 942
     à la venitienne 942
     Victoria 942
     in white wine 942
   turbotière 942, 942p
   tureens 942-3, 942p
   Turkey: cookery 511-12
   turkey 943, 943p
     à l'anglaise 943
     ballottines 74
     à la toulousaine 943
   braised 943
   legs with various garnishes 944
   stuffed 943
   casserole 943
   with chestnut stuffing 944
   à la chipolata 943
   en cocotte 943
   cold 944
   daube à la bourgeoise 944
   fricassée 944
   giblets 944
   grilled 944
   hen: galantine en bellevue 944
     stuffed grand-duc 944-5
   liver, see liver pâté, hot 944
   pinions 944
     broth 701
     chasseur 701
     consommé 701
     fricassée 701
     à la niçoise 702
   stuffed, various 702
   en tortue 702

poupeton Brillat-Savarin 944
 ragoût 944
 roast 944
   à l'anglaise 944
 truffled 945
 turnips 945
   boiled 945
   with chopped parsley 945
 au gratin (Mornay) 945
 mould 945
 purée 945
 soufflé 945 soup, purée à la Freneuse 878
 stuffed 945
   à la duxelles 945
   à la piémontaise 945
 in sugar 945
 turnips, sweet 783
 turnip tops 946
 turnovers 946
   apple 946, 946p
   à la Cussy 946
   à la lyonnaise 946
   à la Nantua 946
   à la périgourdine 946
   à la reine 946
 turnspit 946
 turnstone 946 turron 946-7
 turtle 946-7
 turtle 947, 947p
   eggs 357
   soup 888 turtle, hawkbill 451
 turtle-dove 947
 turtle flippers 947
   à l'américaine 947
   à la financière 947
   à l'indienne 947
 turtle herbs 947
 twarogue 947
 Twelfth-Night cakes 179-180, 402, 675 tyrolienne à la 419

U

udder 948 ugli 948
 ukha 888, 948
 ullucu 948
 Ulmaria 948 ulva 948
 umbra 948, 948p
 umbrine 948
 uncorking 948
 United States of America: cookery 502-3 unusual foods 949-50
 Uranoscopus 950
 Urticaria 950
 uval 950

V

vacherin 951 with almond paste crown 951 with crown of meringue 951 with strawberries 951p vaisselle 951
 valenciennes, à la 419, 951
 valesniki 951
   Polish 488
 Valois, à la 419, 951
 vanilla 951-2, 952p
   ice cream 493
   liqueur 556
   sugar 908, 952
 vareniki: Lithuanian 488
 Varenne, La 549 variety meats 628
 vasque 952
 Vatel 952
 Vatrushki 952 with cream cheese 952
   with onion 952
 veal 952. See also calf
   amourettes 638, 952

ballottine 73
 blanquette 952-3, 957p
   à l'ancienne 953
   with various garnishes 953
 breast 953-4, 964
   à l'allemande 954
   à l'alsacienne 954
   à l'anglaise 954
 brochettes 954
 chops 954-5
   à l'ancienne 955
   with basil 955
   Bellevue 955
   à la bonne femme 955
   bouchère 955-6
   bourguignonne 956
   braised 956
   en casserole 956
   chasseur 956
   chaud-froid 956-7
   en cocotte 957
   à la crème 957
   Cussy 957
   à la Custine 957 à la Dreux 957-8
   à la duxelles 958
   à la fermière 958
   aux fines herbes 958
   à la gelée 958
   grilled 958
   à la hongroise 958
   à l'indienne 957
   à la languedocienne 958
   à la lyonnaise 958
   Maintenon 958
   à la maraîchère 958
   à la milanaise 958
   minced: Grimod de la Reynière 958 à la Morland 959
   with mushrooms 959
   en papillote 959, 959p
 Parmentier 959
   à la paysanne 959
   à la piémontaise 959
 Pojarski 959
   en portefeuille 959
   à la portugaise 959
   à la provençale 959
   sautéed, with various garnishes 959
   with truffles 959
 vert-pré 959
 Vichy 959
   à la viennoise 959
   zingara 960
 crépinettes 288
 croquettes 475p cuts 953p, 954p, 955p, 956p
 dagh kebab 303
 émincés 359
 escalopes 960
   à l'anglaise 960
   à l'anversoise 960
   Brancas 960
   Casimir 960 with courgettes or aubergines 960 with French beans 960
   à la jardinière 960
   with rosemary 960
   à la viennoise 960
 feuilletton: à l'ancienne 373
   'l'Echelle' 960
   in jelly, cold 373
   à la périgourdine 373
 fillet 960
 forcemeat: for hot entrées 388 with pork 388 ring with various garnishes 135
 fricadelles 960
 fricandeau 960, 961
 fricassée 960
 grenadins 435, 960
   braised 435-6
 and ham pie 695
 hash 451
   à l'allemande 451
   à la béchamel 451
   with cream sauce 451
   à la Mornay 451
 knuckle: à l'italienne 960-1
   à la provençale 961 leg 962p
 loaf 961 loin 961, 961p
 matelote 961, 963
 médaillons 961 noisettes 961 à la Bénévent 961 noix 961
 offal 629, 638-47
 osso-bucco 960-1
 paupiettes 961 braised à blanc 961 à brun 961
 pie 694
 pilaf 700
 potage Bagration 879
 purée 746

- quasi 962
 quenelle forcemeat 387–8
 quenelles 754
 rib 962, 962p
   cold 962
 rouelle 962
 saddle 962
 salpicon 801
 sautéed 962
   with aubergines 962
   with cèpes, morels or St George's agarics 962
 chasseur 962
 Clamart 962
   à la crème 962
   aux fines herbes 962
   à la hongroise 962
   à l'indienne 962
   Marengo 962–3
   à la minute 963
   with mushrooms 963
   à la portugaise 963
   à la printanière 963
   with red wine 963
 Schnitzel 836
 shoulder 963
   à la boulangère 963
   à la bourgeoise 963
   stuffed 964
   à l'anglaise 964
 soup with herbs 888
 sous-noix 888, 961 stock 900
 tendrons 964
   à la bourgeoise 964
   chasseur 964
   à la jardinière 964
   with mushrooms 964
   with noodles 964
   à la provençale 964
   with risotto 964
   with spinach or sorrel 964
 thonne 922
 tomato veal stock 900
 Vêfour 771 vegetable marrows, see marrows, vegetable vegetables 964
   achar 2
   attereaux 470
   barquettes à la bouquetière 471 boats, garnished 469
   bouillon 140
   brunoise for soups 156 calendar 965–6
   croquettes 475
   printanière 475
   croûtes à la paysanne 476
   far Poitevin 367
   freezing 734, 735–6
   fricassée périgourdine 394
   fritots 478
   fritters 479
     vegetarian, à la printanière 480
     à la romaine 480
   fumet 401, 964
   julienne 469
     à la bretonne 964–5
   loaves 965
   macédoine: with butter 569
     cold 569
     with cream 569
     in jelly 569
   matignon 580
   minestrone 886
   mirepoix 593
   omelette: à la fermière 352
     à la jardinière 353
   patties: à la bouquetière 483
     à la julienne 483
   pickles 965
   pot 453
   potage: fermière 880
     paysanne 881
   printanier butter 169
   purées 746–8
   ragoût, à la printanière 760
   salad 792
   soufflé 865
   spring 468, 468p
   stalks and stumps 965
   timbales: à la fermière 488
     à la printanière 488
     small 926
 veloutés 873, 878–9, 966–7
 venison 967. See also roebuck haunch 967
 Venus 967
 Verbena 967
   liqueur 556
 verjuice 967
   jelly 967
 vermicelli 967
   little croustades 292
   pudding 744
 Vermouth 967
 vert-pré, au 419, 967
 Vervain 967
 Véry 771
 Vespéro 967 vetch 967
 Victoria cake 967
 videlle 967
 Viennese pastry 967
   viennoise, à la 419
 vierge 967
 Villery, à la 394
 vinaigrette 787, 968
 Vin des noces 967–8
 vin du marché 967
 vinegar 968–9
   aromatic 969
   raspberry 969
   rose 969
   tarragon 916
 vines 968, 968p, 983p leaves 549
 vine tendril fritters 396 violets 969
   liqueur 556
   paste jelly 520
   soufflé 866
 visiga: pirozhki 703
 visitors' books 557, 557p
 visniski 969
   fish 969
 vitamins 313, 969
 viveurs 970
 Voisin (restaurant) 771
 vol-au-vent 970
   crayfish 285
   fillets of sole 859
   lambs' sweetbreads with truffles and mushrooms 634–5 lamb with truffles and mushrooms 545
   mincemeat 591
   mushroom 604
   salt cod 255
 volièrre, en 970
 Voltaire (Café) 771 voyage 970
 custard cream filling for 286 filled 971–2
 Liège 972
 Northern 972
 plain 972
 vanilla 972–3 wagtail 973
 Walewska, à la 973 walnuts 973, 973p
   butter 170
   ice cream 493
   ketchup 974
   liqueur 556
     à la carmélite 557
   oil 648, 974
   pickled 973
   soufflé 866
 warbler 974
 warthog 974
 waste matter 974
 water 974
   albuminous 975
   aromatic medicated 975 drinking water 974–5 for finger-bowl 1 sea 975
   table 975 water carrier 974p water chestnut 975 water cooler 7, 7p
 watercress 975, 975p
   brèdes 148
   canapés 462
   cooked with butter 975 cooked with cream 975 cooked au jus 975
   garnish 975
   purée 975
   salad 792, 975
   sandwiches 976
   soup, cream of 875
 waterfisch 976
   sauce 976
 water lily 622 watermelon 976
   jam 517
 water parsnip 976, 976p Waterzootje 976–7
   chicken 976p, 977
 waxwing 977 wedding cake 180
 weaver 977
   en matele vierge 977 weights and measures 977 well 977
 wels 977
 Welsh rabbit (rarebit) 977

INDEX

- whale 977-8
- whale calf 978
- wheat 978
- whisk 978-9, 978p
- Whisky (Whiskey) 979
- whitebait 979
  - marinated 469
  - salad 469
- white beet, see Swiss chard
- white pudding 719, 720
  - grilled 720
- white-tail 979
- whiting 979, 979p
  - à l'anglaise 979
  - à la Bercy 979
  - boiled with melted butter or other sauce 979-80
  - à la bonne femme 980
  - à la cancalaise 980
  - Colbert 980
  - à la dieppoise 980
  - à l'espagnole 980
  - fillets 980, 980p
  - forcemeat 980
  - au gratin 980
  - grilled 980
  - with Italian marrows or aubergines 980
  - en lorgnette 980
  - à la meunière 980
  - mousse 980
  - with mushrooms 981
  - Orly 981
  - with oysters 981
  - paupiettes 981
  - Richelieu 981
  - with shrimps 981
  - soup à la bretonne 883, 884p
  - sur le plat 981
  - in white wine 981
- wholemeal 981
- whortleberry 981, 981p
  - accompaniment to cold meats 981
  - compote 981
  - jam 981
  - jelly 981
  - kissel 981
- Widerkomm 981
- wild arum 981
- wild boar 981-2
  - chine of marcassin à la chipolata 982
  - civet of marcassin 982
  - ham 982
  - sweet-sour 982
  - à l'italienne 982
  - head 982, 982p
  - loin of marcassin 982
  - scalloped marcassin 982-3
- wild chicory 983
- wild thyme 983
- wine lodges 262-5
- wine-making 983-9, 984p, 986p
- wine presses 985p
- wine 983
  - appellations contrôlées 989-90
  - appellations d'origine 39
  - bishop 126
  - in dietetics 990
  - fortification 968
  - international 993-7
  - luxury or liqueur 986
  - marriage 967-8
  - principal French wines 992-3
  - red: sauce 809, 815
  - relating to food 991, 992
  - semi-sparkling 837
  - serving 990
  - sparkling 889-90
  - storing 988p
  - straw 902
  - temperatures for 198-9
  - tête de cuvée 922
  - unfermented 949
  - white: sauce 823
  - wine-flavoured water 124
- wine tasting 832p
- winkle 997
- Winterthur, à la 997
- witloof 997
- woodcock 98p, 998, 998p
- à l'Armagnac 998
- in brandy (à la fine Champagne) 998
- au Calvados 998
- in casserole 998
- au Chambertin 998
- chaud-froid 998
- in cocotte 998
- à la crème 998
- en daube 999
  - à l'ancienne 999
- à la Diane 999
- au fumet 999
- à l'orange 999
- with oysters à l'ancienne 999
- pâté 673-4, 999p, 1000
  - à la périgourdine, hot 999-1000
- à la périgourdine 1000
- pie with truffles 693, 1000
- purée 1000
- à la Riche 1000
- roast 1000
- salmis 1000-1
- sautéed: à la Brillat-Savarin 1001
- in Champagne 1001
- with truffles 1001
- soufflé 1001
- à la Souvarov 1001
- suprêmes 1001, 1001p
- timbale 1001
- truffled (in casserole) 1001
- truffled roast 1001-2
- wood grouse 1002
- woodpecker 1002
- wood pigeon, see pigeons
- Worcestershire sauce 1002
- wormseed 1002
- wormwood 1p, 1002
- wrasse 533
- wren, fire-crested 375
- Würstchen 831
- Würste von Kalbsgekröse 831

X

- Xavier, à la 394
- Ximenia 1003
- xylopia 1003

Y

- yak 1003
- yam 1003
- yeast 1003
- yoghourt 1003
- Yorkshire pudding 1003
- Yugoslavia: cookery 504

Z

- zabaglione 1004, 1004p
- à l'asti 1004
- au Champagne 1004
- à la créole 1004-5
- au Frontignan 1004
- à la kola 1005
- aux liqueurs 1005
- zakuski 1005
- zampino 469, 717, 717p
- Zara 1005
- zebu 1005
- Zeeland 1005
- zephir 1005
- zeste 1005, 1005p
- zester 1005
- zingara 1005
- ziste 1005
- zucchini 1005
- zwieback 1005